Mr. Morris, the inventor, has been a moving picture camera man since 1900, and the first motion picture camera he used was a power-driven one for the American Biograph Co. of New York City. The outfit he then operated weighed over 100 pounds, or 80 more than his present invention. In those days it required a horse and wagon to transport the batteries alone to the locations. His present battery weighs 40 pounds.

Another unique feature is that by pressing a small lever the motor can be disengaged and the crank immediately applied as in the ordinary movie camera.

Art Director Addresses M. P. P. A.

This being a cameraman's organization, the subject I think that will be most interesting, is to say a few words on the co-operation between the art director and the cameraman. Before going into this, however, it might be in order first to express myself as to what a good set should be—First from the architectural standpoint (which in my esimation is the foundation to start from) the background should be architecturally correct. Now—What is architecture? Architecture is good construction made beautiful, reflecting the character of the people. The latter we are most interested in.

The architecture of the Greeks expressed the sentiment, refinement and culture of their civilization, while on the other hand the architecture of the Romans stood for organization, formula, authority, etc. Medieval architecture was the expression of religion and the sentiment of the infinite.

The stern character of the feudal castles and moated granges of England were expressive of the people of that day and later, the long and peaceful reign of Queen Elizabeth gave the rich nobles their first opportunity to establish homes that should be purely residences with special domestic features and artistic aspect. Thus the Elizabethan period reflects the home life of that time, an architecture that tells us that the nobles were proud yet simple in their taste.

All of this as applied to motion picture settings leads me carping uppermost in my mind this that a room must be designed to live in with a sympathetic regard for the individual refinement of those that make it a home.

This can be easily done by designing the set not having in it alone the personality of the art director, but by his personality combined with the character of the individual who is to occupy that room. This means that the setting should reflect the character of the individual whose home is being picturized.

Now—Who is the man who is to bring actual to the screen the sets as conceived by the art d rector. This is the cameraman's job. How it possible to get the best results on the scree unless there is the heartiest co-operation b tween the cameraman and the art director, th co-operation is one of the most essential thing to further the progress of good screen result But how few organizations consider the ma behind the camera when sets are planned. is a rank injustice to the cameraman to com plain about the result on the screen unless h is considered in the laying out of sets. H lighting means everything to him in the finishe product and therefore we must be perfectl fair with him and give him a set which ca be properly lighted and he being the practica man, he and he alone, should be considere

This consideration is of a dual advantage— All of the time I spend designing goes t waste unless the setting is properly lighted an shows its true value on the screen. Therefor by letting the cameraman in on the set as i is being drawn and giving him every consid eration, he makes the art directors work lool as it is intended to look.

This co-operation between art director, di rector and cameraman is being practiced at ou studio and the result on the screen more tha gratifies me for pushing this thing until toda it is a reality. Of course, we all have ou little battles, but this only makes us sit u and think a little harder and by this we ge better results, and I believe our cameramer feel that since I am trying to help them the are going to make my rooms look as gooc photographically as possible.

Very often the battle on colors almost come to blows—for this reason—I am a firm believer in light, cheerful sets in color. By this I dc not mean white sets but sets of soft shade of gray. This I know most cameramen dis- agree with me on, but my contention is in using light sets (of course, laid out so that a character never walks directly against flat walls) the cameraman can light such a set tc any shade, from the lightest to the darkest shade of gray, while in a dark set he has only one of two things to do, that is to either keep the set dark or put so much light on the set that the quality of background is lost, which I have seen so many times on the screen that I am always ready and willing to battle for a set that borders on the lighter rather than the darker colors.

I could talk about colors from now until midnight, but this subject, you being practical photographers, would probably end in a battle here which I do not feel inclined to start, and I think that by a little talk with some of the boys who have worked at the studio about the results they got and the ease with which they got them, would convince you all that co-operation with the cameraman is of vital importance and the sooner some art directors wake up to that fact just that much sooner will their work look like it should on the screen.

Daleo Brings Artist's Touch to Titles

An interesting combination of the Plastic Art with Mechanical Motion has been attained in the motion picture industry by John B. Daleo of New York City. Mr. Daleo's achievement is embodied in a plaster of paris design to be used for the production of novel titles. One of his designs that has been in actual use is reproduced on this page.

On the left of the illustration is the model as it appears on the screen when the film is started. Then gradually from the sides the panels appear, and as they slide into place the lettering rises on them. As the title announcing a star, producer or director is faded in, the photograph of the person mentioned appears in the center archway. Once this introduction has been made the figure fades out, the panels commence to revolve and a new set of titles is presented on the reverse side, accompanied, as before, by the human figures in the center.

With the aid of clever devices for double exposure work perfected by Mr. Daleo, the illusion is perfect and the result pleasing.

Because of the fact that the designs are worked up in plaster of paris from minute models by the artist there is an infinite variety to them, and for this reason the Daleo system is suitable for any of the special productions of the leading producers.

Dimensional Picture Standards Submitted for Approval

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers has submitted its dimensional "Motion Picture Standards" to the American Engineering Standards Committee for approval as tentative American standard.

The standards are submitted in accordance with the special provision in the procedure of the committee under which important standards adopted or in process prior to 1920 may be approved without going through the regular process followed in new work. The standards submitted are not new in that they are now in practically universal use.

The American Engineering Standards Committee would be very glad to learn from those interested of the extent to which they make use of these specifications and to receive any other information regarding the specifications in meeting the needs of the industry.

The Motion Picture Standards of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers may be found in the Transactions of the Society, No. 10, May, 1920. Copies may also be obtained from the American Engineering Standards Committee, 29 West 39th Street, New York, for five cents per copy.

Letters from Leaders

I "came to" yesterday that I had not sent you my application, or check. Of course, I wish to belong to the Association.

Yours sincerely,
ANNE F. OBERNDORFER,
Chairman of Art, Music and Literature, Ex-officio,
Women's Club of U. S. A.

I am enclosing money order for $2.00, the amount designated as dues for one year's membership in the A. M. P. M. I.

I am at present engaged in this city as conductor and violinist in the best motion picture theatre of this city, with a large orchestra under me.

I think the idea that you have fostered and developed to the extent that it bids fair to become a real working medium toward the betterment of musical conditions in the motion picture theatre, deserves all the encouragement and cooperation of those with influence in the principal motion picture theatres.

I wish the enterprise all the success that it deserves.

BAILEY F. ALART,
Empire theatre,
Quebec, P. Q., Canada.

Enclosed find my filled out application blank, also $2.00 for dues for membership into the A. M. P. M. I. I think this is really starting something for the advancement of music and I think it is great that something like Motion Picture News has come along to help put music up to where it really belongs.

EARL F. SUMMERS,
Musical Director,
Virginia theatre,
Wheeling, W. Va.

I am sending you herewith my check of $2.00 for membership fee. Am sorry that this letter is rather late, but I have been unusually busy lately both in theatre and community and with lots of hard work I have finally been able to make the people here understand that we two have to co-operate. I have succeeded with my plans as I had outlined at the convention and the result was the organization of the new Raleigh Community Symphony Orchestra. We already have one concert, and are just now trying to solve the rather unthankful problem of financing these concerts, as we want the public to have them free, just like your Globe Concerts. Of course, when it comes to the pocketbook one naturally meets many obstacles, but I hope that we can succeed. I have been able to get the musicians in other picture houses of this State interested in the proposition and as we have no Sunday work in this State it was possible to have the men play together on Sunday. Our first concert was in honor of former Secretary of Navy Joseph Daniels—a resident and citizen of Raleigh; and I received two very flattering letters from him and also the mayor of this city, both men being fully convinced that the motion picture industry only is at the bottom of our cause.

I shall keep on with my efforts no matter how many obstacles there will be in my way, and assure you of my heartiest support in the interests of the A. M. P. M. I. in this part of the country.

FRED STARK,
Musical Director,
Superba Theatre,
Raleigh, N. C.

I enclose herewith application with my check for $2.00 as annual dues for membership in the A. M. P. M. I. Am glad to know that the organization is rapidly being completed, and will be pleased to co-operate in any way that I can. With best wishes,

VINCENT SHERWOOD,
New York City.

I desire to become a member of the A. M. P. M. I. Kindly send me any information you can. I am a musical director at the Trenton theatre—high class motion pictures. Deeply interested in this line and its future in general.

A. L. SIEBEN,
Lynchburg, Va.

Kindly accept $2.00 for my membership of the A. M. P. M. I. I have had the pleasure of being present at the Motion Picture musical conference held last January which was of great interest to everybody as well as to myself.

I will greatly appreciate any advice you could favor me on this matter.

WILLIAM RAVINSON,
Columbus, Ohio.

I am enclosing herewith an application blank for membership in the Association of Motion Picture Musical Interests, together with my check for $2.00. I am very happy indeed to have this opportunity and want to apologize for not having made application before, but make the old excuse of business.

I am glad to learn that the association is progressing so nicely and hope that it will meet with still greater success.

BERT HOLLOWELL,
Greensboro, N. C.

I am herewith enclosing application properly filled out, also my check for $2.00 to be entered as a member of the A. M. P. M. I.

Wishing you success in your undertaking,

FRED W. HAGER,
New York City.

I am very sorry that I was not in town so that I could send in my application sooner. I mailed them to you under separate cover yesterday and sure hope to see the organization a success.

EVERETT S. GOULD'S BAND,
New York.

I wish to join the Association of Motion Picture and Musical Interests. Will you kindly advise me on the matter as early as possible?

Wishing the association every success,

WM. CRANDON BEVAN,
Asheville, N. C.

Acoustical Engineer Offers Aid

Dear Mr. Isaacson:

Your article No. 21 entitled "Acoustics in the Theatre" was of unusual interest to me because since 1913 I have specialized in the subject of architectural acoustics. It is certainly a pleasure to see that men such as yourself are gradually getting people informed of the necessity of employing an acoustical engineer.

In the past it has been customary in the majority of cases to design theatres, churches and auditoriums in general, building them at considerable expense to secure strength, desired seating capacity, noble architectural lines, aesthetic illumination, wholesome ventilation, etc., and then gamble as to whether the acoustics in the resulting auditorium would be good or bad.

Needless to say, I shall be pleased to assist you in any way possible and answer any inquiries which may come in to you on the subject.

It may be of interest to you to know that for almost six years I was associated with the late Professor W. C. Sabine, and am employed as Acoustical Engineer by the Junius H. Stone Corp., who handle the construction work sometimes required in new buildings and in correcting old buildings erected and found acoustically defective.

GEORGE C. HANNAM, M. E.,
Acoustical Engineer,
New York City.

Confide Your Problems to Chas. D. Isaacson Music Editor

A Prospective Singer-Violinist

Having heard that you are very willing to answer questions, I am taking the liberty of writing to ask if you would kindly give me some information regarding music for moving pictures.

I would like very much to obtain a position as violin soloist for the moving picture houses in and around New York, but I have been told that the circuits are not well organized as yet and that one could not be sure of steady work. Could you tell me whether this is true or not, and if not what bureau or person would be best for me to get in touch with.

Could you also tell me if it would be of any advantage in this line to be able to do more than one thing? I am a singer as well as a violinist and have been both singing and playing in Lyceum work. It is, of course, a big advantage in this line of work, as it adds variety to the program without costing the bureau the expense of sending an extra person. I don't mean to offer anything in the vaudeville line, for I know they do not want that with the pictures. I play and sing only classical music, but I thought it might be an advantage to some picture houses to have one person do both.

If you would be kind enough to tell me what the possibilities are in this line of work and to whom my work is likely to be most useful, I would appreciate it very much. I can, of course, give references as to the quality of my work if needed.

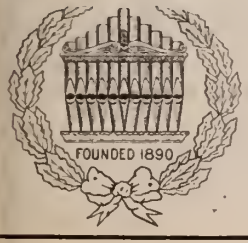
I hope I have not taken too great a liberty in asking this favor. Truly,

MISS LOUISE REID,
Providence, R. I.

Makes Music a Feature of Publicity

Much comment has been aroused in Los Angeles over the new method of handling the musical publicity which has been inaugurated by James M. Fidler, one of the publicity staff with the Grauman theatres. He has been engaged in publicity on the West Coast for some time, being until very recently affiliated with Associated First National. Upon taking up the new position with Grauman he found it necessary to drop his work with the other corporation, but is interested in several magazines and dailies.

"In placing music publicity before the people of Los Angeles and the surrounding country," stated Mr. Fidler, "I believed that the better plan would be to appeal to the higher class, as it is generally this class who know and like music. So, when the publicity of the Grauman symphony concerts was placed in my hands, I decided to make my publicity, temporarily, at least, appeal to this class.



"Therefore, in my editorials in musical magazines, in the weekly Grauman program and even in much of my newspaper space, I put over this type of publicity. I have found that the musical editors like it very much, that the public likes it and that it brings even better results than the other, or more newsy, publicity. Of course, I do not attempt to follow such ideas in my regular theatre publicity, for it would never be a good idea, but in music—O. K."

More About the Organ

Dear Mr. Isaacson:

Sure, keep the ball rolling. I'll be interested to see the subject thrashed out to some clear conclusion. We have a great list of theatre organists ready for positions, and we shall be glad to have you refer organists to us at any time; with our system it will take no more trouble handling two hundred than fifty or one hundred. And if you can ever refer any theatres or managers to us, all the better. But they ought not to expect any man to give up his teaching, his home, all his friends, and skip into some new city on short notice without any other guarantee of protection or fair treatment than merely a manager's invitation to come and play his organ a while. The whole subject is a difficult one for both parties; we will do our best to help each side of it.

Shearer Takes Over H. A. Johnson Company

Through the efforts of their president and general manager, Ben. F. Shearer, the Western Theatre Equipment Company took over the H. A. Johnson Company at 2006 3rd Ave., who for years have conducted one of the leading supply houses on the Western Coast.

This deal includes the purchase of the entire stock and merchandise from the Johnson company and also includes possession of the Johnson lease which is a very desirable one on account of the building's location at the head of Film Row.

Mr. Ben. F. Shearer says in part in regard to this new purchase that "our business has increased so tremendously that the facilities at 2028 3rd Avenue have become entirely inadequate, and we found that it was essential that we take over another building to increase our floor space.

"When the opportunity of taking over the Johnson Building resented itself we fully appreciated the importance of acquiring its exceptional location on Film Row, and also its entire equipment which will enable us to enlarge our activities immediately. We now have added facilities to offer still better service to our present many satisfied customers."

The new addition to the Western Theatre Equipment Company's already highly efficient organization will add one more link in the chain of the "Quality Service" which has always made itself evident in the dealings of this progressive supply house and it is most characteristic of the energetic manner in which Mr. Shearer's company is successfully conducting its business. The following are a few of the recent installations made by the Western Theatre Equipment Company:

Two regulation model motor-driven Simplex Projectors, Liberty Theatre, Pullman, Wash.; two regulation model motor-driven Simplex Projectors, Isis Theatre, Seattle, Wash.; two regulation model motor-driven Simplex Projectors, Liberty Theatre, Portland, Oregon; two Type "S" model motor-driven Simplex Projectors, Colonial Theatre, Seattle, Wash., and one Type "S" model motor-driven Simplex Projector, Pantages Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Monsoon Cooling Systems Patent Application Is Allowed

The patent attorneys for the Monsoon Cooling System, Inc., have notified them that their application for patent for fan or blower, as exclusively manufactured and sold by them, was officially allowed by the United States Patent Office on April 22.

Theatre owners are every day realizing that the cooling and ventilating equipment is not only a necessity but an absolute asset to their summer business and the many installations thus far completed are evidence to the popularity of "Monsoons."

With their new executive offices in the Longacre Building, their new plant in Brooklyn and their branch sales' offices in principal cities, the Monsoon Cooling Systems are furnishing "service" that is a credit.

Ogden Manager on Coast

Manager Harmon W. Peery of the Ogden theatre left recently for Los Angeles and southern California towns, where he will visit a number of theatres to get ideas upon a new theatre which he is planning to erect here in a few weeks at one of the busy corners. The new theatre will be about 150 feet in length with a frontage of about 40 feet. It is said the plans for the theatre will be prepared immediately upon Mr. Peery's return to Ogden.

While on the coast Mr. Peery plans on a visit to the studios with the view of getting in touch with some of the late releases. He is accompanied by Mrs. Peery and her sister, Miss Ann Chafin.

A Fine Improvement in Carbon Holders

A device known by the inventor as a "Carbon Ring Center Plate and Jaw Projector" has been patented by Harry Eckhart, of New York. According to the claims of Mr. Eckhart, the plate does away with the washers of every size that are now used, and also prevents the jaws from being cut and scored by the washers.

Instead of holding the carbon ring in the center the washer provides a bearing on the entire jaw, and in no way does it injure the jaw or cut into it as the washers do. Thus it always gives a smooth flat surface on the carbon jaw.

When using this plate it is impossible to pull the carbon out of alignment, and when set in adjustment automatically centers the carbon in the jaws.

Other claims state that the Center Plate will give the operator a chance to grip the carbons as tight as he wishes without destroying the alignment as was so often the case with the older type of washers.

The two lips on the top and bottom center the plate in those directions and the pins on the sides take care of that part.

It is the understanding of the Projection Department that Mr. Eckhart, whose address is at 1763 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., has already started to sell his new device.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last sixteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to January 29, 1920.

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

ALL DOLLED UP (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....MAR. 12
"Pleasing offering with the star in an ideal role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture, though we had only average business with it and it did not come up to my expectations as a box office attraction." "A nice little picture, with no special attraction. Gladys Walton scores again, as a pert little 'flapper,' and is gaining quite a following." "Dandy little picture. Had more than the usual business with it." "Good business attended this feature. Picture pleasingly done."

"Incredible plot, but has appealing moments."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good picture. Receipts poor." "Played this on a double bill with "Plaything of Broadway." The two make a pleasing program well liked by our patrons." "Rather weak as a drawing card. A good picture, but attractive only to a selective few. Just a fair house for the week."

AMATEUR DEVIL, AN (PARAMOUNT) BRYANT WASHBURN...MAR. 12
"A decidedly mediocre comedy with Washburn."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Two days to average business."

BARBARIAN, THE (PIONEER) MONROE SALISBURY.....FEB. 26
"Fine backgrounds but very little action."—M. P. News.

BARE KNUCKLES (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL.....MAR. 19

BARS OF IRON (STOLL FILM CORP.) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 19
"Just an ordinary production."—M. P. News.

"Fairly interesting, though would be more convincing if developed humorously."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A wonderful picture which sure did go 'over the top.' Brought large box office receipts and much satisfaction from the audiences." "Fairly good picture with average business." "A splendid picture, well made, well acted, beautifully staged, but for some reason or other it didn't pull them in and business was only average." "Clever story with many new angles which makes a very high class and interesting photoplay. Drew splendidly and we played to big business for the week." "Great story. Story good; closely knit—but Lewis Stone and Florence Vidor gripped the attention from start to finish. Stone's work immense."

BELOW THE DEADLINE (ASCHER PRODUCTIONS-STATE RIGHTS) WARNER-BIRON .....APR. 30
"A well made melodrama, full of action."—M. P. News.

BEYOND PRICE (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....MAY 21
"An inconsequential story not suited to Pearl White."—M. P. News.

BIG ADVENTURE, THE (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 23
"Simple heart interest picture carries some appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Poor picture which did not have much pulling power. Played to poor business." "Did more than well for us and pleased."

BIG PUNCH, THE (FOX) BUCK JONES.....FEB. 19
"Buck Jones as a minister; a dull picture."—M. P. News.

BLACK ROSES (ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA.....APR. 30
"Hayakawa has entertaining mystery picture here."—M. P. News.

BLAZING TRAIL, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....MAY 7
"Some moments of interest in Mayo's latest."—M. P. News.

BLUSHING BRIDE, THE (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....MAR. 19
"Exceedingly weak; might have made a good Sunshine."—M. P. News.

"Wesley Barry saves the show."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played to a capacity house all week, aided by some unique exploitation. Eight Blackfeet Indians, first time off the reservation, a cowboy." "Disappointing. Not as clever as quartet, and the name Wesley Barry all served to attract much interest."

"Redemption story carries little appeal and is badly overacted."—M. P. News.

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS (PARAMOUNT) ROSCOE ARBUCKLE...FEB. 5
Exhibitor Comment—"Sure-fire winner. Pleased the audiences immensely. Box office returns much larger than usual." "Good comedy bringing the usual business." "This is a splendid picture and went over big with our audience. Played to large business for one week." "Capacity houses on opening Sunday in spite of heavy rain all afternoon and evening. A big winner with the public." "A great picture. It pleased my audiences, consequently the box office receipts were larger than usual." "'Fatty' went over in this picture in a surprising manner. Picture played to capacity for seven-day run." "Don't miss this one, a really big box office play." "Best box office returns in three months. Thoroughly pleased and people talked about it which brought increasing throngs." "Tickles 'em stiff—doing big." "This picture got plenty of laughs. An old favorite which is done over well in film form."

BURGLAR PROOF (PARAMOUNT) BRYANT WASHBURN.....FEB. 12

"Spectacular production, but story is unimpressive,"—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Big production. Story not convincing. However, it is the best thing the star has done so far. Fair box office value." "Interest holding picture lavishly produced, but failed to pull during its run at this house and we played to poor business." "This picture flopped and was pulled off in middle of week run and another film substituted."

"A radical departure; highly artistic and imaginative."—M. P. News.

CHARMING DECEIVER, THE (VITAGRAPH) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Mild interest because of its conventional treatment."—M. P. News.

CHICKENS (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....MAR. 26
"Forced comedy and hokum never ring the bell."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Brought average business. Fair picture." "Played this on the program with the Universal feature 'If Only Jim,' starring Harry Carey to two days of extra big business." "Not as good as previous McLean-May productions and the 'feminine half' of this combination was sadly missed. Still this picture was good and drew well." "Too weak even for the chickens. Wouldn't even stand on a double program as a comedy." "About the usual Douglas MacLean feature; good farce, but not up to '23½ Hours' Leave.'"

"Interesting crook story with rich details and heart interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Splendid picture, but rather heavy for this time of year. People left theatre feeling oppressed. Big opening, however." "An out of the ordinary picture; had to keep it over a second week." "Splendid picture which gave Thomas Meighan, who is a favorite of our patrons, excellent opportunities to show his ability as an emotional actor. Played to big business." "They seemed to like this one and it brought good patronage." "Record-breaking crowds. Equaled our biggest specials in drawing power."

COINCIDENCE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 21
"Light, but breezy enough to get over."—M. P. News.

COLORADO (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....FEB. 19
"Mayo's latest strong in action."—M. P. News.

CONCERT, THE (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 5
"Another stage vehicle adaptation which flops."—M. P. News.

CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT, A (FOX) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 12

COUSIN KATE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE.....FEB. 12
"Alice Joyce has strong personality in 'Cousin Kate.'"—M. P. News.

DANGEROUS MOMENT, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS...APR. 16
"A light and pleasing romance of Greenwich Village."—M. P. News.

DECEPTION (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 30
"Historical drama is colorful and impressive."—M. P. News.

DESPERATE YOUTH (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....APR. 30
"Goes back to the early days of pictures, but is entertaining."—M. P. News.

DOLLAR A YEAR MAN, THE (PARAMOUNT) ROSCOE ARBUCKLE APR. 9
"Weak humor and hokum make this a poor effort."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A sure-fire attraction, which brought extra large box office receipts." "Fatty Arbuckle always a sure bet and this picture proves to be no exception. Capacity house all week." "Unfortunately, Fatty Arbuckle does not live up to his fan's expectations of him. This is no worse than previous feature-Arbuckles I've played—but it was no better, and business was poor." "Went over great. Fine audience picture." "Arbuckle good drawing card, but vehicle is very poor. Public greatly disappointed." "Good picture to good business for week run." "Roscoe Arbuckle in 'The Dollar a Year Man' and Larry Semon in 'The Rent Collector.' Good combination and one that pleased, although attendance dropped. Arbuckle picture not as well liked as previous releases."

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

DUCKS AND DRAKES (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....APR. 9
"Bebe Daniels has a lively offering here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Best Bebe Daniels has to her credit up to date. Business was better than it has been for several weeks." "Bebe Daniels goes her former productions one better in this picture. A snappy production that brings results at the box office." "A good picture. They liked this one and went away and told their friends about it. Business was good."

DYNAMITE ALLEN (FOX) GEORGE WALSH.....MAR. 5
"Disconnected and wildly improbable melodrama."—M. P. News.

"Modernized version of play and book should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Stormy weather held down attendance on this picture, but those who saw it were pleased and we are holding this excellent picturization of the famous stage play over for a second week." "We were disappointed. Less than usual matinee and night crowds."

"Rather mild for Thomas Meighan."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Our patrons seemed to like this one which played to excellent business for one week." "Thomas Meighan draws no matter what sort of picture, or role he has. This production an excellent one, and played to excellent business." "Showed in conjunction with Lloyd Hamilton in 'Moonsbine.' A week's capacity business. The picture offers a good field for exploitation. Thomas Meighan at his best." "Nothing extraordinary in this picture, but business was fair." "Not as good as some of the other Meighan pictures. Meighan well liked, however, and matinee business was particularly good." "An ordinary story put over by the star's personality. Business was good." "We label this as a good picture. The box office statement was better than average." "Thomas Meighan always a big favorite at this house. Business good, despite first warm spring weather." "Thomas Meighan. Despite poor picture, attendance was on an average."

EDUCATION OF ELIZABETH, THE (PARAMOUNT) BILLIE BURKE .....FEB. 26
"Billie Burke has real opportunities in polite comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Women came to see Billie and the gowns. Did better than expected, as she has not done well at all of late." "A fair picture. Nothing extraordinary. Average business." "One of the star's best, but it only drew fair business." "Played it on the bill with 'Sunset Sprague' (Buck Jones) to extra big business two days." "Two days to average business." "The picture drags in several spots and needs improving, but the name, 'Billie Burke,' filled my house for a week."

EXTRAVAGANCE (METRO) MAY ALLISON.....MAR. 5
Exhibitor Comment—"A program picture with nothing out of the ordinary to recommend it." "A fair picture to fair business."

FIRE CAT, THE UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS.....FEB. 12
"Edith Roberts scores in Carmenesque role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture to big business one day."

"A title, heart interest and Hayakawa's acting should attract them."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"By far the best picture that Sessue Hayakawa has ever made. It is a true conception of Oriental life."

FLAME, THE (STOLL FILM-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 5

"De Mille scores another ten strike; a great audience picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"DeMille's pictures always draw immense crowds. This was proved interesting, but not startling. Patrons like the atmosphere of affluence which permeates these pictures. Constantly large attendance." "This one packed the house every performance. A very fine entertaining picture and patrons semed well pleased." "A fairly good picture with business about as usual." "Drew a capacity house all week. Considered one of the best attractions that has been produced in months." "Very good. The people came the first day in response to wide advertising and they told their neighbors it was a good picture." "A very good picture. Handicapped by strong opposition." "Went over big on the second week of its run." "Gorgeous costumes and dazzling scenic effects, but the picture drags in spots. A good box office attraction." "Pleased those who saw it, but not enough saw it." "Gradually built up as run progressed, but not as big as anticipated." "Excellent picture and attendance almost a record-breaker. Patrons liked picture, much desirable comment heard. Opens second week May 8."

FORBIDDEN LOVE (WISTARIA PRODUCTIONS-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST .....APR. 16
"Rather morbid, but has interesting moments."—M. P. News

FOUR HORSEMEN, THE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 5
"Marvelous production reaches the heights of picture art."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Packed them in on this one. People curious to see it. Great box office attraction." "Held over for fourth week. Picture at $2 scale has played to capacity nights and good matinees."

FREEZE OUT, THE (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....APR. 9
"Carey's personality its chief asset."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This got big business for us and they seemed to like it." "Just fair box office bet for us and pleased fairly well."

GHOST IN THE GARRET, THE (PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY GISH..APR. 16

"Mae Murray's latest is a winner."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Attracted capacity audiences for a seven-day run." "This picture attracted big audiences and house was packed every performance." "The kind of picture patrons expect to see Mae Murray in. About the best she bas done. Consistent business with a clientele she has built up." "Only Mae Murray's tricky costumes, and dancing held tbis up. Business just fair, despite heavy advertising." "Superb production. Well directed, extravagantly conceived and a good audience picture." "Held up well for a two-week run. As a whole big picture from every angle." "Star is popular and in consequence picture went over all right." "Went over big. Everybody liked it and said so." "This one was mediocre. Business was only fair." "Big every day and they all liked it." "Exceptional fine settings and surprise features of story appealed strongly to our audiences, and we did good business with this picture." "Went over big for full week." "Going fine in its third week."

"Unpleasant story depending on acting and unusual twist to story."—
Exhibitor Comment—"Comfortable business, which is better tban expected Holy Week. Picture has great possibilities as a drawing card under normal times." "So bad that it was taken off after one day and 'Lying Lips' substituted."

GOD'S GOOD MAN (STOLL FILM CORP.) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 26
"A poor production from all angles."—M. P. News.

"Talky picture, not pure entertainment."—M. P. News

GREAT DAY, THE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Good production given mediocre story."—M. P. News.

GREATER CLAIM, THE (METRO) ALICE LAKE.....FEB. 19
"Alice Lake scores in ordinary story."—M. P. News

GUILE OF WOMEN, THE (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....MAR. 12
"Rogers, good story and clever titles make this fine entertainment."—M. P. News.

GYPSY BLOOD (FIRST NATIONAL) POLA NEGRI.....MAY 21
"Pola Negri flashes a fine talent in German version of 'Carmen.'"—M. P. News.

HANDS OFF (FOX) TOM MIX.....APR. 16
"Humorous touches make Western entertaining."—M. P. News.

HEART OF MARYLAND, THE (VITAGRAPH) CATHERINE CALVERT .....APR. 16
"Excellent picture from a sure-fire success."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Business not as good as we expected. War dramas seem to be thoroughly taboo."

HEARTS AND MASKS (FEDERATED FILM EXCHANGES) SPECIAL CAST .....MAY 14
"Should fill demand for clean entertaining light stuff."—M. P. News.

HER LORD AND MASTER (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE.....APR. 16
"Hardly heavy enough for Alice Joyce."—M. P. News.

HER HUSBAND'S FRIEND (INCE-PARAMOUNT) ENID BENNETT.JAN. 29
"Rather hectic in spots, but keeps the interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played it on the bill with 'The Iron Rider,' the Fox production starring William Russell, to extra big business for two days."

HIGHEST BIDDER, THE (GOLDWYN) MADGE KENNEDY.....APR. 30
"Often told story holds little interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Star well liked by my patrons, and picture was good, but business was only fair."

HIS GREATEST SACRIFICE (FOX) WILLIAM FARNUM.....MAY 14
"Heavy drama may satisfy star's admirers."—M. P. News

HIS OWN LAW (J. PARKER READ-GOLDWYN) HOBART BOSWORTH .....FEB. 12
"Trite story makes poor screen material."—M. P. News.

HOLD YOUR HORSES (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE).....FEB. 5
"Comedy titles and good incident make this fine entertainment.—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just ordinary picture and did just ordinary business." "Fairly good picture. Business about as usual." "An excellent photoplay which received a right royal welcome from patrons. An example of what screen lovers want. Capacity business." "Great! Played this with a special St. Patrick's Day program and cleaned up. Moore is immense in roles of this sort."

HOME STRETCH, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN .....MAY 14
Human interest story carries thrills and humor."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A pleasing little picture. Business abont average." "Good picture to our usual capacity business." "Clever, clean and distinctly funny. Made quite a hit with my patrons and business was excellent."

HOUSE THAT JAZZ BUILT, THE (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY..MAY 21
"Wanda Hawley's best bet; a cleverly directed picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Went over well. Business very good, and Wanda Hawley is building up quite a gallery of fans." "Wanda Hawley is not a box office attraction, but picture pleased."

I AM GUILTY (ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS—J. PARKER READ, JR.) LOUISE GLAUM .....MAY. 7
"Mystery story carries a trick finish and much melodrama."—M. P. News.
"Timely title these days, and attracted a curious crowd. Picture sufficiently strong to stand on its own merits after getting the people in."

IF ONLY JIM (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....MAR. 5
"Carey's latest is amusing and entertaining."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Great business with this one. Capacity nouses. great deal of word-of-mouth advertising." "Played this feature on the program with the Paramount production 'Chickens,' featuring Douglas MacLean, to extra big business for two days."

IT CAN BE DONE (VITAGRAPH) EARLE WILLIAMS.....MAY 14
"Rather unusual and offers fair entertainment."—M. P. News

IT ISN'T BEING DONE THIS SEASON (VITAGRAPH) CORINNE GRIFFITH .....FEB. 26
"Inadequate story, but a veritable fashion show."—M. P. News.

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

JIM THE PENMAN (WHITMAN BENNETT-FIRST NATIONAL) LIONEL BARRYMORE.....APR. 2
"Grimly realistic but artistic picture from famous stage play."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very artistic, but too gloomy. People didn't enjoy it." "Lionel Barrymore is through so far as we are concerned. Splendid actor, but plays are too heavy. Terrible receipts." "Good picture which played to excellent business for week."

JUST OUT OF COLLEGE (GOLDWYN) JACK PICKFORD.....FEB. 19
"Slender in plot but rather amusing at times."—M. P. News.

KAZAN (SELIG-HAMILTON-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST....FEB. 19
Another Curwood story makes interesting picture."—M. P. News.

KEEPING UP WITH LIZZIE (ROCKETT-HODKINSON) ENID BENNETT .....MAY 21
"Comedy blends with serious theme admirable."—M. P. News.

KENTUCKIANS, THE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 12
"Very little drama here; backgrounds are interesting."—M. P. News.

KNOW YOUR MEN (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....APR. 2
"Heavily emotional, but should please star's admirers."—M. P. News.

LAMPLIGHTER, THE (SHIRLEY MASON).....APR. 30
"Shirley Mason attractive, but story holds it back."—M. P. News.

LAVENDER AND OLD LACE (RENCO FILM-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST .....MAY 7
"Beauty of this delicate romance is kept intact."—M. P. News.

LITTLE CLOWN, THE (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER.....APR. 16
"Heart interest circus story should get over."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—Very good little picture that did well for me." "Had picture indorsed by local 'Better Films' movement, and gave special matinee for school children. Business excellent." "Fair production that brought fair returns." "A gem of a picture. Played to exceptionally big matinees."

"Should prove interesting entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good. The picture follows the story well and it holds an audience as only a Jack London story can." "Our patrons called this a good picture and business was good."

LOVE, HONOR AND BEHAVE (FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST .....MAR. 26
"Excellent slapstick feature with good action and incident."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A splendid drawing card. Played to a packed house all week. The picture is an excellent diversion from the more serious presentations."

"Acceptable entertainment provided by good humor and a quota of thrills."—M. P. News.

LURE OF EGYPT, THE (FEDERAL-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 21
"Picture is draggy and carries very little story interest."—M. P. News.

"Spectacular but false in idea and characterization."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A real picture and a splendid entertainment. People went out of their way to comment favorably on it." "Consider this one of the biggest productions of the season. Corking story, unexcelled cast, magnificently mounted, sure to please. Sorry I didn't have double my seating capacity." "Has proved so popular that it has been held over for the fourth week. This is something never before done in this city. Played to over 60,000 in three weeks' run." "Completed a four week's run here, in which it drew over 80,000 people. This is one of the greatest records in the history of the city." "Drew a good house for a week, but the picture does not justify its advance advertising. An average picture."

MAD MARRIAGE, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS.....FEB. 12
"Carmel Myers is appealing in Greenwich Village formula."—M. P. News.

MADE IN HEAVEN (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE.....APR. 30
"Fire scene best part of unreal story that fails to impress."—M. P. News.

MAGIC CUP, THE (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY.....MAY 7
"Pleasant little picture starring Constance Binney."—M. P. News.

"Constance Talmadge has serious moments here; picture fairly interesting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Delighted our people. Box office kept busy." "Played to a capacity house the entire week, but it would not be fair to give the credit to the picture alone, as it was run in conjunction with a week's musical festival, featuring works of local composers." "Only average picture, but it took well with our patrons and we played to excellent business." "They like Constance so they liked this one. Big business." "Surprised Connie's friends, and, while it was entirely different, they liked it. Went over big." "One of the best vehicles Constance Talmadge has ever had. It is something more than pure farce, having a logical idea behind it. An excellent box office attraction."

"Propaganda and spectacular melodrama are blended here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew very well despite the fact that it was the week before Easter." "A regular woman's picture—result, big houses and box office returns that tripled as the engagement continued. Held over for second week." "Held over for second week to better than average business." "A somewhat rambling story. Chief interest centres about the lavish scenes. A good box-office attraction." "Continued to draw crowded houses on second run." "Opinion as to entertainment value greatly divided. Business good."

MAGNIFICENT BRUTE, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....MAR. 26
"A good Western with plenty of action."—M. P. News.

"Star enlivens story of British politics."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pleasing picture. Box office value average."

"Quiet in action, yet charms with its romance and background."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A pleasant picture which seemed to please my audiences. Fine business."

MOTHER ETERNAL (IVAN ABRAMSON-STATE RIGHTS) VIVIAN MARTIN .....APR. 30
"Effective drama offered in appealing story of mother love."—M. P. News.

MOUNTAIN WOMAN, THE (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....FEB. 5
"An excellent Pearl White vehicle."—M. P. News.

MY LADY'S LATCHKEY (FIRST NATIONAL) KATHERINE MACDONALD .....MAR. 26
"Mostly good clothes and subtitles, with little action or incident."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture, but poor business." "Katherine MacDonald is well liked by women patrons, so business was fair, due to patronage of feminine contingent." "Made a nice hit and fine attendances reported throughout. Was combined here with Sennett's 'Love, Honor, and Behave,' which went good."

NUMBER 17 (FOX) GEORGE WALSH.....MAR. 19
"Convenient melodrama carries some excitement."—M. P. News.

NUT, THE (UNITED ARTISTS) DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS.....MAR. 19
"Entertaining in spots, but needs editing."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Exceptional business for week during Lent. Picture not up to Fairbanks' standard." "Fairbanks has slipped in this picture. It is much poorer than the 'Mark of Zoro,' and while many patrons came to see him the first few days, the rest of the week's business was poor." "Went over big. Some adverse criticism to the effect that it was not up to star's standard." "Fine picture which brought good business." "Brought big business. Pleased my patrons and was a drawing-card." "Find this an average picture with the usual business." "This picture went over big. It has very good entertaining values." "Fine business with this picture. My patrons like Doug and of course turned out strong to see his picture." "The picture is not up to Douglas Fairbanks' standard, but has an appealing title and offers a good field for exploitation. A good house the entire week." "Running this a second week to big business." "This picture was in no way extraordinary, but it played to big business because of the anniversary that surrounded it and the extra advertising."

"Rather disappointing in spite of faultless production."—M. P. News.

"Not enough substance for picture entertainment."—M. P. News.

ONE MAN TRAIL, THE (FOX) BUCK JONES.....APR. 9
"A well made, entertaining Buck Jones feature."—M. P. News.

OLD SWIMMIN' HOLE, THE (RAY-FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY .....MAR. 5
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good Charles Ray picture, but failed to please majority. Played to exceptionally poor business for seven days." "Fine picture which drew good business." "An unusually delightful bit of screen entertainment which the entire city flocked to see. Censorship would not be worrying the industry if there were more films like this." "An excellent picture from every angle and business was splendid. Went over big." "The picture was shown at an opportune time, during Boys' Week, and it played to a capacity house for seven days." "Charles Ray in a beloved classic—an irresistible combination. Business excellent throughout week."

O'MALLEY OF THE MOUNTED (HART-PARAMOUNT) WILLIAM S. HART.....FEB. 19
"Good incident and Bill Hart touches make it interesting." M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best Bill Hart has done and pleased the Hart fans." "Satisfactory box office returns, but not up to usual Hart receipts." "A good picture, but a weak drawing card. Only a fair house for the week. "Business was good with this one. A good picture that pleased the usual Hart crowds."

"Well below the average in entertainment values."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew a pleasing attendance with average results." "Used in conjunction with 'You Can Never Tell.' Average business, but it increased at end of week." "Nothing extraordinary about the picture, but Alice Brady is always a sure bet here. Showed in conjunction with Buster Keaton in "Neighbors." A good house all week."

PARTNERS OF FATE (FOX) LOUISE LOVELY.....FEB. 26
"A good average program attraction."— M. P. News.

"Entertaining sea picture here."—M. P. News.

PASSION FLOWER, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) NORMA TALMADGE .....APR. 16
"Wonderfully acted and artistically produced adaptation of stage success."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Business excellent, as it always is when I play a Talmadge picture. This was more favorably commented on than anything Norma Talmadge has played in a year. Colorful, vivid, and realistic." "The best picture Norma Talmadge has had for a long time. Proved an excellent box-office attraction." "Nothing like a Talmadge picture to get the crowds but this one didn't please so well, though business was up to expectation." "A great many people were disappointed in the story but they came to see the star. Business was up to standard." "A splendid feature film which lived up to Norma Talmadge's high standard. Played to much better than average business during the week of its run." "A second run, helped considerably by the fact that the play of the same name was in town, too. The tragic ending spoiled it for many fans, but business was brisk all week." "Went over fair, but drew big business on account of the star." "Capacity business, which is usually the rule with a Norma Talmadge production."

"Well produced domestic drama that will please."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Ran well for the entire week. Big houses set the stamp of their approval on this picture." "Held over for second week because of tremendous business. Generally pleased." "Business held up very well for second week. Pleased our patrons." "A good picture that played to good business." "A slender story produced to bring Dorothy Dickson into pictures. Not a strong box office attraction." "Found this to be a fair picture. Business about average." "A great attraction. This one brought large box office receipts." "Second week to fair business." "Good picture played to better than average business for week." "Lavish but not satisfying. Drew well but did not build. "Very good. Two days to extra big and big business." "Exceptionally well liked by everybody. One of the best opening Sundays in weeks. Kept up satisfactorily."

"Justine Johnstone scores in satisfactory offering."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pretty poor stuff. Justine doesn't live up to expectations, after all the press-agent flub-dub about her." "A fairly entertaining production that drew average business." "Nothing great about the picture, but it is a creator of public interest and filled my house all week. Offers a good field for exploitation." "Good picture, well cast and directed. Public well pleased."

"Ethel Clayton gives clever performance in mild entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Does not come up to Ethel Clayton's standard. A fair house all week, but an unsatisfactory picture." "One of the poorest things Ethel Clayton has ever done." "A fair picture and fair puller."

PRINCESS JONES (VITAGRAPH) ALICE CALHOUN.....MAR. 12

"Fine western has collection of thrilling punches."—M. P. News.

SMALL TOWN IDOL, A (SENNETT-ASSO. PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST .....FEB. 19
"Mack Sennett gives a three ring circus here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Second week to good business." "Sennett has given us one of the best comedies of the year in this picture and it is a laughing success from start to finish. Broke house records first week of its stay here and we are holding it for a second week." "Fairly good picture, but we had poor business with it. "Picture lived up to the advance notices given it by critics and we played to splendid business during its run." "Attracted capacity business for week's run." "Sennett has produced one of the best comedies ever screened and it did a big business at our theatre during its entire run." "Broke the house record on opening and held over for second week." "Good summer stuff. One of the funniest comedies ever made." "Held it over for a second week to box office returns almost as much as the first week. If it had not been for two days of hot weather we would have beaten the first week. Picture, curiously enough, appealed here mostly to men." "Well liked, drew fine and receipts pleasing."

SMART SET, THE (UNIVERSAL) EVA NOVAK.....APR. 2

Exhibitor Comment—"Our audiences called this poor. Business was not up to average either."

SNOB, THE (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY.....MAR. 5
"Good production of commonplace story—will get by."—M. P. News.

SOCIETY SECRETS (UNIVERSAL) EVA NOVAK.....FEB. 26
"Heart interest drama is mild but entertaining."—M. P. News.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY....JAN. 29
"Rather frail but backgrounds save it."—M. P. News.

"THE RIDER OF THE KING LOG"
(Associated Exhibitors)

Vigorous, Elemental Story of Lumberjacks—Carries Fine Backgrounds

THERE is enough novelty of plot, characterization and backgrounds to make this picture a first rate entertainment—one which is certain to score with any class of audience. Those who relish stories of the big outdoors—who delight in two-fisted action carried along by rugged, primitive men who live life in its fullest expression will certainly receive it with unhounded enthusiasm. The author, Holman Day, writes in bold, vivid strokes. His stories are akin to nature—his figures are people of the soil. The screen may go on revealing "westerns" and "northwesterns" but it is seldom that one is shown which revolves around a logging camp. So "The Rider of the King Log" presents something new.

As vigorous as the title is the action fully lives up to it. Harry O. Hoyt has seen to that. He has gone to Maine and staged the picture against some truly picturesque backgrounds—backgrounds which are captivating to the eye because of their novelty. One marvels at a roaring river through which thousands of logs are driven by the current. The brawny sons who guide these giant logs are thoroughly in the picture. The director has also caught the four seasons—which are revealed in pastoral shots—shots of nature's sweep and grandeur. It is the pieturesque side of the offering which furnishes the most appeal. The scenes have seemingly heen caught with painstaking effort. Mr. Hoyt has not erred in a technical direction. As for the dramatic feature he keeps it pulsating with powerful strokes, though some may feel that he has stressed his funeral seene with undue emphasis. It is our impression that this sequence is thoroughly consistent as showing the seriousness in which life is lived up in the woods. There is nothing of "studio" attached to the picture. The exteriors are the real thing.

The story revolves around a native son of the North country—an impulsive, strong-willed Irishman, whose combative nature prevents him from catering to Wall Street magnates. The plot pivots on the conflict between these two figures—with the primitive forces lined up accordingly. When the grim lumberjack dies, his daughter takes up the burden and wins the magnate over because the latter's son plays fair and square with her. He could not do otherwise, having capitulated to the call of romance. There are very few interiors. The action moves against the colorful backgrounds and is a vital part of them. At times the picture bears evidence of had cutting because of the difficulty in always following the continuity. And the titles could bear a little dressing down since most of them are too flowery in figures of speech of the woods. The acting is in the very capable hands of Farnk Sheridan who, as the tempestuous Irishman, gives a vigorous portrayal. Richard Travers enacts the hero acceptahly, while Irene Boyle gives a vital performance as the daughter and sweetheart. "The Rider of the King Log" is a great audience picture. It carries hreadth and sincerity.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A vigorous and dramatic story of the Maine woods is "The Rider of the King Log," adapted from Holman Day's story. The offering will be presented at the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast that includes Frank Sheridan, Irene Boyle, Richard Travers and Arthur Donaldson. The action is crisp and measures out some rugged scenes. The backgrounds are wonderfully picturesque, since they have been caught in the wild country of the North.

The story revolves around the efforts of John Xavier Kavanagh, familiarly known as X. K., to conduct his business without outside interference. Stephen Marthorn, a Wall Street magnate, realizes that he would hold complete power if he could get rid of X. K. But the latter is a fighting Irishman, who blocks him at every turn. After his death, his daughter, Clare, proves that she is a real Kavanagh by carrying on her father's business as well as living up to his promises—to give no quarter to the Marthorns. Eventually Marthorn's son proves his right to her heart. And only through love do the Marthorns conquer. The picture is punctuated with a constant line of vigorous action and is well acted and directed.

A vigorous Holman Day story—a story of the rugged North of the logging camps and men who live hard and die hard and find adventure in every incident of daily life. Such is "The Rider of the King Log," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. It is a picture which carries some of the most wonderful scenery ever caught by a camera. The roaring rivers, the logs tumbling through the rapids, the rugged men and vital women, the conflict of the North, the never-care spirit of the characters who take their lives in their hands throughout the day—the huge fir trees, the snow, the green of nature—all these are caught and make the picture an exceptional treat. Don't miss it. A fine cast, headed by Frank Sheridan, renders an excellent interpretation. Harry O. Hoyt directed.

"THROUGH THE BACK DOOR"
(United Artists)

Mary Pickford's Talent and Personality Will Put This Over

THERE is no question about Mary Pickford being able to put this picture over judging from its reception with an appreciative audience at the Strand. The lovable star, after giving us a season of "advanced dramatics," has returned to the type of story which has made her justly famous. The properties which are hers on the screen—the curls, the short frocks, the juvenile pranks—these are relied upon to carry her successfully through the earlier sequences. It is in the forepart of the picture that most of the entertainment values are found. There is a spontaneity of incident which is as refreshing as it is delightfully amusing. But the later reels are given over to much extraneous footage and travel over familiar ground to he always entertaining.

In fact the story sort of spends itself when the star is enacting the child and never regains its strength. There is a lapse of fifteen years in the action which shows the heroine emerging from early childhood, through the pre-adolescent stage, to the romantic age of seventeen or thereabouts. She is a poor, little rich girl and attracts the sympathy because this tried and true characterization and theme shows no wear with the lapse of time. The wealthy parents, while traveling in Belgium, surrender the child to native servants rather than be annoyed by her presence. The mother returns in five years and is told that the girl is dead. Five more years pass by, at which time the war breaks out and the Belgians send the heroine to America. She bobs up in her parents' home, but shamed of her lack of social graces, she refuses to press any claim of relationship. Indeed, she finds a position as maid.

This is where the picture falters and becomes maudlin at times. There is no flash of ingenuity exposed in the subsequent sequences. The author uses a week-end party to incorporate some time-worn hokum. Why is it that certain guests at these functions are ever plotting to stir up domestic troubles or to fleece their hosts? Such development has been part and parcel of a hundred photoplays and seems to be the only way out for authors to furnish the necessary complications. The star does not have much opportunity to flash her talent other than appearing sweetly wistful. A note of puppy-love is well caught, however. And the throh of pathos is present too. When the padded sequences run their course, the daughter plucks up enough courage to admit her identity and all is over. The titles are good, and the scenes carry appropriate atmosphere. Since the picture strikes a more or less happy medium in plot and characterization, there is no question of its favorahle reception. Mary Pickford is—well, Mary Pickford, and she has a continent or two of admirers. There'll he a cry of "Inside the Tape, Please!" in more than one house.—Length, 5 reels. —Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Mary Pickford, America's sweetheart, will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— in "Through the Back Door," an original photoplay by Marion Fairfax. This picture permits the favorite star to flash her familiar talent. She is the young girl again—the young girl with curls and a million dollar smile. The picture is a fragrant romance which travels over a score ot years and finds expression in Europe and America. As the story begins, the star is seen as the neglected child of a wealthy mother. Rather than be troubled in caring for her she is given up to Belgian servants who rear her as their own.

Five years later the mother comes to reclaim her child, but the servants have become so attached to her that they tell the mother she is dead. The war breaks out and Jeane is dispatched to America—to the home of her mother. The impression of wealth and society is so great that the girl neglects to establish her relationship. She, however, finds a position as maid in her mother's home. And a youth from the neighborhood becomes enamored of her charms. Eventually she establishes her identity and the poor little rich girl finds happiness and love. The picture sends out flashes of fine sentiment and appealing humor and is perfectly acted.

PROGRAM READER

Mary Pickford, the Universal favorite—Mary Pickford, America's sweetheart, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in a picture calculated to please her vast following and win her a new host of admirers if such a thing is possible with her. "Through the Back Door" is of the same high calibre as "Pollyanna," and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Our Mary is seen as a young girl again—with her sweet expression, her curls, and her vital charm. It is a picture which will please every type of picturegoer because it carries such appealing qualities. There is romance, sentiment, pathos and humor—all of which have been mixed up in a most pleasing fashion. And Our Mary expresses one element that balances it with another—which is sufficient to proclaim her a great little artist.

CATCH LINES

STRAIGHT IS THE WAY (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST .....MAR. 5

"Poor Simp" (Selznick)—"Kept our audience in one continuous roar. Best comedy for some time. Average business three days on account of bad weather."

"What's Your Hurry" (Famous Players)—"Reid's best picture. Average business two days."

"The White Circle" (Famous Players)—"Costume plays not liked here. Poor business one day."

"Chorus Girl's Romance" (Metro)—"A very good picture. Big to average business two days."

"Right to Love" (Paramount)—"Drew big. Mae Murray always popular here. Big business two days."

"Madam X" (Goldwyn)—"Broke house records for box-office receipts. Played to standing room to every performance."

"The Week End" (American)—"The picture is well produced and should please the average audience. Poor business due to bad business conditions."

"A Cumberland Romance" (Realart)—"A 100 per cent production which seemed to please all. This star is deservedly gaining in favor very rapidly. Credit on this production should be given the director, Chas. Maigne. His work is surely fine. Two days is our usual limit on a picture, but this made good for three."

"The Woman Gives" (First National)—"A good picture from the box office angle. It pleased 90 per cent. Star well liked by patrons. Extra big business two days."

"Cheater" (Metro)—"Poor picture to average business one day."

"Hair Pins" (Famous Players)—"A good picture to poor business one day."

"Dinty" (First National)—"Poor business two days."

"Felix O'Day" (Pathe)—"Fair to poor business."

"The Daredevil" (Fox)—"Extra big business two days."

"SALVAGE"
(Robertson-Cole)

Pauline Frederick Scores in Heavy and Morbid Picture

WERE it not for the fact that Pauline Frederick holds the attention through a display of some exceptional talent, this production would not rise above a mediocre level. That she gives it a tone and quality cannot be denied, although the role is hardly emotional enough to tax her histrionic gifts. The title sort of indicates what to expect, but though it is consistently maintained to the end, it seems as if a note of "sweetness and light" might have permeated the gloomy atmosphere. "Salvage" is a tale of mother-love which relies upon a spirit of self-sacrifice for its appeal, with plenty of recourse to melodramatic trimmings which appear unduly far-fetched to seem genuine.

The wife of a wealthy man has become the mother of a crippled infant. The father, ashamed of its condition, spirits the babe away, telling the mother of its death. Bowed down with grief and misery the wife never forgives her husband and eventually leaves him to live in tenement quarters. This is the occasion to introduce a dual role for the star. Across the hall lives a vicious type of woman whose husband has been sentenced to prison for a crime of which he is innocent. It is only a matter of a few sequences which feature some creditable double exposure when the drug victim passes out of the picture by sharing the other's room and palming herself off as the latter. The husband, reading of her death, naturally thinks her his own wife. The compensation for the heroine's misery is found in the derelict woman's child. And when the father is released from prison one can appreciate the ultimate elimination of the rich husband.

The sequence which introduces Raymond Hatton, gliding about on a coaster slab, with his legs apparently missing, needs a deal of explanation. It seems like straining for originality. Of course it is all a hoax arranged by the rich husband to surprise his wife. However, it is a grim joke and is not pleasant to watch for the simple reason that Hatton plays the part so vividly. The "cripple" palms himself off as a product of poverty and who has a sick child in the hospital that needs care. So the sorrowful heroine adopts her. This is the point where the husband sends for his wife on his death-bed and tells that by a miraculous operation the infant is cured. The "cripple" straightens up and happiness is the mother's reward. The surprise finish adds strength to the picture insofar as furnishing suspense. But the offering is too morbid to be popular. The star has a good cast which includes Milton Sills and Ralph Lewis. But even the capable acting cannot keep one from wondering why a woman of refinement should deliberately choose a sordid home to eke out a drab existence.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Pauline Frederick, the emotional star, has in "Salvage," by Daniel Whitcomb, one of the most satisfying pictures in which she has ever appeared. The dramatic qualities are so sound that Miss Frederick is able to flash a fine display of her abundant talent. It is a story of mother-love—of a woman's self-sacrifice—a woman who steals away from her husband's house because he has denied her the right of possessing or taking care of her own child. The wife takes rooms in a tenement and finds companionship in the daughter of a woman who has tasted the dregs of life. When this woman commits suicide, the wife assumes her identity. Thus her husband believes her dead.

Then the husband of the derelict woman returns from prison, which is the beginning of a fine romance. In the meantime Ridgway, the rich husband, traces his wife and gives her back the infant, which she thought had died. Thus Bernice comes into her own. It is a picture of pathos and sympathy and offers a full quota of appealing scenes. Something of an all-star cast interprets the offering—a cast that includes Milton Sills, Ralph Lewis and Raymond Hatton. Henry King directed.

PROGRAM READER

They had told her that her baby died. But the infant being a cripple, the father thought that the best plan would be to allow the doctor to let it die. The wife never forgave her husband and eventually left him. She found a reward for her mother-love in the child of a derelict woman. She lived solely to bring happiness to little children. She represented the eternal mother. Then one day she received the startling information that her husband was dying. She went to his bedside and discovered. What did she discover? Come to the ———— theatre next ———— and see Pauline Frederick in "Salvage," a picture of tremendous heart-throbs—pathos, sentiment, and romance. A picture which does full credit to Miss Frederick's talent. A fine cast renders good support.

SUGGESTIONS

This is a mother-love story which should appeal to the feminine patrons. Play it up as such. Play up the fact that Miss Frederick has an ideal role in "Salvage," a picture which permits her to run the gamut of emotions. Go after your feminine patrons. Play it up as a throbbing story of mother love. Play up the all-star cast. The principal players have been stars at one time or another. Mention Milton Sills, Raymond Hatton, and Ralph Lewis. The title is attractive and could come in for special exploitation. Treat it as a human interest story which has the sure-fire quality of mother appeal. Ask your patrons if children should live if they are born deformed or crippled. This question has raised considerable agitation in medical circles.

"THE IDOL OF THE NORTH"
(Paramount)

Elemental and Rugged Picture Packs a Healthy Punch

IN J. Clarkson Miller's rugged and elemental picture of the Klondyke, where primitive men fought and cursed and passionate women danced, "The Idol of the North," Dorothy Dalton returns to her first love. It goes without saying that the offering eclipses anything the star has had since "The Flame of the Yukon." Since she displayed such a fine adaptability for this type of story one wonders why she has not been given more of this brand. Certainly no actress on the screen today can be compared with her in the interpretation of the primitive woman of the North. Mr. Miller has concocted a story which fairly bristles with two-fisted action—which builds with rugged incident that might be called intensity itself. It is easily the most outstanding picture of its kind which has reached the screen in many a day.

While its general outline may be called familiar, the development of the theme and characterization has struck a new note in the matter of detail. Husky men who drink hard; vibrant women who dance and make playthings of men; the mad rush for gold; the keen search for pleasure—these factors are all there and give the picture a healthy punch throughout. There was an opportunity for the author to follow orthodox lines, especially in the figure of the red-coated policeman. But this much abused character is incidental to the action. So the picture carries a surprise too. The hero is an Easterner who, jilted by a mercenary woman, seeks forgetfulness in the vast reaches of Alaska. Tense is the scene which shows the "Idol" being forced to marry him while he is intoxicated. The miners, tired of being made playthings at her hands, hit upon this scheme to get even.

Miss Dalton's assertive personality fits into the role of the tempestuous and capricious dance hall girl with perfect adaptability. She has toyed with the red-coat and the rougher types. But the matrimonial venture inspires her to "show up" her tormentors. She will make the best of a bad bargain. Thus the author has kept his characterization consistent. The will power of the girl is dominant to the end. When the regeneration is nearly effected, a melodramatic moment occurs when his former fiancee arrives to intrigue him again, having learned that he struck it rich. And the heroine shows that the finer instincts are becoming dominant with her by displaying her loyalty. The romance is mostly neglected. Yet its spare moments won't be missed. The atmosphere is correct, there being no technical slips of direction insofar as details are concerned. The casting director and supervising director, Tom Geraghty, have seen to it that every character and detail and sequence fitted the time and location. The titles are exceptionally good, being consistent with the rugged action.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Dorothy Dalton is back again in the role of a daughter of the Canadian Northwest in the days of the gold rush—a similar character to that in which she made such a success in "The Flame of the Yukon," several years ago. It was in such a role as she has in J. Clarkson Miller's story which will be seen at the ———— theatre next ———— that Miss Dalton gained her reputation as a screen star. Miss Dalton plays the daughter of a French-Canadian miner, who fled to the wilderness to escape arrest for killing a man. She is left without father and mother in a mining town built up over night and obtains a position in the camp's chief saloon and dance hall.

She soon becomes one of the attractions of the place and plays unmercifully with the miners, "trimming" them for all they are worth, but still remaining the most desired of the girls. She meets a young engineer who has forsaken the East to forget an unhappy romance. In order to get even with the way she has treated the miners, they force her to marry the Easterner. And so she decides to make the best of a bad bargain and regenerate him. Many dramatic incidents follow before she finds happiness with him. The picture is elemental and rugged and charged with keen action and suspense.

PROGRAM READER

She was a wild, untamed daughter of the North, the country where men and women struggled for existence—where strong drink and fists ruled. She was the daughter of a French-Canadian—a girl possessing a vital personality. Sure of her power over men, she toyed with them. One moment she would be as gentle as a child, the next minute would find her a capricious madcap, living for only one purpose, to make playthings of men. In revenge her associates who had been victimized forced her into marriage with a stranger, the latter being intoxicated during the ceremony. But little did the miners think that she would make the best of a bad bargain. What follows is intensity itself. In fact the picture, "The Idol of the North," is a smashing, vigorous, red-blooded picture. Dorothy Dalton is the star. At this theatre next ————.

CATCH LINES

Her object in life was to make playthings of men. Then one day she met her match or rather she found that such a course didn't bring happiness. See "The Idol of the North."

"CLOSED DOORS"
(Vitagraph)

Easily Obvious Picture Carries Mild Interest

IT does not take a great deal of imagination to penetrate this plot and know how it will develop. The characters fit their grooves, while the theme is of such common structure that the outline of action is clearly mapped out in advance. That it offers mild entertainment cannot be denied because of the good taste of the production, the sympathetic appeal of the characterization, and the quality of the acting.

Alice Calhoun, the star, has progressed in screen pantomime since her "leading lady" days. Her poise is more sure and she carries herself with admirable restraint. There is a constant suggestion of refinement about her personality which makes her work doubly refreshing. The picture does not tax her ability to any extent. There is no effort to display emotion. Miss Calhoun simply plays an everyday character in a simple, natural way, relying upon some charming mannerisms for appeal.

The picture is based upon the neglected wife formula, with husband too busy at his stocks and bonds to pay much attention to his young bride. The action discloses a prologue which is rather crudely executed. The husband at that time of the story is a western sheriff who saves a man from hanging and advises the latter not to close the door, but to give his wife a chance. Not until the climax is there any relationship of the sequence. At this point the scalawag of the prologue imparts the same advice to his benefactor. Thus the title has its meaning. The action follows a familiar groove. The idle, lonesome wife is so hard up for company that she cultivates the society of parasites. The villain plays his cards smoothly but capitulates to her charms. When he is repulsed he attempts to get even by staging a robbery which is interrupted by the husband who places a wrong conclusion on the incident. The latter is advised in the matter by the philanderer's jealous mistress.

The picture does not carry one original scene aside from the prologue villain, saving his friend's life by posing as a detective and telling the husband not to close the door. The prologue is arbitrary and is picturey in the element of coincidence. There are some clever close-ups of the star who is able to stand a strong focus and pass with high honors, especially in her profile. Harry C. Browne is hardly the romantic type for the demands of his role and he plays his part in rather heavy fashion. The others play subordinate parts of little consequence.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture of a neglected bride whose husband is too busy making money to give her the affection and attention she craves is "Closed Doors," by Harry Dittmar, which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— as a Vitagraph offering starring Alice Calhoun. Many years before the Wall Street magnate married, he was a Western sheriff who was instrumental in saving a man from hanging and advising him not to close the door upon his wife, but to give her a chance—the wife having been the cause of the crime. The young benedict has an opportunity to recall this advice when the very man he imparted it to, uses the identical phrase—thus saving the former of crime.

The wife had cultivated the society of an adventurer whose object was to intrigue her and blackmail her husband out of money. But he capitulated to her charms until she repulsed him, after which he attempts to execute revenge. The husband happens on the scene and places a wrong conclusion upon it. But the man of the West saves him from murder. This brings to the husband a realization that he has neglected his wife. The picture is interesting and teaches a good lesson. The acting is capably taken care of by Miss Calhoun and a clever cast.

PROGRAM READER

There is an old proverb which says—"while the cat's away the wife will play." So young husbands or old husbands should not neglect their wives for business. A neglectful husband very nearly brought a catastrophe to his home by his shameful conduct. His wife was lonely and innocently played with fire. She cultivated the society of people whose ulterior motives were never guessed at by her who was brought up in a spirit of refinement. When a philanderer was repulsed he found an opportunity to avenge himself. How did he do it? Did the wife suffer? What of the husband? Did the denouement bring tragedy in its wake? See Alice Calhoun in the very appealing picture, "Closed Doors," a picture which teaches a lesson and affords the spectator a dramatic hour. At the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

This picture is based upon an old theme—one which has been used a score of times. So it is up to you if you think it safe to detail it. Such a course might keep the discriminate patrons away. But you can emphasize that it teaches a great lesson on how to avoid domestic tragedy and presents a very good dramatic entertainment in the bargain. Ask your patrons if they are neglecting their wives, or if the wives are neglecting their homes for the pleasures of society. Play up the title and use the advice that the husband gives in a blind teaser campaign. Play up Alice Calhoun, stating that she is one of the new and refreshing personalities of the screen. Use stills of her. Get your audience interested in her so that you may be assured of good houses on future occasions.

CATCH LINES

He had neglected his wife for business and when he surprised her with another man, he forgot that he was to blame. See "Closed Doors," with Alice Calboun as the star.

"BIG TOWN IDEAS"
(Fox)

Rural Comedy-Drama Is Fairly Amusing

AFTER a season spent in exceedingly mild bedroom farces, Fox h found a fitting vehicle for Eileen Percy. "Big Town Ideas" com about the nearest to being her best bet to date. It belongs to t "hick" brand with much emphasis being placed on pleasant tom-foole a slice or two of hokum and a line of melodramatic trimmings to give balance. The director has appreciated the fact that he has not had mu material to work with, judging from the whimsical vein in which he h constructed his scenes. He has brought forth some first rate comedy fro a formula which is American to the core. It is surprising that the sce has not been used before, especially in slapstick. We are speaking of t railroad station at a junction point—a station presided over by a gu chewing waitress. This sequence really puts the picture over.

The atmosphere is correct down to the last pancake. The flapja turner may appear like a country daisy, but she has her ambitions. Sl feels certain that she could shine on the street of bright lights—namel Broadway. Miss Percy puts over these scenes in acceptable fashio Those who have been caught in tank towns will appreciate the restaura which Harbaugh has made so real, you could almost smell the flap-jacl burning. However, the "business" has to be relegated eventually f melodramatic purposes. A bumpkin sheriff lugs a victim of the law i side—a youth who the waitress feels is innocent. There is much hoku put over during their visit. There being no real thread to the story, it natural that a "busted" theatrical company should appear—a compan consisting of two soubrettes, two comedians and a manager. These star ing thespians are due to give a benefit performance at the prison and th waitress is accepted for a specialty act. So she finds an opportunity t double in brass by outwitting the guards and giving a costume to the inn cent youth who makes his escape.

The picture here takes on the appearance of the chase—with much acr batic comedy and rural high jinks supplying the points of interest. Throug houses, doors, roofs, trees and what not they race until the real culprit are caught by our leading figures. And the waitress arrives in New Yor for a honeymoon. The story is thin, but the large slice of snappy hokur gives it an appeal. The restaurant scenes are flavored with all the intimat touches. The titling is gingery and filled with native expressions—withou seeming out of place as being there to bolster up the story.—Length, reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A photoplay built upon unconventional lines and for laughing purposes, is "Big Town Ideas," a Fox offering in which pretty Eileen Percy is the star. The picture will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— of ———— week. Miss Percy plays the part of a pancake turner at a junction restaurant. She is beset with one grand all-consuming ambition—to take off her apron, hang it in the kitchen, and go to New York city to live as a "fine lady."

Her dream is realized, but not until after she becomes involved in a jail delivery at the nearby penitentiary wherein an innocent man is set free, becomes the savior of a whole flock of valuable bonds that have been purloined from their rightful owners, earns a big reward, and finally sets out on her journey to the big city in the company of a handsome youth, brushing rice from his headgear. The story of "Big Town Ideas" is certainly fast and filled with funny incident. Miss Percy gives a good performance as the waitress, and she receives clever assistance from her supporting cast.

PROGRAM READER

She certainly shook a lively flapjack turner. She could toss the cakes like a born juggler. And everybody around the junction loved both her and the flapjacks; but she couldn't love them all, so she chose a sad-faced young man whom the sheriff brought in—in handcuffs—and who she felt was innocent. The gum-chewing girl had a longing to see the bright lights. Somehow she felt superior to the railroad people. She longed to flip flapjacks in a Broadway restaurant. But how could she get there? Then one day good fortune came her way. She displayed so much talent that she found her way to the stage. And soon after love came and brought her happiness. And she brought happiness to another. Was it the man with the handcuffs? See Eileen Percy in the lively comedy-drama, "Big Town Ideas" at the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

In your copy on this picture emphasize its humor. Play it up in humorous fashion, stressing the incident around the Junction restaurant. Play up that the star is seen as a mighty attractive flapjack turner—a girl who brought smiles and appetites to her customers. Don't treat the picture seriously in your copy. Play up the funny angle. Bill it as rural comedy-drama—one of the best—if not the best in which Miss Percy has appeared. Use program readers similar to the one exploited here for your teaser campaign and newspaper briefs. Ask your patrons if they ever found romance in a railroad station restaurant while waiting for a train. It is a surety that most of them have? Get them curious at the strange places in which adventure and romance lurks. A rube quartette could put over a prologue for you.

"BOYS WILL BE BOYS"
(Goldwyn)

Quaintly Humorous, Simple Story with Will Rogers

THE result of combining Will Rogers with Irvin S. Cobb is a simple, excellently titled, quaintly humorous, but rather weak feature, which has the short running time of forty-five minutes, although it is announced as five reels in length. It may be milder, tamer and less virile than some of this star's previous pictures, but it is genuine, high class entertainment and the pleasant, human incidents with which it is filled will give more satisfaction than many a longer and more dramatic feature.

For its plot it takes a simple short story idea of a small town nobody, a product of the poorhouse who falls heir to a small fortune. The action is laid in the South, and the kindly character of Judge Priest is an important one in the action. Will Rogers plays Peep O'Day, the nobody. The judge informs him that, by the death of an Irish uncle, he is worth £9,000. "Pounds of what?" asks Peep. "Pounds of money," explains the Judge, "all you have to do is to sign some papers." "I knew there was a catch in it someway," sighs the uneducated Peep.

Having all this money, Peep decides to spend it by enjoying a boyhood that was denied him in his youth. He plays bandit with the youngsters, takes them on picnics, and goes on a second childhood spree generally. The plot comes in with a shyster lawyer who tries to have Peep declared incompetent to manage his own affairs. A phoney niece from the city is in the frame-up. Judge Priest holds court, and after hearing Peep's story of his lost boyhood, and the stories of others, showing his kindliness and generosity, decides that he is perfectly sane. The "niece" squeals, her sudden change of character being explained not at all. This plot becomes very faint at times while Rogers gets in some high class comedy trying to escape a designing widow. There is no romance linked up with the star, and the final fade-out shows him walking off with his gang of youngsters, leaving the widow disconsolate. There is a touch of love interest supplied by the village school mistress and a young lawyer. Peep helps them financially. "It doesn't cost me anything," he explains, "all I have to do is to make a cross on a cheque."

Rogers himself is a laconic, quaintly humorous, thoroughly human product of the soil. His treatment of the comedy situations is high class and appealing and marks him once more as unequalled as a portrayer of this type of character. Ed. Kimball is Judge Priest, Irene Rich, the girl, and Sidney Ainsworth, the villain, as smooth as ever. There are some good boy types, and plenty of pleasant pastoral exteriors.—Length, 5 reels.

The inimitible Will Rogers is the star of "Boys Will Be Boys," the Irvin S. Cobb story which has reached the screen and which will be shown at the ———— theatre on ————. Rogers has no counterpart in motion pictures to-day. After a varied stage career, during which he gained fame as a laconic monologist and an expert rope swinger, Rogers entered picturedom, scored a hit and created a following for himself, which is growing larger with each succeeding picture which arrives from the Goldwyn studios in California.

"Boys Will Be Boys" gives him a typical role. He is cast as Peep O'Day, a nobody in a small southern town. Fate, in the form of an unknown uncle in Ireland, leaves him a small fortune. Money has always been foreign to Peep. The largest sum he ever had before was eighty cents. So, with everything at his command, he chooses that for which he ever longed and which was ever denied him. He chooses a real boyhood. How he proceeds to have the fun which should have been his twenty years before, forms the basis of this interesting Irvin S. Cobb story. Its quaint humor, its human touches, and its depths of pathos is a credit to the author as well as the star.

"Boys Will Be Boys" will be shown at the ———— theatre for ————.

PROGRAM READER

If some unknown relative died and left you a small fortune, it is a hundred to one chance that you would want to spend it the way Peep O'Day did. Peep is none other than the inimitible Will Rogers, who is appearing in the picture version of Irvin S. Cobb's story "Boys Will Be Boys."

You will have an opportunity to see "Boys Will Be Boys" on ———— at this theatre when it will start a ———— day run. Combining such a screen actor as Will Rogers and such a master of story-telling as Irvin S. Cobb makes a combination that is a pretty sure guarantee that an excellent picture will be the result. We leave it up to you to see "Boys Will Be Boys" and judge for yourself. You will probably remember Judge Priest, the kindly old justice of a small Southern town, who is liable to put a man in jail and then to go bail for him. Come and meet Peep O'Day then, as he is portrayed by Will Rogers. It is a picture of wholesome romance, quaint humor and laconic comedy.

SUGGESTIONS

Will Rogers and Irvin S. Cobb make a combination of names which will look mighty good in ad copy. Boost these two as much as possible. No writer is better known than Cobb and a great many should come to see his story who would otherwise prefer a more romantic hero than Rogers. You can run a teaser campaign asking if the reader would spend a small fortune to win back a boyhood that has been lost.

"OLD DAD"
(Mayer-First National)

Mild Entertainment in This Conventional Picture

THIS offering starring Mildred Harris is a more or less sugary recipe founded upon the conventional idea of a neglected daughter and a preoccupied father who takes her into his arms when danger beckons and chases the black clouds away. The picture is a plea of sympathy for dad, who has been relegated to the background in similar types of photoplays in order that mother may be made the central figure. The offering furnishes no novelty. Every scene is cut and dried, with the heroine going through naive experiences. No flash of mother is given at first and the supposition is that she is dead. But father makes his bow in the introductory reel as a preoccupied captain of industry—too busy to pay attention to his capricious daughter at boarding school. A mere flash shows him in deep thought, after which he fades out of the picture until the third reel.

Naturally one is at a loss to find a meaning in the title until his reappearance. The action up to this point is the usual presentation of high jinks at school. The director might have enlivened the plot here with some amusing incident, thus providing a humorous balance. Instead he paints the pathos of the lonely girl's life. The regulations of the school are such that she is expelled because a college boy is caught in her room. And this is the opportunity to introduce father again. The scenes at the school are exceedingly mild and the star fails to put any vitality into her performance. She rushes home, explains to dad, is forgiven and the latter tells her he will take more interest in the future. The mild incident must have called upon the director for at this point he introduces some arbitrary scenes with a moral leper endeavoring to compromise the girl.

The father registers indignation, but the daughter, thoroughly innocent, encourages the philanderer when he offers apologies. She is about to elope with him when her mother appears on the scene and compromises herself to save her. The gay hounder is proved a higamist and the college youth arrives to carry out the romance. The picture does not develop any real moving moments. There are many sequences which show the characters in exceedingly quiet action. It moves so slowly that one has time to anticipate the outcome. And this is fatal in building suspense. The chief element of the offering is the note of pathos which envelops the lives of the father and daughter. The mother's introduction paves the way for a reconciliation. John Sainpolis plays dad in a sympathetic manner.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Mildred Harris' latest starring vehicle, "Old Dad," from Eleanor Hallowell Abbot's widely read story, will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. In this production the star deviates somewhat from her more serious roles of the past, and, according to reports, is more captivating than ever, revealing a surprising versatility. As Daphne Bretton, she has the role of a young girl who has missed the influence of motherlove, and who is left to the care of a preoccupied father, blinded to all else but the pursuit of the dollar.

She develops into a capricious young woman whose disregard for certain conventions at a fashionable boarding school make her very much misunderstood. She is expelled from school when a college boy is found in her room, although the circumstances surrounding his presence are perfectly proper. The girl joins her father and soon after elopes with a philanderer, but after discovering him to be a bigamist, the marriage is annulled and she renews her romance with the college youth. The picture radiates considerable charm and sentiment and is capably acted and directed.

"No—I don't know him, at all." Of course she fibbed, and the boy would have gone to jail rather than confess he'd jumped out of her window only five minutes before. But it was midnight, and the scandal started—a scandal which expelled her from school. She was disgraced, but her father had implicit trust in her. She found refuge in his arms. She had never known the influence of mother love—until. See Mildred Harris in her newest picture entitled, "Old Dad," at the ———— theatre next ————. It is a story of charm and sentiment and romance—a story of Dad who found his wife, through a scandal, and his daughter, too. The picture is adapted from Eleanor Hallowell Abbott's novel and gives Miss Harris an opportunity to display her versatility.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

There is a good title to this picture which can be exploited for its full value. Play up the sentiment and pathos which are written into the life of a preoccupied father who is too busy to pay attention to his daughter. Play up the picture as a charming journey in the land of sentiment and romance. Play up the star and announce that she has an ideal vehicle here. You might capitalize upon the title by paraphrasing the ad, "Ask Dad, He Knows." This can be used around various articles of merchandise for window displays. Play the picture up as an interesting story of a lonely, little rich girl, who had missed the influence of mother love. You might have a Dad evening, admitting all fathers over a certain age free of charge. This would be a good publicity stunt which would excite comment.

A mother looked into the picture and saw what she had lost—a husband who needed a wife's love; a daughter who needed a mother's guidance. See "Old Dad."

"THE MAN OF THE FOREST"

(Benj. B. Hampton-Hodkinson)

Will Be Ranked High by the Melodrama Fans

WELL-MADE melodrama, with a sustained climax which will keep an audience tense for the entire last reel, sums up briefly this Zane Grey novel, which has been produced by the Benjamin B. Hampton forces. In entertainment values, it will be ranked high by the lovers of the Western type of motion picture, chiefly because, as stated above, it reaches a climax early in its course, creates a tense situation and holds the interest from then on by piling one difficulty after another in front of the rescuing parties. The scenario has been so written that, even with the end foreseen, an audience will be seated on the edge of their chairs until the hero utters a happy sigh of contentment in his sweetheart's arms in the fadeout.

When the story gets started and the characters all planted it looks like very orthodox. The villains are an unscrupulous hotel owner, an unfaithful employee, and a crowd of half-breeds. The old ranch owner is ill, and the hotelkeeper is scheming to obtain possession of the ranch at his death. The heroine is the prospective heiress, and the hero a young man with a propensity for hermiting, who lives alone in the forest. After a misunderstanding brought about by the villain, the girl is kidnapped, and the old man is left alone, while a second heavy seeks to give him an overdose of strychnine. Thus there are two threads of the story to be used to keep up the tensity of the climax. That is to say, there is one party of sympathetic characters fighting for their lives in a cabin in the woods, while another sympathetic character, the old ranchowner, barely escapes being poisoned in his home.

There is not a little comedy developed by the character acting of Frank Hayes and a semi-tamed mountain lion and bear. Carl Gantvoort, as the man in the forest, appears to be a too conventional leading man for the part. One might expect a little more carelessness of dress and a less bouyant appearance in a man who lives in solitude. Claire Adams is an attractive leading woman with no tendency to overact in the heavier moments. The villains are Robert McKim and Jean Hersholt, both capable and true to type. Even more beautiful exteriors than are shown might be looked for here, for although they are all adequate, none are exceptional. It is not a "wild and wooley" West story. Arizona is given credit for a number of automobiles and some respectable brick buildings.—Length, 6 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The latest Zane Grey novel to be picturized, "The Man of the Forest," will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days run beginning ————. Zane Grey is one of the few American authors whose works are listed consistently among the year's "best sellers." In addition to his graphic powers of description, Mr. Grey is able to bring home to his readers the great Western plain life as it really is. His stories are tales of adventure and romance of that wide country born of a period of disorder and struggle of law against the lowest passions of unscrupulous men. No one can equal him in his portrayal of Western life.

Benjamin B. Hampton has produced one of Mr. Grey's most attractive stories in picture form. "The Man of the Forest" takes one out of the humdrum existence of routine life. It carries one away with the spirit of adventure. On the screen it is enacted by a highly capable cast of screen favorites including Carl Gantvoort, Claire Adams, Robert McKim and Jean Hersholt. The picture was actually filmed in the West where the story was laid, and as a result there is a wealth of picturesque scenery as a background for the stirring action.

"The Man of the Forest," will run at the ———— theatre for ———— days beginning ————.

PROGRAM READER

Another popular Zane Grey novel has been picturized and will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. It is "The Man of the Forest," and it has been produced as a motion picture by no less a director than Benjamin B. Hampton, who has already a long list of screen successes to his credit. It is enacted by an all-star cast, which is really all-star. Among the favorites who are seen in it are Carl Gantvoort, Claire Adams, Robert McKim and Jean Hersholt.

Zane Grey's stories of the great American West are unequaled in all American fiction. He is noted for his tales of adventure and romance that carry one away to the open country—to the barren deserts of New Mexico, to the rolling cattle lands of Arizona, and to the rugged forests of the mountain country. "The Man of the Forest" is a ranch story. It sweeps along to a thrilling and gripping climax. It takes one out of a humdrum existence and carries him into a land of adventure and action. It is a picture you will want to see, and one which we take pleasure in presenting to you.

CATCH LINES

Zane Grey's newest story of Western adventure. See an accurate portrayal of life in the Western plains—a life of adventure, of dark-skinned, hard-muscled, red-blooded men. Let it carry you to those rolling plains of Arizona. Let it satisfy your longing for adventure. You will enjoy it even more than this great author's printed stories.

'SHELTERED DAUGHTERS"

(Realart)

The Best Little Bet in Many a Month

A GEM. Has everything that goes to make a surefire audience picture; great story, barring one slightly improbable sequence in which the heroine is made an accomplice of the crook, but which won't be questioned by the average audience; fine acting by a flawless cast; perfect direction that gets the most out of each scene; star truly beautiful and registering for the first time by the way, as an honest to goodness personality, and a great type for the part; a perfect continuity that carries suspense and builds with just the right amount of mystery; clothes that aren't dragged in by the ears; a theme of rare importance used not to preach but to teach; good sets and nicely selected exteriors; clever titles that hand out an occasional laugh as well as tie the story together and good straight clear photography that strives not to be so artistic but that it will be appreciated by the fan. What more could an audience ask for?

The story told concerns an unsophisticated girl who has been sheltered from all the bad of life, who through a series of circumstances and incidents, comes close to having her life wrecked because a title in the picture says, "She is so green that I bet she still thinks there is a Santa Claus." Through the picture there is the thread of a romance, but the feature is principally a story of incident and action in which the whole cast is given about equal opportunity.

If this production doesn't please 'em they are hard boiled. Incidentally the feature is censor proof. Go get it.—Length. 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

That ignorance is not always bliss furnishes the theme of Justine Johnstone's latest picture, "Sheltered Daughters," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— and ————. The beautiful star plays the role of a motherless girl whose father, a famous detective, has determined that his daughter shall be kept pure and undefiled even from any knowledge of the sin and crookedness of which he knows so much. The girl is not even allowed to read the newspapers, lest she learn that scandal and crime are commonplace.

The hero of the story is a young cub reporter who informs her father that the girl ought to be told a few things about life. But father, stubborn in his convictions, went right on secluding and sheltering the girl, believing her safe because she was always at home reading. Of course she reads romances and finds a deal of romantic notions from them. Then a chance acquaintance brings her into contact with a polished rogue, who has on foot a daring scheme to fleece a choice lot of millionaires. He needs a woman accomplice and the girl becomes an unconscious tool to his scheme. She is extricated in the nick of time. The picture builds a number of clever scenes and holds the interest.

PROGRAM READER

Since babyhood her father had kept her ignorant of the ways of the world and sheltered from all contact with evil. And now, when the first man came into her life, how was she to judge whether his intentions were honorable or not? So the trap was set and sprung all too easily, and only a kind providence saved this gentle "sheltered daughter" from her father's folly. Is it any wonder that even the man who had deceived her should turn upon the father with the scathing denunciation—"Don't blame the girl, blame yourself." "Sheltered Daughters" is a play that every parent and every boy and girl should see. The picture appears at the ———— theatre next ———— with beautiful Justine Johnstone as the star.

SUGGESTIONS

The theme of this picture would make excellent copy for exploitation. This can be put out in the shape of a teaser campaign, newspaper synopses and program readers. Ask your patrons—those who are parents if they are pursuing the right course in bringing up their children. Play up that ignorance is not always bliss. Stress the fact that children cannot be secluded from all contact with evil—that ignorance may reap the consequences. Play up the star and her previous pictures. You can state that she is the most beautiful woman on the screen. The author is well known and his name should come in for some special exploitation. Bill it as a dramatic study which carries romance and thrills.

CATCH LINES

Her father had surrounded her with a rich assortment of blue laws. The "Don't Trespass" sign was up on all sides. What were the consequences? See "Sheltered Daughters."

Do you believe in secluding your daughter and forbidding her to see no evil, speak no evil, and hear no evil? See Justine Johnstone in "Sheltered Daughters."

"CHEATED LOVE"
(Universal)

Carmel Myers Has a Gem in Lifelike Picture

EVERYTHING belongs to the credit side of this lifelike little picture which gives Carmel Myers a chance to display her refreshing personality and talent at their best. In fact it is the best offering in which she has ever appeared and in all likelihood will meet with a very enthusiastic reception everywhere. King Baggot has turned director here and shows that he knows how to construct a picture and make it palpitate with life. He has been at the game long enough to know what he is about and his experience has given him a ripe knowledge in knowing how to build moving scenes and balancing them with genuine humanities. "Cheated Love" is a slice of life as it is lived in New York's teeming East Side—the Ghetto to be exact, and revolves around Jewish love as it is expressed between parents and their offspring.

Not a touch is out of place, the director catching every incident and visualizing every characteristic of the race. Even sentiment is caught in a charming manner. The story is marked by its simplicity, there being a jilted romance for a basic idea with nary a villain to introduce any false melodrama. The father, who conducts a grocery, journeys down to the pier to welcome his immigrant daughter from Russia. And while he, true to form, is unable to assimilate the ways of the new world, the girl rapidly becomes Americanized. If there is a stormy scene between the two over her partiality to a certain lover, it is quickly brushed aside in appealing moments of devotion. The girl sends for her lover, a doctor, in far-away Russia. But he does not measure up to requirements in the father's eyes. Unable to get his diploma without funds the heroine willingly turns over her salary to him. She is employed in the theatre of her people, her talent giving her a place in the cast.

A counter conflict is used to stress the pathos, with a disappointed lover displaying a magnanimous spirit. The young doctor becomes enamoured of a wealthy girl and when he attempts to renew his former love affair, the girl promptly shows him the door. The punch scene is a panic in the theatre when the boiler explodes, with the heroine calming the audience by giving an impromptu performance. It is a good touch which shows a celebrity refusing to appear because a younger and more beautiful girl is in the cast. The picture is easy to anticipate, but it is charged with such realistic touches and intimate detail and is so exceptionally played that its entertainment values are immense. The cast has been chosen with a wonderful eye for types. Each player looks the part and acts it. John Davidson and George Williams deserve praise for gethting into characters so thoroughly. The titles are typical of the people who express them.—Length, reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture of New York's teeming East Side—a picture of the Ghetto, a world its own, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Cheated Love," armel Myers' latest offering. This photoplay resembles a slice of life in its pproach to realities. The teeming population, the devotion of the people, the timate life—these are remarkably caught and make the picture a genuine treat. ertain it is that Miss Myers has her finest production here—one which gives her chance to assert her personality in all its refreshing charm.

The star plays the part of an immigrant daughter of a grocer, but lately arrived America. She quickly assimilates the ways and customs of the new land, but romance her heart goes back to far-away Russia. She is instrumental in getting r fiance to come to America, but the new country changes him entirely. Thus eated of her love she turns to a devoted admirer. The picture charms with its timate touches and its play of humor and romance and sentiment. The atosphere is immense and it abounds with local color. King Baggot directed.

PROGRAM READER

"SHAM"
(Famous Players)

Good Clean Entertainment, with Star in Likeable Role

"SHAM," a picturization of the stage play written by Elmer Harris and Geraldine Bonner, in which Henrietta Crossman starred some years ago, contains nothing new in plot, but a generally good production, intelligent direction and acting and the injection of more or less comedy is responsible for what will be called good entertainment by the average fan. Ethel Clayton plays Miss Crossman's role, that of a "blue blood" young New York lady who is forced to become a "gentle grafter" in order to put up a front commensurate with the traditions of her family. How she finally grows so tired of the sham of her life, listens to the dictates of her heart and rushes off to marry the rough and ready Westerner instead of accepting the fat and boresome, but rich, "Monte Buck," is the familiar course the story travels.

The production is interesting, due to the fact that the incident provided is well chosen and at times rather humorous and because the star and her supporting cast fit themselves like gloves into likeable characterizations. There is no villain to the story. There is no particular plot complication and little suspense. It is just a story of incident and a reasonable amount of action, some good clothes, nice sets, breezing along to a perfectly obvious tag, the time when the heroine decided that she prefers three square meals a day in a dobe shack with the man of her choice to intermittent feasts at society's tables or a marriage for money.

Miss Clayton is a good type for her part and makes the audience feel that she is a "regular fellow." Walter Hiers and Theodore Roberts manage to extract some real comedy out of their roles. Clyde Fillmore as the Westerner sticks around for the clutch without much to do. Carrie Clark Ward scores as "Rosie," the Van Riper family cook, forced to many extremes to provide the meals when the grocery man declines further credit.

All in all, no knockout, but a clean, well constructed orthodox five reels of entertainment that will satisfy the family audience.—Length, 5 reels. —J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Katherine Van Riper ..... Ethel Clayton
Tom Jaffery ..... Clyde Fillmore
Monte Buck ..... Walter Hiers
Jeremiah Buck ..... Theodore Roberts
Aunt Bella ..... Sylvia Ashton
Aunt Louisa ..... Helen Dunbar
Bolton ..... Arthur Carewe
Uncle James ..... Thomas Ricketts
Clementine Vickers ..... Blanche Gray
Maud Buck ..... Eunice Burnham
Rosie ..... Carrie Clark Ward

Adapted from the play by Elmer Harris and Geraldine Bonner by Douglas Doty.
Directed by Thomas Heffron.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A delicious satire on the "gentle grafter," people who don't pay their bills and who live on the outside the life of the spendthrift in order to keep up the traditions of the family, is "Sham," the latest starring vehicle which Famous Players-Lasky has provided for Ethel Clayton. "Sham" comes to the ———— theatre for a ———— days run beginning ————.

The picture is an adaptation of the stage success in which Henrietta Crosman starred some seasons past. Miss Clayton plays the Crosman role and in her support are such players as Walter Hiers, Theodore Roberts, Clyde Fillmore, and others as popular with the motion picture fan.

The feature is a comedy-drama of unusually entertaining qualities. Mr. Roberts and Mr. Hiers contribute some delicious comedy bits, and Miss Clayton has one of the best roles of her career.

The direction is by Thomas Heffron, well established in the public's mind as a producer of clean entertainment. The adaptation is by Douglas Doty who has written an unusually well knit continuity. "Sham" will please the fans whether they are young or old, rich or poor. It tells a likeable story in a straightforward way, with no disagreeable scenes or obnoxious sentiments.

PROGRAM READER

"Sham," Ethel Clayton's latest photopplay from the Paramount studios, will be the feature picture at the ———— theatre for a ———— days engagement beginning ————.

The feature is an adaptation of the successful stage play in which Henrietta Crosman was starred a few seasons past and tells the story of the "blue-blooded" but impoverished daughter of an old New York family, who was forced to become a "gentle grafter" in order to exist, and still keep up appearances commensurate with the traditions of her family. In the role of "Katherine Van Riper" Miss Clayton has a part that is eminently suited to her talents. She is ably supported by a correct cast of types that includes Walter Hiers, Theodore Roberts and Clyde Fillmore. Thomas Heffron directed the production, paying special attention to detail and artistic lightings. Mr. Roberts and Mr. Hiers contribute some fine comedy scenes.

SUGGESTIONS

The exploitation possibilities of this picture, aside from those naturally accruing from the star, the vehicle adapted from the stage play in which Miss Crosman was starred and the popular supporting players, are found in a comedy scene in which Walter Hiers as the lover who has been refused tries to drown his sorrows in champagne, while an orchestra plays and he sings, "In the Gloaming."

For lobby display or prologue we would use this scene as a basis and work up the comedy angle. We would be sure and make clear that the title does not mean a problem picture and that the feature is good entertainment. The fact that it is clean is also worth space.

CATCH LINES

The choice that Katherine Van Riper, heir to an honored name and nothing else made in the matrimonial market, was three square meals a day with the man of her choice and love in an adobe shack, against the solid heir to a solid fortune or the intermittent fears of single blessedness at society's table.

The story of a "blue-blood" girl who had the courage to upset tradition and forsake her life of sham, for a home out west with the man of her heart's choice.

"COLORADO PLUCK"
(Fox)

Has Not the Action They Expect of This Star

THERE is enough originality in the locale and the characterizations in "Colorado Pluck" to make it a fairly interesting program picture. Then there is the star, William Russell, who has been given an extremely sympathetic part. In fact, after he is cheated out of two million dollars, tricked into a marriage with a girl who loves another, he may he such an abused individual that an audience will lose patience with him. Of course, the girl comes to love him at the end, hut the two million is irrevocably gone.

Despite the title, "Colorado Pluck" is not a Western. It opens in New York, where Colorado Jim arrives after having made his stake in the West. He falls in with a young Englishman, the only son of an impoverished British family. Together they travel to England. Reggie has been expected to hring hack a rich American wife, but in lieu of an heiress, the aristocratic British family are satisfied with a millionaire Westerner, and proceed to marry him off to their daughter. This girl is engaged to another, hut forced to marry the American. The marriage settlement is half a million. But that is only the heginning, and before long Jim is fleeced of his total fortune hy the scheming family. Then he packs up and goes hack to his Colorado home with his wife. He is wounded hy a hrawler just hefore his wife's old lover appears on the scene. His wife is undecided whether to leave him to die and return to England or to stay with him. Finally she decides that she loves him, and stays.

An audience will leave with an unsatisfied feeling. The villain is unpunished, the English family is two million to the good, and the wife is forgiven without a murmur. This story does not give the star a chance to engage in the rough and tumhle action of "Bare Knckles" or "The Challenge of the Law." It prohahly will he disappointing to the star's admirers for this reason.

The cast is average, with Margaret Livingston playing opposite the star. Others in the cast are William Buckley, Helen Ware, Bertram Johns, and George Fisher, not entirely convincing as the villain. The picture is made up largely of interiors. Comedy to a small degree is developed out of the situation of the raw-honed Westerner in the home of British nohility.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

William Russell is the star of "Montana Pluck," which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. This popular William Fox star has been given another exceedingly interesting story to offer to the public as a successor to "The Man Who Dared," "The Iron Rider" and "The Challenge of the Law."

"Colorado Pluck" is wide in its locale, the story shifting from New York to London, and back again to the mining regions of Colorado. Russell is cast as a Western miner who strikes it rich and comes to New York with a lot of money and considerable time on his hands. From there he travels to England and there is considerable comedy and not a little romance developing when he is entertained at the home of an exclusive English family. The story ends in Colorado with a thrilling climax, which enables this popular star ample opportunity to impress an audience by his virile ppersonality.

Supporting the star in this picture is dainty Margaret Livingston, a popular screen leading lady, who is cast as the languid daughter of a noble English family, and who marries the rough miner for his gold, but finds later that she truly loves him.

Others in the capable cast are George Fisher, Helen Ware, a highly successful actress recruited from the legitimate stage, Bertram Johns, and William Buckley. The story is by George Goodchild, one of the most successful authors, and the scenario and direction was done by Jules G. Furthman.

"Montana Pluck" will be shown at the ———— theatre for ———— days beginning ————. It is expected to be one of the most popular pictures shown at the ———— in some time.

PROGRAM READER

"Colorado Pluck" is the title of the newest William Russell picture which will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. The popular William Fox star has been given another one of the virile parts in this picture, which have made him to-day one of the most popular male stars on the screen. It is, we believe, the kind of a story which you will all want to see. It combines romance with thrills, and comedy with drama in such a skilful fashion that it makes an ideal evening's entertainment.

Russell is supported by Margaret Livingston, a winsome leading lady. Others in the highly capable case include William Buckly, George Fisher and Helen Ware, a well known Broadway actress.

If you have never seen William Russell on the screen, we advise this as an excellent time to become acquainted. If you have seen him in his previous picture, we feel sure that you will not miss this opportunity to see him again.

"Colorado Pluck" is the name; the time ————, and the place right here in the ———— theatre.

SUGGESTIONS

Outside of exploiting the star, this picture does not appear to be unusual enough in any respect to merit any novel exploitation. You might mention all or some of his previous pictures if you have shown them. Give enough of the story in your catch lines to plant the locale of Colorado, New York's white lights. and exclusive England. Helen Ware in the cast will be known to some of the older followers of the legitimate theatre. Others in the cast are not prominent.

"THE LOST ROMANCE"
(Paramount)

Very Artistic, But Short on Drama and Action

FOR what is announced as his first original screen story, Edward Knoblock has written a romantic and, some might say, sentimentally sweet little play, hased on the age old domestic prohlem, that happens along in the lives of most married people when romance seems to have just naturally evaporated and affection, mutual understanding and respect have not as yet come to take the place of that which has heen lost.

From this ohviously poor picture material William De Mille has produced a photoplay that requires endless titles to explain the scenes and to preach its commendable sermon. Also Mr. De Mille or Mr. Knoblock, whichever one is responsihle for the incident of the picture, has gone to extremes in what has heen provided for the purpose of illustrating the theme. In consequence the spectator does not find much sympathy for any of the characters of the eternal triangle. The wife is a silly romantic scatterhrains. The hushand a disagreeahle and peevish individual, who apparently has no sense of the obligations that accrue when one takes a wife. The "other man" is a sentimental fool, mooning over the loss of a girl whom he knows never cared for him. As for the actual plot, the end is always in sight, with little suspense and ahsolutely no action to carry interest in individual sequences. Scarcely a single scene would mean anything without the titles to serve as captions.

However, so far as the technique of the production goes, it is lavish and commendahle. Splendid sets that carry fine atmosphere, excellent acting so far as the opportunities go and artistic lightings are the rule, all of which may compensate considerahly for the lack of action and interesting incident.

As for audience appeal, it is a picture for unhappy wives and sentimental girls. For the average every-day fan, especially the male of the species, we fear it will he voted a tame, unreal story, telling once again what everyhody knows, that married life, to he successful, is a partnership. —Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

That ever new and interesting domestic problem which comes to married people, the void between the end of romance and the beginning of affection, has been selected by Edward Knoblock, famous playwright, as the theme for his first original story for the screen and presented under the title of "The Lost Romance."

Produced with an all-star cast which includes Lois Wilson, Conrad Nagel and Jack Holt and directed by William De Mille, who also made "Mid-Summer Madness," "The Lost Romance" is one of the notable pictures of the year. It has all the requirements for the ideal photoplay—author, cast and master producer and a really big theme.

The picture began its career with a highly successful run at the Criterion theatre, New York, and has since played many of the big houses of the large cities for runs of several weeks duration.

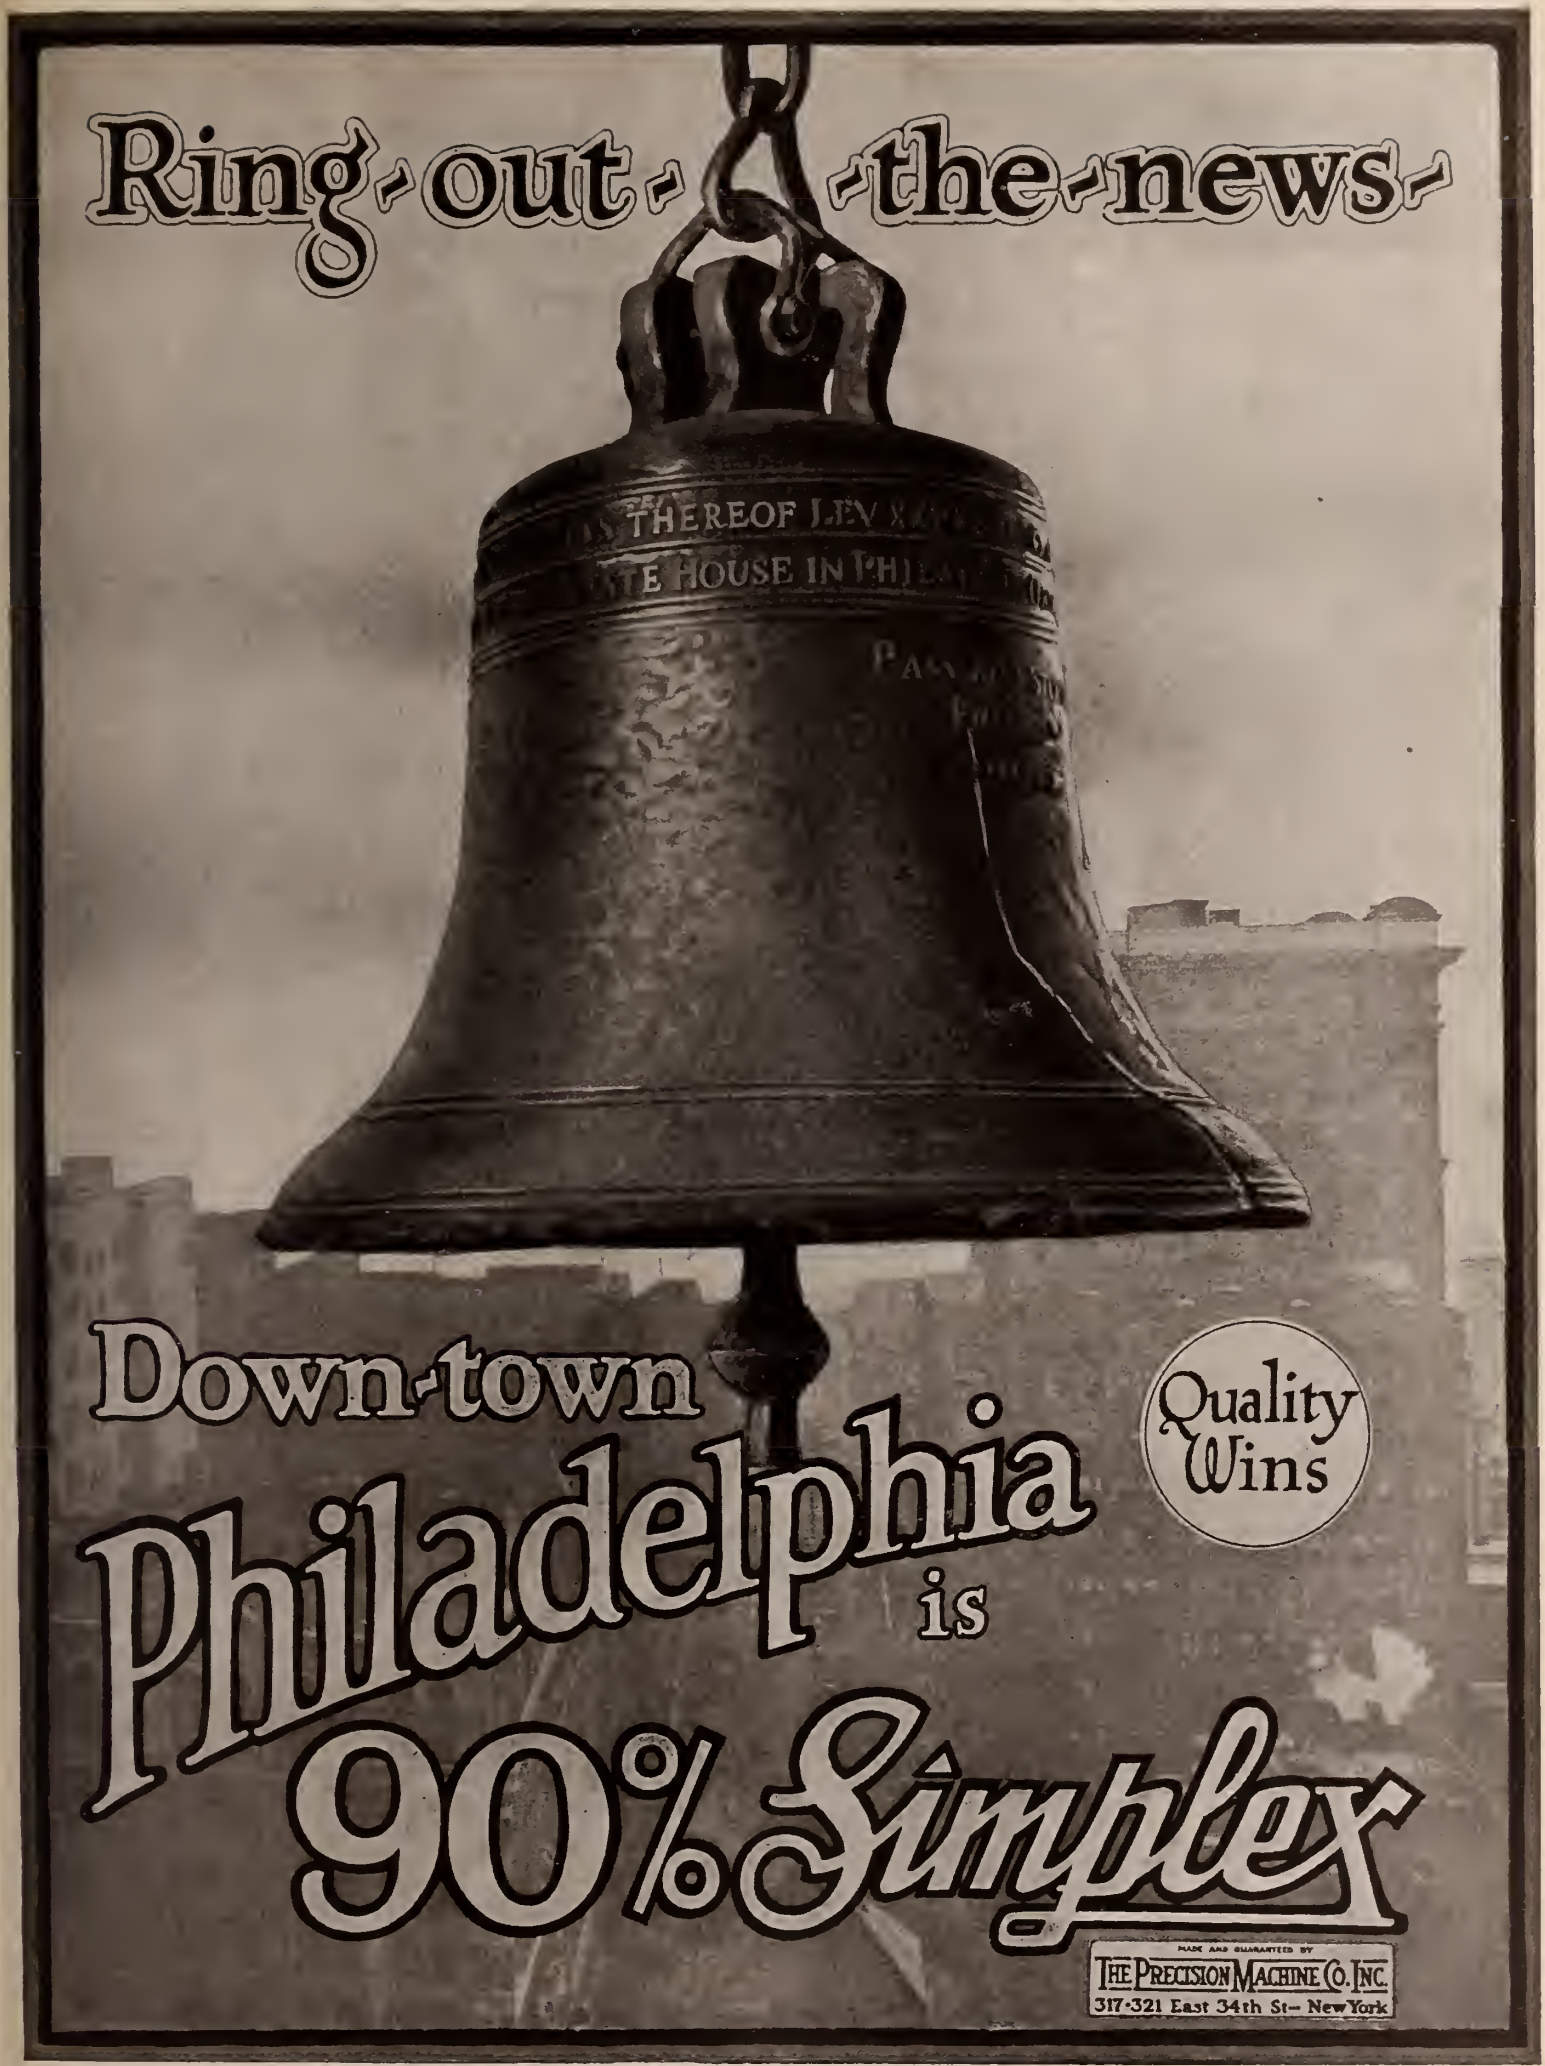
"The Lost Romance" will be the principal film attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days engagement beginning ————.

PROGRAM READER

"The Lost Romance," Edward Knoblock's first original story for the screen, directed by William De Mille and with an all-star cast that includes Jack Holt, Conrad Nagel and Lois Wilson, will be the feature picture at the ———— theatre for a ————days engagement beginning ————.

Founded on that ubiquitous question of all married couples, what is to happen when romance is dead, "The Lost Romance" is a picture with a theme of real import. It not only entertains but teaches all married people or those who expect to be married a lesson that is of inestimable value.

"The Lost Romance" is a Paramount picture that measures up to this company's new ideals, and is notable in that it has every requirement for a great picture—author, cast, director and a strong story with a theme. It is a picture that no one should miss, promising rare entertainment.



SUGGESTIONS

The biggest exploitation bet of this picture is the theme and the opportunity of awakening the interest of all the wives in the "lost romance" period of most married couples' lives. There is also the fine cast, Mr. Knoblock's fame as a playwright, William De Mille and the general excellence of the production to bill. We would present the picture frankly as a problem play. A prologue with lines from the picture could very easily be produced.

CATCH LINES

A fascinating drama of the first years of married life: of the time that comes to every wedded couple when romance is dead and when the void has not been as yet filled by affection and mutual understanding. An interesting story of the problem of the ages; bridging the gap between the death of romance in home and the birth of affection. A story of two wedded people who found romance dead, just as all married people ultimately do, and who had not as yet found that true love that "passeth understanding."

AN OPEN LETTER.

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.,
New York City, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I have the pleasure to advise you that of all the dramas we have screened at the Rialto no artist has reached the high mark set by Miss Priscilla Dean as portrayed in "REPUTATION."

The press paid her high tribute. Patrons were loud in their praise for her charming personality and performance. Members of social clubs singled me out to laud her great ability.

To me it meant vindication of my judgment given at your Company's office two years ago, when I stated Miss Dean would take her place as one of the five leading artists of the screen. Today I find my prediction was conservative, for the rare ability--versatility--and irresistible beauty of Miss Dean placed her on the "top rung" of the ladder.

Among the great numbers of people in this community who "sing the praises" of Miss Dean are to be found each and every member of the Rialto staff, not forgetting

Yours truly,

Tom Moore

Big, genial, straightforward TOM MOORE — Washington's most successful exhibitor—as shrewd as they make 'em—writes this letter about Priscilla Dean in her latest, greatest Universal-Jewel, " REPUTATION." Read every word of it. It tells you more about the value of " REPUTATION " than anything Universal could put in print . And when you've read it, book the picture. There's only one theater in your town that can show " REPUTATION " first—so make that theater yours—right now, today. Just as TOM MOORE says:

Mr. R. V. Andereon, Sales Manager,
International News Service,
1600 Broadway, New York City.

My dear Mr. Anderson:-

After seeing the "NEWS" that I used at the theatre on May 9th, it brought to my mind a poem, part of which I am herewith quoting you:

" If you think some praise is due him,
Now's the time to slip it to him,
Before he lays with snowy lillies o'er his brow,
Don't withhold your approbation;
Until the Parson makes oration, etc.eto."

And in line with the above, I want to take this opportunity of congratulating both you and your organization on producing what I can conscientiously call: "THE SNAPPIEST NEWS REEL ON THE MARKET". I feel from my ten years experience in the film business, that this title is certainly synonymous with your NEWS REEL.

After showing the NEWS REEL on Monday Night, my audience, applauded for fully five minutes and upon the request of several of my regular patrons, I repeated this reel immediately after the showing of the main feature.

Assuring you that it is with a great deal of pleasure that I send you this letter of commendation, I am

Very truly yours,
H. Feldman

If this has ever happened to any other News Reel on the market INTERNATIONAL has never heard of it. Think of it! A News Reel so interesting that they applauded it for five minutes—a News Reel so absorbing that the audience immediately insisted on seeing it all over again!

For that matter—did you ever hear of any feature or any short subject that an audience demanded to have repeated right away? No, you never did—for if you had, you can bet your bottom dollar its producers—and this goes for News Reels, too—would have blazoned forth the fact to the world just as INTERNATIONAL now tells you what happened in the Stratford Theatre, Stratford, Connecticut.

Yet it was simply an average INTERNATIONAL NEWS REEL. Simply, the snappiest, brightest news reel on the screen. Simply a sample of what INTERNATIONAL gives you every week right straight through the year. Draw your own conclusions from this amazing fact—then sign that INTERNATIONAL contract right now—today.

"THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM"

Keep audiences coming with this ten-program tour of the Orient

SOUTH SEA MAGIC

Magical glimpses of the isle of Samoa, where shark hunting is the national sport. Each hunt concludes with a feast, and each feast with dancing, in which the "younger set" (age four to fourteen) leads.

PUTTING NATURE NEXT

The Filipino is ingenious in putting nature next to his requirements. He is a magician with the palm and banana trees. A dress and straw hat are the easiest things he makes, and as for booze, every palm is a little brewery.

PAHS AND PAPAS

Breaking into native New Zealand society requires courage. The Maoris make faces at new arrivals to frighten away possible enemies. Later, the girls may warm up a trifle and dance for you. If you join in, the Chief's warriors will make it unanimous.

SWAT THE LANDLORD

Nothing new in the world. Take the landlord: the Chinese met him years ago in Canton, and moved to the river, where they have been living ever since. We found 200,000 people living this sea-gull life there.

SYRIA, LAND OF RELIGIOUS HATRED

Palestine, where all the creeds of the world have jostled each other for centuries. Easter time rioting between Russian pilgrims and Moslems at the conclusion of the Holy Flame ceremony, when furious Moslems charge to blow out the pilgrims' candles. One wick left lighted defeats their purposes.

BEGGARS AND FAKIRS OF INDIA

Too proud to work, many Brahmans beg. Religious fakirs deform themselves. One, self-blinded, has rolled halfway across India. One, starved helpless, moves a hand and arm unceasingly. Another holds a withered hand permanently aloft.

TOO MUCH OVERHEAD

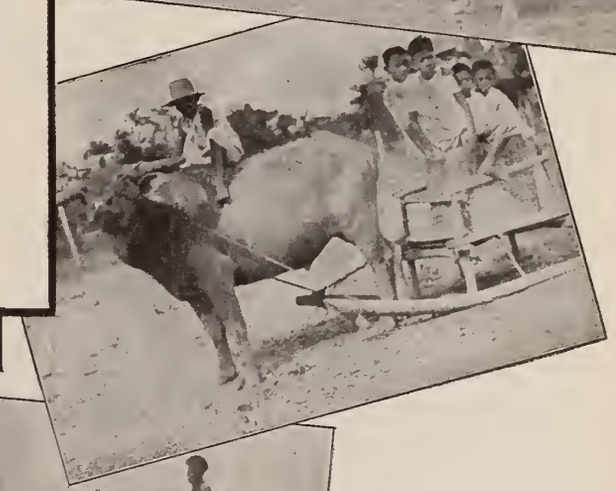
China, where business men have no overhead but the blue sky. A river is laundry and power in one. Wheat kings thresh breakfast food where it grows. The shoemaker totes his own factory, and tinkers tink merrily without lease or landlord.

SOME MORE SAMOA

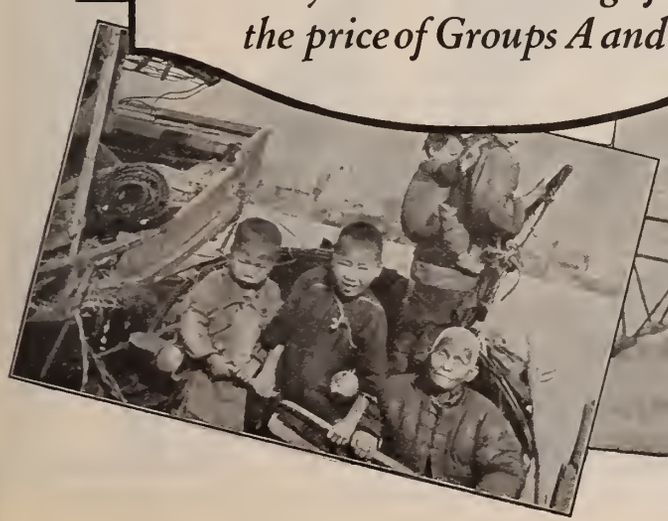
Over against the western skyline, in the stronghold of an ancient cannibal race. Nowadays, with Uncle Sam on the job, it is fairly easy to get an inside line on Samoa without letting Samoa get outside of you.

DREAMS COME TRUE

We used to class the Great Wall of China with Jack and the Beanstalk. But in Mongolia we saw for ourselves that after 2000 years the wall is still 1400 miles long, 20 feet thick, and 20 feet high. We measured it—(some of it).



PIGS AND KAVA



A week-end on the cannibal isles where, in the good old days, "taking pot-luck" had a different meaning than it does today. Visitors took their lives in their hands—every stranger was so much prospective soup meat.

The Rider of the King Log

A HIT—Arthur James

BRINGING the out-of-doors within doors, transferring the life of the woods with all of its vigor, reality and freedom to the screen so that it inevitably is believed, and developing a drama inseparable from this atmosphere—this is the real triumph of the new production "The Rider of the King Log," which Harry O. Hoyt, with a genius for direction, has contrived out of Holman Day's story into a picture of real value. Oh, we can say that we don't like titles in verse—which we don't—and we can find a fault or two here and there, but when we are through with small criticisms we return certainly to high praise.

Associated Exhibitors have chosen well in selecting this picture to lead the way for others. If it is a standard, the standard is so high that they can write success on their stationery forthwith. "The Rider of the King Log" is a vital story of the logging camps and offers a refreshing change from the eternal social whirl with which the screen offerings are so well supplied. It develops strong characters so vividly that they are living, breathing things, rather than players of parts. It brings the forces of nature into its story and tells a tale of right and wrong with clean, sharp-cut contrasts that ring true.

We would say it had been builded with a dramatic structure so sane and at the same time so simple and direct as to banish all suggestion of tricks or devices. Its great power is its strong legitimate appeal to the hearts and minds of men. The detail of plot recital we shall leave to others as our purpose is to record that this production is worth the careful consideration of exhibitors everywhere. It will freshen the atmosphere of any theatre.

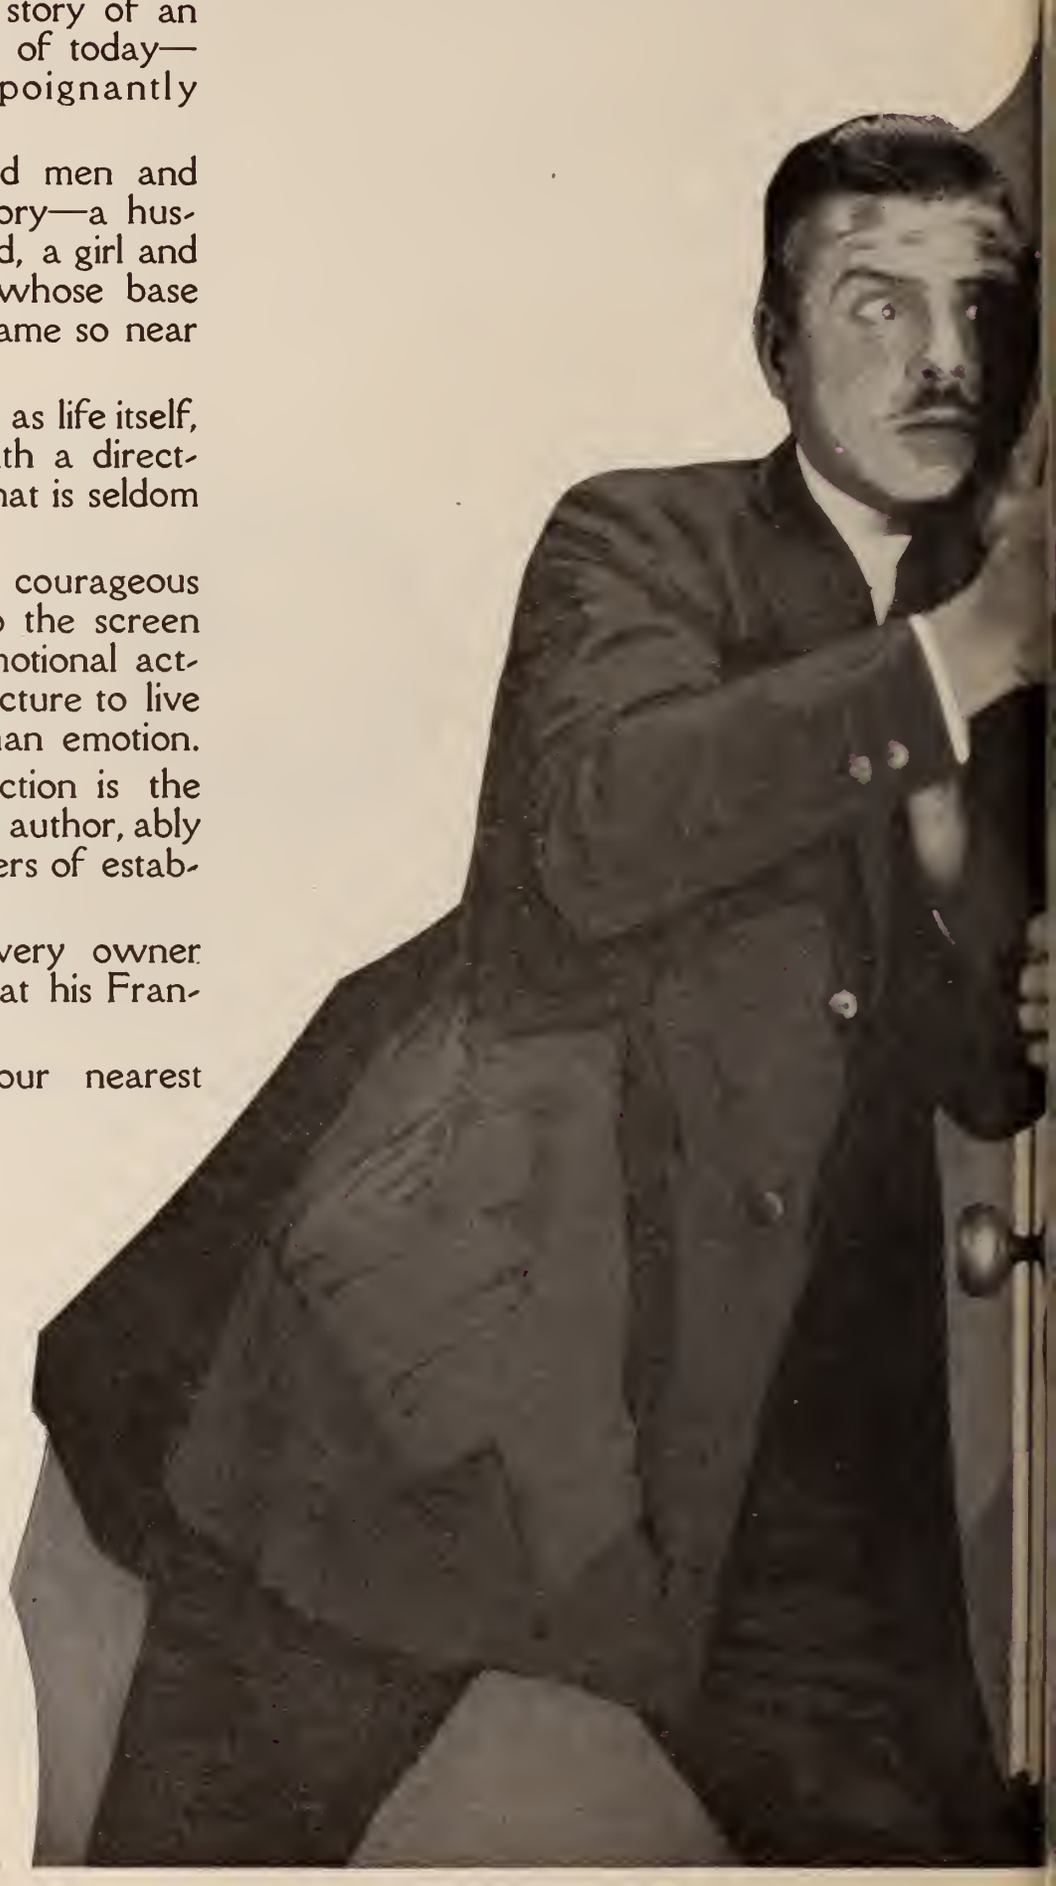
REALART'S BIRTHDAY

ATENSELY dramatic story of an American household of today—convincingly real, poignantly human.

They are flesh-and-blood men and women—the people of this story—a husband and wife and little child, a girl and her lover, and the Outsider whose base treachery and selfish desires came so near wrecking a peaceful home.



The story is as familiar as life itself, and in this picture it is told with a directness and power and beauty that is seldom attained.

May McAvoy, as the courageous little heroine, has brought to the screen something vibrantly new in emotional acting, an artistry that causes a picture to live and move and thrill with human emotion.

Realart's Birthday Production is the work of a distinguished screen author, ably directed, and enacted by players of established reputations.

THE BIGGEST HIT ON BROADWAY IN A YEAR

"The Woman God Changed" opened to a capacity audience at the Rivoli, last Sunda the hottest, clear day this year.

The critics of all the New York papers went crazy about it. And remember, M William Randolph Hearst, owner of Cosmopolitan Productions, publishes the two leadin New York papers, and competes with all of the other papers.

Rival papers surely wouldn't call "The Woman God Changed" a hit unless it was hit beyond the shadow of a doubt.

N. Y. World says:

"We peer into the future of motion picture production when we chance to behold so gripping and so fascinating a cinema play as 'The Woman God Changed.' It can be seen two or even three times with mounting interest at each visit. It ought to remain at the Rivoli for months.

N. Y. Evening Globe says:

"Seena Owen is even more charming when reformed than when picturesquely unregenerated. Rich in warm, glamorous photography."

N. Y. Mail says:

"An exceedingly fine film—a story that unfolds with a splendid appreciation of values logically, sincerely—never drifting—court-room scene one of the finest of its kind. Seena Owen is splendid, dividing honors with E. K. Lincoln."

N. Y. Evening Telegram says:

"'The Woman God Changed' develops to point where the problem becomes a climax to followed by another climax.

"A unique piece of screen creation—an inte esting story fascinating in itself, serving as an intr duction to a greater story."

Morning Telegraph says:

N. Y. Tribune says:

The Box Office Take On This Picture's First Week at the Rivoli, New York, Will Be Printed Here Next Week

Here, in this publication, we will print the actual box office take at the Rivoli, New York, on the first week's advance showing of "The Woman God Changed."

Some of the biggest exhibitors in the country have told us it's a daring thing to promise.

"The weather may break against you. It's practically summer and since New York has daylight saving time, people will go outdoors and stay out until bedtime if the weather is fine," they said.

"The Woman God Changed" is the kind of picture that will draw audiences when the thermometer is in the nineties.

That is why exhibitors will do well to book it now that outdoor time is here.

"The Woman God Changed" holds sure money for exhibitors. Book it at once.

Mr. William A. Johnston
Motion Picture News, Inc.

Dear Mr. Johnston:

I have followed with interest the letters appearing in the News relative to reviews, and I cannot resist "putting in my oar" from the viewpoint of the newspaper critic. As an associate editor and staff critic of AMUSEMENTS, I reviewed some scores of pictures from the box-office angle, and I can say frankly that I was never asked to favor an advertiser. I assume that News reviewers are permitted to work under the same conditions.

Now, however, on a newspaper, I find conditions somewhat different. When the producer makes a rotten picture he expects to have it "panned," but the exhibitor is not always so reasonable. He strongly resents an adverse criticism, overlooking the fact that a good review on a "piece of cheese" will offset the beneficial effect of a good review on a good picture.

I cannot help feeling that Mr. Partington is somewhat unfair in his sweeping generalization of newspapers critics. I have known many of them about the country, and most of them are striving as hard as you and I to give honest, impartial reviews--and growing grey in the attempt.

I have always attempted to leave personal bias out of the question. Eleven years of actual theater experience, during which I have seen some 3000 pictures "tried out on the dog," have taught me that many a picture that I detest will please many, and that some that please me will be clear over their heads.

As far as News reviews go, I have always admired them, although I have necessarily differed with them on occasion. In closing, permit me to compliment you on the publication you have made of the News. It is the only national that I take.

With best personal wishes for continued success, I am

Sincerely yours,

Larry C. Moen.

FULL OF THRILLS

"Here is a Western calculated to make any one pay strict attention because of its rich assortment of thrills, its splendid atmosphere, and its melodramatic incident. King Vidor has turned out a picture which is about the liveliest, full-grown melodrama of the cow-lands that has been offered. He actually shows a round-up and a stampede of steers which is about the most blood-curdling thrill imaginable. The rapid action carries a punch like a load of dynamite. As a Western it is above—way above—the ordinary. There is a fight which packs a wallop of a thrill. This realism is conspicuous throughout the action and builds tense interest."—Motion Picture News.

GREAT BOX OFFICE PICTURE

"A great box office picture. It is delightfully human, has clever comedy relief and an unusual thrill. King Vidor's finest cinema creation and about the best outdoor picture released in many a day. A splendid piece of genuine entertainment that will please any audience because of its cleanliness, its naturalness and real dramatic thrills. A money-making success. Characterizations are notable for realism. The cattle stampede is one of the most effective thrills ever screened. The photography is exceptional.

UNUSUAL BOX OFFICE VALUE

GRIPS YOU TO THE END

A MONEY MAKER

"A first rate production and well received at the New York Strand. There are some fine thrills, particularly the cattle stampede. The comedy business went over big. Exhibitors ought to do a good business with this."—Wids.

RED-BLOODED STORY

"The Best Picture He Has Ever Made!"

That's what The Exhibitor's Herald says of Carter DeHaven's latest, and that's saying a mouthful when you recall his laughable comedy success, "Twin Beds". But look at what else the Herald says:

"A delightful, rollicking screen farce—clean, funny. DeHaven plays with all his old abandon, injecting buoyancy and verve into the part to bring forth gales of laughter. It is quite the best thing he has done on the screen. Mrs. DeHaven lends charm to her role while King Baggot is an ideal type. The action is swift and snappy throughout."

VOL. XXIII JUNE 4, 1921 No. XXIV

Men

We make the caption of this editorial short and emphatic. It means—just that.

We need them in this business—men.

Men who keep their word.

Men who know and know damn well—not because they are righteous but because they've got brains, because they are big business men—that honesty is the best policy, and that's all there is to it.

This industry today is in as fine a position as any one could wish. It is the last to feel the post-war depression; and it is feeling this depression less, by far, than any other business we have heard of.

Business—with the theatres—is, on the average—about 20% off; off of flush times which means that it is about normal. Every other business is very nearly flat.

We ought to get down on our knees and thank our lucky stars that we are so well off, in these days of general stress and strain.

We have the usual crop of alarmists—alarmed simply because they are not making the easy and unreasonable profit of flush war days. But their howls mean nothing.

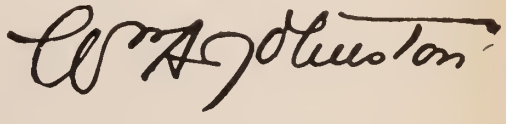
Censorship with all its ominous cloud is not a menace—if we fight it to a finish as it now exists, and if we tend to our knitting so that a public demand for radical regulation ceases to exist.

In the outside business world, whose prosperity we reflect, the tide has recently turned—as witness this statement of Secretary Hoover, under date of May 24th: "I am convinced that if the increased volume of consumption that has grown steadily during the last few weeks throughout the whole length and breadth of the land could be properly illuminated to the public the whole of our commercial community would take courage and would carry us forward with even greater strides than those with which we will now proceed."

There's nothing wrong with this business. Comparatively, it is booming along. We have nothing to fear from without. But there is a menace from within—and there's only one answer to the problem, and that is—men.

Men! Constructionists!

The need is greater than ever before: there is, it seems to us, a greater lack of construction than ever before, of courage, of plain honesty. Construction seems to have given way to opportunism. And we are not talking in the air. We know whereof we speak.



And we wish to sound a solemn warning. It is not necessary to expose sharp practices in order to bring to their proper deserts those who practice them. They'll get these deserts anyway. It is always in the cards.

This business is going on anyway. Nothing can stop it. It has the dimensions, the foundation, the future of an industry that within a very few years has acquired a place fourth in size in the manufacturing world. No temporary disintegration within can affect it greatly. Only the men who disintegrate will, themselves, be disintegrated.

We need confidence today—need it mighty badly; confidence in the men at the helm of the industry, the men higher up, who make contracts, organizations, and policies.

The reforms we need so badly: the elimination of distribution waste, the encouragement of the independent producer, the betterment of pictures, cooperation with the exhibitor—all these will not progress toward any correct solution until confidence is firmly established.

And confidence won't exist till we have—men.

Trade Papers and Picture Advertising

[EDITOR'S NOTE—Advertising is the big vital factor in the motion picture industry. We asked George B. Van Cleve for this interview because he possesses an experience that is unique and a viewpoint that is clear and unprejudiced. As Vice-President and General Manager of W. R. Hearst's motion picture interests—Cosmopolitan Productions, the International News Reel, cartoons, etc.—he has had a four months' experience in this field. His viewpoint is, therefore, new. It is comparative, too, because he comes from other fields. An advertising man of twenty-four years' experience, he has devised and carried out merchandise selling campaigns linked up with the foremost products in the public eye today. Single-handed, he built up an advertising agency handling a business of five millions yearly—and enabled him to retire independently wealthy at the age of forty-two. His vigorous spirit has lured him back to the harness. He gave this interview as he tackles all problems, frankly, fearlessly. We asked him to take the gloves off. He has.]

By George B. Van Cleve

This business is no different, in an economic way, from any other industry supplying a product of great popular consumption.

The same advertising, selling and merchandising laws apply to this as to other industries.

Let's start with the trade paper as an advertising force.

The trade paper situation, as I see it after four months of conducting Mr. Hearst's motion picture interests, is quite similar to that which always exists in any new industry.

There is an overproduction of trade papers, just as there is overproduction of pictures.

But there is not an overproduction of good trade papers. You can't have the best possible trade papers in this field or in any other field until you have fewer ones, because it is only human nature to prostitute a product, or in other words a trade paper, if the owner is fighting for his existence.

There are today about twice as many trade papers as will be in existence a year or two from now.

An over supply of trade papers always happens in every new trade field. As the field becomes settled, as with the steel trade, the grocery trade, the automobile trade, for instance, one or two big papers will completely and adequately and honestly cover it.

Not Advertising to Brag

With a possible field of about 10,000 exhibitors, representing about 14,500 theatres, it is to me a joke to find four or five trade papers fighting for such a very limited field of subscribers.

For Mr. Hearst—I am only interested in reaching the 14 or 15,000 motion picture houses.

We certainly should not have to advertise in four or five trade papers to do this. Two should cover the field—two clean, unimpeachable exhibitors', news organs.

I am not a bit interested in spending Mr. Hearst's money in advertising to brag to other producers—all I want to do is to tell the motion picture theatre owners about the pictures we are producing and why we believe they should book them in their theatres.

Every sane man believes in trade paper advertising but no sane man can afford to support unnecessary duplication of circulation—in this field or in any other field. And no sane man will continue to do so.

I must disagree heartily too with the methods some of your trade papers use in soliciting advertising. There is fierce competition but not enough brain work. Producers' money for advertising is urgently sought and asked for; but you don't tell the advertiser how he can best market his goods; you don't suggest merchandising ideas to him.

The object and sole object of your advertising pages should be to sell pictures—to sell them through the advertising pages alone. Go to the advertiser with ideas along these lines. Don't just ask him to fill up your advertising columns because you are a good fellow.

What's the Idea?

As an advertiser myself, and, like any advertiser, always open to improvement, I don't want to criticize the other producer's copy; but many of your pages look to me like the Latin prescriptions doctors write out. The copy seems to try to conceal facts rather than express them. I can't see any real object back of a lot of the advertising.

In some cases I wonder what it's all about—what the exhibitors think it's all about. What is the objective sought?

That is where trade papers should help and guide the producers, most of whom have never been advertisers heretofore.

What does the producer or distributor say to the exhibitor when he meets him; what do his salesmen say when they try to sell him pictures; what cooperation has he to offer the exhibitor; how does he want the exhibitor to regard him, his organization, his product?—these are the important things trade paper advertising must express.

Every man who makes goods of any kind, pictures or automobiles, has some particular reason for or takes some particular pride in his peculiar quality of product; or he has some particular selling point or scheme or plan, or organization. What kind of a house has he built, in other words, what has he to recommend? That is what his trade paper message should also and continually express.

In other words, I believe that trade paper advertising should aim to accomplish some one or more definite things. It should do this right along—throughout the year—not haphazardly or spasmodically. And it should stick pretty closely to the truth because it does not pay to fool an exhibitor very often.

You will reply that this is the advertiser's business, that it is up to him to prepare the copy that will best merchandise his goods. Very true but he often needs and always deserves the trade paper's help. You know your publication better than he does—its opportunities, etc., you are in close touch with your readers. You know the business, or you should know it. Help him with ideas, statistics, etc.

In other words, you have got something he wants and needs. Tell him how to use it to his best possible advantage.

It seems to me that your advertising aids to exhibitors, your booking records, your box-office reports, your reviews, your editorial contents, in other words—all these give more actual service to the exhibitors and consequently sell pictures better than your advertising pages unless your advertising pages are intelligently used.

Quality Is Limited

The trade paper should be a big merchandising force. In order, however, to give so much expensive service to the reader and to the advertiser naturally the trade paper must have adequate support. That is why I say it is all wrong to have too many papers in so limited a field. It is best to have a few and have them big; have them also fair, independent, and actually conscientious.

Very soon clever producers are going to have big national advertising campaigns direct to the public. We have had one already but it has been designed to build a trademark. The campaigns of the future will be directed at selling the individual pictures, as well, to the public.

This will have to be done through the newspapers.

Some of the present day methods of simply selling a picture to an exhibitor and then forgetting it are absurd, amateurish and cannot last because such methods have never lasted in any other field.

The picture should be sold to the public too—just as Ivory soap or Packard cars are sold to the public. I think the exhibitor today is asked to assume too much of the burden of selling the picture to the public.

I notice, in your last week's editorial that exhibitor advertising in newspapers already amounts to between five and ten million dollars annually. The producer and distributor should cooperate more in this advertising of the individual picture and greatly extend it. It won't be an easy task. As an advertising and merchandising adviser of many years experience I can see many difficulties to be overcome, primarily because the distribution of pictures is so different today, so haphazard and expensive as compared with the sale of other products.

Selling Too Expensive

Much must be done soon by the producers to reduce the cost of selling the picture to the exhibitor.

Then the producer can begin selling the pictures to the public, as all other trades do. I believe in using newspaper space right over the exhibitors' names, just as automobiles are sold today. National magazine space is too slow.

As far as I can see the so-called $2 shows on Broadway are practically all bunk and the money spent on keeping up those $2 shows should be spent selling the pictures legitimately to the public for the benefit of the fourteen or fifteen thousand exhibitors throughout the country and it would be sounder business to do this.

Of course, it goes without saying that no advertising, however cleverly planned, can be successful unless the product advertised is good. If a picture isn't good, if the public indicates at once its dissatisfaction with it, I believe it is cheaper to burn it up. Mr. Hearst is willing to do this with any of the pictures we make that are downright failures.

Trade Paper Always a Factor

The trade paper must enter importantly into these national merchandising campaigns. I have laid out many campaigns direct to the public, using the newspapers and big national magazines. Always a part and parcel of these campaigns will be liberal space in the trade papers, telling the dealer just what we are doing to increase patronage for the goods we ask him to buy and sell. But we must actually do something to sell these goods to the public and in the motion picture field most of this today is left to the exhibitor, which is fundamentally wrong and has never worked well in any other field of selling.

As I have no brief for any one trade paper it is simply going to be as it has always been in every trade paper field a survival of the fittest.

Anything I have said to you I have said or will say to any one of the trade papers in the motion picture field and my conclusions are based on what I have learned in other fields of merchandising and the history of other products.

Resolutions of Sympathy on Death of Franklin Lane

THE following resolution was adopted by the Producer and Distributor Divisions of National Association of Motion Picture Industry at a meeting held on Thursday, May 19th:

"Honorable Franklin K. Lane, former secretary of the Interior, and Chairman of the Americanism Committee of the Motion Picture Industry of the United States, has gone to his reward after a life of usefulness. As a public official, he commanded the respect of all with whom he came in contact. In his private life he endeared himself to the hosts who were numbered among his friends because of his genial, kindly disposition, which charactrized him to a fulness rarely found in men. Of high type, nobleness of purpose, sincere to the point which marked him one for reverence, he will be not only missed but mourned for as one whose place cannot be readily filled.

"RESOLVED, That this expression of sorrow be spread upon the minutes of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, be suitably engrossed and duly authenticated by the President of the National Association, and copies transmitted to the widow of the late Honorable Franklin K. Lane."

Robertson-Cole Upheld in Copyright Suit

Judge Mayer, in the United States District Court, has just decided in favor of Robertson-Cole in the suit brought by Lumiere, photographer, for alleged infringement of copyright of photograph of Carpentier.

The court held that the photographs in question were made by Lumiere for the benefit of Robertson-Cole, for their advertising purposes, and that there was never any intention that Lumiere should have any copyright as against them, and that they were at full liberty to sell, reproduce or publish or otherwise use the photographs in any manner they saw fit. The court further states that it is absurd to suppose that the director for Robertson-Cole would have taken Carpentier to the photographic studio to enable Lumiere to copyright Carpentier's photographs and tribute for the copyrighted product.

Wm. Brady Opposes Passage of Building Ordinance

Under the leadership of William A. Brady, President of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, the film interests are vigorously opposing an ordinance now pending before the New York City Board of Aldermen, the passage of which, it is believed, would drive many exchanges, studios and laboratories out of the city.

Building requirements are called for in the proposed measure which, it is stated, would necessitate the complete reconstruction of expensive work in connection with the storage and handling of film—work that has already been done with the approval of the Fire Department.

Producer-Distributor Directors Nominated

The Fifth Annual meeting of the Producer and Distributor members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was held at the headquarters on the afternoon of May 19.

William A. Brady, Wm. A Brady Picture Plays, Inc.; William Fox, Fox Film Corporation; Samuel Goldwyn, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; D. W. Griffith Enterprises; Morris Kohn, Realart Pictures Corporation; Carl Laemmle, Universal Film Mfg. Co.; Oscar A. Price, Associated Producers, Inc.; R. A. Rowland, Metro Pictures Corporation; Joseph M. Schenck, Norma Talmadge Pictures Corp.; Lewis J. Selznick, The Selznick Corporation; C. B. Van Cleve, International Film Service Co., Inc.; and Adolph Zukor, Famous Players Lasky Corporation.

Mr. Adolph Zukor was unanimously re-elected as chairman of the division, which position he has held for five years. Mr. Richard A. Rowland was elected vice-chairman and Frederick H. Elliott, secretary.

The distributors' Division immediately followed the meeting of the Producers and the following were nominated as directors representing this division, to be elected at the annual meeting:

Al Lichtman Announces New Appointments

General Manager Al Lichtman, of Associated Producers, Inc., announces the appointment of J. J. Unger as special representative out of the home office. This appointment is effective immediately and as his first duty Unger has taken temporary charge of the New York exchange, succeeding J. Von Tilzer.

Another appointment announced by Mr. Lichtman is that of Arthur L. Widner as manager of the Washington branch, succeeding R. Berger. Widner comes to Associated Producers from the Washington office of Vitagraph, where he was manager.

Annual Nat'l Ass'n Meeting on June 6

Notice is given that the fifth annual meeting of the members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Inc., will be held at Suite 4-5-6, 1520 Broadway, New York, on Monday, June 6th, 1921, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Each member is urged to attend in person. If unable to do so a proxy should be filed at the offices of the National Association before noon on June 6th.

By direction of the Executive Committee.

M. P. Theatre Owners of America Hold Executive Meeting

Delegates Received by President Harding; Convention Date Is Decided

BEGINNING on Wednesday, May 18, the national officers and executive committeemen of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America held a series of executive meetings in Washington, D. C. The session, which consumed five days were attended by practically every officer and committee member of the organization. Every state in the Union was represented at the meetings, which are declared by a statement from the M. P. T. O. of A. headquarters to have constituted "one of the most momentous and far-reaching events in the history of the organized exhibitors of the United States."

One of the most important pieces of business transacted at the sessions was the selection of the time for holding of the next national convention at Minneapolis, Minn. It was definitely agreed upon that the national convention will be held on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, June 27, 28 and 29. Definite and detailed plans were adopted to make the convention purely a business affair with the object of promoting the progress of the entire industry with special reference to the exhibitor's angle.

Another important phase of the meeting was the formal call paid to President Warren G. Harding at the White House. In the address of Sydney S. Cohen to President Harding the loyalty of the men who own three-fourths of the screens of the country was tendered to America. Mr. Cohen stated that the screen was no longer a mere medium of amusement and that because of the influence and power of the motion picture, it is entitled to the benefits of enlightened and constructive statesmanship. Every department at Washington, said Mr. Cohen, is at liberty to call upon the Motion Picture Theatre Owners for such volunteer service as may add efficiency to the functions of government.

Following the reading of the address, President Harding congratulated the motion picture theatre owners on the stand that they had adopted, and assured them that they could be of vast help to the government and that he wanted them to be. The President asserted that the screen of today was the greatest medium in the world for instillation of one hundred per cent Americanism, and that the theatre men could be the greatest power for the advancement of education and patriotism. The President then posed with the delegates for the news weeklies and staff photographers of the press.

The officers and committeemen were also received by Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of the Navy Denby and Secretary of Labor J. J. Davis. The delegates visited the Senate Chamber and Speakers' Room at the Capitol.

At each visit, President Cohen read the resolution adopted by the delegates calling for the display of vocational guidance pictures in the motion picture theatres of the country, pledged to the government officials the unswerving loyalty of the organization, and tendered the screens and services for the advancement of public welfare projects. In each instance, the response was unvarying in its enthusiasm over the steps taken by the exhibitors for the United States and its people.

The resolution on the showing of vocational guidance pictures was read into the Congressional Record in both the Senate and House divisions.

Secretary Davis told the delegates of some of the work being accomplished for vocational guidance training in Mooseheart at Aurora, Illinois, and invited the delegates to the National Convention to visit Mooseheart on their return as his guests. He also promised to attend the convention.

Secretary Hughes asserted that only lately were people beginning to realize the limitless opportunity for the advancement of education by visualizing new ideas on the screens of the country.

Secretary Denby thanked the members for their tender of the screens, and said the exhibitors could be of the same service in the future in bringing the navy and the public together as they were during the war.

Secretary Davis struck a responsive chord when he declared as the delegates departed: "I don't believe that Sunday 'movies' ever hurt anyone yet."

At the convention there will be laid before the delegates important facts relative to big reductions in insurance premiums which will save hundreds of thousands of dollars to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, it is stated. There will also be brought to the attention of all present a uniform and more equitable contract which has been drawn up. The committee appointed came to New York after the session to meet with the producers and manufacturers in order to secure the putting into effect of the contract during the coming season.

The question of taxation was the subject of much thought and long discussion. An exhaustive study of the situation was made and the committee appointed to take up this matter in detail visited several congressmen and senators with regard to the matter of the film rental, seating and other taxes. This committee will report in full to the delegates assembled at the National Convention.

Congressmen were also visited by the committee on the burdensome music tax, and this report will also be made at the Minneapolis convention.

The special committe on exhibitor-producer relations is now meeting in New York preparing an exhaustive and special report on their findings. This committee is investigating every complaint brought against producers and manufacturers since the convention held in Cleveland last June.

A report was also received from the Committee of Nine appointed last September, relative to the pledges made to the exhibitors by Adolph Zukor.

The national officers present at the meeting were:

Sydney S. Cohen, of New York, president; E. T. Peter, Dallas, Texas, treasurer; Sam Bullock, Cleveland, Ohio, executive secretary; M. Van Praag, Kansas City, Kansas, recording secretary; C. C. Griffin, Oakland, California, first vice-president; Joseph Hope, Chicago, Ill., second vice-president; C. W. Gates, Aberdeen, South Dakota, fourth vice-president.

Wm. A. Brady Asks Police to Stop Showing

THE police authorities of Jersey City have been called upon by William A. Brady, President of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, to stop the showing of a film entitled, "The End of the Road," which is now being exhibited in the Strand theatre of that city. In a letter to Director of Public Safety John Bentley, of Jersey City, Mr. Brady, on behalf of the Natonal Association, has registered an emphatic protest against the continuance of the exhibition and requesting that the picture be suppressed.

Coast Publicity Men Hold First Social Event

Publicity men of the West Coast—comprising the membership of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers—had their inning on May 18th, at the first social event of the organization since its recent formation, held at the Marion Fairfax studio in Hollywood.

Following a studio meal, served from the studio kitchen, the one hundred guests among whom were the critics of the Los Angeles dailies were disturbed as the coffee was being served by loud shouts and clattering of machinery behind a large, black curtain facing the diners. Many familiar sounds greeted the ears of the diners, such as the clicking of linotypes machines and typewriters; the shouts for "copy boy" and the clattering of printing presses. With the parting of the curtain a complete newspaper shop was revealed to the audience.

Following the sketch, motion pictures of the diners and the actors were taken, whereupon the critics changed places with the press agents on the stage and acted an impromptu sketch for the benefit of the camera and amidst the general cries and hoots of the spectators.

Special Convention Train for Illinois Exhibitors

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, State of Illinois, are making final arrangements for a special train over the Burlington, which will carry delegates and members of the industry wishing to join the party at Chicago, to the national convention in July. The idea has been hailed with enthusiasm by Illinois exhibitors and a big crowd is assured.

William Sweeney, of the association, states that his arrangements with the Burlington line include a solid train of pullmans with ample dining car equipment and everything provided for the convenience and comfort of the crowd, who will journey north on this train.

The departure is scheduled for 9:45 in the morning, the day preceding the convention. Mr. Sweeney suggests that not only Illinois exhibitors, but those from the East and South who desire to travel to the convention on this special train, get in communication with him at the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois' headquarters, 845 S. Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Max Linder Guest of Honor at A.M.P.A. Luncheon

Max Linder, the well-known French comedian, was the guest of honor last Thursday at the luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers of New York held in the banquet room of the Cafe Boulevard. The comedian's presence was the result of the efforts of mediation of Bert Adler, Chairman of the Speaker's Committee of the A. M. P. A. who also introduced the star to the members assembled.

Wire Briefs from Coast

A HEAVY rainstorm which began on Thursday night of last week and was still in progress on Monday of this week, has resulted in considerable losses to the industry and the ruining of more than a hundred thousand sets. Exterior activities had to be fully discontinued.

When Clara Kimball Young returns to the Coast on June 20 from her tour of personal appearances in the key cities of the Central West, she will begin production work on "What No Man Knows," an original photoplay written by Sada Cowan.

Michael Klomtner, of New York, has leased cafe privileges in the Motion Picture Directors' Association Building, and he will operate a cafe there similar to the one established on the Amsterdam Roof, New York City.

Mary Anderson has signed a contract to appear as the star in the Spencer Productions under the direction of Scott Dunlap. The subject will be distributed by Associated Photoplays.

The first Marion Fairfax production, "The Lying Truth," has been completed. The cast includes Marjorie Daw, Pat O'Malley, Tully Marshall, Noah Beery, Claire McDowell, George Dromgold, Charles Mailes and Robert Brower. Rene Guissert was the cameraman. "The Lying Truth" is a small-town newspaper story written and directed by Marion Fairfax.

George Kern, producer of "The Unfoldment," has added a Biblical spectacle, "The Fall of Soden," which completes the filming of "The Unfoldment."

Adolph Zukor Back from European Trip

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., returned Friday of last week after a trip of several weeks in Europe, where he visited the principal centers of picture production, including the Paramount studio in London. Mr. Zukor expressed general satisfaction with the arrangements and organization of the London studio, but declined to discuss his trip further than to say that the picture industry in Europe seemed to be generally prosperous.

Paramount District Mgrs. Will Meet June 6th

S. R. Kent, general manager of the department of distribution of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announced yesterday that the annual meeting of the district managers will be held in the home office during the week of June 6. All of the managers of the company throughout the country will be in attendance, and at the close of the convention the plans of the sales department for the coming season will be announced.

Picture Convention Proposed in Illinois Bill

With the Spence bill recommended for passage by the Illinois State Senate Committee on License and Miscellany awaiting action in the senate, and other measures being considered, another bill has been introduced in the Illinois house by J. H. Francis, providing for a state motion picture commission of three commissioners to be appointed by the governor.

The measure calls for the salaries to be fixed by the governor, not to exceed three thousand dollars for the chairman of the commission and two thousand five hundred for the members.

It provides that every film intended for exhibition in the state of Illinois shall be passed upon by the commission and licensed if satisfactory to that body. Every film passed by the commission shall have its official seal affixed.

Appeal to the Circuit Court of Sangamon County or other county where a branch office of the commission is located, is provided for any person injuriously affected by a final order of the commission, and the court is directed to try the appeal in not less than ten nor more than thirty days after the filing of the praecipe.

Penalty for violation of the act shall be a fine or not more than five hundred dollars or imprisonment in the penitentiary for not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. In addition the film shall be confiscated.

Linton, of Little Falls, Buys Out Partner

W. H. Linton, of Little Falls, N. Y., has bought out the interests of his partner, D. R. Letson, in the Herkimer theatre, The Richmond, and will close it for a few weeks to repair and redecorate it.

By purchasing Mr. Letson's interest, Mr. Linton obtains sole ownership in the Linton Theatre of Little Falls and the Hippodrome Theatre in same place, and The Richmond Theatre, Herkimer, and Hippodrome Theatre in Utica. Mr. Linton is having plans made for a 1300 seat house in Little Falls. This will be an up-to-the-minute theatre and will be on the main street, in the very best part of the city. The cost will be about $125,000.

A. M. P. A. Strive to Stop Showing of Picture

Further evidence of the determination of leaders in the industry to clear filmdom of the few objectionable features is offered in measures now being taken by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., to prevent the showing of a certain picture. As the result of complaints received, the association has taken up with the National Association steps to prevent the showing of "The End of the Road," alleged to be objectionable, with special reference to showings before mixed audiences.

A Little Work for a Big Job

A Few Minutes Work Can Go a Great Distance in Helping the Industry in a Serious Matter

The situation is a serious one, involving the best interests of this industry.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association has taken the matter in hand in behalf of the exhibitors of the country. This full-page appeal is devoted to a resolution passed by the Executive Committee together with the copy of a letter sent to congressman. An urgent appeal is made that every exhibitor, whether or not enrolled in the M. P. T. O. A. write a letter similar to the one below to his congressman at once, emphasizing the fact that he has not exhibited and will positively not exhibit this picture.

We urge this action and also similar letters from distributors and producers.

The protest from the industry cannot be made too emphatic.

Washington, D. C., May 18, 1921.

Dear CONGRESSMAN:

A film called "In the Shadow of the Dome," has recently (May 8th) been shown in the Shubert-Belasco theatre, this city. This picture, a crude and cheap production, gives a false, ludicrous, and unpatriotic portrayal of our National Congress, dragging in the name of the National Capitol for advertising purposes. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, comprising within their membership upward of three-fourths of all motion picture theatre owners, have informed every member and every other motion picture theatre owner to keep this offensive and misleading film out of their theatres.

Please note that this picture was shown in a house which is ordinarily devoted to the spoken drama; that it was not made by any of the well-known and reputable producers, but by an unknown director, with no apparent permanent office or studio. We cannot help believing that this film was inspired by artifice, trickery, fraud, misrepresentation, and with the object of prejudicing Congress against all motion pictures. This seems doubly probable in view of the fact, that it has not been shown elsewhere, so far as we know, and that every member of the House and Senate received a special invitation by mail to attend the performance in the Shubert-Belasco Theatre. We propose to conduct a searching investigation into the origin of this picture for purpose of discovering the sources of its financial support.

Washington, D. C., May 18, 1921.

RESOLUTION ON FILM CALLED "IN THE SHADOW OF THE DOME"

WHEREAS, the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America have learned of the existence of a motion picture film called "In the Shadow of the Dome," and

WHEREAS, said film, a crude production, conveys a false, ludicrous, and unpatriotic impression of our National Congress, and

WHEREAS, said film was exhibited in a theater ordinary devoted to the spoken drama, i. e., the Shubert-Belasco Theater, in the City of Washington, D. C., and

WHEREAS, the alleged producer of said film has no apparent permanent place of business or studio,

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that we condemn the said film as unfit for public exhibition by reason of its vicious, unpatriotic, and misleading portrayal of our National Congress.

FURTHER RESOLVED, that we believe this film to have been made and to have been shown in the City of Washington for the purpose of prejudicing Congress against motion pictures in general, and,

FURTHER RESOLVED, that the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America conduct a searching investigation and that in the meantime we warn all members of our organization and every motion picture theater owner in the United States against the showing of said picture.

Two More State Organizations Join M.P.T.O.A.

Two more states have joined the ranks of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the new additions being Colorado and Iowa. Both of these states this week voted to affiliate with the national organization and have endorsed the principles and policies of the M. P. T. O. A.

The new Colorado branch of the national organization is off to a good start. About one hundred out of approximately two hundred and forty exhibitors of the state attended the meeting called by Tom Vickroy, of the Tabor theatre in Denver, held Wednesday afternoon at the Savoy Hotel. Another meeting will be held in Denver May 26 for the accommodation of those exhibitors who were unable to attend last Wednesday.

The meeting Wednesday was presided over by Hon. S. I. Berman and Senator Walker, of New York. The aims, purposes and working plan of the national organization and its affiliated state branches as outlined by the gentlemen from the East were heartily approved by every one of the exhibitors present. The organization was completed in less than two hours.

The following officers were selected to guide the affairs of the organization for the first year: President, Tom Vickroy, Denver; first vice-president, Tommy Tompkins, Colorado Springs; second vice-president, Max Kohn, Trinidad; third vice-president, M. C. Gerhart, Fort Collins; secretary, John Broughton, Denver; treasurer, Max Schubach, 201 Masonic Temple, Denver.

The members of the executive board are Orson Adams, of Denver, chairman; Mrs. E. Z. Hunt, Montrose, and Messrs. Marquard, of Longmont, and Kreier, of Walsenburg.

In Iowa, the exhibitors of the state met at the New Savery Hotel in Des Moines on May 24, and an active unit was organized with the following officers:

President, Harry Heirsteiner, Des Moines; vice-presidents, J. C. Duncan, Sioux City; M. R. Tournier, Mason City; E. Metzer, Creston; treasurer, B. R. Van Dyke, Des Moines, and secretary, George B. Flint, of Boone.

Gillstrom Leaves for Coast

Arvid Gillstrom, well known in the field of comedy production, left New York for Los Angeles on Tuesday of this week. On his arrival he will start work on the series of Jimmie Adams Comedies, which, in association with Louis Gasnier, will be produced for Educational release.

Gillstrom's most recent activity was the production of "Such a Little Queen" for Realart, with Constance Binney in the featured role. Previous to that he was active in independent production following a long period in the Fox fold and with the Sennett organization.

Beecroft Is Honored

FRED J. BEECROFT, advertising manager of Motion Picture News, was, at last Friday's meeting elected to the chairmanship of the Fifth Division, National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. The newly-elected chairman has been active in the affairs of the National Association since its start and during the past year served ably as a member of the Vigilance Committee. He succeeds Tom Wiley, as chairman of the Fifth Division.

Massachusetts Censor Bill Signed by Governor

Governor Cox, of Massachusetts, signed the motion picture censorship bill on May 25, and hereafter pictures in that state will be under the supervision of the Department of Public Safety. All films exhibited must be formally passed upon.

Stating that in his belief the measure was much fairer to producers of pictures than bills passed in other states, Governor Cox said, "Massachusetts has not attempted censorship in the strict sense of the term, but has prescribed certain standards of regulation and a right of appeal to the courts in case of unreasonable decision. So far as public sentiment has found expression, it was overwhelmingly in favor of the sort of regulation which is hereby created.

Last year the Governor vetoed a censorship bill as unconstitutional, but believes the objectionable features have been eliminated in the new measure. He expressed the view that, far from injuring the industry, the bill would help in a great measure, in that it would protect producers of good pictures from competition of low order.

He repudiated the insinuation that the measure was the first step in direction of general censorship of theatres and newspapers.

Famous Italian Actress Directed by Amato

In our publication of last week the MOTION PICTURE NEWS referred to Carlos Amato in Ernest Shipman's letter from Rome, stating that Amato was one of the major producing units of the U. C. I.

Since then it has been learned that Signor Amato is the guiding spirit and managing director of the famous Italian actress, Pena Menichelli who has produced a series of modern screen dramas and is now engaged in the making of Zola's "A Page of Love," with Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" to follow.

According to Shipman, this actress is not only one of the foremost artists of Italy, but of all Europe, depicting as she does a mature woman in one play and a schoolgirl of sixteen in another, with the credit of absolute artistry in each. This company will sojourn in England for the benefit of English atmosphere and value of technical co-operation.

Mr. Luiseppe Barattalo, the president of the U. C. I., contemplates a visit to America in June.

Paramount Eastern Studi Ball Great Success

The Fellowship Club of Famous Play ers Eastern studios gave its second annua ball in the Grand Ballroom of the Commo dore Hotel, New York, last Friday eve ning, to a large and appreciative attend ance. The studio officials did themselve proud in seeing to it that everyone ha a good time. As the patrons assemble they were requested to march before th camera in order that their impression might be registered. Toward the conclu sion of the dance the picture was shown o a screen to the delight of the happy throng Various shades of emotion were caught b the camera and it is safe to say that goodly number screened well.

Max Fischer's orchestra played with th fox-trot featured as the favorite dance Among the film celebrities who attende were Wallace Reid, who showed his ver satility by appearing as the cameraman i a satirical sketch of the movies and play ing in the orchestra. Wally can mak sweet music with the saxophone. Other who shared the spotlight were Constanc Binney, Reginald Denny, George Fitz maurice, Hope Hampton, Jules Brulatou Tom McNamara, Tom Geraghty, Jac Meador, Frankie Mann, Elsie Fergusor John Emerson, Anita Loos, Eve Unsel Earle Foxe, Wallace McCutcheon an Jesse Lasky.

A vaudeville entertainment preceded th ball. Refreshments were served. Ca riage checks were given up to the starte and taxicabs were hailed at the zero hou A good time was reported by all.

New Sales Plan Formed a Goldwyn Convention

Goldwyn's sales convention ended la Sunday when the last of the special trai load of film folk were deposited in th far east of the United States. For nin days the convention was held at the Gol wyn Studios in Culver City, Californi.

Many things were accomplished at bot business meetings and banquets. A d finite and new idea in methods of sal will result, and the exchange of ideas c the part of the executives and manage was most vital to the health of the Gol wyn Company. The advance pictures c the Goldwyn Fifth Year list were revie ed and applauded by the men who hav to get the contracts.

The round-up affair of the conventic was the banquet at Ambassador Hotel c Thursday night. Senator James J. Wall er of New York was a special guest ar in the course of his speech, he emphasize the importance of the Goldwyn get-t gether at the studios. Other speech were made by F. J. Godsol, Abraham Leh A. S. Oronson, Alfred Weiss, and J. Hawks.

Men in Field See Business Revival

Result of Interesting Questionnaire Is Specific Promise of Better Times

GENERAL business revival, which will have its reflection in motion picture theatre box offices, is definitely in sight. It will be national in effect and will get under way immediately after the summer solstice.

Existing conditions in those theatres which show business off considerably in volume from that of last year, are due almost entirely to the general slump and, therefore, may be expected to rebound from the present low level with the resumption of industrial activity.

Reopening of coal and metal mines, advance orders to Western factories, brilliant prospects for cattle and wheat, bonus in gold and silver output, laying in of raw material and settling down of the new national administration are the tangible arrows pointing a swift return to normal.

Based on these indications, exhibitors generally will hold to their present admission prices, although in some isolated cases there may be slight reductions to meet readjusting wage scales, new theatres projected or under way in virtually every section of the United States and Canada; film rental prices should hold generally firm, although concessions may have to be made to exhibitors operating in the backward districts, and there is small likelihood of increases.

In the matter of attractions, exhibitors show a tendency to big specials and longer runs, although in only a few sections has the regular feature been seriously affected by the special.

The proposed $2 circuit of A. H. Woods, which is planned to play superpictures for long engagements, is not a menace to the regular motion picture theatre, but on the contrary is regarded an actual aid to the latter, enabling exhibitors to maintain their present admission scale through comparison.

This summary of the existing situation and future outlook for the film business is the net result of a survey made by Associated First National through the medium of a questionnaire submitted to exchange managers at their convention in the Hotel Astor, New York, May 16-20.

The questionnaire, embracing nine distinct subjects affecting the picture business internally or externally, was voted upon by 31 delegates, representing as many sections of the United States and Canada.

Fresh from the field, under no illusions or delusions as to market conditions or the problems confronting sellers and buyers of film product, these men responded frankly to the nine questions which were presented to them by the home office of Associated First National the questions and composite replies from the 31 individuals being:

1. General Industrial Conditions—Better or Worse than 6 Months Ago?

The consensus was that conditions are worse at present than last Fall. This, however, is attributed in every instance to unsettled labor and industrial affairs—facts patent to everyone in the industry—and proof of it is found in the statement printed by Dun's Agency that there are at present 2,000,000 unemployed workers in the United States.

2. Outlook for Next Season—On What is Your Opinion Based?

Virtually unanimous optimism, only five votes indicating any doubt as to the outlook. Vancouver and San Francisco foresee labor unrest, Oklahoma is dubious about prices of oil and cotton, Charlotte, N. C. and Atlanta, Ga., question crop outlook. On the bright side of the question, there are numerous specific reasons given for optimism. Cincinnati for instance, reports big advance orders arriving at factories, Pittsburgh reports plants stocking up with raw material, Buffalo quotes industial executives pledging general resumption of full-time operations. Utah mines, as well as Pennsylvania coal mines, are to reopen soon. Colorado cattle and mining prospects are fine, and crop prospects in the Minneapolis, Omaha and Des Moines agricultural areas are most promising.

3. Will Rentals Go Higher. Remain Firm or Go Lower? Why?

General impression here is that rentals will hold firm, though it is admitted some exhibitors in the less favored sections may have to be granted reductions until local conditions in their territories better themselves. This particular phase of the investigation reveals that most exhibitors are willing to pay fair prices for films that promise adequate returns on their investment, and the impression gathered is that there will be little change, unless it be temporary.

4. Will Admission Prices Remain as They Are or Decline?

Opinion here about evenly divided, it appearing that exhibitors in the key centers will have no difficulty in maintaining their present scales of admission, although in some of the smaller houses and in rural districts, due to local conditions, shading of prices may become advisable. The impression is conveyed, however, that most exhibitors will stand pat on admissions, holding to the theory that a difference of two, three or even five cents one way or the other will not materially increase or decrease attendance at the theatre. This would appear as the logical view for them to take, because a man who can afford to pay 17 cents for his family to see a picture could also afford to pay 25 cents, and if he could not pay 25 cents, he could no better afford 17 cents.

5. What is the attitude towards longer runs in your Territory?

"Favored," "Gaining Favor," "Longer Runs Coming," are some of the replies to this question, on which the positive votes were in a majority. The key to the situation would seem to lie in the return from Kansas, which reported that "exhibitors gladly extend runs where justified." This expression would point to a desire on the part of exhibitors to change their programs as infrequently as possible, but it is obviously impossible for the man with a small population to draw from or to adopt the policy and reports on these one-day houses so stated. The saving in gross advertising and exploitation expense in a year, as the result of longer runs, is a strong argument in favor of the plan and many houses of limited seating capacity are reported going in for it.

6. Are new theatres being planned in your territory? Emphatically "yes" in 28 out of the 31 districts represented, a tally which would seem to epitomize the general optimism conveyed by the First National's survey as a whole, Louisville apparently is displaying the greatest amount of building activity, at least 20 new theatres being projected or in course of construction. That the builders of these houses as well as those in other sections of the continent, are putting their money into amusement structures may be accepted as a guarantee of better times ahead. Real estate values, cost of labor and building material are even now too steep for investors, many of them practical showmen, to put their wealth into properties of questionable earning power.

In carrying proportion, it is off in many areas and in every case is laid to the economic slump which, happily, is nearing its end. It would be a paradox if, when millions are idle and industry crippled, the theatre did not feel the pressure. But right here let it be said the picture houses have suffered far less in proportion than the legitimate theatres of the country. The "road" during the passing theatrical season has been a tragedy for legitimate show producers and probably will be recorded as one of the worst in the history of the business, with more companies stranded than ever was known in a single season before. The money lost by the legitimate theatres is dead, but with the favorable prospect confronting the picture houses it is reasonable to suppose they will be able to strike their normal profit ratio within a short time.

8. How far has the big special affected booking of the average feature attraction?

Majority opinion holds that exhibitors want big specials at equitable rental prices whenever possible, but that the average feature has not suffered to any great extent. In one instance, it asserted the big pictures have helped business, and from another source comes the suggestion that they be limited to one a month.

9. Will the $2.00 circuit projected by A. H. Woods and the Shuberts affect the regular motion picture theatre?

The answers were unanimously in the negative, opinions generally being that the Woods' chain will not be able to get any better product, usually, than the regular houses and that the latter would benefit through comparison of attractions and admission prices.

Summed up, First National's investigation has produced a document on which the industry may base hope for the future. Past troubles and existing difficulties are concrete facts apparent to everyone in the industry. But the specific promise of better times also is something tangible for us to work with, especially as this promise rests upon assurance of what may be accepted as uniform prosperity in agricultural, mining and manufacturing sections.

Clara Kimball Young to Return to Stage

Clara Kimball Young, who spent a few days in Kansas City last week, confirmed the report that she is to return to the stage. Miss Young said she would spend next fall in Italy and Southern France, where she is to make a film. After that she will be in London temporarily to look for a stage play, which, she says, probably will be produced there.

Music and the Picture

The Story of Pagliacci

By Charles D. Isaacson

SOME time ago I ran an opera story or two for use by the theatre managers, whether as program notes in their accompaniment of operatic medleys or for general publicity. I had many requests to run other such stories; many indicating the opera they desired to have told. The most popular opera from these requests seemed to be "Pagliacci," the one-act score by the Italian Ruggiero Leoncavallo. "Pagliacci" has been played more than any other modern opera, and is perhaps better known through its "Ridi pagliacci," its "Prologue," and its "Balatella," which almost everybody knows.

The point in the use of these operatic stories is that they will aid the audience to understand the meaning of the music. Some theatres reprinted my stories and gave them out as souvenirs when the overture or medley was played. Some induced their local newspapers to run the story with the line, "The opera medley will be played at Blank theatre all next week." I personally have used this story many times before huge audiences with good success. I wrote it for the popular mind, desiring to know "what the opera's all about."

THE STORY OF PAGLIACCI

It is during the feast of the virgin; in a little village of Calabria. If you will construct in your imaginations the scene I now paint for you, you will better understand. It is open country; here is the meeting of two cross-roads. To the right of our stage is a traveling theatre, and now, as the curtain rises, we behold the troupe of actors arriving with their properties. They are met by the villagers, who hail them; a play's a thing to be welcomed.

Nedda, the woman of the cast, the wife of Canio, is lying in a gayly painted cart, which is drawn by a donkey, led by Beppe, the harlequin. Canio is beating the drum for all he is worth. Tonio, the clown, who has arrived ahead of time, is lying in front of the theatre, and is rather embarrassed by the crowds. Shouting, whistling, the boys poking fun and throw things.

But everybody is happy; everybody is glad at the arrival of the entertainers; in fact, they demand at once the beginning of the play. Canio tries to speak, but they are insistent in their demands. So he beats the drum and gets attention. "A word, a word, I pray. Tonight at seven the play begins and I invite you. You will see the troubles of poor Punchinello and the vengeance he wrecked on the treacherous fellow; Tonio, the clown, with his silly ways. Come, at seven, at seven."

Nedda is about to alight from the cab; Tonio goes forward to take her down, but the husband boxes his ears and lifts her out. This little by-play scarcely escapes the crowd, who laugh at the clown's discomfort. And Tonio is angry.

Canio is invited to go to have a drink; Beppe joins him, but Tonio stays behind. "To clean the donkey," he says. "To court your wife," says a game villager. "Look out, good master."

Canio says, "You think so? Up there, on the stage, if Tonio or any other made love with my wife, I'd preach a sermon. Note the difference between the stage and real life. Down here, if Nedda deceived me; well, there'd be a different ending. Such a game isn't worth the playing." Canio makes this speech half in jest, half seriously.

Canio changes his clothes and goes to the village, the chorus singing, "The Shadows fall, come one, come all, away, away, beware, beware, in the twilight love is told. Beware of Shadows."

And so Nedda remains alone.

"I am worried; how he looked at me," she says; "and I hung my head thinking, too true, of my lover. My brutal husband, if he should know, what would he do? I know not what I think, my heart soars, I rise above this ordinary, monotonous life. Like you beautiful song birds, flying forever. Fate leads them, on they go. Beautiful birds, like my thoughts and desires." Thus she sings her Ballatella, and is interrupted by the clown Tonio.

"Your song bewitched me, dear one. I could not leave you. You laugh; you think I have no heart. Ah, dear Nedda, you know not how I suffer and how I love you."

"Fool. Wait until the play and tell me then. Why bother me now——"

"No, Nedda, the fool, the clown loves you; has always loved you. My heart is breaking for you——"

"Would you have a thorough whipping, fool? Must I call Canio to you?"

"Not till you have kissed me——"

"Hands off. Leave me, or by—this whip I strike you; take that. How do you like that, fool."

Tonio is hit, and moans with pain.

"I'll be revenged, Nedda. I swear it by the Holy Virgin. I swear it."

"Ah, you fool; a heart as foul as your body, fouler still."

And even as the sounds of Tonio's footsteps are still to be heard, a voice in a whisper over the wall——

It is Silvio. At this hour such madness.

"No danger, dear. I left your husband at the tavern drinking."

She says, "A moment sooner and Tonio would have caught you."

Silvio laughs and scorns the fool, little knowing what mischief he is brewing, but growing jealous when Nedda tells how even that moment he tried to kiss her in his mad desire.

"Nedda," pleads Silvio, "my life is in your hands; we must flee tonight; give up this roving life. I know it sickens you; fly with me, dearest."

"Oh, Silvio, do not tempt me. Pity me; say good-by and pity me. 'Tis best to part. I shall dream of thee and never forget thee."

"You do not love me——"

"Ahhhhh——" the fool has caught them. He watches them as they kiss and listens to this:

"You must come with me. Tonight, will you come?"

Nedda, sick and weary of all her like and knowing the wealth of her lover and his devotion to her, finally says "yes." So arm in arm they move toward the wall. Nedda promising, "Tonight; yes, love, tonight."

And think of it, think of it. Along comes Canio. Tonio the devil has told him, and, rushing up to find the wife with

The Music Tax—Its Stipulations and Scope

FIRMS WHICH DO AND DO NOT CHARGE FOR USE OF MUSIC IN THEATRES

RECENTLY we have been having many inquiries concerning the "Music Tax," the imposition of which seems to be a brand new question to many theatre men and one which is causing trouble to others. Therefore at this time we wish to set forth the facts exactly as they are without expressing any theories, as they are misleading and cause so much misunderstanding.

In the first place the whole question is one which must be settled by law and in no other way, therefore arguments and howls against the condition as it exists are absolutely futile.

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is an organization made up of musical composers and music publishers.

This organization determined that they should charge a tax wherever any music controlled by them was played, providing this playing was a part of an entertainment which was being operated for profit and to which admissions were charged.

This included Motion Picture Theatres.

The courts decided that the Society had and has the right to charge the tax whenever music controlled by the Society is played in connection with an entertainment operated for profit. This is a Fact.

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers states:

"Answering your inquiry as to the license fee for motion picture theatres, we would say that the charge is 10 cents per seat a year and must be paid by the proprietor of the establishment."

Every theatre in the country playing music controlled by the Society is subject to this tax unless the courts set the present law aside. The courts, therefore, are the only recourse.

Publishers of Music on which TAX IS CHARGED as of April 1, 1921:

Berlin, Irving, Inc.
Broadway Music Corporation
Chappell-Harms, Inc.
Enoch & Sons
Feist, Leo, Inc.
Fisher, Fred, Inc.
Forster, F. J. A.
Goodman & Rose, Inc.
Gordon, Hamilton S.
Harms, T. B., Company
Harms, T. B. & Francis, Day & Hunter
Harris, Charles K.
Kendis, Brockman Music Co., Inc.
Marks, Edward B., Music Co.
McKinley Music Co.
Mills, Jack, Inc.
Pace & Handy Music Co., Inc.
Paull, E. T. Music Company
Remick & Co., Jerome H.
Richmond, Maurice, Inc.
Ricordi, G. & Co., Inc.
Shapiro, Bernstein & Co., Inc.
Skidmore Music Company, Inc.
Stark & Cowan, Inc.
Victoria Publishing Company
Von Tilzer, Harry, Music Pub. Co.
Waterson, Berlin & Snyder Company
Witmark, M. & Sons

Other Music

The way out of the difficulty is simple enough, providing proper care is taken.

Play music of publishers who are not members of the Society and who feel that for certain definite reasons the taxing of music in theatres is unjust.

Publishers of NON-TAXED Music:

Boston Music Company
Carl Fisher
Oliver Ditson Company
Belwin, Inc.
Sam Fox Music Publishers
Hawkes & Sons, London
*G. Schirmer, Inc.

Difficulties

There are certain points upon which the theatre men who do not want to pay the tax should be warned:

1st. Absolute instructions should be given to those in charge of the theatre music as to just whose music should be made use of and that if there is any doubt the music should not be used until the facts are known.

2nd. Cue sheets and scores offered for sale or distributed should not be used by those who do not wish to pay the tax unless the statement is made and guaranteed that the music recommended is not subject to tax. Where scores are sold or rented a guarantee should go with each copy that all liability is assumed by the publisher should trouble arise.

3rd. Every theatre man not wishing to pay the tax should see that his library of music contains only selections which are issued by those companies whose music is tax free and are non-members of the Society.

4th. When those in charge of the music supply the music for the theatre the Theatre Owner should instruct and demand that non-taxable music only should be played, and when cues are supplied see to it that the musicians substitute non-taxable music wherever taxable music is specified. The Theatre Owner is liable if this is not done.

Trouble and lawsuits may result from the use of music inadvertently used which is taxable, therefore too much care cannot be used. Spotters may be in the audience or other methods used for locating houses using taxable music.

Some houses believe that the tax is so small that it is better to pay it than fight and go to the trouble of inspecting all music. This is an open question to be settled by each theatre owner individually or by the united action of the Theatre Owners organization. If the tax is to be fought it must be done by united action of Theatre Interests.

A warning should be given to every maker of cue-sheets and every maker of scores that he owes it to the theatre to label every cue—stating whether or not it contains taxable music and if so each of the selections should be so labeled.

In conclusion we might say that those who are not members of the Society control most of the old and modern standard selections and that the Society controls most of the popular Broadway hits of the day, and that with proper musical management any theatre can prosper without the use of taxable music.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Deception—
Wonderful picture — Biggest crowds since extended run policy inaugurated. Packed all the time. (East.)

Played to capacity for week and held for second seven day showing. Received enthusiastic reception at every showing. (East.)

Pleasing picture—box office did fine. (East.)

The City of Silent Men—
Well made and interesting picture that did very good for me. (West.)

Too Wise Wives—
Picture was shown in conjunction with old time feature, made in 1908, with Mary Pickford and Mack Sennett, and the combined attraction went over great. A good house all week. (Middle West.)

Very Poor. Fell down badly in every way. (West.)

The Love Special—
Great picture, went over like a house afire, with thermometer at 80 and over. (East.)

What Every Woman Knows—
A repeat that didn't draw very well. (East.)

The Faith Healer—

Fighting Kentuckians—
Did a big busines but is only a fair production. (East)

The Education of Elizabeth—
Nice picture that drew good business. (West.)

Buried Treasure—
Colorful, with good action, but box office results way below average. (East.)

Sacred and Profane Love—
Just a fair attraction that drew Miss Ferguson's usual fans. (West.)

The Traveling Salesman—
Went big with us although we always play to capacity. (West.)

Proxies—
Splendid picture—poor title—receipts fair. (East.)

The Idol of the North—
Dorothy Dalton pleased in this story of the north although it was not generally considered equal to our previous pictures along the same line. Did good business. (Middle West.)

The Gilded Lily—
One of Mae Murray's best. It gets away from the hackneyed plot, and has a real surprise ending. Featured by good acting and the usual elaborate scenes. Drew big. (Middle West.)

Midsummer Madness—
Drawing well on a two week run, a good plot, with a very capable cast. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Passion Flower—
Got over in good shape and box madge's. (West.)

Man, Woman, Marriage—
Did S. R. O. business after a two week run on the same street. (West.)

Bob Hampton of Placer—
Very good picture that did a little better than average business. (West.)

The Woman in His House—
Good picture that satisfied our audiences. Average box office receipts. (West.)

Sowing the Wind—
Got over in good shape and box office receipts were satisfactory. (West.)

The Old Swimmin' Hole—
Not much of a plot, but the picture is interesting as a novelty, as it has no subtitles. The action gets across well without them. A good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Lessons in Love—
Held up in excellent manner for week run. Constance prime favorite here. (East.)

REALART

The Outside Woman—
Not a knockdown by a long shot and business was about as good as the picture. Wanda Hawley is not a very big drawing card. (East.)

Ducks and Drakes—
Went over very nicely. Audiences seemed to like it fine. (West.)

Two Weeks With Pay—
Another of Bebe's that they liked. Drew well for week. (West.)

The Magic Cup—
Shown in conjunction with "Blue Sunday," a comedy, and played to a good house all week, the comedy proving the superior attraction, (Middle West.)

Plaything of Broadway—
Pleasing picture—Brought fine receipts. (East.)

Two Weeks With Pay—
Right nice little show. Fair business. (East.)

GOLDWYN

An Unwilling Hero—
Audiences liked this one and it drew the usual Will Rogers crowd. (West.)

Hold Your Horses—
Tom Moore is always a good drawing card here and he lives up to his reputation in this production. Good business for the week. (Middle West.)

Milestones—

Prisoners of Love—
A good picture but business was only fair. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

Black Beauty—
Played this two weeks to satisfied audiences and good business. (West.)

Black Beauty proved a powerful box office attraction and we did way above average business with it. It is an especially good puller for people who have children and hundreds of parents came with their youngsters to see the famous Black Beauty on the screen. (M. W.)

Mistress of Shenstone—
Robertson-Cole. A very good picture attracting fair business. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

Reputation—
Very big. Stood 'em up for the entire run. (West.)

Best picture Priscilla Dean has ever had. Did good business considering the time of year. (East.)

The Wallop—
Big business. Carey is the best at our theatre. This is among his best pictures. (East.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Through the Back Door—
Good Picture. Rather hasty ending. Receipts not even average. (East.)

Best Pickford picture which we have seen for sometime and pleased our audiences very much. Business was best we have had for several weews. (M. W.)

They liked this right well and we did a big business for full week. (West.)

Dream Street—
First rate picture. Receipts not all good second week. (East.)

The Nut—
Did fairly well with this one. (East.)

STATES RIGHTS

Courage—
Courage is a splendid feature which appealed strongly to our patrons and we did excellent business during the week of its run. (M. W.)

Some Wild Oats—
Played with the endorsement of the health department and shown at separate performances for men and women only, proved a big drawing card. We are holding it over for a second week. (M. W.)

The Clodhopper—
As good as the average. Fair business. (East.)

Straight from Paris—
Excellent picture. Fine audience picture. Capacity at all performances. Personal appearance of Miss Young all week. (East.)

A mediocre picture with a good title and a good star that drew only fairly well. (East.)

The Servant in the House—
Poor picture for our audiences. No box office value either. (West.)

The Midlanders—
Did a fair business. Picture rather pleasing. (East.)

Hush—
A capacity house during the first part of the week, Clara Kimball Young making a personal appearance at each performance, but the attendance fell off the last three days, due perhaps, to the star's departure from town. (Middle West.)

The Call of Youth—
A bad picture that brought poor returns. (East.)

When Dawn Came—
Strong picture, but not for the summer. Medium attendance (East.)

Jesse James Under the Black Flag—
This picture appealed to a certain class, and I had a good house all week, principally because of the Fine "Deception" Prologue

Broadway-Strand of Detroit Has Atmospheric Presentation Number of Exceptional Merit

"DECEPTION" is playing an indefinite engagement at the Broadway-Strand theatre, Detroit. Not the least of the appeal the attraction has for the Detroit fans is the prologue number which Director of Productions Francis A. Mangan has originated for the showing.

The prologue is arranged in two scenes. The number opens with the view of a garden as it would appear if looking through massive iron gates. A court jester is seen dozing on a bench around which several maidens are holding a Spring Festival. The Jester upon awakening hurriedly looks around for his King and upon finding him he beckons him to the fairest of the maidens. Upon seeing the girl the King hastily gathers her in his arms and rushes into the castle. The Jester follows, knowing that his presence may be needful to the Maiden. The great iron gates slowly close, shutting out the view of the garden. At this point "Thora" by Metcalf is rendered in Basso Voice, the maiden cowering in a corner during the rendition of the number and the Jester clawing at the massive doors trying to pry them open for her escape. He succeeds after a frantic endeavor and the girl escapes. The frivolous ruler finding that he has been thwarted pounds upon the doors and as they gradually open, they do so upon the screen instead of the garden which the audience had just previously seen. The picture screened is the Prizma opening of "Deception" enacted by two characters in ancient livery, tugging at the selfsame doors which previously had been real, but are now the opening scenes of the picture. The Broadway-Strand with the staging under the direction of Mangan has earned a reputation for the smooth manner in which prologues fade from the stage scenes to the picture, and make the connection impressive on the minds of the audience. There are no curtains between to separate the numbers, and in this particular instance, that of "Deception," the change with dimming lights from a prologue with characters in the flesh to a projection on the screen with characters in the selfsame costumes is admirably done. In exploiting the picture, the Broadway-Strand had the cooperation of the local Roamer automobile agency, who furnished a car, chauffeur and gasoline to tour the streets while a masked woman dressed in freak clothes occupied the back seat. The only sombre note was the dusky chauffeur. The car paraded the streets from 11 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. and from 4 p. m. to 5:30 p. m., thereby getting the crowds during the "peak" hours.

The Roamer tie-up was arranged by Paramount exploiter J. A. Lacy, and the Broadway?-Strand manager, Pril Gleichman.

Brooklyn Mark Strand Adopts New Summer Music Policy

With the season for grand opera having practically closed and with summer on the threshold, the Brooklyn Mark Strand has ceased temporarily its presentation of authentic scenes from the major operas this week and inaugurated a period of pre-summer light opera and operetta, the first light opera offering being several scenes from Flotow's "Martha," which is really a ballet-pantomime elaboration.

Against a blue neutral drop with a summer garden set of a trellis rose garden the duet number "Lost, Proscribed" was sung by Allan Ramond, tenor, and Walter Smith, basso, both garbed as courtiers from the court of Queen Anne. "The Good Night Quartette Number," by the Strand Mixed Quartette, was pretty with two men and two women in courtly attire, powdered wigs, knee breeches, etc. The women carried lighted candles and sang the good night parts delicately. Lillian Poli concluded the scenes from "Martha" with the favorite, "The Last Rose of Summer."

Kalamazoo Kiddies Draw Pictures of "Black Beauty"

Hundreds of school children drew pictures of the famous horse and the best of these were used in the lobby of the theatre prior to the awarding of the prizes. The accompanying cut will illustrate how the stunt went over. It also shows some of the amateur artists caught by a photographer as they were inspecting their own work and that of their school mates.

Closeup and full stage view of the stage setting and the dancers who presented a wooden shoe number as a prologue for "In Dutch," an Educational scenic presented recently by the Rialto theatre, Omaha, Neb.

David Improves Bag Stunt

THAT perenially popular slogan, "Say it with Flowers," has been changed to "Say it with Groceries" by Harry David, manager of the Mission theatre in Los Angeles, where "Through the Back Door" is playing an indefinite engagement.

By tying up with the delivery department of the biggest string of grocery stores in the Angel City, David was able to invite about 375,000 prospective customers to his ticket window.

"As a scheme for telling 'em about it," said David, "this campaign developed into a world-beater. We followed the idea suggested in the press book almost to the letter and here's the way it worked out:

"Ralphs Grocery Company, with five big stores and sixty-three delivery trucks, making an average of two thousand deliveries to Los Angeles homes every day, was sold the idea of a 'Mutual Delivery Wagon Advertising Campaign.' We agreed to print cards advertising their goods and also our picture, with the understanding that the cards were to be inserted in every package delivered on the wagons as well as every package wrapped in the store for customers who made their purchases in person.

"In addition to the card campaign, Ralphs gave us a credit line in all their newspaper advertising which read as follows: 'The best goods come THROUGH THE BACK DOOR.'"

The details of the arrangements with Ralphs was worked out by John Howard, publicity director for the Mission. Howard estimated that at least 125,000 households in which an average of three prospective patrons lived were reached through this unique drive. Thus it can be seen that a possible patronage of 375,000 strong was reached by means of this simple expedient, all at a cost of Twenty Dollars.

The entire campaign was based on the slogan that "the things you need most in life come to you through the back door." The exact size of the cards was three by four inches, which enabled Graves to charge their automatic loading machines with them and thus shoot these ads into the package of sugar, coffee, beans, etc.

Novelty was added to the cards by changing the copy and the color of them after every run of 6,000, which contributed a week's delivery.

"Do your cramming at the Rialto theatre," was the advice given Yale University students when "Deception" opened at New Haven the week before examinations. The Rialto had booked the picture and the management linked it up with the Yale exams.

Showmen of New Haven have long since found out that examination time for both semesters is comparatively the dullest period of the year for them. This year the Rialto played on the fact that students of English history could learn their history of Henry VIII by witnessing the picture: students of periods and costumes could see authentic gowning in "Deception."

West Interests Local Merchants in Cooperative Displays

Exhibitors and their publicity men have not been slow to take advantage of the excellent exploitation possibilities in the title of "Don't Neglect Your Wife." A. H. West, manager of the Babcock theatre in Billings, Mont., and his publicity director, H. M. Cady, got thirteen of the town's important merchants to go in with them on a double-truck advertising stunt in the Billings Gazette.

Mr. Cady solicited the ads from the merchants and prepared their copy, tying it up with the title of the photoplay.

Clear across the top of the two-page advertising section was run in 35 point black caps the following: "Are you a husband? If so, 'Don't neglect your wife.'" The ad for the photoplay at the Babcock theatre was a quarter page in size and occupied the top center of the double-truck.

Wendt Goes After Rural Business

Once again Harold F. Wendt, publicity director for the Rivoli theatre, Toledo, demonstrates that he is an astute publicist.

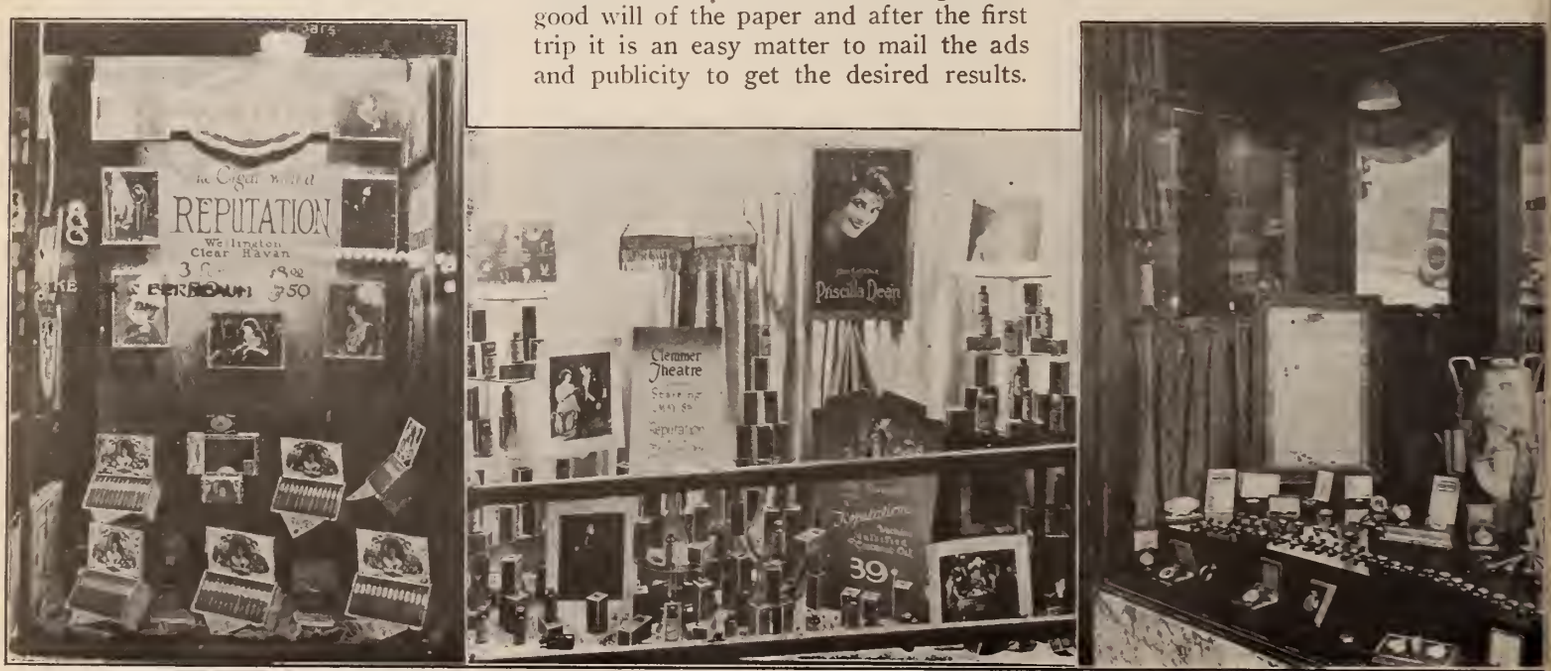
Traveling by auto with a force of five men, all the towns are "papered" with one, three, six and eight sheets, while other men tack up all the available poles with cards. The newspaper in each town is visited and the advertising man is given an ad of either eight or ten inches. The rates are found to be very cheap, ranging from ten to twenty-five cents per inch. At the same time the editor is handed about two sheets of publicity which in nine cases out of ten he uses on the front page of his first issue. He is also given a number of passes and told to visit the theatre the first time he is in Toledo. This gets the good will of the paper and after the first trip it is an easy matter to mail the ads and publicity to get the desired results.



"Scrambled Wives" Prologue Presented by Hyma

The ban on the warm rosy lighting ef fects and heavy music went into effect a the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre la week when the first summer days appeare and Managing Director Edward L. Hyma produced a prologue for "Scramble Wives" called "A Musicale in Dance land" in which Lillian Poli, the origina prima donna of "The Chocolate Soldier, appeared in numbers from the light sum mer operetta using effectively a gold cyclo rama behind which the Mark Stran ballet danced outdoor numbers against cool blue neutral drop.

Jackson Kinsey, baritone, sang "Beauti ful Lady" from "The Pink Lady," an a tiny lady in pink gauzy garments danc ing behind the gold scrim accentuated th lyrics. The usual dance number had th hackneyed touch taken away for with th outline or silhouette effect caused by th scrim the dancer had a cool far away ap pearance. Lillian Poli then sang he familiar "My Hero," while Ermini Mathews, dancer, clad in ballet costum danced behind the scrim. Florence Rogge dancer reproduced the noted "Merr Widow Waltz," following the rendition o the song by Jeanette Daniels, contralto.

The finale number of this original sum mer prologue was striking. It opened witl the Mark Strand Quartette appearing o the convert stage singing "Kiss M Again," from Herbert's "Mlle. Modiste." At the conclusion as if brought in on a cloud the Strand ballet group was seen dancing behind the gold scrim led b Grace Eastman. The effect was that o sunbeams or shadows dancing on a curtain.

The entire prologue was devised to re flect an atmosphere cheerful and light fo the Marguerite Clark film and also to ad a touch to the theatre which would lend a cool effect. The use of delicate neutra colors aided considerably.

Kaliska Favors Ballyhoo Advertising

EXPLOITING his comedy picture with as much enthusiasm as his feature picture, proved a wise experiment for Jack Kaliska, house manager of the Vaudette theatre, Atlanta, recently.

The Vaudette is a second-run theatre in the shopping district, catering particularly to women and children. So the exploitation, which took the form of "ballyhoo stuff" was confined to the two or three blocks which make up Atlanta's real shopping district.

A tall, thin man, very homely, was dressed in a close-fitting suit made of red, black and white diamond-shaped patterns —the conventional "Pied Piper of Hamelin" type. The trousers practically amounted to tights, and flung across his shoulders was a gay little cape. He wore a peaked bonnet-like hat from which floated a tall peacock feather, he wore a wig that was bobbed and blond, and he played a little tune on a penny flute, such as can be bought at any five and ten cent store.

His companion was a convict, in the traditional stripes, with the number "13" prominently displayed on his back, and with a clanking ball and chain around his ankle.

This strangely assorted pair paraded the streets for the entire three day run of the two pictures—and their antics were wholly unrehearsed. A favorite stunt was for the convict to dash madly along the street, as if pursued by the Piper. When he came to a crowded place, or to the doorway of a shop, he would pretend to hide, and the Piper, with his funny little flute, would pursue him, capture him, and then lead him, crest-fallen and woe-begone, down the street.

They attracted considerable attention and, because they wore no signs or banners proclaiming the name of the theatre or the play-date, they interested people even more. When the Piper captured the Convict, he would declaim, in stentorian tones, "C'mon, now—let's beat it down to the Vaudette—swell picture on down there!"

Newark Theatre and Department Store Cooperate

Through an arrangement between the Bamberger Co., a Newark, N. J., department store, and the Branford, a Newark picture theatre, a novel and practical idea that works to the interests of both has been inaugurated.

For the convenience of the Branford patrons and the shoppers that buy in Bamberger's, that do not wish to carry their purchases around on their other stops before attending the Branford, they may have their parcels sent to the theatre, where they may be called for at the check room after proper identification. A special service has been started by L. Bamberger to deliver all parcels sent to the Branford at once, so that no one will be disappointed. A special check room has been fitted at the theatre for the packages arriving and the patron will simply show their sales checks to obtain their bundles. D. J. Shepherd, the managing director of the Branford, conceived the idea and received the hearty co-operation of the store officials.

A life-sized cut-out, very well mounted, of a "man-eating gorilla," in a menacing attitude, facing an intrepid young man, across the lobby, helped George Schmidt, of the Alamo No. 2 theatre, Atlanta, to show the people of the city that he was playing "Go and Get It." The center of the lobby was occupied by a big lobby frame, containing clippings from newspapers of several months, retailing all the mysterious, un-explained murder mysteries and horrible accidents that had been unexplained. The banner across the front of the theatre, announcing the picture, was apparently lettered on the open pages of a newspaper.

The cut-out of the gorilla or "ape-man" was a horribly vivid thing, and the cut-out of the reporter, across the lobby, was equally "alive-looking."

Nothing else was added to the lobby, for anything more would simply have detracted from, rather than increased, the effectiveness of the display.

Stock Company and Picture Theatre Join Forces

Out in Indianapolis, the bitterest of enemies in the show game, dramatic stock and the picture theatre, are getting together in a tie-up that has worked to mutual advantage.

The Murat theatre is the indefinite home of the Stuart Walker Stock Company, while the Circle is one of the first run picture houses.

The stock company presented "The Wolf" as its opening bill.

One of the rehearsals was held out of doors and movies of one of the big scenes, a fight between the hero and the villain, was taken. While the stock company was presenting the show the Circle ran the fight scene as a trailer, with an announcement that the actors could be seen in person at the Murat. At the Murat announcement was made on leaflets passed between the acts that the scene could be seen in movies at the Circle.

Result, more business for both houses, a lot of newspaper publicity for the two attractions and pleased patrons at the Murat and the Circle.

Local Talent Presents Artistic Prologue

As a prologue number for "The Fall of Babylon," Manager H. L. Swain, of Shreveport, Ala., was able to present a dancing number with all local talent.

Mr. Swain enlisted the services of the teacher of a local dancing school and persuaded her to lend him a number of the dancing school pupils for the prologue. The girls were from ten to eighteen years of age, and coming from prominent families of Shreveport their public appearance was a box office magnet of unparalleled importance.

"Kismet" has again been put over in a big way by the Phoenix Amusement Co., of Lexington, Ky., where this attraction was recently booked for the Ben Ali theatre, one of the Phoenix company's string.

Newspaper advertising was relied on to a large extent in exploiting "Kismet," many page ads of attractive design being used but the most popular hit of the engagement was the prologue.

"Princess Owry," a noted classic dancer was secured and in an appropriate atmosphere presented Egyptian and Arabian dances that went big with the Lexington public.

Rental Prices Used for Exploitation Stunt

The management of Loew's Yonge street theatre, Toronto, displayed considerable originality in drawing up an advertisement for the week's offerings for the week of May 2 in comparing the producing costs of various film releases with the price of admission to the theatre. "What It Cost," was the "catch line" of the newspaper display in which the cost to the theatre for the film bookings was also listed. According to the advertisement, the cost of producing "The Offshore Pirate," was $180,000, and the booking of the feature for the week's run was quoted as $2,000. Likewise, the cost of producing the news weekly was estimated at $16,000, and the booking cost to the theatre was $100. A Sunshine Comedy cost $22,000 to produce, it was announced, and the rental for the week was $250. This was compared with the cost to the patron for admission of 25 cents for matinees and 45 cents for evening performances.

Hart Gets Great Results with Inexpensive Lobby Display

Something new and economical in the way of lobby display frames were hit upon by Manager Hart, of Ascher's Merrill theatre, Milwaukee in advertising Fox's "When New York Sleeps." Huge discs of cardboard were cut out for the still photos of the film. The effect was most unusual as the lithographs could be seen for some distance and the photos inspected at close range. The skyline of New York was represented scenically over the entrance to the theatre with a miniature elevated railway in the foreground. An electric toy train passed by at intervals proving a good eye catcher.

Style Show Gives "Gilded Lily" Big Boost

Just before the opening of "The Gilded Lily" at the Victory theatre, Kokomo, Ind., a style show was staged in the window of the leading women's ready-to-wear shop. Everything was taken out of the window and through the use of an electric fan turned upright, invisible silk thread, and balloons a funnel shaped net was made in which the balloons tumbled over one another propelled by the fan. This was a reproduction of a scene in the picture.

On the right side of this arrangement was a large and highly colored paper lily cut out of a one-sheet. A card was displayed for the picture and also announcing the following:

"The gowns that will be displayed in this window at two, four and seven-thirty o'clock are from our stock and similar to those worn by Mae Murray in 'The Gilded Lily,' which plays the Victory theatre, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The newspapers estimated more than two thousand people saw the style show. The cost of the show to the Victory was $20 and the manager said "it was worth as much as all the twenty-four sheets you could plaster on the court house."

"Madonna" Gown Given Away at Los Angeles

In connection with the showing of "Madonnas and Men" at the Garrick theatre, Los Angeles, the T. W. Chatburn Enterprises, lessees of the theatre for this showing, have inaugurated a Madonna gown test which has created considerable interest and stimulated the attendance. In connection with a local store the Chatburn Enterprises are giving a beautiful gown and during the showing this is on display in the window of the store on Broadway.

Essays on the subject, "Is modern man in his pursuit of woman more cruel than was the cave man," entered into the exploitation scheme.

Live Horses Used in Prologue for "The Toll Gate"

Live horses and an atmospheric stage setting figured prominently in a prologue for "The Toll Gate" during the recent showing of this picture at the Regent theatre, Rome, N. Y.

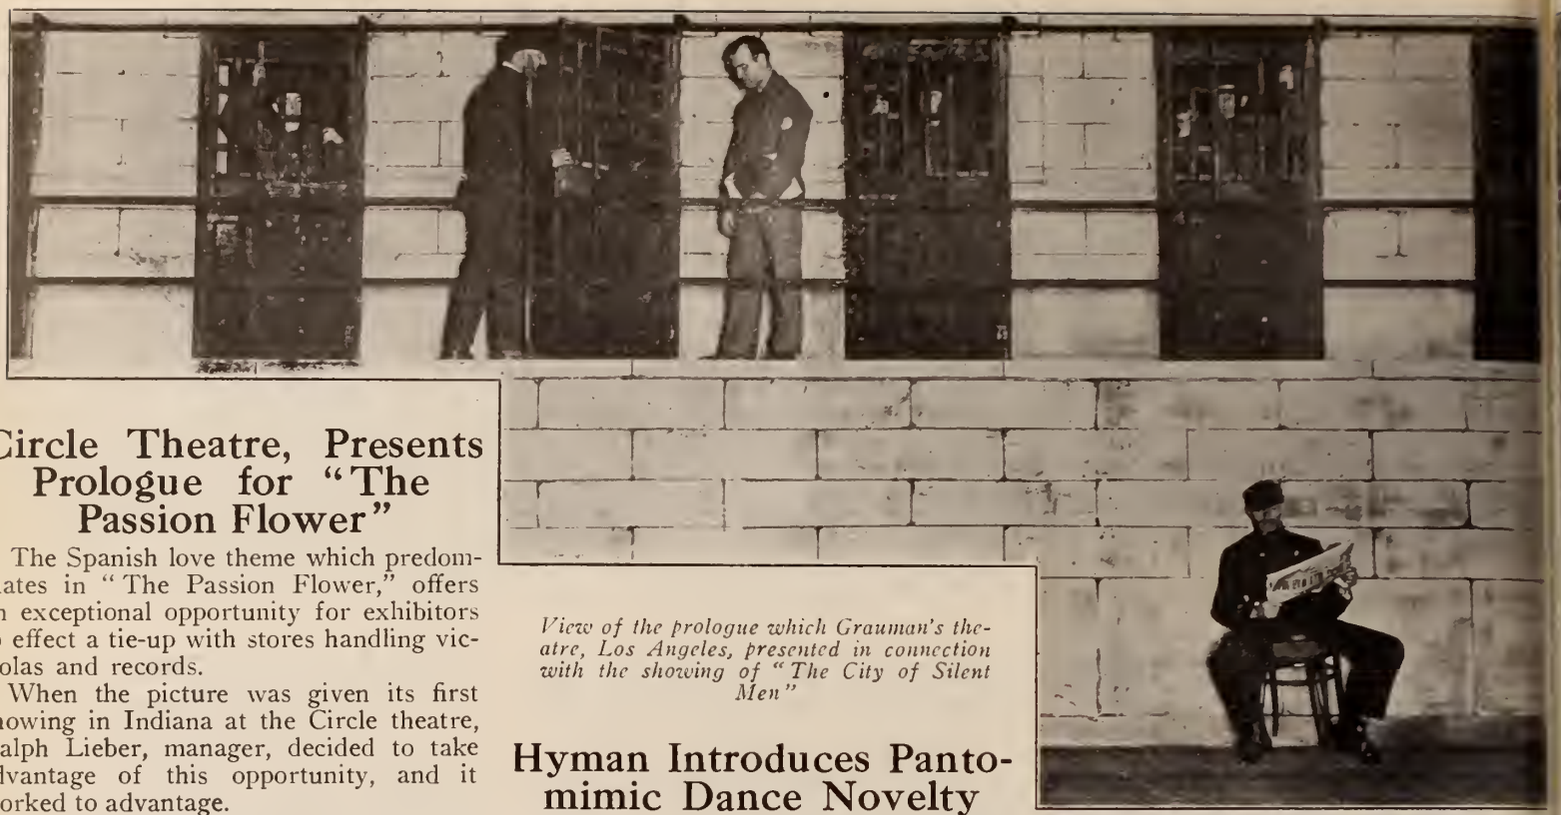
As nearly as possible he reproduced a scene from the picture. A mountain exterior scene was used with a specially constructed cabin and a log gate across the center of the road. The two horses mounted were on either side the gate, making a tableau of the crucial scene of the story. The orchestra played appropriate music. The audience took to this method of ushering in the picture and greeted each presentation with applause. It brought the theatre word-of-mouth advertising.

Chaplin Imitators Parade at Shreveport

The good old reliable Charlie Chaplin imitation stunt in which thirty Charlie Chaplin and Jackie Coogan impersonators paraded the streets has been used with the usual success by H. L. Swain, manager of the Saenger theatre, Shreveport, Ala., in putting over "The Kid."



Mr. Swain sent his impersonators about the city singly and in consequence many phone calls came in asking when the parade was to be held.

Seventeen dollars in prizes were awarded to the best make-up artists and the newspapers carried front page stories about the stunt in several editions.

A double page of ads tieing up with "The Kid" was put over in conjunction with local merchants in which prizes were offered for the best answer to the question of "If you found 'the Kid' in an ash can what would you do?"

The Spanish love theme which predominates in "The Passion Flower," offers an exceptional opportunity for exhibitors to effect a tie-up with stores handling victrolas and records.

When the picture was given its first showing in Indiana at the Circle theatre, Ralph Lieber, manager, decided to take advantage of this opportunity, and it worked to advantage.

A huge drop was made to cover the back of the window and the walls were draped with red and yellow, giving a real Spanish atmosphere. The drop suggested an old Spanish homestead with roses and vines covering the exterior.

A classic dancer was hired for the week and she stood in the window throughout the day, playing Spanish records, which could be heard by the crowds on the street. Whenever sufficient people gathered in front of the window the dancer, Miss Lucille Fuller, who has appeared at the Circle in numerous prologues, would entertain them with a Spanish dance.

Miss Fuller has aided exhibitors throughout the state on numerous pictures, working both on the stage and in an exploitation way.

Hyman Introduces Pantomimic Dance Novelty

King Henry VIII added spice to the motion picture program at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre when Managing Director Edward L. Hyman contrived a minute-and-a-half pantomime dance novelty in which he took characters from the period when comely shepherdesses ruled kings.

A quick flash of dancing before a red cyclorama was given, two girl dancers in fantastic Morris peasant costume presenting the popular Morris Dance. Side standing lamps added a deft color touch to the cyke. This dance consumed only a breathing space and was followed by a shepherd dance in which two girls as shepherdesses with crooks interpreted a shepherd dance. The drop was of a rural nature with sheep in the far background.

Grauman Presents Prologue for Meighan Picture

Probably the most realistic and convincing introduction ever given a picture in Los Angeles was staged by Sid Grauman at his Million Dollar theatre during the week of April 10 when he erected on the Grauman stage an enormous scene depicting some of the inside atmosphere of Sing Sing prison.

The scene was an exact duplicate of the doors to the prison cells where "lifers" are housed in the great New York bastile. The somber coloring of the prison's interior was carried out in every detail. When the prisoner was brought on the scene impersonating Thomas Meighan in the picture "The City of Silent Men," he was a young man who resembled Meighan very much.

When the prisoner arrived at his cell the other prisoners gave him a rather disquieting welcome. Then thinking better of their greeting they offered to sing a song of welcome, and this was cleverly staged with an aggregation of artists specially obtained for the scene by Sid Grauman.

When the gates had clanged and the doors had closed upon the inmates, the stage scene faded quietly into the title of the picture and the program proceeded with an acceleration brought about only by the realistic presentation in the prologue scene.

The musical score was prepared by Misha Guterson, conductor of the Grauman symphony orchestra, in such a way that it synchronized perfectly with the spirit of the play, especially the somber prison scenes. Other numbers on the program were arranged by Mr. Grauman with a view to harmonizing a perfect whole.

Boy Scouts Help Put Over "Bob Hampton"

Brooklyn Mark Strand Exploitation Gets Interest of Entire City

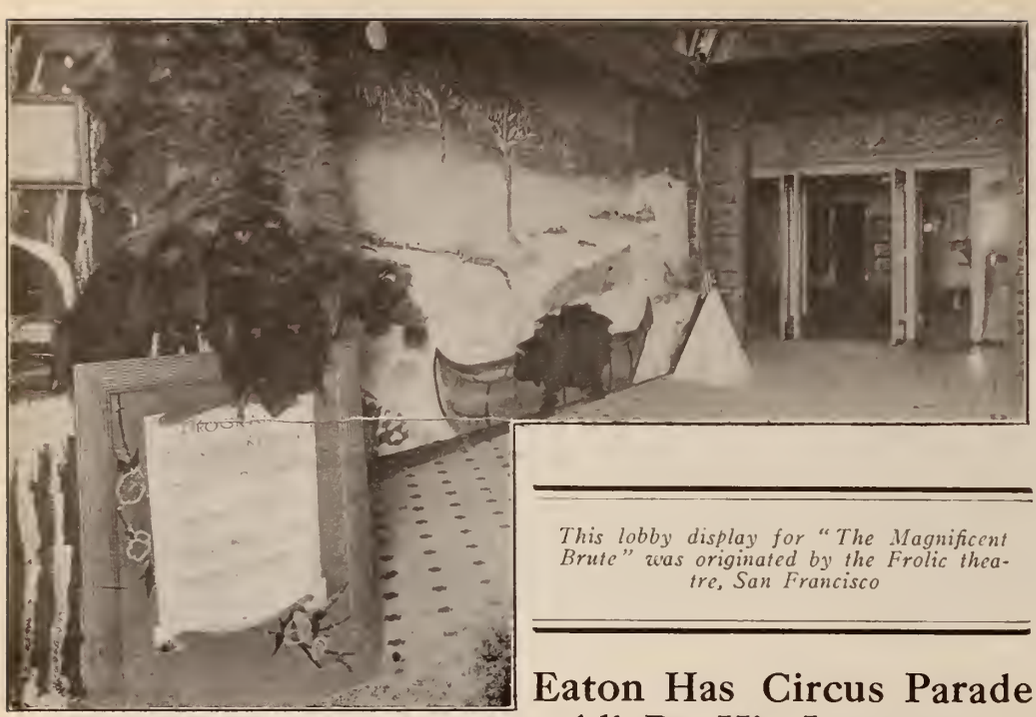
Two weeks before the picture opened at the Brooklyn Mark Strand, the press representative of that theatre lined up the chief executive of the Boy Scouts of America and explained the publicity possibilities in having the boy scouts greet Wesley Barry, enroll him as a scout in the best Brooklyn patrol. In addition to that, the stunt, it was explained, could be made nation-wide by presenting Wesley Barry with a letter from the head scout master of New York city and Brooklyn, carrying words of good-fellowship from the scouts in the East to their brothers in the West.

This suggestion was well received, and the individual scout patrols were instructed by a special letter to assemble outside of Prospect Park, Brooklyn the day "Bob Hampton of Placer" opened at the Strand, completely uniformed and carrying their scout banners. The ceremony was called for three o'clock, and at two-thirty it was estimated that over five thousand scouts were assembled in marching order.

A few minutes later, Wesley Barry rolled into the scene, sitting on the front seat of a big touring car, which had been filled at the Strand theatre with two local newspapermen, a cameraman from Kinograms, and the Strand press-man who brought his own motion picture camera to insure a screening of the event at the Strand.

Headed by Wesley Barry, riding in the auto, which was decorated with announcement streamers for "Bob Hampton," the boy scouts marched into the park. The rear of the parade was brought up by the six Indians, who, like everyone else, were carrying banners which stated that they had come all the way from Glacier National Park to appear at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre.



In the park Wesley was commissioned into the scout service and was given a letter to deliver to the scout master of Los Angeles.

The minute the ceremony was over, the six Blackfeet Indians began a song to tom-tom accompaniment which got a reciprocal yell from the boy scouts. While the yelling was going on, the Brooklyn Mark Strand party bundled the Indians into a taxi and got back to the theatre.

This stunt was capitalized to the utmost. Before it was pulled, announcements were made in all the papers that film news reporters would photograph the scene, and the pictures would be shown at the Strand. While the crowd was gathered in the park over ten thousand handbills were distributed by boy scouts detailed to give one to everybody in sight. The local boy scout weekly carried a story, every one of the five thousand scouts was a walking twenty-four sheet, and their parents were probably just as interested. The total cost of the stunt for the Brooklyn Strand will not be over five or ten dollars, and figuring the publicity as display advertising, at the usual newspaper rates, Hyman can show a net profit of over one thousand per cent.

Strand Lobby Display Contradicts the Weather

"Midsummer Madness" played a second-run engagement at the Strand theatre, Atlanta, on the first three days of an unprecedented cold snap. Spring suits, straw hats and gingham gowns had given place to overcoats, furs, and blue noses; everybody was growling about "the funny weather for this time of the year"—and on the opening day of the picture's engagement at the Strand, the lobby scored, by very reason of its marked contrast to the weather.

A lattice-work of tiny white enameled laths had been built over the entire front of the theatre, giving the appearance of a pretty little summer house. Over this lattice work had been twined great clusters of purple wistaria, with its glossy green leaves—artificial flowers, but remarkably real and vivid looking.

About the center of the lobby, a white-painted bench, in imitation of marble had been placed, and seated on this white bench, were two cut-outs from a twenty-four sheet—Conrad Nagel and Lois Wilson. The cut-out showed Miss Wilson in an evening gown, with Nagel in evening clothes—and they were wrapped in each other's arms—while a luscious harvest moon peeped over a big white urn of growing plants, bathing them in its soft, warm-looking glow.

The whole effect of midsummer and young love was so vivid and realistic that it would have made an impression, even in August; but early in May, with everybody growling about the sudden "cold snap," it had all the tingle and excitement of an electric shock. Tall white French baskets of flowers placed at intervals about the lobby heightened the effect—and Mr. Walsh, the house manager, was kept busy accepting praise and congratulations all week.

Eaton Has Circus Parade All By His Lonesome

Noon-day shoppers in Kansas City last Friday halted in surprise and wondered if a circus could have come to town without their knowledge of the fact. Regulation circus animal cages were being drawn down the street and the procession had all the earmarks of a "circus day" event. But, a glance at the large lettered posters on the sides of the cages explained everything—"Miracles of the Jungle" at the Victor theatre.

S. N. Eaton, by a little inexpensive exploitation, won the curiosity of many a "dyed-in-the-wool" movie fan, who ordinarily would pass up a serial of the "thriller" type. Mr. Eaton drew a capacity house during the three days of the picture. Some lions, tigers and leopards were obtained at a local zoo, along with circus cages. These, with a set of chimes to create a little noise, constituted the "personnel" of the parade.

Deardourff's Campaign for "Madonnas and Men"

Small wonder that "Madonnas and Men" made a clean up in Lima, Ohio, last week, where it played at the Sigma theatre, for a person had to be either blind or deaf not to have been aroused to curiosity by the extensive and elaborate advertising campaign that Manager C. C. Deardourff of the Sigma theatre prepared for it.

Ten days before the playing date, Deardourff ran a succession of teaser ads in the Lima newspapers. This was followed by the use of 150 one-sheets, 24 sheets window cards, street car hangers, and a big half page spread in the paper on the opening Sunday. Eight store windows in the shopping section of Lima carried paintings and cut-out displays from "Madonnas and Men."

But the big punch of the campaign was the chariot driven all about town by a driver in full Roman regalia. This outfit created a veritable sensation.

Not content with outside advertising, Deardourff also used his lobby advantageously. All around the marquee he hung circular cut-outs which attracted attention. And over the marquee, he had an elaborate set made, expressive of the picture. The display was favorably commented upon by everyone, and created a lot of mouth-to-mouth advertising.

Moore Uses Full Page Display on "The Kid"

Univeasal Exploiter Stages Some Good Stuff

One of the characterizations played by Miss Dean, in the picture, is that of "the London Flame," a popular and notorious actress whose penchant is gaudy clothes and an elaborate, flaming hat of red ostrich feathers.

This flamboyant character was reproduced with colorful exactitude. In cooperation with the management of the Liberty theatre, the exploitation man obtained the services of a young woman, who, dressed in the ornate hat heretofore described, and wearing a gown of rich purple, strolled through the busiest streets of Kansas City and through all the big stores, hotels and restaurants.

Following her at several yards was a small boy distributing cards announcing the fact she was "The London Flame," as portrayed by Priscilla Dean in "Reputation," and giving information as to the theatre and play-date.

"The London Flame" made a hit in Kansas City. Crowds followed her and congregated around her when she stopped. More than fifty persons followed her through the lobby of the Baltimore Hotel on the Saturday afternoon before the opening.

The exploitation campaign in Kansas City for "Reputation" also profited greatly by a tie-up with a local restaurant.

"Twilight Baby" Stunt Gets Atlanta's Attention

EVERYBODY in town knew it when George Schmidt, of the Alamo No. 2 theatre, played "A Twilight Baby." Or if they didn't know it was because they stayed home during the three day run.

First of all, the arched dome of the Alamo is very tall indeed—yet across its very top, for all the world to see, was a huge yellow banner, lettered in green, reading "Have you ever seen 'A Twilight Baby?'" Leading from the banner, and pointing down into the lobby of the theatre, was a jagged yellow arrow, flash of lighting-like, also lettered in green, reading "Then, take a look." The tip of the arrow came to rest over a baby-carriage, all white wicker, and fluffy ribbons. The top of the carriage was raised, so that it was necessary for one to go close, stoop, and peep under it. Sounds like a rather undignified proceeding—but you would be surprised to see how delightfully informal and undignified Atlanta people were that day.

And after you looked under the hood, you saw a life-sized baby-doll, in the finest of lacy, frilly clothes, resting comfortably in a froth of downy baby-pillows.

Flanking the carriage on either side were tall yellow cards, mounted, lettered in green. One was headed, "A Twilight Baby's Platform," the other "A Twilight Baby's Mission in Life." Under the former were lines from the "Better Babies" campaign literature, some rather "snappy" phrases from the sub-titles of the picture. "A Twilight Baby's Mission in Life," according to the card, was "To make the country safe for sweethearts. To furnish a reason for moonlight, a country lane and the fragrance of flowers," and so on. Some of these lines were original, each card carrying fourteen lines, as the "Fourteen Points," and some of them were suggested by titles from the picture.

The lobby was distinctly colorful, and the exploitation was successful from every angle.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 220 SO. STATE ST.

The American Film Company has disposed of the rights for Northern Illinois and Northern Indiana on its series of ten reconstructed two reel western pictures, to the Blackstone Features of Chicago. The Crescent Film Company, of Indianapolis, has taken over the rights to the series for the balance of Indiana. Frank Borzage, Jack Richardson and William Stowell are featured in these two reelers.

Selected Films Exchange has taken over the state rights on "The Hope Diamond Mystery," Howells Sales Company, Inc., big serial, and will market this spectacular picture in Illinois and Indiana.

W. D. Burford, secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois, and Joe Hopp, have returned from Washington, where they attended the meeting of the executive committee of national organization. Mr. Burford reports a splendid meeting and a large amount of business gotten through. One of the important matters decided upon was the change in the date of the national convention at Minneapolis to June 27, 28th and 29th.

H. J. Reynolds, president of the Renco Film Company, was in Chicago this week. Mr. Reynolds is making a tour of the key cities in connection with the exploitation of "Lavender And Old Lace." After a few days spent in New York he will return to the coast where he states he expects to resume production. It is his opinion that the present lull in production activities will cause a decided scarcity of feature pictures of merit during the Fall and early Winter and believes that producers should take steps to see that exhibitors are supplied with adequate high-class productions.

Larry Semon in his new Vitagraph comedy, "The Bakery"

Wanda Hawley, T. Roy Barnes and Walter Hiers in Realart's "A Kiss in Time," Miss Hawley's new feature

Chicago's first opportunity to see "Deception" was at the Drake Hotel last week, where this spectacular imported feature was shown under the auspices and for the benefit of the Service League For The Handicapped. A large committee of Chicago's leading society women acted as patronesses, and the ball room of the Drake was filled to capacity with an audience which paid five dollars a seat, excluding war tax, and the picture made a decided hit.

Dorothy Herman, widely known to Chicago exhibitors as booker at Universal Exchange, where she has held the position for several years, has left for California, where she will also be employed by Universal. She is accompanied by her sister, Ray Herman, and both of them were recipients of handsome gifts from the staff before departing.

A large number of theatres in Chicago and surrounding territory, including many of the chain houses, have cut down their orchestras for the Summer and many also have disposed entirely with orchestras for the hot season, and are getting along with organ music. The torrid weather the early part of the week had a bad effect on the attendance, as was to be expected, and exhibitors generally report very poor business. They, however, expect to see an improvement after the crowds become accustomed to real Summer temperature.

W. D. Russell, of Russell's Productions, is pleased by reports received by him from the coast studios of his concern that the fifteen episode serial now being made, is progressing rapidly and that five episodes will be fully completed in less than six weeks from date. This serial, which he describes as a really big production, is being made at the Russell and Russell Studios on Sunset Blvd., Hollywood.

Manager Bob Lucas, of Robertson-Cole, reports that the approach of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight is creating a strong demand for "The Wonder Man," the feature starring the French battler, and that his salesmen are meeting with great success in booking this picture. From the reports so far he hopes that a Chicago salesman will win one of the two prizes offered by Robertson-Cole for the largest total business on this features, and will have the privilege of seeing the Frenchman battle Dempsey for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Ed Laemmle, who, since his return from Borneo, where he filmed the widely exploited cannibal pictures, has been directing two-reel westerns for Universal, is vacationing in Chicago. He expects to return to the coast within a week, where, he states, he will direct special feature pictures for Universal.

Harry Spanuth, although he has been conducting the Commonwealth Pictures Company Exchange only for a comparatively short time, already has lined up a large number of feature releases and short subject series. The first of the features, which he is releasing in this territory is "You Will Find It Everywhere," featuring Catherine Calvert and Herbert Rollinson based on the Saturday Evening Post story, "The Gipson Upright," which will open at the Ziegfeld theatre next week. Other features for which he has obtained the Illinois rights are "Daughter Of Eve;" two Norma Talmadge features, "Jeanette of the Chorus" and "A Daughter's Inheritance;" "World And The Women;" "Aching Hearts," with Catherine Calvert, and "His Enemy's Daughter." The short reel subjects include six Charlie Chaplin one reel cartoons, the Newlywed series of one reelers and Spanuth's Vod-A-Vil movies, which Commonwealth has been releasing for several years and others.

J. L. Friedburg to Make Comedy Series

Believing that a demand exists for clean comedies, Joseph L. Friedburg, well known in the film export field, has become a comedy producer. Mr. Friedburg, after considerable investigation of the market, will produce a series of high-class two-reel comedies on the order of those made by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew a few years ago.

To this end he has secured the services of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Raymond, who are typical of the characters established by the Drews. Mr. Raymond has had extensive experience in pictures.

Stories of the type of the Drew comedies are now being prepared and Mr. Friedburg expects to have his company start shooting in a few weeks. Members of the former Drew organization will comprise the personnel of the new comedy productions, which will be known as the Mr. and Mrs. Jack Raymond Comedies.

Mr. Friedburg also will announce a releasing medium shortly.

European Film World Active—Current News Views

THE motion picture as the recorder of history is fast becoming the recognized essential of modern times and nowhere maybe more than in France is greater care taken to see that the records of present-day events are preserved for posterity through the medium of the screen. The most striking example of this method of writing down history was undoubtedly the filming of the great Allied victory procession under the Arc of Triumph in Paris and along the luxurious avenue of the Champs Elysees. Never shall I forget the thrill I experienced as I caught sight of the first ranks of Uncle Sam's contingent as they emerged from beneath the great Arch, big, stalwart figures in khaki and shining helmets, marching with the perfect rhythm and precision of the United States infantryman, magnificent specimens of youth and strength, typical of the great land which sent them forth to do battle in its cause! From the pinnacle where I viewed the great pageant, the splendid bearing of these American troops called forth a spontaneous burst of admiration from the watchers, hardly any of whom had ever seen the land from which they came. To one who had but recently worn the same uniform the spectacle was doubly thrilling, and I recall wondering at the effect which such a picture would be likely to have on the other side when it should be reproduced on the screen, but I would be still more curious to see the effect it would produce on later generations to whom the great war will be just history. Before these lines appear in print France will have spanned the history of a century by means of the motion picture. On the 28th of this month, to the sound of 101 guns fired simultaneously in Paris and St. Helena, there was ushered in the great national celebrations in honor of the 100th anniversary of Napoleon's death, and among the items on the official program was the first showing of the picture entitled "The Agony of the Eagles," a series of views of events in the life of the great soldier, reproduced photographically and forming a photoplay that is as interesting as it is technically perfect and historically correct. This film, of which mention has already been made, represents something unique in the art of the motion picture. It may be regarded as an historical drama, based on actual events, and in which the greatest care has been taken to obtain the correct atmosphere by strict attention to detail in the matter of scenes and properties. The great scenes from which the picture derives its name, for example, were actually taken at Fontainebleau Castle, with special permission of the government. The scene depicting Napoleon emerging from the castle and descending the famous circular stairway to the court below, where his bodyguard of veterans with their battle-scarred "eagles" or standards were drawn up to bid a last farewell to their imperial master, is a wonderfully realistic piece of work. The same may be said of the other scenes taken within the castle, where Napoleon held his court and where the Napoleonic splendor shone at its brightest. The exact reproduction of the costumes and uniforms in this picture will not fail to be noticed as one of the most striking characteristics of the producer's work. At a recent visit to Fontainebleau I was assured by one of the former guides, a veteran of the Franco-Prussian War who knows his Napoleonic history backwards, that the scenes he witnessed while the film was being taken were something he had never thought to be able to see. He might have been transported back to the Emperor's days so realistic did everything appear. The picture contains in addition scenes from the military life of Napoleon, including a magnificent charge at the battle of Wagram, the retreat from Russia, the departure for St. Helena and the Emperor's death. As previously stated, the role of Napoleon is played by the famous French actor, Severin Mars. The film is founded on a novel of the period by Georges D'Esparbès and produced by Bernard Deschamps. America will not fail, I feel safe in predicting, to reserve a warm place for this example of French motion picture progress when it is released there, as assuredly it will be before long.

The French government does not, however, confine its film repertoire to pageants and displays. It may surprise many to learn that with praiseworthy method and consistency most of the events comprising present-day history are being carefully preserved by the motion picture camera. Even such occurrences as the gloomy and wearisome meetings of such bodies as the League of Nations and the Reparations Commission are frequently filmed and docketed for preservation in the archives of the state.

Considerable quantities of ink have been spilt latterly around the proposal to save the Paris State Opera from financial ruin by introducing motion picture programs into its repertoire. All kinds of schemes have been suggested and numerous reports propagated, including one to the effect that Adolf Zukor was negotiating for the contract to produce films in the famous house. The latest rumor, which has yet to receive official confirmation, is that a French company has been formed to purchase what are termed "great lyrical films" whose subjects would be worthy of the splendid traditions of the national Temple of Music, and which could be accompanied by all that is best in the world's musical repertoire. These films would be known exclusively as "Opera Films" and already the famous work of Abel Gance, "J'accuse," is being mentioned as one of the first that could be projected on the future screen of the Paris Opera. Should the proposal be adopted there is no doubt that for the production of these "lyrical screen works" the producers would have placed at their disposal the entire collection of costumes, scenery and effects which comprise the property of the Opera.

The interest of the French press in the motion picture is daily becoming more apparent. There is scarcely a newspaper now that does not devote space to film news, and the reading matter that is provided is daily growing brighter and more detailed. While most of the large Paris dailies have long had their own film news items, the Journal, one of the greatest has for various reasons been content with occasional and spasmodic accounts of motion picture events. From now on, though, the Journal will devote a special weekly column to film news, with announcements and discussions of artists and films and anything relating to the art and the industry of the motion picture. In making this announcement, the Journal recalls that before the war when paper was more plentiful and less prohibitive in price, it devoted an entire page to the film and its progress and was the first of all the French press to recognize and grasp the importance and the development of the idustry. Today, states the Journal, the premières of motion pictures should be reported and impartially criticised just as carefully as the premières of the legitimate theatre. And suiting the action to the word the Journal straightway inaugurates its renewed service by stating that during three days this month over 70,000 feet of American film have been offered to French exhibitors against only 35,000 feet of French film. The French production, mourns the Journal, is thus the victim of foreign competition. But, it might have added, the public seems pretty well satisfied and after all it is the public which pays!

The highly important problem of providing suitable music for films, which has been so consistently advocated in America by the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, has long been occupying the attention of French exhibitors, who realize the tremendous advantage that a good and appropriate musical program means from a box office point of view. It is well known that many of the better class picture theatres of Paris beguile the same patrons week after week as much by the choice of their musical numbers as by the actual films, which only too frequently are of ancient vintage and either painfully dull or supremely stupid. In the choice of pictures the French exhibitor has very little leeway, owing to the ridiculous bloc system of bookings which prevails in France, and by which the same old-timers are dumped arbitrarily by the agencies on all theatres at the same time. The system satisfies unquestionably the agencies, enabling them to get rid of any kind of film, no matter what its quality or its date, but it lacks interest for the individual exhibitor, especially if he is enterprising and would like to put out something different from his competitors to stir the appetite of a jaded public rendered indifferent by the same posters and billboards all along the boulevards. But no exhibitor should be excused for failing to provide a bright and attractive musical program with which to embellish and even aid in the interpretation of his pictures by creating the necessary atmosphere.

It is not often that the venerable and illustrious French pioneer of the motion picture, Charles Pathe, rushes into print, but when he does he usually says something worth while. His most recent utterance was made last week in the pages of a bright and fashionable Paris weekly devoted especially to the arts. "The motion picture," he declares, "will become the theatre, the newspaper and the school of the future." And so convinced is he of the future development of the screen that he affirms his belief that the motion picture will rapidly be recognized as the universal language, ousting for the masses the printer's art, which has until now been confined to the world of culture. As a means of educating and instructing children, he states, the motion picture has revolutionized conditions in our schools. The modern child becomes familiar with the habits and conditions of the nations of the world at an age when its parents were struggling along laboriously with the alphabet and the rule of three, and its young and impressionable brain retains easily and without effort a vast store of facts and ideas which are never afterwards effaced. The motion picture as the universal educator, and as the disseminator of ideas and knowledge throughout the world, states Pathe, may be compared to the printing machine in the same way that the modern railroad, the automobile and the aeroplane are compared to the old-time horse-drawn coach as a means of transport.

The Association known as the French Syndicated Film Directors is getting after the government for the maintenance and establishment of their rights and dues. At a recent meeting at which 300 of their members were present a long list of resolutions were adopted in the interest and defense of the French motion picture industry in general, and of the producers and exhibitors in particular. Among these vindications which are to be brought to the notice of the government by their accredited parliamentary representatives whenever occasion presents, the following may be noticed: Equal rights and privileges as a properly constituted body in the state; a fairer system of taxation; suppression of all absues and taxes tending to retard the film industry; recognition by the government of the motion picture theatre as a part of the legitimate theatre whose special privileges it should share; reduction of the tariff imposed for the maintenance of public order in picture theatres and the suppression of the fire-brigade service; organization of benevolent societies for the benefit of members of the profession, etc. In the event of the government refusing to consider the revised system of taxation which has been drawn up with the approval of the majority of the industry, the members again threaten the country with the closing down of the theatres until satisfaction is given them.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

"Snowblind" Finds Favor with N. Y. Critics

Goldwyn's latest released Reginald Barker Production—the firm's second adaptation of a Katherine Newlin Burt novel to the screen—"Snowblind," had its first New York showing at the Capitol Theatre this week. Reviewers on the New York daily press found many excellent qualities about the story, the direction and the acting.

The New York American said, among other things, "Snowblind," like most of the Goldwyn productions, brings sturdy plot and splendid acting to the screen. It is a story that holds one's interest. The acting is fine." The Herald: "Patrons are bound to like Reginald Barker's latest photodrama." The Times: "Has a story of dramatic possibilities. Good frozen-north photograph, and the acting for the most part is good."

Paramount Sales Class Opens June 13th

From more than 650 applicants, S. R. Kent, general manager of distribution of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and Fred F. Creswell have selected forty men who will be students in the next Paramount Sales School which will open the morning of June 13 in the Paramount Home office for a four-week course. All of the forty students have been chosen from outside the ranks of the Famous Players-Lasky organization.

Washburn Appears in Person at Circle

Bryant Washburn, star of the Associated Exhibitors' production, "The Road to London," is making a personal appearance this week at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, where the picture is being put on for a pre-release showing. Early reports indicate that records are being smashed by this combination of a star's personal appearance at the first public showing of his picture.

Universal Shaping Policies

Specials to Be Increased; Marie Prevost and Hoot Gibson Starred

THE recent conference of Universal's sales managers at Chicago was made the occasion of an interchange of ideas on the part of the field forces and the representatives of the exchange offices. These ideas have been tabulated and are now being considered by Carl Laemmle, H. M. Berman, P. D. Cochrane and Irving Tholberg, in a series of daily conferences at the Universal headquarters in New York. It has been definitely settled that the policy of 52 special attractions a year will be added to for another year. The exchange managers at their Chicago meeting pledged themselves to a 20 per cent. increase in the special attraction business on the new Universal schedule.

It is announced that there will be several changes next year in the list of special attraction stars. While negotiations are not entirely completed ,two new stars who will be on the special attraction program have already been announced. They are Marie Prevost and Hoot Gibson. Miss Prevost has signed a long-term contract and has left for the West to begin work on "The Butterfly," by Percival Wilde.

Hoot Gibson's first feature production will be "The Mascotte of the Three Star," written in novel form by J. Allen Dunn. Jack Ford will be the director, and the supporting cast will include. William Robert Daly, J. Farrell MacDonald, Francis Ford, Clara Horton, Dorothy Wolbert, Buck Conners, Charles Newton, Jim Corey, Ed Jones and Byron Munson.

"Rider of King Log" Is Shown in Boston

The Fenway Theatre in Boston was a scene of one of the most notable gatherings ever brought together in a Massachusetts city to attend a motion picture show on Wednesday of last week, when a private showing of the Associated Exhibitors production. "The Rider of the King Log" was held. At the conclusion of the entertainment the picture is reported to have met with an unusual display of condemnation. According to General-Manager Williamson of the Holman Day Productions, the picture was actually applauded for more than twelve minutes.

"The First Born" Given Premiere on Coast

"The First Born," with Sessue Hayakawa in the star role of "Chan Wang," from the play by Francis Powers, directed by Colin Campbell, played first run in Los Angeles in the Ambassador Theatre, which is located in the Ambassador Hotel, the new $2,000,000 hostelry built only a short time ago, in the high-class residential section of that city.

Letters Commend Rothacker Service

W. A. Carlson, of the Chicago Carlson Studios, wrote the following letter in regards to the commercial developing and printing department of the Rothacker Film Company:

"I want to thank you for your speedy service in developing our negative and giving us a print at one o'clock the same day it was delivered to you, thus saving "The Gumps" from falling down on their release date.

The new Rothacker-Aller Laboratories in Los Angeles were commended by Donald J. Bell, an authority on laboratory technique, in the following language:

"This laboratory is a monument to intelligent effort, and throughout there is evidence of Rothacker thorough attention to details and scientific research."

The expression of this opinion followed a visit to the Rothacker-Aller Laboratories by Mr. Bell.

Claims Beat for Kinograms News Service

While many of the news-reel services were awaiting the arrival of the Crown Prince of Japan at London, the Paris Kinograms office rushed representatives to Gibraltar where the visitor was scheduled to make his initial landing in Europe. Result, declares a statement from the Educational headquarters, was that Kinograms was able to show on the screen the prince's arrival at the Mediterranean port and the attending ceremonies at a time when other competing news-service agencies were just getting their first camera views of the royal visitor.

Two Ass'd Exhibitors' Franchises Bought

Announcement is made by the executive committee of the Associated Exhibitors that Eddie Horn, Toledo, Ohio, has acquired the Associated franchise for the Temple Theatre in that city, assuring himself first run on all Associated products.

Another franchise announcement of importance made this week by the Associated Executive Committee is the acceptance of the application of James Beatty for Associated franchise in San Jose and Fresno, California. Mr. Beatty will use the Associated franchise for his Liberty theatre at Fresno and the Liberty and Jose theatres in San Jose. His franchise also will cover his new theatre, the American, now being erected in San Jose.

Welfare League Prolongs Film's Run

An unusual compliment was payed to Vitagraph's "The Heart of Maryland" when the executive committee of the Women's Welfare, League of Washington, D. C. selected this picture as the main attraction at Tom Moore's Garden theatre during the two weeks that the theatre is being run for the benefit of the league. It was originally planned to run "The Heart of Maryland" or some other picture for one week's time.

Not only did the committee of prominent women decide that the picture was an unusually worth while production, but Mr. Moore himself stated that his executive staff considered this picture one that the public would appreciate and one that should have full support.

Hodkinson Caption Was Incorrectly Stated

In the May 28th issue of the NEWS, on page 3323, a photograph of the new Irvin V. Willat studio is shown. The caption states incorrectly that the group in the photograph are watching the filming of scenes for the "Ave Maria." The production which the spectators are interested in is Irvin V. Willat's "The Face of the World," from Johan Bojer's story. Both these subjects are scheduled for release by Hodkinson.

Cosmopolitan Prod. Entertains

Fifty N. Y. Exhibitors Visit Company's Studio

FIFTY exhibitors of New York City, with their wives and friends, recently visited the International Film Studios at 127th Street and Second Avenue to see Cosmopolitan Productions in the making. The exhibitors are all members of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce and were marshalled by William Brandt, president of that organization.

An invitation was extended to the exhibitors by Cosmopolitan Production because it was felt that the men who exhibit pictures would be interested in seeing them made. On their arrival at the studios the guests were ushered into one of the projection rooms where "The Woman God Changed," the latest Cosmopolitan Production, was shown. This picture, directed by Robert G. Vignola, was adapted by Doty Hobart from the story by Donn Byrne.

The unusual quality of the picture brought forth commendation from the guests. After seeing "The Woman God Changed" they assured executives of International Film Service Co. that the picture was assured of great success wherever it is shown.

After the screening the guests were escorted to the stage floor where they were grouped in a setting and their photograph was taken. After the still cameraman was finished a motion picture machine was set up and the group was "shot" in animated discussion.

Everyone was eager to see motion pictures made so the guests were taken to a set where Frank Borzage was directing Seena Owen and Matt Moore in "Back Pay," a Fannie Hurst story. Mr. Borzage was introduced as the director of "Humoresque" and was vigorously applauded.

The party was taken all over the studios to see the carpenter and modeling shops, the cutting rooms, the wardrobe and the technical department. The exhibitors expressed great surprise at the completeness of the studios, the equipment and the system with which everything was run.

A. P. to Hold Big Sales Drive

PLANS for the launching of a sales drive have just been completed by General Manager Al Lichtman of Associated Producers, Inc. This drive, which in scope of quality of pictures offered and territory embraced is of unusual proportions, is scheduled to begin June 12 and continue for a full week. Covering the entire United States and Canada, it includes in its operations every branch office maintained by Associated Producers, Inc., throughout this country and the dominion.

Advices received by Mr. Lichtman at the Home Office in New York are said to indicate that the various branch managers and their staffs are on their toes waiting for the send-off signal.

Home-office officials express the opinion that some new sales records will be hung up by the various Associated Producers exchanges.

Backing up the sales forces in their drive will be such productions as "I Am Guilty," a J. Parker Read, Jr., production, featuring Louise Glaum, already released; "Home Talent," a Mack Sennett special released May 22; "Mother O' Mine," a Thomas H. Ince production released June 5; "A Broken Doll," an Allan Dwan production, released June 12; "The Foolish Matrons," a Maurice Tourneur production with an all-star cast, released June 19; "The Ten Dollar Raise," a J. L. Frothingham production, released June 26; and two two-reel Mack Sennett comedies, "Made In The Kitchen," and "She Sighed By The Seaside."

"These productions represent a high standard of artistic and commercial values," said Mr. Lichtman. "Each one is a powerful box-office attraction and I consider it a distinct privilege to be able to offer such unusual pictures to discriminating exhibitors. Aside from their artistic quality these pictures have remarkable exploitation angles and possibilities for novelties in stage presentation, giving the live exhibitor opportunities for exploiting these pictures along original lines.

"Consider J. Parker Read's 'I am Guilty,' starring Louise Glaum. This picture is one of the best that Miss Glaum has ever appeared in and shows a new phase of her distinctive talent. Thomas H. Ince's 'Mother O' Mine' is a tremendous subject, big and fine in its treatment and poignant in its human qualities.

"Mack Sennett's 'Home Talent' is a sure-fire attraction, a comedy that typifies the genius of this greatest of all comedy makers. 'The Broken Doll,' an Allan Dwan production, is representative of this producer's genius for combining artistic excellence with commercial re-

Strong Supporting Cast in "Peter Ibbetson"

Paramount announces a strong array of players for the supporting cast of "Peter Ibbetson," in which Wallace Reid and Elsie Ferguson play the stellar roles. The picture has already been started at Paramount's Eastern studio under the direction of George Fitzmaurice. Elliott Dexter, Montagu Love, George Fawcett, and Paul McAllister play the principal male roles outside the title part, which Reid will have. The two feminine parts next in prominence to the "Duchess of Towers," which Miss Ferguson will do, will be played by Miss Barbara Dean and Miss Vivian Oakland.

"Man of the Forest" Is Booked for "Grey Week"

The newest booking on "The Man of the Forest," the Benjamin B. Hampton-Zane Grey production which is being released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is the Circle theatre of Indianapolis, which will show the picture during Zane Grey Weew.

Harper Brothers, Grossett and Dunlap and the Curtis Publishing Company are co-operating in Zane Grey Week. Altogether more than one hundred theatres will show "The Man of the Forest" during this special drive.

No Subtitles in Hugo Ballin Production

Hugo Ballin, who is making pictures for Hodkinson release, has taken a radical step in the making of his newest picture, tentatively titled "Ave Maria," which will shortly be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Mr. Ballin has produced a picture of approximately seven thousand feet without a single subtitle from beginning to end. The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation privately viewed "Ave Maria" and each and every official of the organization is enthusiastic in his praise of it.

Robert Gordon Engaged for "The Rosary"

Robert Gordon has been engaged for the leading role in "The Rosary," under the direction of Jerome Storm, and has departed for Los Angeles, where he will start working in the picture immediately upon his arrival. It will be Mr. Gordon's first work in a West Coast studio in almost three years, having been under contract for one year for J. Stuart Blackton productions, followed by a number of pictures of independent production.

T. L. Tally Closes for Hodkinson Releases

Messrs. Vogel and Mechan, Hodkinson district managers on the West Coast, have closed a deal with T. L. Tally under the terms of which Hodkinson-released productions will have a first run showing at Tally's Broadway theatre, Los Angeles, Cal. The first picture to be shown will be "The Man of the Forest," which opens there on May 28 for a two weeks' engagement.

Gets Exclusive Views of 23d Reg. Review

AN exceptional news feature of the Number 67 issue of Fox News, Vol. 2, are pictures of President Harding reviewing the 23rd Regiment at its armory in Brooklyn last week. This review was filmed exclusively by the Fox News, the Fox home office declares, and marks the first time that any news reels has secured exclusive pictures of the President.

The picture turned out very well, due to the arrangements made by the Fox News staff for their taking. Ten 7-arc lamps, four huge spots and the entire studio equipment were transported to the armory, which is nearly as large as Madison Square Garden. With this added illumination the big armory was made as bright as day, and is declared to have drawn from President Harding a pleasing comment on the arrangements. Six cameramen shot the pictures, and the news reel reveals that the historic incident has been faithfully preserved.

Associated Producers' Service Is Lauded

The policy of "service to the exhibitor" inaugurated by General Manager Al Lichtman of Associated Producers, Inc., is beginning to bear fruit, states that company. F. C. Bonistall, manager of the Pittsburgh office of Associated Producers, Inc., received a letter from Otto C. Clinger, manager of the Main street theatre of Galeton, Pa., which speaks for itself. It follows herewith:

"I want to thank you very kindly for the nice print you sent of 'The Last of The Mohicans' for my use this week. It is certainly refreshing to be treated so nicely, especially since it was our first business dealing. Ordinarily I hesitate to deal with new accounts for the reason that, as a rule, they will send films that are in a deplorable condition."

First National Picture Changes House Policy

When a theatre which has not run a picture for more than one week during a period stretching over six years, suddenly finds an attraction that goes over so well despite present business conditions, that it decides to break its policy of six years and run the picture for two weeks, the incident is worth the careful attention of all exhibitors.

That is what happened in Cleveland, Ohio. The theatre was the Metropolitan. The picture, "Sowing the Wind," starring Anita Stewart, an Associated First National attraction.

Special interest is added to this run, by the fact that the Strand theatre, another one of Cleveland's big first run houses also ran the picture for two weeks simultaneously with the Metropolitan.

Novel Location Secured for Stewart Unit

Many of the scenes for Louis B. Mayer's next production for First National Release, titled "The Question of Honor," will be filmed in the Sierra Mountains sixty miles north of Belden, Cal. The reason for the selection of this location is the building at this point of a huge dam under the auspices of the state of California. The project will entail the expenditure of 25 million dollars. As the story of "The Question of Honor" centers around just such an enterprise permission was secured for the Anita Stewart company to film its scenes with this gigantic engineering project as the background.

Elsie Ferguson Favorite Star of Yale Seniors

In this year's annual poll of the seniors of Yale College, Elsie Ferguson, the Paramount star, was chosen the favorite actress of the day. The University took an active part in the birthday celebration of the Rialto theatre, New Haven, and the management, acting on the request of the students, booked Miss Ferguson's latest Paramount picture, "Sacred and Profane Love."

Big Scene Is Taken for "Wallingford" Film

George Randolph Chester, in company with Mrs. Chester, is preparing to start back East after having completed the final big scene for his special production, "The Son of Wallingford." This scene is declared to be one of the most mammoth ever attempted in any production, and it is predicted that it will set new standards in this respect. The scene, according to Vitagraph, shows a real lake of boiling oil, with the hero and the heroine of the story trapped in the center of it in a small boat. The scene is said to be a fascinating one to watch on the screen, and weeks were required for its preparation.

Sennett Seaside Comedy at Capitol

Mack Sennett's current two-reel comedy, "She Sighed By The Seaside," distributed by Associated Producers, Inc., proved a sensation at the Capitol Theatre, New York's largest playhouse, last week, according to an announcement from Associated Producers.

In the leading roles in "She Sighed By The Seaside," there are to be found Ben Turpin, James Finlayson, Charlie Conklin, "Tiny" Ward, Bert Roach, Marie Prevost, Charlotte Mineau, and all the dimpled beauties of the sea-going brigade known the world over as the Mack Sennett Bathing Beauties.

Houdini Producing New Feature Subject

Houdini has finished the interiors of his first picture for his own producing company, Houdini Picture Corporation, and has left New York to make exterior scenes.

The picture, which is being directed by Burton King, bears the working title of "The Far North." It is of special feature dimensions. Under the production program he has mapped out for himself, Houdini will produce four special features a year.

"Maurice Tourneur's 'The Foolish Matrons' upholds the remarkably high standard he set with 'The Last of the Mohicans.' Besides possessing a title of undoubted commercial value it is a perfect example of the highest form of motion picture art and any showman, no matter what local conditions may be, ought to effect a clean-up with this picture. 'The Ten Dollar Raise,' a J. L. Frothingham production, is a superior feature whose potentiality as a box-office winner should recommend it to every exhibitor. It is a comedy drama of every-day life and its appeal is universal because it deals with a subject closest to the heart of humanity. Sennett's two-reelers have proven value and deserve the best position on any bill.

Reinforced by such a line-up of pictures as these the week of June 12 should prove our banner week and I am looking forward to it with a great deal of anticipation."

New Alice Brady Picture

Star Seen as Immigrant Girl in "Land of Hope," a Realart Picture

ALICE BRADY in "The Land of Hope" is the billing for the Star Franchise production to follow "A Kiss In Time." Keeping in mind Miss Brady's interpretation of the role of an immigrant girl in her former stage success "Anna Ascends," Realart determined to depart from the society drama in which she has appeared recently and offer a series of productions which would give full scope to her great versatility.

In "The Land of Hope" Miss Brady appears as Marya Nisko, a young Polish immigrant who comes to America to wrest the fortune which her own country had withheld from her.

Frederick and Fannie Hatton and Robert Milton collaborated in the writing of "The Land of Hope" for Miss Brady and Fred Myton adapted it for the screen with the assistance of the Hattons.

E. H. Griffith, who directed "The Land of Hope," has also produced "Scrambled Wives" and "Three Women Who Loved Him."

The supporting cast includes such players as Jason Robards, a graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Art, who appeared in "Turn to the Right" and with Frank Bacon in "Lightnin'" and was last seen in "The Gilded Lily;" Ben Hendricks, Jr., who has a long stage career and has appeared as leading man in many successful productions; Schuyler Ladd, who accompanied Sir Herbert Tree on tour and played Daffydil in the "Yellow Jacket" and was seen also in "Nearly Married;" Larry Wheat, from "The College Widow," "You're in Love," "Oh Lady, Lady!", and others; Martha McGraw, Betty Carsdale, and Fuller Mellish.

Mary Anderson to Make Feature Series

MARY ANDERSON, who has completed her work in "Rip Van Winkle," has, it is announced, signed a contract to star in a new series of comedy-dramas for Spencer Productions, Inc., to be handled by Associated Photo-Plays, Inc.

Miss Anderson will star in six pictures for Spencer Productions, Inc., all of which will be based upon carefully selected stories and interpreted by a splendid cast.

Start New Pickford Picture

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" Will Be Most Lavish Film Star Has Made

AFTER four months of preparatory work, Mary Pickford has started production on her picture, "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Mary's film version of the famous Frances Hodgson Burnett story will be her fifth contribution for United Artists release and by far the most extravagant photoplay she has ever undertaken, it is announced. It is expected that she will be working well into the summer on this feature, and it is hoped that the production will be ready for its New York premiere the early part of September.

Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists Corporation, who has just returned from the Coast where he was in conference with Miss Pickford and Bennie Zeidman, her production manager, regarding an extensive advertising and selling campaign in connection with this feature, declares:

"I am sorry that the words 'Lavish,' 'stupendous' and the phrase 'no expense is being spared' have been used so often in describing picture sthat they are now trite, for it leaves me without suitable words to tell you about Miss Pickford's new play. All I can say is that this little wonder lady of the screen is spending more money and exercising more care on this producing than ever before—in fact, as much money as she has spent on several productions combined in the past. It can be referred to in all truth as a 'Million Dollar Picture,' and Miss Pickford's one dream is to make 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' a celluloid masterpiece."

Educational Release at Benefit Performance

Educational officials feel that a special compliment has been extended the Educational organization by the selection of one of its Christie comedy releases as one of the two attractions at a movie benefit show in Washington, given by the Lafayette Unit of the American Women's Legion.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding, wife of the President, headed the list of patronesses for the benefit, which was given at the Knickerbocker Theatre. The proceeds are to be used for the Lafayette Unit's work with soldiers.

"Miss Hobbs" Shown at Benefit Performance

Mrs. Warren G. Harding headed the list of patronesses for the benefit of the Lafayette Unit of the American Women's Legion which was recently held in Washington, D. C., at the Knickerbocker theatre, for the aid of the sick and disabled soldiers of the World War. The feature picture of the program was Realart's "Miss Hobbs" in which Wanda Hawley is starred.

"One a Minute" Is Due for Early Release

Final cutting and editing was commenced this week on "One a Minute," Douglas MacLean's next Thomas R. Ince comedy scheduled for Paramount release at an early date. Ince is in active charge of the work and is being assisted by Louise Milstone. "One a Minute" is a humorous satire on the patent medicine trade, adapted to the screen by Joseph Franklin Poland from the stage play of the same name by Fred Jackson. Marian DeBack is cast in the leading feminine role.

Victor Nurnberg with Reelcraft Pictures

Victor Nurnberg, familiarly known as "Vic," is now advertising and publicity director of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation. Mr. Nurnberg has been attached to the theatrical writing and publicity business for a number of years.

27 St. Louis Houses Run Sport Pictorials

The Arrow Film Corporation, in stressing the popularity and quality of their Sport Pictorial releases, announces this week that there are twenty-seven theatres in St. Louis running these one-reel subjects. These take in practically every first run theatre in that city and include all of the Paramount houses.

Robertson-Cole First Runs

Beban Picture in Kinema in Los Angeles; "Salvage" at California

AMONG the important bookings reported by Robertson-Cole this week on its pictures are "One Man in a Million," written and directed by George Beban, who plays the star role, in the Kinema theatre, Los Angeles, for a week run beginning May 21st. The Kinema is a first-run house of Gore Bros. and Sol Lesser's circuit, which also owns the First National franchise. Mr. Beban appears in person throughout the week.

"Salvage," a story of mother love, starring Pauline Frederick, and directed by Henry King, is booked to play at the California theatre, Los Angeles, the week beginning May 29. The California theatre is owned by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

New first run bookings in towns of more than 10,000 population reflect widespread exhibitor interest in Robertson-Cole super-productions, it is announced.. "If Women Only Knew," the J. W. Naulty and Gardner Hunting subject distributed by Robertson-Cole, has been booked for first run by the Drury Lane theatre of Detroit. "Good Women," one of the notable productions of the Gasnier series, has been booked for the initial run by the Strand theatre of Detroit, and the Rialto of Newark.

"What's A Wife Worth?" a Christy Cabanne special which has been widely heralded as one of the most powerful subjects ever produced by this enterprising young director, has been booked for first run by the Hurst Brothers of Reno, Nev., for their Grand theatre of that far-Western community, and by Ackerman and Harris for Loew's Hippodrome at San Jose.

New Sport Pictorials Ready for Release

THE second series of one reel Sport Pictorials which Arrow Film Corp. recently announced they had acquired, is now ready for release, according to a statement from Dr. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, this week.

The first of this series is titled "Modern Mariners," and is an interesting study of life at the Annapolis Naval Academy. The second release is titled "When Good Fellows Get Together," and it shows a day spent with the students of Dartmouth College on one of their snowshoe and skii hikes through the Green Mountains. The third "Make or Break," is a reel of actually hard fought contests by college athletes on track and field.

District Managers at Reelcraft Meeting

Among the Reelcraft district managers who attended the conference called by President R. C. Cropper in New York recently were Carl Harthill, district manager of Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Minneapolis, and Kansas City; George Wilson, district manager for Ohio, Kentucky and Western Pennsylvania territory; George West, territorial sales manager for territories where there are no Reelcraft branches, and Julius Singer, manager of the Greater New York territory.

Report Heavy Bookings for "Blue Sunday"

The Universal home office reports that the bookings on the Lyons-Moran two-reel comedy, "Blue Sunday," have assumed heavy proportions. The Imperial Theatre in San Francisco, operated by Roth and Partington, changed their usual policy this week of not running a comedy in suport of their feature bill, according to Universal, and engaged "Blue Sunday." This comedy is also billed to play at the California Theatre, San Francisco, and has been heavily booked throughout the rest of the state. The Universal publicity department is issuing a special four-page folder containing exploitation material for this subject.

Pathe Releases Feature on 5th of June

Pathe announces for release on June 5th a six-reel feature, titled, "The Heart Line." This is an adaptation of the novel by Gelett Burgess and was produced by the Leah Baird Film Corporation. The background presents considerable variety including scenes of the slums, a picturesque Bohemian restaurant, a clairvoyant's studio, and a rendezvous of high society. In the cast are Leah Baird in the featured role, Jerome Patrick in the leading male role, Mrs. Charles C. Craig, Ivar McFadden, Philip Sleeman, Ruth Sinclair, Frederick Vroom, and Martin Best. Frederick Thomson directed.

"Wonder Man" Shown at Training Quarters

According to a statement from the Robertson-Cole home-office, Georges Carpentier, who is now training at Manhasset, L. I., for his fight with Jack Dempsey, has had rigged up near his training quarters a miniature motion-picture theatre on the Mathews estate. "For a few hours each evening Carpentier treats his guests to a good time and the chief feature of his nightly entertainment is the showing of 'The Wonder Man,' the Robertson-Cole production," declares the statement from the Robertson-Cole headquarters.

Geo. Beranger to Direct Johnny Hines Features

It became known this week that Director George A. Beranger, for over six years with the Griffith forces and later with Fox and other producers, has been signed by C. C. Burr, President of Mastodon Films, Inc., to direct the forthcoming series of Johnny Hines feature productions. The first of the series has been tentatively titled, "Burn 'em up Barnes," to star in which Johnny temporarily deserts the role of Torchy in Torchy Comedies.

Items of Interest on Pathe's Serials

The Pathe headquarters announces several items of interest in connection with its chapter-picture activities. Beginning June 19th, Pathe will release "The Yellow Arm," in which Juanita Hansen is starred, with Marguerite Courtot and Warner Oland prominent in the support. Bertram Millhauser directed the production at the George B. Seitz studio. "The Yellow Arm" is a story of old China and is described to be "distinctively a picture of American society and China itself." "House of Alarms" is the title of the first episode.

Lucy Fox has been signed to play leading parts in Pathe serials. Miss Fox is now working with Charles Hutchison in "Hurricane Hutch" which is under production.

Ruth Roland is busy on her new chapter-picture, "White Eagle," destined for Pathe release. Production work on this serial is now in progress at the Hal Roach studios under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke. The story by Val Cleveland abounds in Western atmosphere and plays up the Indian element strongly, according to Pathe. Earl Metcalf is Miss Roland's leading man.

Three Christie Comedies Completed

The first three of the new series of Christie Comedies distribution of which through Educational has recently been arranged for another twelve-month period, are under way with many prominent comedy players featured.

The first of the new Christie comedies "Nothing Like It" includes Dorothy Devore, who is featured, with Eddie Barry, Earl Rodney, Helen Darling, Ward Caulfield, Eugene Corey and others. This comedy has already been practically completed under the personal direction of Al Christie.

The second picture in the series has just been titled "Oh Buddy" and features Neal Burns, under the direction of Beaudine. The third picture will be put into production soon by Al Christie and will feature Viora Daniel, who made her debut with Christie in "Let Me Explain" one of the late successes in the first series of 24 Christie comedies through Educational exchanges.

Eddie Polo - Universal Serial Due May 30

Beginning on May 30th, Universal will release in eighteen two-reel episodes the Eddie Polo serial recently made in Cuba. The original title was "The Seal of Satan," but this has been changed to "Do or Die," under which title the serial will be released. Many picturesque "shots" of Havana and its environs, including Morro Castle, San Juan Hill and Cabannes Castle, were taken in filming the background for the various episodes in the chapter-picture. Almost three months were spent in Cuba by the Eddie Polo company.

The company which made up the expedition to Cuba comprised Eddie Polo, Inez McDonald, Magda Lane, J. P. McGowan, Jay Marchant, Jean Perkins, Cecil Myers and Anthony J. Coldewey. Mr. McGowan acted not only as director but as chief villain of the piece.

"Now or Never" Scores at the Capitol

Harold Lloyd registers one more Broadway success to his credit with the showing of "Now Or Never" at the Capitol theatre during the past week. The picture is reported to have gone over big with the public and has been hailed as one of the best of the Associated Exhibitors star's production. It is the first of his Associated comedies to be played on Broadway and will be soon followed by "Among Those Present."

Alice Joyce Begins New Vitagraph Feature

Alice Joyce, who only recently completed "The Scarab Ring," already has begun a new Vitagraph production. It is based on a novel by Charles Caldwell Dobie, but is as yet without its final screen title. Edward Jose is in charge of the forthcoming production. The cast includes Holmes E. Herbert, Pedro de Cordoba, John Webb Dillon, Mrs. De Wolf Hopper, Jane Jennings, Josephine Whittell, and Grace Barton.

Fine Reports Received on "Love Flower"

Highly favorable reports are being received on Griffith's "The Love Flower," according to advices from the home-office of the United Artists which is distributing this picture. At least two attendance records have been broken with this feature, and many other testimonials of fine business done with the picture have been sent to officials of the "Big Four" organization. The two theatres where the presentation of "The Love Flower" was attended with record-breaking attendances are the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., and the Criterion Theatre, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

"'The Love Flower' is a fine picture—one of the few I wanted to see twice. Business immense and everybody pleased."

Bert Lytell on Screen Version of "Liliom"

While the New York public and the critics are welcoming the presentation of "Liliom" which had its Broadway debut Wednesday night at the Garrick theatre, a screen version of this play from the pen of the Hungarian playwright, Franz Molnar, is being made by Bert Lytell and his company at the Hollywood, Cal., studios of Metro. The screen title will be "A Trip to Paradise." The leading woman is Virginia Valli.

Chinese Famine Shown in Fox News

Joseph Darling, Fox Film Corporation's staff representative in China, has obtained what is said to be the first motion picture to reach America showing the famine-swept districts of the interior of China.

These pictures appear in the current issue of Fox News, Vol. 2, No. 59. The picture as shown in American theatres, announces Fox, is suited to all classes of audiences, the element of horror being minimized by careful editing and titling and the general impression is one of tragic beauty.

Universal Buys Rhodes' Story for Carey

John C. Brownell, Universal scenario editor, announces the purchase by Universal of "Bransford of Rainbow Range," a popular Eugene Manlove Rhodes novel of several years ago. It will be used as a starring vehicle for Harry Carey and will be produced as one of that star's early Universal-Jewel pictures.

The story is said to be one of the author's best works. It appeared serially in the Saturday Evening Post.

Jimmy Aubrey Renews Vitagraph Contract

Jimmy Aubrey, Vitagraph comedian, has just signed a new contract with that company for a series of two-reel subjects. Aubrey has been with Vitagraph for several years, but it was within the past year that a growing demand for his two-reel comedies impelled Vitagraph to engage a special continuity writer for him and put out the Jimmy Aubrey comedies. Aubrey's latest, "The Tourist," is being shown at the Rialto theatre, on Broadway, New York, this week.

Goldwyn Buys Rights to Noted Swedish Drama

Goldwyn announces that it has acquired the world motion-picture rights to Henning Berger's famous play, "Syndafladen," the English equivalent of which would be "The Sin Flood." "Syndafloden" is one of the most famous Swedish dramas of the century. An adaptation of it was produced on the speaking stage in New York by Arthur Hopkins in 1917 under the name of "The Deluge." It has been acted in all the important dramatic centres of Europe.

"Rip Van Winkle" Near Closing Scenes

Ward Lascelle, who is making "Rip Van Winkle" for Hodkinson release, reports from the West Coast that work is progressing admirably and that camera work will shortly be completed. Thomas Jefferson is playing the stellar role. In Mr. Jefferson's support are included Daisy Robinson, Francis Carpenter and Max Ascher. "Rip Van Winkle" is scheduled for release in the near future by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

First of New "Torchy" Series Announced

"Torchy's Promotion" is announced as the title of the Torchy Comedies produced by Master Films, Inc., under its new contract to supply Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., with a two reel comedy from the stories of Sewell Ford and starring Johnny Hines each month. Dorothy Leeds remains as Hines's leading woman. The cast also includes Frank Monroe, who appears in the cast of "Three Live Ghosts" at the Nora Bayes theatre, New York; and Robert Kenyon of "Potash and Perlmutter" fame.

Has Played Most Big Cities in 15 Days

In a statement just issued from Universal's home-office it is announced that "Reputation" starring Priscilla Dean has been seen on the screen in most of the important cities throughout the country in the fifteen days since its release. Without a single exception the newspaper critics have accorded it the highest praise," says Universal.

"The entire feature is as impressive as it is entertaining," says the Cleveland Ohio, News.

Reid in East to Film "Peter Ibbetson"

Wallace Reid has arrived from the Coast at Paramount's Long Island studio to begin the filming of Du Maurier's story, "Peter Ibbetson." Mr. Reid will play the titular role opposite Elsie Ferguson. Montagu Love is cast for the part of Col. Roger Ibbetson. Elliott Dexter will also take a prominent part in the cast for this production. George Fitzmaurice is to direct the subject.

Abraham Lincoln Story a Holiday Attraction

With Memorial Day approaching, reports from the Select branches throughout the country prove concretely the interest in "The Highest Law," the latest Selznick Abraham Lincoln picture, as a special holiday attraction. Many contracts for the exhibition of the feature during the week of May 29 (which includes Memorial Day) have been signed and many exhibitors who have booked the attraction are preparing to put the picture on with its complete accompaniment of prologue and special music.

Metro's Coast Units Busy

Three Companies Now at Work and George D. Baker to Start Shortly

ADVICES from Metro's New York headquarters report that three of its Coast units are hard at work on new productions, while a fourth under the direction of George D. Baker is expected to start the filming of "The Hunch," featuring Gareth Hughes, this week. The directors now at work are Rex Ingram, who is producing the Balzac story, retitled "The Conquering Power;" Dallas Fitzgerald, who is directing Viola Dana in "The Match Breaker;" and Maxwell Karger who is filming "A Trip to Paradise," in which Bert Lytell is being starred. Bayard Veiller is also reported to be preparing a new special production, the title of which has not yet been announced.

In the filming of "The Match Breaker," Metro states that Dallas Fitzgerald is striving to make as many of his scenes as possible "under sunshine" in order to avoid artificial studio lighting effects. In this respect, Metro states Fitzgerald's new picture will prove an unusual offering.

Of Rex Ingram's work on "The Conquering Power," Metro has the following to say: "Artistic picture sets with a finish never before attempted in a film production have served as a background for Rex Ingram's newest production for Metro, "The Conquering Power."

"All of the story unfolded before the camera is laid in a locality in or near Paris—the France that Balzac knew. In the telling of the story the most picturesque structures are required. For them Mr. Ingram sought the aid of Rudolph Barton, poster artist, magazine illustrator, formerly a fellow art student with the youthful director.

"Together they have studied Balzac, consulted innumerable authorities on French architecture and styles and worked out a series of settings that would bring joy to the master of fiction whose story is being interpreted for the screen.

"Sentimental Tommy" Is Released

John S. Robertson directed the production. The title role is played by Gareth Hughes. Mabel Taliaferro has the part of "the painted lady" and May McAvoy appears in the part of the painted lady's child. Others in the cast are George Fawcett, Harry L. Coleman, Leila Frost, Kempton Greene, Virginia Valli, Kate Davenport, Alfred Kappeler and Malcolm Bradley.

In connection with the release of this production, Paramount has launched a big advertising and exploitation campaign.

Film Editor to Leave for Coast Studios

After spending a few weeks in New York attending conferences and looking after personal business, James Wilkinson, chief film editor for Robertson-Cole, will leave in a few days for the company's studios at Hollywood, California. Mr. Wilkinson, though old in experience, has the distinction of being one of the youngest film editors in the motion picture industry.

Mr. Wilkinson's most recent important work was done on the Pauline Frederick specials produced and distributed by Robertson-Cole, "Salvage" and "The Sting of the Lash."

11 Paramounts Are Coming

Hollywood, Eastern and London Studio Units Are Hard at Work

PARAMOUNT this week had eleven productions either in work or about to begin in its three studios in Hollywood, Long Island and London.

With the arrival in New York of Wallace Reid, George Fitzmaurice began work on "Peter Ibbetson," in which Elsie Ferguson and Mr. Reid will co-star. Elaborate sets made of brick, stone, mortar and wire reinforcing work have been built in the Long Island studio.

Thomas Meighan's company which, under the direction of Tom Forman, is making "Cappy Ricks," a picturization of Peter B. Kyne's famous Saturday Evening Post stories, is now in Boston, where scenes will be taken in and around Boston Harbor. Later a big shipwreck scene will be filmed off the coast of Maine. Agnes Ayres is Mr. Meighan's leading woman.

Reports from London state Donald Crisp has begun work on filming "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush" in Scotland, with a cast including some of the best known film and stage players in England. Paul Powell, who also is working in the London studio, is about to begin on a production which has not yet been titled.

Plans for Gloria Swanson's second Paramount star picture have been altered and this week she started to make a screen version of "The Shulamite" at the Lasky sudio in Hollywood. "The Shulamite" was originally a novel by Alice and Claud Askew. It was later made into a three act play by Edward Knoblock and Claud Askew, and is now being scenariozed by J. E. Nash. Sam Wood has again been assigned to direct Miss Swanson.

With a carefully selected cast and a story by Rita Weiman, as yet untitled, William DeMille has started his new Paramount production in a setting representing the back stage of a metropolitan theatre. Every feature familiar to the actor behind the scenes is shown, and the stage is really practical in every respect. Jack Holt, Lila Lee and Charles Ogle play the leading roles. Others in the cast include Shannon Day, Carleton King and Ruth Miller.

George Melford's production of E. Phillips Oppenheim's "The Great Impersonation," now in work, will be notable for the remarkable settings which have been provided. These include the Storeroom of Moloch, wherein the former Kaiser was supposed to have kept his plans and models for war implements; Dominey Hall, a handsome interior modeled after a castle in England and scenes in the East African jungle. James Kirkwood, the featured player, has a dual role and Ann Forrest is leading woman.

Future Hodkinson Pictures

High Class Directors Film High Class Stories for W. W. Hodkinson

NATION-WIDE interest has been aroused in the Hodkinson organization by the various announcements concerning forthcoming productions which have emanated from that company. Some of the productions released by Hodkinson are as folows:

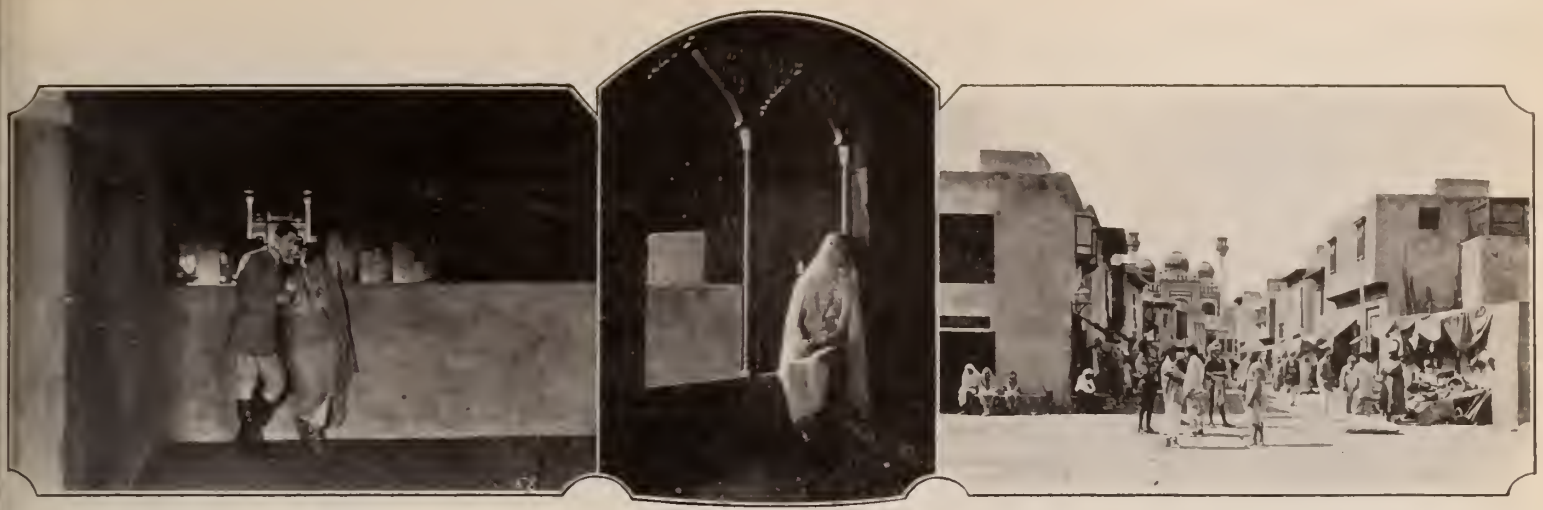
"'Keeping Up With Lizzie'—the first of Irving Bacheller's typically American stories to reach the screen. Under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham, the splendid cast headed by Enid Bennett, has created a clean, fine, laughing comedy.

"'A Certain Rich Man'—Benj. B. Hampton's picturization of William Allen White's novel, Mr. Hampton has said of this picture, that it represents his greatest work thus far.

"'Lavender and Old Lace'—adapted to the screen from Myrtle Reed's novel. This is a picture which has won enthusiastic praise from every reviewer. A clean, sweet, fine, wholesome production, wherein the smile is never far removed from the tear.

"'Ave Maria'—Hugo Ballin, one of the master artists of the screen, has made a production which will stand out as one of the truly striking pictures of the year.

"'Rip Van Winkle'—Ward Lascelle is completing on the West Coast this, his first picture, for Hodkinson release, and he has promised to make it a remarkable one. In the stellar role will be seen Thomas Jefferson, son of the famous Joe Jefferson who created the part upon the speaking stage.



"'The Light in the Clearing'—This is a Dial Film Company Production of an Irving Bacheller story being made under the direction of T. Hayes Hunter, whose work as director of "Earthbound" will never be forgotten.

"'The Face of the World'—Irvin V. Willat's picturization of the greatest story which Johan Bojer, the international novelist, has thus far given to the world.

Cosmopolitan in Tie-Up for "Proxies"

Cosmopolitan Productions has arranged an advertising tie-up with the Cosmopolitan Magazine, whereby the exhibitors showing Cosmopolitan Productions derive considerable publicity. A window card in two colors, one-quarter sheet in size, has been printed and distributed to thousands of newsstands throughout the United States. In addition to being displayed on newsstands the card is being shown in shop windows. The card announces the coming of "Proxies."

Kipling Feature Released July 3

"WITHOUT BENEFIT of CLERGY" will be released on July Third, announces Pathe in a statement just issued. Originally it was intended to issue the picture in May. This was found impossible, because of the delicate attention to detail required in the manufacturing of the prints, and in order that the fullest beauty of the technique of this great production might be established, declares the Pathe statement.

The new release date will bring the issue of "Without Benefit of Clergy" virtually into mid-summer, but Pathe is so confident of the appeal of the production and story, that it declined to withhold release until the fall, as had been suggested.

James Young, who directed "Without Benefit of Clergy," and Robert Brunton, who produced the story for Pathe, are reported to have performed a wonderful task. This is Young's supreme achievement, not excepting "The Devil" with George Arliss, says Pathe.

In a statement issued from the Pathe headquarters Robert Brunton had the following to say about the new production:

"In pictures, Rudyard Kipling, of course, is an unknown quantity. He is new, different. All depends on atmosphere and treatment. The producer finds his familiar tools inadequate, his familiar opportunities lacking. For example, in the story of 'Without Benefit of Clergy' there are character, atmosphere and beauty, but no 'conflict,' no 'suspense'—those elements ordinarily so necessary in a picture; perhaps I should say, necessary in an ordinary picture. 'Without Benefit of Clergy' is not an ordinary picture, and was not to be made by using ordinary methods. We had to invent new ones—at least, a new sort of general treatment. But I can assure you that the result spells Kipling. Lovers of Kipling's books will like it. Lovers of the things that Kipling loves will welcome it.

"A production of this kind, in fact this Kipling picture, is one of the best things that can happen in the interest of the motion picture art and industry. It will attract picture patronage from a class of people who up to the present time have given little attention to the screen. These are readers of the best literature, patrons of the best drama produced on the stage.

"In producing 'Without Benefit of Clergy' we were fortunate in having a continuity of exceptional quality. It bore evidence of Kipling's most careful attention to the resources commanded by the picture producer. He, in his turn, was fortunate in having the advice and technical assistance of Randolph Lewis. The result was a continuity that was Kipling plus all that an expert could contribute. We could go right ahead and 'shoot.' Nevertheless, this was an instance where the author's presence for personal supervision was especially desirable. Virtually we had this advantage, for, whereas Kipling was 6,000 miles away, his competent coworker and representative, Randolph Lewis, took an active part in filming 'Without Benefit of Clergy' throughout."

Helene Chadwick in Her Ninth Goldwyn Picture

Miss Chadwick began her picture career for Goldwyn by playing opposite Tom Moore in "Heartsease" and then played the leading feminine role in the first Rupert Hughes picture, "The Cup of Fury." She has also played in "Scratch My Back," "Cupid, the Cowpuncher," and "Godless Men." This is her ninth Goldwyn picture.

Barrymore Completes "Boomerang Bill"

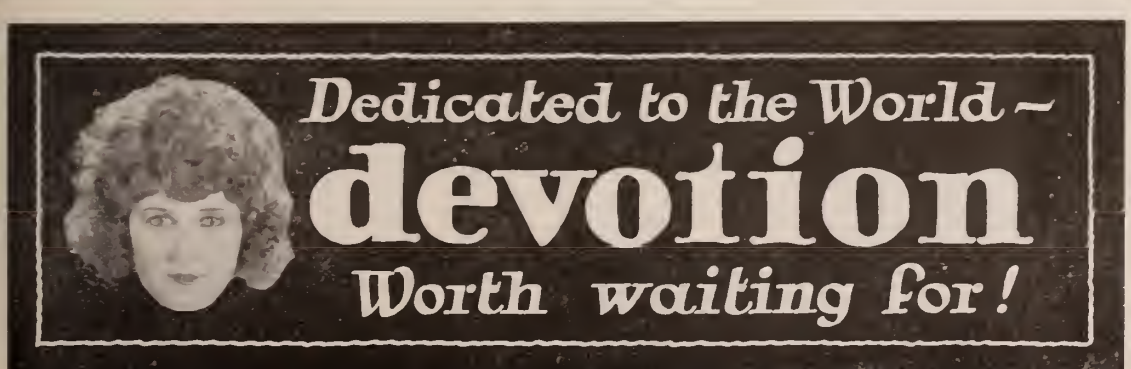
The next production that Tom Terriss, director of "Boomerang Bill," will direct for W. R. Hearst will be "Find the Woman" from the story by Arthur Somers Roche.

Nazimova Supervising "Camille" Titling

Nazimova left New York Thursday of last week for Hollywood, Calif., where she will complete cutting and the supervision of titling of her latest production for Metro, "Camille." She was accompanied by her husband, Charles Bryant, who has been in the East for the last several months, arranging for plans of the star after "Camille" is ready for the screen.

Priscilla Dean Starts New Production



Priscilla Dean is on her way to the Oregon Woods to film "Conflict," the Red Book Magazine story which is to be made as a Universal Jewel super feature under the direction of Stuart Paton.

"Conflict" is a story of the lumber camps and will be filmed on actual locations of Oregon timber tracts. A crew of the best construction and technical men available are on the ground, erecting the settings which will be used in the production.

Herbert Rawlinson, who will support the star, and Tully Marshall, who plays the principal character role, are among the forty actors and technical men who accompanied the star and her director to the north.

"The Song of the Soul" Gets Loew Bookings

Wm. LeBaron's Play Opens in Washington

"Nobody's Money," the tenth Broadway production from the pen of William LeBaron, editor-in-chief of the scenario department of Cosmopolitan Productions, opened with much success at the Belasco Theatre, Washington, on May 16th. The Critics of the Washington newspapers greeted this latest work of Mr. LeBaron's favorably. Mr. LeBaron's new play is scheduled for a run in New York late the coming summer.

Pathe Announces June 5th Releases

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC., announces a novel assemblage of short subject features which have been scheduled for release the week of June 5. "The Crystal Prism" is the title of episode six of the new Seitz serial, "The Sky Ranger," in which June Caprice is co-starred with George B. Seitz. "On Perilous Ground" presents episode thirteen of the Pathe serial, "The Avenging Arrow," in which Ruth Roland is starred. The chapter is said to be filled with incidents of the most thrilling kind, showing the star in an automobile pursuing a fast freight train, and a daring leap from the machine to the train.

Author Aids Director and Scenarist

An example of unusual co-operation between author and producer is given by Realart, which is making a Hecor Turnbull story starring May McAvoy, who made such an impression as Grisel in "Sentimental Tommy." Mr. Turnbull collaborated not only with Miss Eva Unsell, who wrote the scenario, but with Chester Franklin, who directed the picture.

The Turnbull picture, which Realart is to release as a Special Birthday production stars May McAvoy, who is supported by Kathlyn Williams, Ralph Lewis, Bruce Gordon and Llloyd Whitlock.

"Wild Goose" Discusses Divorce Question

Cosmopolitan Productions point out that their latest picture. "The Wild Goose" is based upon the divorce problem which is gaining the attention of the clergy and courts continually. They point out that a New Haven, Conn., clergy has recently staged a play entitled "The Divorce Question."

The Wild Goose" demonstrates the importance of the child in domestic life and offers an object lesson on divorce in the form of a dramatic story admirably cast. "The Wild Goose" was adapted for the screen by Donnah Darrell from Gouverneur Morris' novel, and was directed by Albert Capellani.

New Series for Educational

W. S. Campbell to Make Thirteen Animal Comedies for Educational

A SERIES of animal comedies is promised for the next year through a fortunate deal just closed by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. W. S. Campbell, whose ability in directing animals before the motion picture camera was responsible for the success of the Chester Comedies, featuring "Snooky, the Humanzee," released by Educational during the last year, has undertaken to produce thirteen comedies during the coming season in which a large number of trained animals of all sorts will be featured.

Mr. Campbell has just returned to the Coast after a week of conferences with E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., in which the policy to be followed in the new series was outlined. He will begin work at once on the first of the Animal Comedies. "Snooky, the Humanzee," will be by no means the only monkey in the new line of pictures. There will be a whole family of monkeys woven into the stories by Mr. Campbell, it is announced.

In this connection exhibitors will be interested in the fact that Educational has registered the name "Snooky, the Humanzee." This trade mark places Educational in such a position that no other producer or distributor of motion pictures can advertise or offer for distribution any pictures using the title "Snooky, the Humanzee."

Mr. Campbell is especially well fitted for the work he is beginning. The success of animal comedies depends entirely upon the construction of the scenario and the directing of the animals. In this difficult double task, Mr. Campbell stands alone. Beginning his work in the motion picture field several years ago as a writer of scenarios, he gradually increased his interest in the filming of the mute actors, and in directing their work.

The clever work of little Ida May MacKenzie in the "Snooky" pictures of the last year has convinced Mr. Campbell of the great value of the child actors in these plays. He is working now on a plan to pair the best available girl and boy, who would play "grown-ups" in children's dress.

Goldwyn Units Are Active

Two Features Almost Completed; Three to Be Launched Shortly

DIRECTOR FRANK LLOYD is now at Fort Bragg, in the Redwood country, picking out locations and superintending the building of a camp for his forthcoming production for Goldwyn of Katherine Newlin Burt's first story written expressly for the screen, "The Man from Lost River." Allan Forest has been selected for an important role. The only other member of the cast yet selected is House Peters.

Will Rogers will complete the photography on Edward E. Kidder's old comedy-drama, "A Poor Relation," this week. Clarence Badger is directing it.

E. Mason Hopper will also finish this week photography on the production he has been directing, "The Glorious Fool," an original scenario by Mary Roberts Rinehart, in which Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix have the principal roles.

Reginald Barker is preparing to begin photography on "The Poverty of Riches," by Leroy Scott. Mr. Barker was selected to direct this picture because of his masterful work in handling the mother love situations in Rupert Hughes' drama, "The Old Nest."

Ignace Jan Paderewski paid his first visit to a motion picture studio this week when he was shown through the Goldwyn plant by Rupert Hughes. He also spent half an hour in conversation with F. J. Godsol, chairman of the board of directors, and Abraham Lehr, vice-president in charge of production. Mr. Paderewski expressed amazement at the extent of the studios and the thoroughness and magnitude of their equipment. He said he is an ardent "movie" fan.

"Connecticut Yankee" Now at Central

The Fox special production, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," has been moved from the Selwyn Theatre to the Central Theatre, New York. The Fox home office reports that the picture continues to play to big business.

Universal Organizes a Welfare Society

UNIVERSAL announces the organization of a welfare body to be known as the Universal Aid whose object will be to take care of the members of the sales and exchange forces of Universal Film in the United States and Canada, who may need assistance as a result of protracted illness. The plan grows out of the recent meeting of the Universal exchange managers in Chicago. H. M. Berman, general manager, is the sponsor for the idea. An organization committee has been appointed to perfect all the necessary details, and the various exchange offices are to discuss the plan and submit their suggestions. After the practicability of the idea has been demonstrated, it is intended to extend the plan to the home office, laboratory and studio forces at Universal City.

Announce Additions to Paramount Casts

Mahlon Hamilton has been engaged to play the leading masculine role with Gloria Swanson in her second Paramount star picture, "The Shulamite," which is to go into production shortly.

t.John, N.B., Conducts a William Fox Week

W. J. Melody, the Fox branch anager at St. John, N. B., re-ntly conducted a Fox week in that ty. As a result, the theatres of t. John, including the Queen quare, the Empress, the Unique, alace, Imperial, Star and Opera ouse played Fox productions. The st of simultaneous showings con-sted of Buck Jones in "Just Pals," Bride 13," Pearl White in "The ountain Woman," Shirley Mason "Girl of My Heart," Mutt and ff Comedies, and the current issue Fox News.

Vitagraph's superb produc-on of David Belasco's famous age play presents Catherine alvert in the stellar role. It as many advantages over its age predecessor, for it was ade in the exact locale de-ribed in the story, on a stage at is nature itself. The oken drama is limited in its ility to convey ideas that the lm visualizes in dramatic enes.

Depicting one of the most in-resting and intensely dra-atic periods in American his-ry, with a clean, sweet love ory interwoven in a back-round of war, the production as a theme that will appeal to ll. Great care and discretion ave been exercised in produc-g the picture. There is just ough of the war of the re-ellion to set the story, and ot enough to convey the orror of those stirring days. he camera work in these enes with the war back-round is remarkable. The ell scene, a spectacle for hich "The Heart of Mary-nd" will always be known, is andled in a capable manner, ut though this was the big ene in the play, the picture arries many of equal import-nce. All in all, the produc-ion grips the attention from he first and holds it through-ut. Pictures help to cover he lapses of time and change f place and some of the illus-rated titles are real works of rt.

Miss Calvert was never seen o greater advantage than as Maryland Calvert and her ork throughout is practically eyond criticism. Pathe Has Fables Cartoons

New Series, Adapted from Aesop's Fables, Will Be Offered in June

PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc., announce that beginning June 19th, they will offer as a weekly release of a series of "Aesop's Fables Modernized," in the form of animated cartoons by Paul Terry. This is the result of an arrangement with Fables Pictures Inc.

The first Pathe release will be Cartoonist Terry's adaptation of the fable of "The Goose that laid the Golden Egg," which has an honored place in the popular literature of every civilized race and country. It will be followed at weekly intervals by other equally familiar Aesop subjects. The Pathe release schedule shows "The Goose that Laid the Golden Egg" followed successively by "Mice in Council," "The Rooster and the Eagle," "Ants and the Grasshopper," and "Cats at Law."

It is reported that when the Pathe Exchange authorities viewed the first half dozen or more of these "Aesop's Fables Modernized," they were of one mind with Fables Pictures, Inc., regarding their intrinsic screen merit and popular appeal. Many exhibitors and picture patrons will remember Paul Terry as the cartoonist of the "Farmer Alfalfa" series, which won speedy acceptance a few years ago; also the "Terry Burlesques," animated cartoon travesties of popular screen features.

Those who have been present at projections of Paul Terry's Aesop adaptations appear to agree that they are superior to anything of the kind heretofore produced. The comic action of the animal and bird characters is said to be so realistic as to cause the beholder to forget that it is all obtained by the animated cartoon process; moreover, that the modern exceedingly laughable dramatization in pictures and the force of the moral are just as Aesopian as in the immortal originals.

Rappe on Music Score Staff

MUSIC SCORE SERVICE CORPORATION announces that Erno Rappe, conductor of the Capitol theatre orchestra, New York, has been added to the staff of musical celebrities engaged in the compilation of synchronized music scores. The officials of that organization are enthusiastic over the acquisition of the Capitol orchestra leader

In announcing the acquisition of Mr. Rappe as a staff member the headquarters of the Music Service Corporation in New York has issued the following statement:

"In association with James C. Bradford, for seven years director of the Broadway Theatre Orchestra, and special musical editor for Famous Players and First National; Carl Edouarde, pioneer in present day de luxe musical settings for motion picture presentations and director of the Strand theatre Symphony Orchestra since the first day that popular house opened its doors; Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, musical director of Rialto, Rivoli, and Criterion theatres, New York; and Joseph Carl Breil, famed for his scoring of many of the D. W. Griffith successes. Erno Rappe, at the very zenith of his career, to date, will lend his skill and that artistic touch which has done much to bring to the Capitol theatre the outstanding success it has achieved, and will personally supervise his quota of synchronized music scores."

Anita Stewart Denies Her Contract Expires

THE New York office of Louis B. Mayer Productions has issued a denial of the story published in a local paper under a Los Angeles heading to the effect that Anita Stewart's contract with Mr. Mayer expired after her next picture, "The Question of Honor."

Th error in the story probably arose from the fact that Miss Stewart had announced her intention of coming East after "The Question of Honor" is finished, which will be some time the latter part of June. But her trip East is purely for vacational purposes, and after passing about three months in her summer home at Bay Shore, L. I., she will return to Los Angeles to continue the making of pictures for Mr. Mayer and the First National at the Mayer studios.

Concert League Artists in Leading Houses

S. L. Rothafel, by arrangement with the New York Concert League presents the celebrated American violinist Sascha Jacobsen at the Capitol this week. S. Barrett McCormack has just assumed management of the New Allen theatre in Cleveland. He chose a New York Concert League artist, Emily Beglin, for his first prologue attraction.

In addition to Mr. Rothafel and Mr. McCormack, the New York Concert League reports that it has now on its lists such exhibitors as Francis Mangan, now of the Allen in Montreal; Phil Gleichman of the Broadway Strand in Detroit; Maurice Barr of New Orleans; Abe Fabian of New Jersey, and Edward Hyman of the Brooklyn-Strand.

New Emerson-Loos Photoplay

John Emerson and Anita Loos have completed the synopsis of their new original photoplay, "Good For Nothing," for Constance Talmadge, and are working on the continuity, it was announced yesterday. Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos will have the scenario ready in about a fortnight, when it will be produced under the direction of Victor Fleming.

The story deals with a small town girl who runs away to New York and, instead of experiencing the proverbial bitter struggle, has the time of her life.

Reports from the Coast Hail "Over the Hill"

Randolph Lewis Lauded as Kipling's Proxy

PAUL BRUNET before his departure for Europe issued an order to the effect that all prints of "Without Benefit of Clergy" are to bear the credit line, "Supervised for Rudyard Kipling by Randolph Lewis." This decision to give public recognition to not only the author but also the one appointed as the author's representative in the making of a film is an innovation, declares the statement from the Pathe headquarters, and emphasizes the current tendency to enlarge the author's authority in the making of photoplays.

Randolph Lewis was commissioned several months ago to go to Europe and collaborate with Mr. Kipling in the preparation of "Without Benefit of Clergy" for the screen. As a result of this trip Mr. Lewis came back equipped with Mr. Kipling's ideas as to the proper treatment of the story, its costuming, properties, and accessories, in fact, everything possible for an author to contribute to the work of producing his story.. And that Mr. Lewis has served as proxy for Kipling with surpassing success is maintained by Producer Robert Brunton, who has just come East with the first print of the new picture.

First Nat'l Has 12 Coming

Three Just Started, Four in Mid-Stages; and Five Nearly Ready

AN even dozen First National attractions are included in a big production "clean-up" involving as many producing units on the East and West coasts. Three of these were started last week, four are in the middle stage of completion and five are at the finishing point.

The new ones are "The Wonderful Thing," a Joseph M. Schenck production starring Norma Talmadge under direction of Herbert Brenon; "Man's Game," a Katherine MacDonald production featuring Miss MacDonald under direction of J. A. Barry; "Slippy McGee," an Oliver Morosco production featuring Wheeler Oakman under direction of Wesley Ruggles.

Charles Ray, Constance Talmadge and Anita Stewart are among the stars who are winding up work on their features.

Mr. Ray, besides playing the star role, is directing "The Barnstormer," by Richard Andre, and has been engaged on it for six weeks; Miss Talmadge's vehicle is "Woman's Place," a Joseph M. Schenck offering written by John Emerson and Anita Loos and directed by Victor Fleming; "The Price of Happiness" is Miss Stewart's latest appearance under the management of Louis B. Mayer, the feature being directed by Edwin Carewe.

"The Half Breed," first of the Oliver Morosco productions, with Wheeler Oakman in the title role and Charles A. Taylor its director, is the fourth in the list of pictures nearing the laboratory stage, while the fifth is John M. Stahl's special "The Child Thou Gavest Me," with an all-star cast including Lewis Stone, William Desmond and Barbara Castleton. Mr. Stahl is personally directing the story, which was written by Perry N. Vekroff and is to be presented on the First National program by Louis B. Mayer.

Charlie Chaplin is in the midst of "Vanity Fair" which, like "The Kid" was written by the comedian and has him for its star and director. Edna Purviance and an exceptional cast are working with him.

"Serenade," the R. A. Walsh production in which Miriam Cooper, George Walsh, Joseph Swickard and others are to be seen is another one at its working "peak" while Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven are in the fourth week of "My Lady's Friends," under direction of Lloyd Ingraham. Hope Hampton, in the Hobart Henley production of "Star Dust" also has passed her fourth week of work.

Titles for Educational Scenic Series Named

EDUCATIONAL announces that its plans for a series of "trip-around the world" scenics have been further perfected. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Films, has announced the titles of the pictures which are divided into four groups.

Ibanez Lauds Filming of His Story

From Vincente Blasco Ibanez author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, received this week a warm letter of congratulation upon the success of the Rex Ingram production of the story for the screen.

The celebrated Spanish author, whose masterpiece Metro has produced in picture form and which is now being shown in New York, Chicago, Pittsburg, Detroit, Boston and Los Angeles, gave tribute not only to the magnificence of the screen translation but also endorsed the picture for its value in carrying on the earnest message of the book.

Fox's Releases for June

Wm. Russell, Buck Jones and Eileen Percy on Next Month's Schedule

FOX FILM CORPORATION announces its releases for the month of June. William Russell is to be seen in "Children of Night," a mystery story from the pen of Max Brand. The story deals with the world-wide operations of an organized society of law-breakers who prey upon financial centres, guided by a mind so masterful and cunning that it seems for a time as though the evil-doers will never be run to earth. Their undoing is finally accomplished by a money king of Wall Street (played by William Russell) where by reason of his falling in love with a beautiful woman, a member of the gang, is brought to match his wits and strength against the gang's leader. Jack Dillon is responsible for the direction of "Children of Night."

Buck Jones will figure in the June releases in a picture made under the working title "The Mediator," written by Roy Norton and directed by Bernard Durning. The locale is in the West, and Buck is seen as a friendly and easy going westerner, who is called upon by circumstances to make peace by fighting for it, in various places and under varying conditions. He finally enters a battle royal with a mob of striking miners, where his peace-making proclivities are curtailed for a time by his being left unconscious upon the field. Of course the right girl accelerates his convalescence.

"Big Town Ideas," a photoplay built upon an unconventional theme, serves to introduce Eileen Percy among the June entries. "Big Town Ideas" uncovers a new matrimonial highway paved with flapjacks—the product of the girl's culinary skill—and a road over which bond thieves speed to their undoing.

The two Fox Sunshine Comedies for June are "The Hayseed," directed by Al St. John, and "Three Good Pals," for which Director Watt is responsible.

TERRITORIAL SALES AND PURCHASES

In the Independent Field

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

New Cartoon Novelty to be Offered

Foremost among the film novelties promised for next season's release and one that seems to indicate the creation of a new factor in motion picture photography, is a series of pen and ink cartoons, recently and privately shown by C. Burr, their sponsor and the president of Affiliated Distributers Inc., which organization will market them through their franchise holders.

The cartoons are done by an unnamed artist who has succeeded, not only in bringing fresh humor to this type of entertainment but who also has perfected the animation to a point where the most extraordinary movements are done in a wholly natural manner. These novel productions will be released in split reel form, each accompanied by a Rollin Lester Dixon scenic item. The first, scheduled for release in the early autumn, is titled, "Mr. Ima Jonah's Home Brew," and is followed on the same reel with "Blue Water," a scenic story of life on a Yankee cod-fishing schooner on the Grand Banks.

Commend Three Sheet on "Eagle Man"

According to announcements that have just come from the office of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, wide and favorable mention has been accorded by exchanges and exhibitors throughout the country to the special exploitation that has been prepared and that is being furnished by this office on "short subjects" on the one and two reelers which C. B. C. is releasing to the State Right Market.

Special attention has been won this week it is said, by an especially powerful three-sheet that has been prepared for the release of "The Eagle Man" a two-reel Western feature produced by and featuring J. Edward Hatton, and released by the C. B. C. of the Star Ranch Western program of which twenty-six Western thrillers are promised for the year.

Callahan Has Scripts for Twenty Comedies

Jimmy Callahan, who is producing two-reel comedies for release through the Film Market, and who is building a new studio at Atlantic City, N. J., announces that he has purchased scenarios for twenty two-reel comedies and that his readers have five more which will be passed to him this week for final reading.

Mr. Callahan has already completed three of his comedies. They are "Jimmy's Last Night Out," "The Stowaway," and "Props."

"Supreme Passion" Scores

Robt. Priest's Production Praised at Premiere as Wholesome Film

ROBERT W. PRIESTS production, "The Supreme Passion," was given its premiere public showing at the Euclid Avenue Opera House in Cleveland, Ohio, Sunday, May 15th. The doors were opened at 11 a. m. to long lines of waiting people, and from that time up to the closing hour it was packed to its seating and standing room capacity. This attendance was repeated every day during the run and the record for the week was one of the largest in the history of the theatre.

Reports of the hit made by the Priest production were telegraphed to all principal cities by Cleveland photoplay editors because of the great interest it had excited. It struck all the reviewers that it peculiarly answers the current demand for clean pictures of exceptional entertaining value.

These reports led to many inquiries being wired Mr. Priest during the past week requesting information in reference to open territory and several important deals were closed by telegraph for state rights.

The criticisms of this picture in Cleveland were unqualified in commendation and presage wide popularity everywhere. Mr. Priest received many congratulatory telegrams and letters praising the picture and complimenting him upon his good fortune. One of the letters read in part: "This clipping from Archie Bell, the dean of Cleveland critices, ought to be very valuable in your national exploitation of 'The Supreme Passion.' Bell is undoubtedly the best known critic outside of New York and Chicago. His word is law out this way and his unqualified endorsement of 'The Supreme Passion' should put many dollars into your till."

Mr. Bell's criticism read: "What do men love in women—their physical beauty or their beauty of soul and mind? My prediction is that twelve hours a day 11 to 11, will not be long enough for the rafts of people who want to see 'The Supreme Passion' at the Opera House this week, for Cleveland will be immensely interested by this motion picture play."

Ward Marsh, photoplay editor of The Cleveland Plain Dealer, said: "The production is well acted and it is very entertaining and just now, when 'better' pictures are asked for, 'The Supreme Passion' should make a wide appeal, for it is a clean, wholesome story."

Louise Graham, photoplay editor, said in her review: "'The Supreme Passion' is a thrilling exposition of a great theme."

Levey Educational Films

Educational Test Films to Be Offered to Non-Theatrical Field

A SERIES of educational test films based on the now famous Edison questionaires is being prepared by National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc. for use in schools and elsewhere in the non-theatrical motion picture field. Harry Levey, the president of the organization, was so deeply impressed with the wide field of general information covered by this questionaire that he decided to utilize it as the basis for a series of instructional films for distribution through the exchanges of his non-theatrical distributing organization located in key cities in all parts of the country for service exclusively to the non-theatrical film field.

Mr. Levey has had the Edison questionaires classified and find that least fourteen branches of science and arts are covered and that he has in his vaults, available for distribution, films which fall within all of these classifications and answer the questions which Mr. Edison has propounded in each of these classes.

The subjects covered according to Mr. Levey's classification are, agriculture, astronomy, chemistry, geography, industrial geography, physical geography and political geography, history, industry, mathematics, mechanics, music, natural history, zoology and physics.

Mr. Levey, therefore, will assemble a series of films under each of these classifications. For instance the agricultural films will treat of the prune industry in California, the coffee industry, the Imperial Valley of California and its products, the fig and date industries and the peanut and wool industries, as well as a wealth of other information concerning world agriculture. These series of educational test films will be available in the Fall for schools, churches, and other non-theatrical agencies.

W. M. Smith Productions to Start in June

THE Smith studio, the home of the recently formed W. M. Smith Productions of Tulsa, Okla., is nearing completion and Mr. Smith announces that he expects to begin early in June on his productions.

The W. M. Smith Productions Co., Inc., was organized to produce eight Western feature pictures. Franklyn Farnum is to be starred in these and he will be supported by such players as Shorty Hamilton, Al Hart and Virginia Lee. George Holt will direct the productions of the W. M. Smith Productions.

Doraldina Appearing in Person in the South

Mme. Doraldina, celebrated dancer and motion picture star, whom it was reported recently had formed her own producing company, is reported to be breaking all attendance records at the Loew houses through the South and Southwest where she is making personal appearances with her latest Metro picture, "Passion Fruit."

According to Mme. Doraldina's manager, Frank Saunders, she is regarded by the showmen of the South as the greatest box office bet in the show business today.

A wire from Mr. Saunders from Loew'e theatre, Kansas City, Mo., to Stephen T. King, representing Ernest Shipman, at 17 West 44 Street, follows in part:

"Doraldina has broken all attendance records in every theatre she has made an appearance. Necessary to give two and three shows a day to satisfy vast crowds. Birmingham records shattered in pouring rain."

Foreign Rights Sold on Cummings Two Reelers

A record price is announced as having been paid for the Irving Cummings series of tabloid superfeatures released through the Producers Security Corporation by the Inter-Ocean Film Company for the foreign rights to the entire Cummings output. Two subjects, "On the Trail" and "Tricked" have been turned over to the Inter-Ocean with the third "Jim's Patsey" to be released this week. Each Cummings film tells a separate and complete story in two reels.

C. C. Burr Will Offer Hines Features

Announcement was made this week from the offices of C. C. Burr, President of Master Films, Inc., and actively identified with a number of other producing and distributing organizations, of the formation of another producing unit, likewise under his management, to be known as Mastodon Films, Inc.

It is understood that Mastodon Films, Inc., has been organized especially for the making of the recently chronicled Johnny Hines feature production. Present plans fix the number of these at three but provision, in the shape of additional scripts, has been made and it is rumored that the coming season will witness the release of a larger number of Hines features than was originally contemplated. Arrangements for the distribution of these productions has been made with Affiliated Distributors, Inc., who will release them via its franchise holders.

Jack Dempsey Seen in Screen Snapshots

A new angle has been added to the new Federated Screen Snapshots, the single-reel "fan magazine of the screen," whereby its value to fans will be greatly enhanced, it is announced this week by Jack Cohn and Louis Lewyn, the producers. This angle is that of "news," so that fans throughout the country who have come to look to Screen Snapshots for the sort of intimate information they want about the studio and private lives of their favorites, will get not only the "personal" views to which they have been accustomed but the latest available "news beats" as well.

In line with this policy Jack Cohn has secured for the second issue of Screen Snapshots to be released Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc. which is now in preparation, special exclusive views of Jack Dempsey.

Zenith Features, Inc. Formed on Coast

A new production company to be known as Zenith Features, Inc., has leased space at the Louis B. Mayer Studios, and has engaged Theodore Wharton to direct the first feature, "The Besetting Sin," from an original story by Leota Morgan. The present plans of the company include the making of four big productions a year.

Rise of Quality Pictures

Success of Kineto Series Proves Public Likes Fine Quality Film

NOT so very long ago there was a very general impression in motion picture circles that a very high grade motion picture release would have difficulty in holding success, the argument being that the majority of audiences did not like fine-quality film.

Charles Urban, president of the Kineto Company of America, heard this sort of comment from all sides when he first put out his Movie Chats and Kineto Reviews. He always refused to believe it. Most of the men he heard it from had not been in the motion picture business half as long as he had and they doubted the intelligence of the public where he did not.

Even they have begun to change their minds. The emphatic success of the Movie Chats and the Kineto Reviews have reinforced Mr. Urban's original opinion and the majority opinion has swung around to his way.

The best testimony comes from exhibitors; in the last analysis they are the men who know the public best. Hence the gratification on Mr. Urban's part on the receipt of such telegrams of which this one from George F. Sharp, managing director of the Liberty and Strand Theatres in Fresno, Cal. is a sample:

"When the name 'Kineto' is flashed on the screen I know my patrons are going to see the best—something beautiful — something they will always remember."

There have been many such endorsements, states Kineto. The best evidence of all is that the Kineto Reviews and Movie Chats today are being played in leading theatres all over the country. Moreover, motion picture critics on newspapers in cities everywhere are devoting marked attention to them. This may be called a recent development, because until the Kineto Reviews and Movie Chats were released, short subjects received scant attention from film reviewers on the daily newspapers.

Basil Directing Reelcraft Comedies

Joe Basil, formerly co-director to Larry Semon, and also writer of many of the former Larry Semon comedies has now taken upon his shoulders the task of directing the Reelcraft Sun-Lite series of comedies. Basil is one of the best liked and popular young men now in the business.

Immediate Release o Federated Features

IMMEDIATE release of two of its star features, "Penny of Top Hill Trail," with Bessie Love, and "Hearts and Masks," with Elinor Field, Francis McDonald and Lloyd Bacon, is announced by the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc.

More than a hundred theaatres, from coast to coast, have already shown the pictures, and hundreds of others have booked them for appearances in the near future. "Penny of Top Hill Trail," according to exhibitors, "goes over big" because of the popularity of the winsome star, Miss Love, and the combination of Western atmosphere, humor, action and mystery in the story. 'Hearts and Masks," they report, draws because it is a Harold MacGrath story, with all the charm and suspense that means, and is portrayed by a real all-star cast.

Rex Beach Revival Gets First Run Bookings

Ben Friedman, president of the Friedman Film Corporation, Minneapolis, and Lee Goldberg of the Big Feature Rights Corporation Louisville, both advise Robert W Priest, president of The Film Market, Inc., that they have booked some very important first runs on Rex Beach's revival of "The Ne'er Do-Well."

"Madonnas and Men' is Popular in South

It is reported by Wassman and Stephens who released big special through the southern territory from Atlanta, Georgia, that "Madonnas and Men" did an exceptionally good business in the New Howard theatre, Atlanta, Georgia the weather "being terrible during its entire engagement."

A scene from "The Wolverine," the first of a series of Helen Gibson features, offered on the independent market by Associated Photo-Plays

Arrow Film Corp, Sells Foreign Rights

D. J. Mountan, manager of the Export Department of the Arrow Film Corporation, announces that he has sold to the Chicago Film Co., whose headquarters are at Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, the following Arrow features, series and comedies: "The Golden Trail," "Woman's Man," "Nobody's Girl," "Love's Protege," "Bitter Fruit"; the six Jack Hoxies, "Before the White Man Came," "The Deceiver," "Wolves of the Street"; twenty-six Hank Mann comedies and twelve XLNT comedies.

Movie Chats Liked in Great Britain

Charles Urban has just received from Butcher's Film Service, Ltd., distributors of the Movie Chats in the United Kingdom, some samples of the press matter they have been sending to exhibitors in Great Britain and Ireland.

Representatives of Butcher's write that they are meeting with astounding success in their distribution of the Movie Chats and the fact is that Mr. Urban has difficulty in editing these Movie Chats fast enough to supply the English demand.

John A. Hammell Joins Commonwealth Film

Samuel Zierler, president of the Commonwealth Film Corp., of New York, announces this week the acquisition of John A. Hammell to the executive staff of his corporation.

Mr. Hammell's first work will be a tour of the country. He will stop first at the Nu-Art Exchange in Buffalo; this exchange handling all the Commonwealth pictures in Upper New York State and after that he will visit all the major distributing centers.

"A Chili Romance" is Hallroom Comedy

What may be termed a "situation-Comedy" is the fourth of the new Federated Hallroom Boys Comedies featuring Sid Smith which, in accordance with the production schedule established by Harry Cohn, the producer, has been received at the New York offices.

Furnished with a good trick-title which it is learned will furnish endless opportunity for novel exploitation, "A Chili Romance" is said to gain its comedy appeal by the genuinely funny central situation around which it is built, fully as much as from the individual comedy stunts and "business" which go to enliven the two reels.

Berthelet to Direct

To direct a series of productions to be made this summer, the Atlas Educational Film Company of Chicago announces that it has secured the services of Arthur Berthelet.

Hirsh Sails for Europe

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, sailed last Saturday for Europe and for the next several months will tour the foreign cities in a combination business and pleasure trip.

THE following sales on the independent market were reported during the week:

"The Battlin' Kid" (Richard Kipling Enterprises), to Warner Brothers Film Exchange for Greater New York.

"The Girl With a Million" (Fred W. Falkner) to the Exhibitors Film and Supply Company of Syracuse, for New York State.

"The Right Way" (Producers Security Corporation) to Samuel D. Grand, of Federated Film Exchange of New England, for the New England states.

"The Soul of Man" (Producers Security Corporation) to the American Features Film Exchange, of Boston.

"Diane of Star Hollow" (Producers Security Corporation) to Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago for Indiana and Illinois.

"Lying Truth" Is Finished

Initial Marion Fairfax Picture Ready; Release Still Undecided

MARION FAIRFAX "shot" the final scene for her initial production, "The Lying Truth" last week. Clean romance and drama is the underlying theme of this picture, it is announced. A story of the newspaper world, this script allows for many big situations and it is reported, will offer a striking illustration of Miss Fairfax's contention that a story can be clean and still present as many effective punches as any sensational plot.

Staged under the personal direction of Marion Fairfax, this film marks the entrance of this noted screen author and playwright in the motion picture producing field. Some six years ago, William De Mille induced Miss Fairfax to forsake a successful career as a dramatist to write for the screen. Since that time she has been credited with the authorship of some of the biggest box-office attractions in motion picture history.

John Jasper, manager of Marion Fairfax Productions and part owner of the big Hollywood Studios on Santa Monica Boulevard is handling the business end of the producing organization. The work of cutting and titling "The Lying Truth" is now under way and as soon as a final print is completed, Mr. Jasper will journey to New York to arrange for its distribution. It is stated that offers for the release of the Fairfax product has been received from practically every large distributor but nothing definite will be done along these lines until the film is entirely finished.

New Exchange to Have "The Right Way"

Richard Feinberg, who is starting an independent exchange in Washington, D. C., is arranging with the Producers Security Corporation to distribute the Thomas Mott Osborne picture, "The Right Way" in his territory as just the proper feature to start off his new project.

The banquet scene in "The Invisible Fear," a forthcoming Anita Stewart production released by Louis B. Mayer through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Distributors Seeking "Philo Grubb" Series

Distribution rights to the series of two-reel satirical farce comedies which are being adapted from the Ellis Parker Butler stories of "Philo Grubb, Correspondence School Deteckative," are already being sought by several releasing organizations, it is announced.

Although the first "Philo Grubb" vehicle, "The Hound of the Tankerville," has just been completed, Webster Cullison, supervising director of Clever Comedies, has been approached by distributors who are anxious to market the entire series of thirty-five subjects.

According to a statement made by Mr. Cullison, he will not sign a contract for the marketing of his pictures until the second and probably the third are completed and ready to screen. The second story should be finished by June 1 and the third about three weeks later.

"What's a Wife Worth" a Family Picture

Guaranteed by the National Motion Picture League's Reviewing Board, as a clean and entertaining story, "What's a Wife Worth," William Christy Cabanne's production distributed by Robertson-Cole has been placed on the approved list of family film by "The Lookout," a religious publication of large general circulation.

The list of endorsed motion pictures is published by "The Lookout" for the purpose of stimulating demand for motion pictures suitable not only for adults, but wholesome as well for children of all ages.

ABOUT PLAYERS

Doraldina, the celebrated dancer and motion pieture star, will soon complete her whirlwind tour of the south and southwest where she has been making personal appearanees over the Loew circuit, in conjunction with the showing of her latest picture, "Passion Fruit." Merritt Crawford, press representative for Mme. Doraldina, is considering subscribing to all the newspapers in the cities covered by the star's itinerary, as being less expensive than the charges of his clipping bureaus.

At the Famous Playcrs-Lasky Eastern Studio second annual Ball, a goodly number of screen stars appeared, including Wallace Reid, who made his first personal appearance in New York, when he played the saxophone in the orchestra and took part in Kenneth Webb's motion picture satire. Under the title of "You Must Come Over," the sketch was recently presented at the Actors' Equity Annual Show, at which time Frank Craven, Thomas Meighan and many stage and screen celebrities enacted the roles assigned them. Vacancics in the original cast were substituted by Alice Brady, Constance Binney, Robert Schable, Reginald Denny, George Fawcett and others. Miss Binney, unable to appear, was replaced by Frankie Mann. Many executives of the company and of other producing units were among the dancers.

Jules Cowles, the well known eccentric character lead, will be seen in a prominent role in "On the Back Lot," the initial production of the Pantheon Pictures Corporation, starring Anetha Getwell.

The role which Mr. Cowles portrays is one of the most effeetive in the picture and for which he was selected by Director Charles Miller. It is said that his work in "On the Back Lot" is some of the best of his screen career.

The story was written by George Dubois Proctor and made at Port Henry, New York.

Members of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York who visited at the International Film Studios recently to see how Cosmopolitan productions are made

Following the completion of a special production, "Crossed Currents," in which Arline Pretty will be starred, Miss Pretty departed for the Pacific Coast, with Los Angeles as the main point in her destination. Stopping en route at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, to visit her mother, Miss Pretty was entertained by Governor Sproul, a boyhood friend of her father's. New York may bid farewell to Miss Pretty, since she expects to remain on the coast indefinitely.

Plans for the new Gladys Gentry Productions Company are progressing rapidly and, it is said, that Miss Gentry will begin work very soon on her first story, "The American" by Booth Tarkington.

Miss Gentry has recently interviewed one or two very well known directors, but has not, it is said, as yet decided who will handle the megaphone for her in her initial starring vehicle.

"The American" will be the first of a series of pictures, designed especially for entertainments for schools and churches, but equally desirable for the better class theatres, as their subjects will be neither educational or religious in character, whieh will be made with Miss Gentry as the star.

Irene Tams has completed her work in "Determination" and has left for a four weeks vacation in California, previous to preparations for her next activities. Upon her return to New York, the first of her own productions will be put under way, the beginning of a series of features in which she will star. "Hell's Toy Shop" is the title of number one, of the "Irene Tams Productions, Inc."

Rockcliffe Fellowes has completed work on the new Marshall Neilan production, temporarily titled "Some People," in which he plays the leading role. Fellowes is taking his first vacation in three years at his new home in New Rochelle and sends word that he is going to devote his spare time to orchid culture. Rockcliffe is trying to be an orchid Burbank and his ambition is said to be to develop a plant with a truly black blossom.

The Sennett classie girl has emerged from the Sennett Bathing girl and though equally pretty, seeing that she is the same girl, she is no longer to be seen in the limitations of a one-piece bathing damsel.

And this announcement, which comes officially from the Maek Sennett organization, is not the result of any censorship. For one thing, the Sennett Bathing Beauty (though others have been) has never been censored.

But, says Mr. Sennett, the Sennett Bathing Girl has been badly imitated, and in certain quarters there has been so deeided a tendency to vulgarize the Bathing Girl, that he deeided, since it was his innovation in picture land, to continue to lead—by abandoning the Bathing Beauty.

Wherefore comes now the Sennett Classic girl and her first claim to wide public notice will be found in the Comedy King's forthcoming and latest big-film achievement, "Home Talent" in whieh the principal players are Charlie Murray, Ben Turpin, Kalla Pasha and Eddie Gribbon, among the male fun-makers, and Phyllis Haver, Harriet Hammond, Kathryn McGuire and Mildred June among the feminine beauties, while a droll character-offering is provided by the inimitable "Dot" Farley.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

Hollywood is to have its ground-floor duplicate of New York's Ziegfeld Roof. This became a certainty when William Desmond Taylor, as President of the coast lodge of Motion Picture Directors' Association, added his signature to those of his colleagues and closed one of the largest deals of its kind in the annals of motion pictures. For a consideration of $165,000 Michael Klomtner has received from the directors of fifteen year cafe lease on the entire main floor of the Motion Picture Directors' Assoeiation new building, the construction of which is well under way, the cost estimated at $200,000.

The cafe to be established by Mr. Klemtner will be second to none on the Pacific coast it is said.

Mr. William Desmond Taylor, chief executive of the coast lodge of M. P. D. A. of which the building corporation is a subsidiary, made the deal official from his hospital bed, where he was recovering from an operation. Officers of the Association, include Roy Clements, Sam Wood, Reginald Barker, Joseph DeGrasse, Frank Lloyd, Ben Wilson and Wallace Worsley.

William Nigh, who recently completed "Why Girls Leave Home," co-starring little Maurice Powers and Anna Q. Nilsson, will shortly begin work on a big special. The name of the picture and that of the star has been kept a deep secret, but it is hinted that the story will be by Mr. Nigh, himself, and the star will be a very well known male star.

Rumor linked the name of Wesley Barry with Mr. Nigh, two weeks ago, but little Wesley seems pretty closely identified with his director and Pal, Marshall Neilan. Maurine Powers will probably play the ingenue in the new picture.

The future of French motion pictures in United States, was discussed at a dinner given by Madame Leonce Perret, attractive wife of Leonce Perret, well known French director (now abroad). The gathering was one in honor of two of their countrymen, Max Linder, popular screen comedian and Abel Gance producer of "J'Accuse." Other film notables present were Emile Chautard, and Henry Roussel, French motion picture magnate, visiting in New York. The future of French films in America formed a major part of the conversation as well as methods and means for enhancing and fostering the motion picture entente cordiale between the United States and France. Madame Perret stated that her husband, Leonce Perret has completed two elaborate features, each with an internationally well known cast during his stay abroad, but that it had not yet been determined whether he would make his next picture in France or in America.

Phillip Carle, recently assistant director to Robert G. Vignola, of Cosmopolitan Productions, has been engaged to direct and has become megaphone executive for the Holman Day stories, which are to be filmed in the Maine woods. Mr. Carle is both popular and efficient, and the Independents have scored a gain upon Cosmopolitan's loss.

Charles Miller, who directed "On the Back Lot," the initial production of the Pantheon Pictures Corporation, starring Anetha Getwell, has been missing recently from his usual haunts. His disappearance is explained by the fact that he has been directing his latest picture at Port Henry, New York, and since his return he has been busy editing and titling the picture and attending to his duties as director of the M. P. D. A. New York Lodge.

Thomas Engler has joined the Realart publicity staff.

Again we hear that Marshall Neilan is comnig West this week.

Mildred Davis is spending a vacation at Tacoma, Washington.

Beauty and brains from Omaha have been here to see our film industry.

Harvey O'Higgins has gone back to see rehearsals of "Main Street."

And now "Lorna Doone" is to be thrown on the screen by Maurice Tourneur.

It is now almost definitely stated that Clara Hammon will not be starred in pictures.

Now that Jack Conway has finished "The Scarlet Shawl," he is going to make "The Black Cap."

Since Harry Meyers jumped into fame he has so many engagements he don't know what to do.

The Hal Roach Studio now has a 75 x 75 swimming tank and it is expected Hal Roach will stick around a bit.

Brunettes, according to Helene Chadwick, should not use Lily of the Valley perfume. Why should Helene know?

J. H. Walraven takes his pen in hand to advise us that the "Last of the Mohicans" was photographed by Charles Van Enger.

Joe Jackson has furnished this office with a list of musical selections that will make the various Goldwyn players cry.

Marie Prevost was to appear in "Kissed," but the Universal changed the program and now she is going to be starred in "The Butterfly."

President Ray Rockett has discovered a new beauty in the person of Dorothy Wolley, who hails from Sidney, Australia.

George Walsh has gone East and incidentally will give the suckers of Chicago a treat by a number of personal appearances.

Tod Browning claims working in a movie snowstorm is the thirstiest experience he can conceive because the snow is salt.

The Chamber of Commerce of our village has adopted resolutions agreeing with many of the industry that films do not need censors.

Will M. Ritchie is the author of another article, "The New Poses for Film Stars," which was interesting to say the least.

It is said Stroheim will finish "Foolish Wives" in Three Weeks, which is not meant to be a play on the title of Elinor's book.

Phil Rosen has taken up the duty of directing, subject entitled "Handle with Care," which, by the way, will be a Rockett.

According to stories reaching our sanctum, the Germans have made about one thousand films and they are all coming over here at once.

Now that the price of gasoline is coming down the Hal Roach players are moving to Culver City to save gasoline. Yes, the Studio is there, too.

A mimeograph copy comes to us bearing the heading, "Exclusive News," and we would have fallen for the entire lot if it had not been for the office boy.

Dave Kesson did such wonderful photographic work on Neilan's "Bob Hampton of Placer" that Dave now has a regular job with a long term contract.

Bees used on a Wanda Hawley set strayed to a Mary Miles Minter set the other day and caused considerable trouble if that is what you want to call it.

Dallas Fitzgerald has found Coronado Beach ideal location for the Vi Dana Matchbreakers company, and so the troupe is combining business with pleasure.

Now that Bayard Veiller has invented a picture with practically no close-ups, he is extremely unpopular in the minds at least of many stars and starettes.

John McCormick went to New York to a convention and wireless messages bring the information that he got a boil and an ulcerated tooth. Outside of that he is having a wonderful time.

Los Angeles had a genuine Middle West wind storm in a fashionable section of the city and the same day Tom Ince staged a snow storm at his Studio, thereby proving that the weather is unusual.

June Mathis has designed a model dress suitable for either sex after leaving this earth, so when you see "A Trip to Paradise" you can see what June's idea of the heavenly dress is.

Lois Weber publicity department comes forward with a statement that Louis Calhern has to wear everything but the kitchen stove in his next picture, which recalls the term formerly used in mixing drinks.

And so Ethel Grandin is coming back to the screen in a picture entitled "The Hunch," if that means anything. It is interesting to note her last work was in "The Crimson Stain."

Mob scenes are mob scenes, but not with inexperienced Mexicans, so Noble Johnson thinks for fifty or more women gave him awful bad treatment. It was the last scenes for the Walsh film, and now he has time to recuperate.

And now the word comes to us that the printer of the paper for "Two Weeks with Pay" made a mistake and gave credit for the scenario to Douglas Bronson and the credit really belonged to Alice Eyton.

Will Rogers says he can weep to the strains of "Annie Laurie" and Lon Chaney to "Let the Rest of the World Go Buy," while Mary Alden says "Dear Old Pal of Mine" is her weeping melody. Complete list on file for those who wish to see them weep.

Members of Western Motion Pictures Advertisers entertained the critics of the local newspapers at a beefsteak studio dinner on a Marion Fairfax Production country newspaper set. Mike Boylan, Bill Keefe, Dick Spear, Realart Kiesling and some more of the Irish presided and said many cutting things. Adam Shirk was there with his slight of hand tricks to demonstrate how he could get things in the paper. The critics were given thirty seconds to answer and then rung down. Grace Kingsley was featured as the engenue, Florence Lawrence the vamp, Monroe Lathrop capered away with the juvenile honors, while Edwin Shallert was the old, old, old newspaper editor and Guy Price the bootlegging tramp printer. Aside from that a good time was had by all.

Chas. Ray's "Scrap Iron" to Have Premiere

"Scrap Iron," Charles Ray's next feature, is to have its initial New York showing in the Mark Strand Theatre, starting on Sunday May 29th. During the same week it will be seen also in the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis. The official release date is May 30th.

The managers of both these houses selected this picture from a list of several available for the last week of the month, and after there had been spirited competition among agents who sought to place their offerings. Joseph Plunkett is preparing an appropriate prologue, with a special musical program, to use in the Strand while "Scrap Iron" occupies the screen there. This picture is said to offer uncommon opportunities for exploitation, and, as usual, exhibitors in all parts of the country expect to gather ideas from the presentation which Mr. Plunkett is arranging.

A new picture of Alice Calhoun, who has just completed her forthcoming Vitagraph release, "Closed Doors," and is busy on another

Louis B. Mayer Picture Titled "Retribution"

Louis B. Mayer has finally selected "Retribution" as the most suitable title for the John M. Stahl special, the filing and cutting of which has just been finished under the working title of "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

With a theme rich in "heart interest" and an all-star cast which includes Lewis Stone, Barbara Castleton, Richard Heddrick, William Desmond, Winter Hall, and Joseph Swickard, "Retribution" should prove a worthy standard bearer for the new series of John M. Stahl Productions which Mr. Mayer will present through Associated First National during the next two years.

The story was written by Perry Vecroff who also adopted it to the screen. It was photographed by Ernest Palmer, A. S. C. The cutting and assembling was done by Mr. Stahl himself, and the finished negative is now on the way to New York from the coast.

Commodious Auditorium Provided for Ashland's Theatre

Wide Aisles and Roomy Seats Add to Attractiveness

Ashland's (Ky.) splendid new moving cture theatre, The Palace, opened for siness on Monday, March 14.

The new Palace is situated just across e street from the Y. M. C. A. building, East Main street. Messrs. Clark and lwards acquired the large lot on which e Palace stands from the Sherrick es- te and made arrangements for the erec- on of the building at once notwithstand- g the fact that building material and bor were at their highest point last year hen the work was started. They hold ith in Ashland and its future, and by ing rare business judgment in buying id management they succeeded in get- ng without appreciable delay a building ected that stands today as one of the ry best and most modern picture thea- es to be found in any city in the country.

The building occupies the entire large t and extends from Main street through Second street. It is composed of brick id cement and the construction is fire- oof. In fact the structure was built ith that idea uppermost in order to give eatre-goers safety in every sense of the ord, and it is absolutely fireproof in ality.

Description of the Building

The building fronts on Main street and artistic in appearance. The front is two ories in height. The main entrance is in e center and is beautiful and inviting. n the east of the entrance proper is a nall but well-appointed store room which is already been leased. On the west of e entrance is a larger store room which so has been leased. These two business oms are admirably adapted to retail bus- ess requirements.

Up stairs on the second floor in front e three office suites of two rooms each, odernly equipped and having two en- ances to each suite, making classy quar- rs for office purposes. There are two ilet rooms on the second floor for the nefit of the offices. The meter room id janitor is situated on the second floor.

While the front part of the building is ken up for the most part with these de- rable office and store rooms, it must be rne in mind that the building was de- signed especially for a moving picture theatre and in that it excels anything in this section of the country.

Commodious Auditorium

Entrance to the auditorium is gained through a lobby or foyer that is a beauty. The entrance is on a level with the street and the lobby has a gentle incline its entire length. This lobby is sixteen feet wide and forty feet long and is what would be called "a dream" by many. The floor resembles marble and is constructed of tarraza. This was manufactured and laid by the Art Terraza Co. of Sandusky. There are four large glass doors near the front and the entire woodwork is of mahogany finish. This woodwork and in fact all the woodwork in the building has been under the expert management of the boss carpenter, Reuben Kopp.

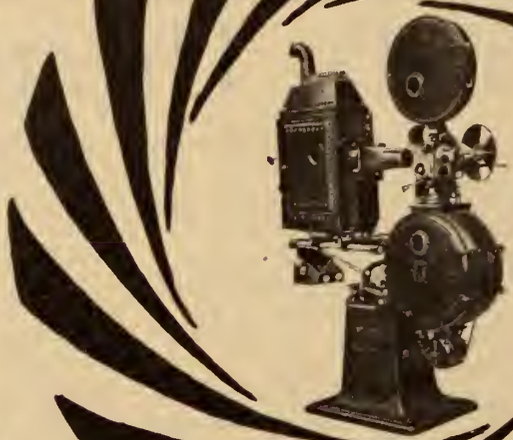
On the right side of the foyer is located the cozy ticket office, the public telephone booth and the manager's private business office. At the end or head of the lobby is situated a magnificent formation which is lit up artistically with electric lights. The fountain pond is large and will contain gold fish, little ducks and geese and the decorations.

At the right and left are ells in the lobby or foyer. The ladies' drinking fountain is on the west side and off of this side is the ladies' complete toilet and wash room. On the east is the gentlemen's drinking fountain and off of this side is the gentlemen's toilet and wash room. All of the appointments are perfect and will be a surprise to the public when seen. While there is no probable chance of fire breaking out in this theatre every precaution has been taken against such a contingency. Fire plugs and lines of hose are accessible should occasion ever require.

The auditorium of theatre proper must be seen to be appreciated. It is very large and the decorations are in such harmony that it cannot help but appeal to the best tastes and desires of the public. The entire building is 50 feet wide and 150 feet long; and the auditorium is 50 feet wide and 100 feet long. The seats are individual in type, are extra comfortable and were furnished by the Kauffman Manufacturing Company of Ashland. The aisles are wide and will be welcomed on account of the easy access of crowds to and from the street.

In the rear of the auditorium and across the center section are the box seats. The chairs for the boxes are of a high quality and were furnished by the furniture store of George M. Gilbert of Ashland. The stage has fine draperies to match all decorations and these draperies were supplied by Ashland's well known department store, The Home Company.

Large Pipe Organ



The orchestra pit is equipped with a piano and an organ. This organ is one of the finest instruments made and is such as is found only in the theatres of the largest cities. The organ is located in chambers on either side of the screen, the tone coming out of the ornamental grills. The console is placed in the orchestra pit and in connection to the organ by a cable containing miles of wires. This organ was built by A. J. Schantz Sons & Co., of Orrville, Ohio, who are now also installing an organ in St. Mary's church at Massillon, and which will be the largest organ in Ohio.

Auditorium Decorations

The auditorium side walls are embellished with eight large framed mirrors, each illuminated by two electric lights. These are for decorations only. There are a number of electric wall plugs for adding extra ventilating fans should the occasion require. Suspended from the ceiling are six large dome lighting fixtures which will furnish a semi-indirect light. These domes are arranged to emit three different colors of light, red, white and blue, and these can be regulated to suit the color of the pictures that are being shown.

The projection machines are Simplexes. They are equipped with carbon arcs for either direct current or alternating current. These Simplex projectors also have in-

ALL NEW PROJECTORS WORK WELL

IT isn't how well a motion picture projector works when it is new that counts, but how well it works after it has seen strenuous service for weeks and months.

MOTIOGRAPH DeLuxe

Where other machines begin to lose their efficiency after a short period, the Motiograph DeLuxe will steadily maintain the same high standard, no matter how hard or often it is used.

Twenty years of satisfied service is back of every Motiograph DeLuxe Projector.

"Automatic" Keynote of Motion Pictures of Tomorrow

Motion picture engineering is emerging as a fession of power and vision. The motion ture engineer is master of the materials, de- es, energy, and ideas which equip the motion ture art to portray any real or ideal scene ich nature gives or the mind of man con- ves. The field of motion picture engineering a circle having a well-defined center but no cumference. It is worth while to survey its tral function and its farther reaches. Its mary function is to create mechanism to ord and project pictures made dynamic and ve by a timed-sequence which is the soul of tion picture engineering. The ideals of the entive engineer will make the motion picture of tomorrow, for that art has no limitation ier than the creative imagination of the artist the technical resources of the motion picture gineer. Nor can we overlook his further ction which concerns the studio, the theatre, xiliary mechanisms, lights, incidental appeals the senses, and finally the subject matter of pictures, for the subjects give directions to efforts and in turn are enriched by new vices.

What of the future? Shall we ignore it? We not, for our labor is all for the future. Is it ssible we are working for a future we do t see, for an outcome we do not know, toys caprice of predestiny, or can we master our e? Human evolution has two extraordinary sults: the steady emergence of man's power know the cosmos and assimilate the expe- nce of all men, and the steady rise of man's ntrol of his own future making it indeepndent his heredity, his past, and his environment e are freer to make destiny than ever before, er to control nature and today we have the owledge, the materials, mechanisms, and ergy, and will to plan our own future. Science edicts. That is its chief function and its wer. The engineer uses such predictions and akes programs which become a prophecy which makes come true. So you see it is not so uch prophecy we need as it is a program. I ek chiefly to stir your own vision of a future ight with achievements in your field, to foresee t what is coming, but rather what you are to ing. So it is for you to make the program for e year 1950 and this is my thought in this talk "The Motion Pictures of Tomorrow."

It is possible to make continuous and rapid ogress if for all new knowledge we could tablish direct channels from all the sciences every motion picture engineer so that all w data may be made instantly available for e in your field. Is this possible? It is cer- inly possible and I feel that it is inevitable. the sciences an extraordinary thing has hap- ned this century. The splitting up of human tivities into minute specialties has not pre- nted it. The cause is the avalanche of new ta resulting from new research and technical perience. The result is that no specialist can ep up with new knowledge even in his own ld. The case is becoming steadily more seri- us as new data multiply at a faster rate. What e we to do? We shall be driven to do what ie new education teaches that we ought to o—namely, to stop making our brains mere ore houses for facts. The brain is too valu- le for that.

The brain is the organ of action, not of fact storage. Yet such data are the basis of all your progress. When we had few telephones we had no directory; today we print them all in a b c order in a directory and can find any number in a few seconds. We must make all technical facts accessible for instant use. Our dictionary is a beginning. With a half million words in our language, we can find any word and its meaning in half a minute because it is arranged for that purpose. We must apply that idea for existing knowledge, and to the deluge of new knowledge, priceless but overwhelming. Our system of knowledge is breaking down and a new system is called for, to objectivize such data, externalize our memory, as we have extended our eye and ear. Then for the first time our brain will be used as an organ of action which the psychologists are recognizing as its true function. The ideal is simple. To make all existing and new knowledge available for instane use by a technical expert, as handy and accessible as his purse or his pocketknife. We must move toward that ideal and when it is reached progress will be quickened to a rate we do not dream of today.

It is a very old idea that progress comes both by steady improvements, and also by jumps—in biology called mutations. Mechanical inventions come by mutations. In the art of communication the speaking trumpet came first. The speaking tube was a device of a new kind—a pipe line for speech. The telephone displaced the empty tube by solid metal wire. Finally the radio telephone is a new art by which one voice may talk with the whole world through space. Invention as the ultimate art will survive when all industry becomes automatic and power-driven and all men are freed from the struggle for bread and the tyranny of needless toil and free to choose new constructive work. We must expect new kinds of arts during the coming quarter century. Invention, or the design of the automatic power machine, will be the big business for years to come.

Now why in working on any device can we not begin with a theoretically ideal specification. Day-dream the ultimate perfected device, then bring it down to earth modified as little as possible. Insist especially that it be automatic, power-driven, and operable continuously on call so that the operator may become an observer rather than a worker.

I think we all foresee the trend of projector design—we shall soon have the individual projector by which every one may observe any film at his own desk or library table. An individual projector may use a thinner film with small pictures, so that one may use the projector as he uses a book or pencil, slip it into his pocket, carry it with him for use anywhere. Our home libraries will be equipped to exhibit pictures, as easily as we play a Victrola. Such devices are already available, and will evolve into the animated newspaper of tomorrow. Public libraries of course will have individual screens and projectors for each ready and great collections of highly specialized films on every conceivable topic.

The motion picture engineer is concerned with the total effect on the audience. The limit of your field is your vision and your opportunity, and you create both. Just one or two casual thoughts on the theatre, suggestive rather than definitive. The form of the theatre may receive radical treatment. Today's crowding resembles the days of unregulated street traffic. We may establish one-way aisles and apply every other device of traffic management to ensure easy entrance and exit. Hats and wraps must be cared for by some perfect system not yet devised. Seats must be designed by correct-posture experts for perfect comfort and health, with two independent chair arms for each person. The seats will of course fold automatically as soon as vacated to allow easy exit. Coin-operated vending machines will dispense disks which in turn will operate easy-working turnstiles according to seat location, eliminating both the box office and the ticket takers. A tiny lamp would light showing for each row that seats were available, the color indicating the number vacant, thus largely replacing the usher. The keynote is the word "automatic."

The theatre size will range from the "little theatres" to the huge theatres for master-productions. The little theatres with lower magnifications will be better for highly specialized films requiring perfect definition. Little theatres will also be suitable for innovations which must meet the challenge of popular taste before being assimilated into appreciated art. At the other extreme we may have vast circular theatres with concentric circles of seats facing the center where each sector will be provided with its own screen and projector all operating with one film. Many times the present chowds could be served and all the advantages of large-scale production would obtain.

Five years ago I was privileged to suggest to you the possible complete control of indoor climate within the theatre. My belief is within the reach of present-day technology, both as to data and mechanisms. We cool the air for the dead cattle of the stockyards, why not for the hot and tired thousands in need of refreshment and recreation? We govern humidity for spinning cotton, why not also for making happy lives? We control pressure of air in caissons and altitude chambers for industrial tasks, why not for the highest art, promoting human wellbeing? Within the theatre we might have the perfect climate, the most exhilarating possible while outside the rain, the heat, the humidity, or the cold might be excessive. This would require conformity to every item of the specification of each type of agreeable climate desired, expressed in units of measure and therefore reproducible. The engineer could control at the optimum value every item such as cooling or heating, drying the air, increasing the air pressure or decreasing it, adding the healthful touch of ozone, ensuring air purity by filtering or by labyrinths of mercury arcs to give the ultraviolet radiation adequate, atomizing the essences of perfumes such as the odor of the pinewoods, the tang of the sea, the fragrance of the flowers, or "the spicy odors of Araby the blest." All of these elements are today separately realized in actual service and need but the unifying hand of the engineer to realize in combination. This would make the theatre most attractive at all times since we could duplicate the finest climates of the most famous resorts of the world.

Nadeau Works Out Novel Scheme for Producing Black and White Cutouts

By Use of Enlarging Camera He is Able to Make Silhouettes for Display Purposes

LARGE cutouts, those made from 24-sheets, have a striking effect when mounted on the marquis; but for night effects, the colors often fail to stand out under electric lights and much of the effect is lost.

Albert Nadeau, manager of the Bluebird theatre, in Anaconda, Mont., where Associated First National features are shown, with his assistant, William Bogg, has, after considerable experimenting worked out a simple method of making black-and-white cutouts which have a striking effect. Pictures no longer than an inch in diameter have been enlarged to six or eight feet with excellent results.

The method is simple and can be handled by almost any theatre manager. All that is necessary is a home-made baloptican such as indicated by the enclosed sketch, and the sketch is almost self-explanatory.

The baloptican itself (the box) is simply a rough wood box, made practically light tight. In the front two convex (ordinary stereopticon) lens are mounted, while the back is sliding. The can is simply any large tin can with both top and bottom removed, tacked in the front of the box to avoid sidelights from the two lights.

The picture which it is desired to reproduce is mounted on the sliding back with thumbtacks. Rays from two powerful nitrogen filled electric lamps on each side of lens are thrown back on the picture by use of reflectors. The can keeps the light from cutting into the "path of the image" and cutting down the foot candlepower on the "screen." By moving the back, forward and backward a focus on the "screen" is obtained.

The image is thrown through the lens to the mirror and reflected at right angles to the "screen." Use of two or three sets of lens (long and short focus) is more satisfactory in that the baloptican is easier to operate but they are not necessary. By moving the box backward and forward almost any size image may be obtained.

The "screen" is wall board covered with white paper or painted with a dull white paint. The latter is more satisfactory as paper is likely to buckle.

After shifting the baloptican and the movable back until the image of the size wanted is in focus on the screen, the lines are outlined with a pencil. Full lights are then switched on and the outlined spaces filled in with dull black paint and finally the image cut out and mounted on the marquee. Standing 50 feet away from the image after it is completed and half-closing the eyes it is possible to get the effect of half a block's distance and the appearance of the cutout when viewed from a distance can be ascertained.

With a couple of lights reflected on the dull black and white, the cut-out can be easily recognized at a block's distance, and consequently "brings 'em from down the street." It is particularly adapted for use with a star whose popularity insures a full house. The picture of Constance Talmadge, enclosed was made from a cut clipped from a trade magazine. The original was about an inch and one-half in height.

Will Build a $70,000 House About Sept. 1.

Negotiations were concluded recently for the lease of the Sinnott property on the southwest corner of Third and Burnside streets, Portland, Oregon, to Eugene Blazier, the contracts being signed by Blazier and W. T. and T. J. Sinnott. The lease is for 15 years and involves several hundred thousand dollars. John Manning who handled the deal, refused to disclose the exact consideration of the amount involved. The deal includes, however, the razing of the old buildings on the site and the erection of a modern theatre to cost, equipped, around $70,000 Manning said.

The buildings occupying the quarter block involved are tenanted by the Bowman Merchandise company and the Rialto restaurant. Their leases are about to expire and work of razing will be started about September 1. The new theatre will be of concrete and will have seats for 1200 persons. The entire building will be used for a theatre except one or two store rooms to face Burnside street.

Lamb Drawing Plans for Million Dollar House

Barney Miller of New Britain, Ct., who is acting as agent in that city for the William Fox Corporation of New York, which plans to build a $1,000,000 theatre on the Shurberg property, near the junction of Main and East Main streets in that city, has announced that plans for the structure are expected within a week or 10 days and will be filed with the building inspector. Thomas W. Lamb, architect, of 644 Eighth avenue, New York, is preparing plans for the theatre and recently secured a copy of the New Britain building ordinances through Mr. Miller.

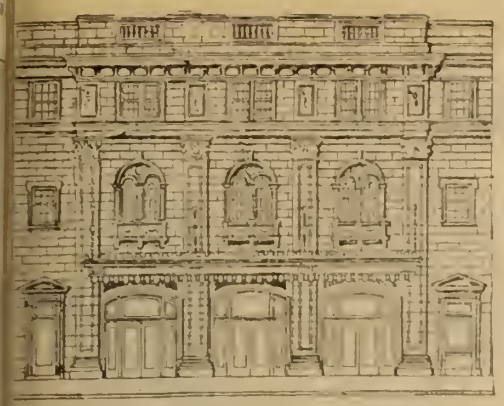
Construction Gossip

Plans for a modern fireproof theatre to seat 1200 have been drawn by Francis J. Kennard the Tampa architect, and the contract has been given to the McGucken Company, also of Tampa, Fla. The house will cost around $100,000.

Winter Haven, Fla., is to have a new theatre also. Work has been started on a new house there to seat 500. The contract was awarded to J. C. Hanner Company of Orlando, Fla., and the cost is reported to be $20,000.



New theatres now under construction in Detroit are the New Adams, 2600 Junction avenue; Tuxedo, Hamilton and Tuxedo; new theatre 7316 Michigan avenue.

The Northern Theatre Co. has been organized with a capital stock of $300,000 to erect a new house at Woodward and Louise avenues. It will occupy a plot of ground 90 by 150, will seat about 2,500 and will be ready in the fall. The theatre is just north of the Ford Motor Co plant in Highland park, a Detroit suburb.

Messrs. Lanigan & Kelley, owners of the Hi-Art theatre in Lockport, N. Y. will build a new theatre in the Lock City soon. They have secured an option on a piece of property in the business district. Work on enlarging the Hi-Art was started a few days ago and when it is finished this house will be one of the finest in Western New York.

Provisions for a modern motion picture theatre will probably be included in plans for rebuilding of the burned St. Jean block at Ware, Mass. P. H. Provencal of the Ware Building Association reports that the insurance has been adjusted and a meeting of the association will be called within the next two or three weeks to consider rebuilding. Tentative plans are to have a greater part of the ground floor occupied by the proposed theatre.

Warwick theatre, Kansas City

Two Theatres to Be Built in Portland, Ore.

Two new theatres are to be erected by the Portland Amusement Company, Portland, Ore., owners of the American, Burnside and Casino cinema and combination picture and vaudeville houses. Construction of the first one will begin this summer. Although the motion picture interests will be the main attractions it will be constructed with stage and equipment so that drama or vaudeville may be housed there. The other is to be located on north Sixth street and will not be built before fall.

I. Leeser Cohen, general manager of the company, has left on a visit of inspection to several eastern cities including Chicago, Philadelphia and New York. He will observe the latest methods of construction and seating and bring back with him the newest and improved plans for modern theatres.

New Picture House To Be Built in Denver

Denver, May 27.—Construction work will begin within the next few weeks on a new motion picture theatre to cost $75,000, which will be located in Santa Fe drive between Seventh and Ninth avenues, according to announcement by George A. Levy, president of the newly incorporated Liberty Theatres Corp. Mr. Levy declares that it will be one of the finest neighborhood theatres in the West.

This theatre will be the first of a chain of motion picture houses to be built in Denver and the surrounding towns, proposed by the new corporation.

"At present we do not intend to invade Curtis street," said Mr. Levy, but our theatres will rival the Curtis street houses. We feel that there are several locations in thickly populated localities where high-class motion picture theatres would be more than welcome."

According to present plans, the new Santa Fe drive theatre will be ready for its opening performance about September 5, with a program of first-run features. Efforts will be made to hold to the first-run policy so far as possible. Many of the best features will be shown by the Liberty circuit before they are shown on Curtis street, said Mr. Levy.

Half Million Dollar House Is Under Way for Kansas City Theatre Owners

"Electric" Name of New House—Another Theatre to Spend $100,000 Remodeling

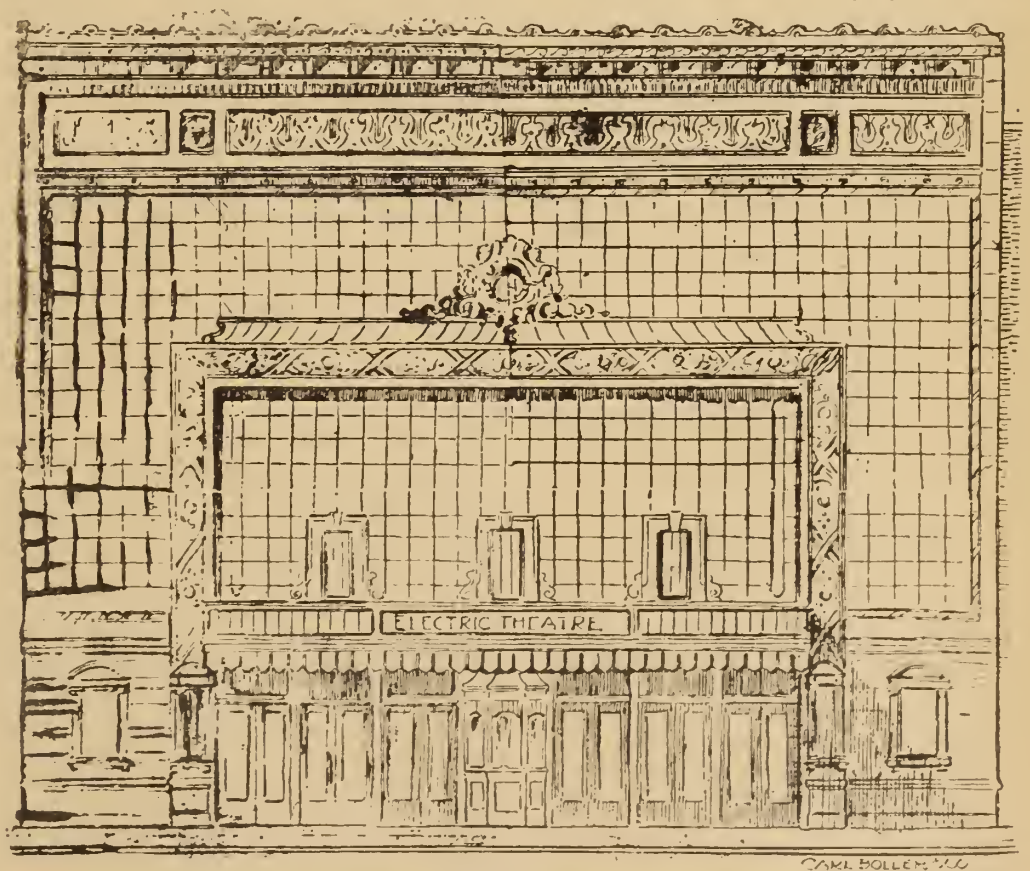
For years Kansas City, Kan., with a population of about 125,000, has been without a first-class motion picture theater. Within the course of a few months, however, that city will have a motion picture house which will compare favorably with the best of week-run houses in the Middle West.

Construction work is already under way on the new Electric theatre, which is being erected by E. J. and F. C. Grubel, at a cost of $500,000. The new theatre, which will be located at 628-30-32-34 Minnesota Avenue, will be by far the most elaborately constructed motion picture house in the state of Kansas. The Grubel Brothers, who will operate the new house, own a chain of motion picture houses in the Middle West.

The Electric theatre will have a frontage of 80 feet and will be 49 feet in height. The front will consist of gray and green glazed terra-cotta, while a center over the canopy will be constructed of art glass, back of which colored lights will be operating constantly, giving the front a unique appearance from the street. The building will be entirely of fireproof construction, while the main lobby will measure 30 by 40 feet. The theatre proper will be 80 feet wide and 125 feet deep, with a maximum ceiling height of 60 feet.

A children's playroom on the downstairs floor will be elaborately equipped with every known device that provides pleasure for children. A concealed system of lighting will be put into effect and the latest devices for manipulating lights will be installed. A large pipe organ is also planned.

The seating capacity of the Electric will be 2,000. Carl Boller & Bro. are the architects who drew the plans for the new structure.



Work of rebuilding the Warwick theatre, which will be transformed into Kansas City's largest suburban motion picture house, will begin in July. A new fronting, which will cost about $100,000, is only one of the several features planned by E. W. Werner, lessee.

The Warwick at present seats about 1,300 persons. Fifty-two feet will be added to the rear of the building, the ceiling will be raised and a balcony, containing two hundred loges, built in, increasing the seating capacity to more than 1,800.

The plans include a front of terra-cotta and stone, with elaborate marquetry. New seats also will be installed, and the entire interior will be refurnished and the stage enlarged to accommodate large casts in prologues.

A new Hope-Jones unit orchestral pipe organ, costing $10,000, will be installed in the new house.

While the entire detailed plans have not yet been completed, it is expected that the new structure will be ready by October 1.

Ascher's Auditorium Has a New Manager

Ascher's Auditorium, Dayton, Ohio, has a new manager. Mr. H. M. Rouda, fresh from Chicago is now in charge and he has started to whoop things with a vengeance. He made his appearance just in time to get ready for the showing Easter week arriving in the city on Thursday with a desire to get something new on the map for the Sunday opening.

H. M. Rouda, new manager, Ascher's Auditorium theatre, Dayton, Ohio

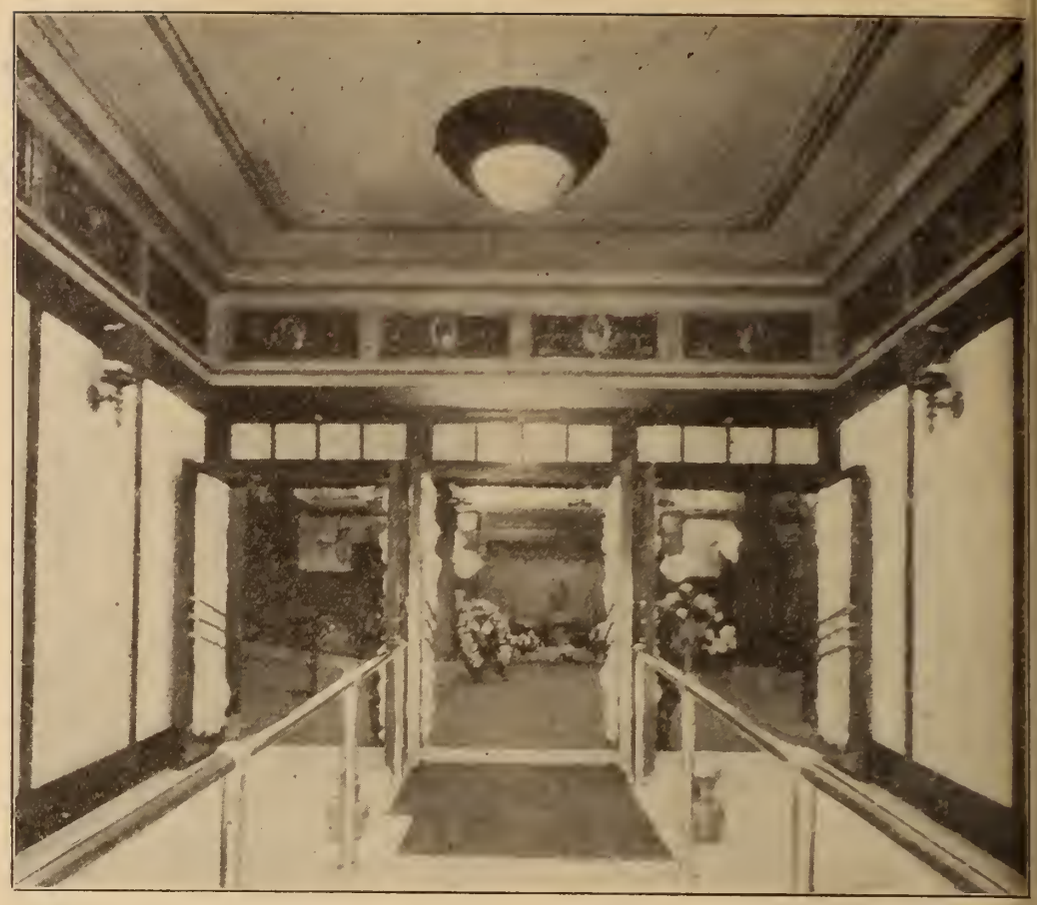
Ascher's Auditorium was originally the "New Auditorium" and is one of the most beautiful houses in Ohio. A magnificent entrance effect has been obtained by covering the walls of the lobby with white marble panelled in black onyx. This leads into a beautiful foyer with entrances to the theatre proper by way of gradual inclined passages both right and left. In the center of the foyer there is a beautiful Rookwood fountain especially modeled for the theatre and to the right is to be found the ladies retiring room which is finished entirely, both walls and ceiling, in dull green Rookwood tiling. The men's room opening at the left of the fountain is finished in like manner and in both are to be found every modern convenience known to theatres.



The theatre itself is of "saucer" type of construction there being no balcony. The floor rising in easy curve from front to back. It is fire proof and one of the most magnificently finished and decorated theatres of its size in the Middle West.

Sell Film Building

The twelve story film building, Seventeenth and Main streets, Kansas City, Mo., was bought Friday by Sam Davidson, a Fort Worth, Texas investor, for $725,000, the sale forming the largest real estate transaction of the year in Kansas City.

The property was purchased from E. P. Pratt, trustee. As part of the consideration Mr. Davidson deeded to Mr. Pratt the Rockhill Manor, a family hotel at Forty-third and Locust streets. It is valued at $225,000.

New Haven Branch Office Makes Good

The New Haven branch office of the Boston Motion Picture Supply Company, one of the New England Distributors of the Simplex Projector, has proven itself to be an essential wing of that well known New England equipment house.

Located in the heart of the New Haven film district at 139 Meadow street, it offers the exhibitors of Connecticut a centrally situated supply house and eliminates the necessity of sending to New York or Boston in the event of an emergency, as was the case in former years.

A very complete line of theatre equipment, including Simplex projectors, parts and all accessories, is maintained at all times at the New Haven branch and Connecticut exhibitors need go no further for any form of theatre necessities.

Mr. Harry Asher, general manager of the Boston office of the Boston Motion Picture Supply Company, realized the importance of his new New Haven branch and was especially careful in selecting the executives which he placed in charge at New Haven and the choice of men reflects Mr. Asher's ability as an executive and his success therein.

Mr. Henry Scully, general manager of the New Haven office, can be truly said to be the best known film man in Connecticut and a universal favorite throughout the state in exhibitor circles. For the past twelve years he held office as general manager of the New Haven branch of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and worked under the direction of Mr. Harry Asher, who at that time was general manager of the New England division of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Louis Phillips, who for a short while was the manager of the Boston office of this supply company, has been selected as Mr. Scully's assistant. While at Boston Mr. Phillips obtained a general training in merchandising and this with the fact that he is one of the most popular projectionists in Central Connecticut and also president of the New Hoven Local Union of Projectionists makes him a particularly valued asset to the company.

Frank Farrell who is the road man in the New Haven branch is another old time projectionist and a member of the New Haven local. He is undoubtedly one of the best versed men on Mazda projection in the state, as he has specialized for years on this type of projection development. Previous to his connection with the Boston Motion Picture Supply Company, he was a representative of a well known line of Mazda equipment and brings to his new employers a wealth of knowledge and experience which is now clearly shown in the large number of orders continuously sent in by him.

The following are some of the recent installations made by the New Haven office: Two regulation motor driven Simplex projectors, Gem theatre, Willimantic, Conn.; two motor driven regulation model Simplex projectors, R. H. Norton's Hall, Guilford, Conn.; two motor driven regulation model Simplex projectors, White City theatre, New Haven, Conn.; two regulation model motor driven Simplex projectors, Bijou theatre, Manville, R. I., and two motor driven regulation Simplex projectors, Princess theatre, Bristol, Conn., all of which indicates very clearly that the Simplex banner is being definitely planted in the Nutmeg state by the energetic trio above mentioned.

stalled in them the latest invention in motion picture lenses, the lenses being the product of the Kollmorgen Optical Corporation of Brooklyn. The port holes in the booth are fitted with automatic sliding fire doors from which are attached fused links which automatically cause the doors to drop or close in case of intense heat or fire. This fireproof booth has a ventilator through to the roof of the building and no fire or smoke can possibly reach the auditorium. The projector is in charge of D. T. Johnson, who is an expert in that line. Mr. Johnson is business agent of the International Association of Theatrical stage employes and motion picture machine operators, and a member of Local Union 576.

VENTILATING SYSTEM

One of the most important factors of this modern movie house is the ventilating system. The Palace is equipped with the latest word in this department. It is the mechanical hot blast system and was manufactured and installed by the Columbus Heating & Ventilating Co. There are installed in the Palace two large furnaces side by side, and either one can be used, or both, as desired or necessary. This system has a special electric motor and large sirocco blower or fan which pulls fresh air in from the top and outside of the building and forces it heated into the auditorium. It is claimed that the air in the building by this method is entirely changed ten times each hour. In the summer this blower system is used to force cool air into the auditorium instead of heated air, making the theater comfortable not only in the coldest but also in the hottest weather.

The exit doors are all fitted with specially designed theatre hardware so that a slight push of the body against the door from the inside releases the lock and the doors fly open. The exit signs over the doors are exceptionally large, well illuminated and easily readable in a dark house. The immense electric sign "Palace" which hangs in front of the building is an attractive one and can be easily seen from any part of Main street.

Supply and Equipment Division Nominate Directors

The Fifth Annual meeting of the General and Supply and Equipment Divisions members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was held at the headquarters, May 21, 1921.

Fred J. Beecroft, 729 Seventh Avenue; Paul H. Cromelin, 218 West 42nd Street; John C. Flinn, 485 Fifth Avenue; Paul Gulick, 1600 Broadway; Arthur James 516 Fifth Avenue; Martin J. Quigley 1476 Broadway, N. Y., and Chicago, Ill. Fred Rothenberg, 136 W. 52nd Street P. H. Stilson, 485 Fifth Avenue, Thomas G. Wiley, 209 West 38th Street.

Fred J. Beecroft was elected Chairman of the General Division, Paul H. Cromelin Vice-Chairman and Julian Solomon, Secretary.

Plans were discussed for a campaign for members for this division, to be formulated for special consideration at the annual meeting on June 6th.

A resolution of sympathy was adopted to be extended to the widow of the late, James L. Hoff.

At the meeting of the Supply and Equipment Division the following were nominated as directors representing this division, to be elected at the annual meeting:

Harry N. Allen, Wyanoak Publishing Company; Jules E. Brulatour, Eastman Films, Inc.; Willard B. Cook, Pathescope Co. of America; B. J. Knoppleman, Excelsior Illustrating Co.; H. T. Edwards, United Theatre Equipment Corporation; Walter J. Moore, H. C. Miner Lithographing Co.; E. M. Porter, Precision Machine Co.; Will C. Smith, Nicholas Power Company; L. P. Weber, Acme Lithographing Company.

J. E. Brulatour was re-elected Chairman of the Supply and Equipment Division; Walter J. Moore Vice-Chairman and Frederick H. Elliott, Secretary.

The Orchestra Couldn't Hear the Music

The leader of the orchestra and the projectionist had a pretty hot argument.

"Your carbons make such a noise," said the director of jazz, "that we're completely drowned out. Prohibition or not, there's no law against keeping still and condensing your projection to silent operation."

"That being the case," replied the projectionist good naturedly, "the problem is simplified. I just got a lot of

Equipment Operating Projection Questions Answered

Presents a Projection Text Book That Is a Valuable Addition to Any Library

James R. Cameron Has an Expert Prepare Each Chapter—A Handy Mass of Data

Good books on projection are scarce. In fact, books of any quality, good or bad, relating to projection are so infrequent as to create a stir whenever they appear. This is due primarily to the lack of projection engineers qualified to collect and correlate data and facts and to present them in a manner acceptable and readable to the projectionist. "Motion Picture Projection," a handbook of nearly 600 pages, just published by its author, James R. Cameron, comes under the heading of good projection books.

In comparison with all other works now on the market, this book of Cameron's stands in a class by itself because of the viewpoint taken by the author. Instead of posing as an original theorist or as an expert whose skill and knowledge are not to be questioned or even lightly regarded, Mr. Cameron went forth into the haunts of those who know best and got from them the true facts pertaining to their respective phases of projection. All of which is merely a round-about way of saying that, instead of writing the handbook alone and unaided he has managed to prevail on an optical expert to write the chapters on Optics, and a motor generator specialist to prepare the matter pertaining to that device, and so on. And the result has been what one would expect. No one will deny that this is the proper method of preparing a text book on a subject as widely divergent as motion picture projection.

It would be a difficult task to attempt to point out the features that excel. It is better to say that the new material in the book is alone worth the price, while the old "dope" has been retold in straightforward language without frills or by-plays and likewise is equal in value to the book's cost.

There is the usual amount of preliminary and elementary data, leading up through a discussion of the Edison 3-wire system to the layout of a model projection room accompanied by detail drawings and photographs of the latter.

Motor generators of the principal makes are described in full and the troubles common to each are explained in terms easily understandable. The chapter on "Armature Faults and their Location," in particular, was evidently written by an expert and he should be congratulated, whoever he may be, on the simplicity with which he has told his story. This is easily one of the best parts of the book.

Toward the back of the book are digests of the laws of various states regarding theatres, their operation and conduct. A handy mass of data to have. And finally in the very back of the volume is a set of several hundred questions and answers for use in preparing for examinations.

This book should be in the library of every projectionist no matter how many other works on projection may be weighing down his shelf. The price ($3.50) is not a criterion of the worth of "Motion Picture Projection," published by and obtainable from the Theatre Supply Co., 124 West 45th St., New York, N. Y.

New Capitol Theatre Has Fine Projection Room

St. Louis, Mo., can well be proud of its new Capitol theatre, which opened recently in that city. The local press claims it to be the most lavishly decorated and constructed theatre of its size in the entire country, and only seating 1,000, it can be truly regarded a model for this type of house.

With its excellent location in the heart of the busy downtown district of St. Louis, its owners can look forward to promising business.

The Capitol, built by the Skouras Bros., who control a chain of representative theatres throughout St. Louis, will be operated jointly by the Buena Company of St. Louis and the Skouras Bros., whch companies have recently consolidated.

A very essential feature of the Capitol is its very spacious airy projection room, in which the best of propectionists would thoroughly enjoy working. It measures 12 feet wide, 9 feet deep and 8 feet high and is completely equipped by the Erker Bros. Optical Co., the well known distributors of the Simplex Projector in Missouri.

Jos. Schuler and Gus Eisen, two very capable members of the St. Louis Projectionists Union, are placed in charge of the projection room and are truly doing justice to their important positions. Two motor driven type "S" Simplex Projectors provide the projection for this new theatre and with a throw of 125 feet upon a Minusa Screen, they project an 11 x foot picture, with the greatest of clarity and precision.

Projectionist Gives His Views on Film Conditions

Following is reproduced a very interesting letter from a projectionist at Champaign, Ill. Mr. Wills is responsible for the proper projection of pictures in the Park theatre in that town. His letter follows:

Champaign, Ill.,
May 17, 1921.

Technical Editor,
Motion Picture News,
New York, N. Y.

Dear sir: I noticed with much interest the two articles entitled: "Film Exchanges To Give Mechanical Service," and "Who Should Be Responsible For Film Condition?" My reason for such a great interest is this: In the May 8, 1920 issue of Motion Picture News, a letter of mine was published in which the following was stated on page 4048: "The time is coming when the film companies will employ inspectors of the machines throughout the country, since the majority of 'operators' will not take care of their machines." At present the Indianapolis Exchanges are c operating in an effort to keep prints in bett condition.

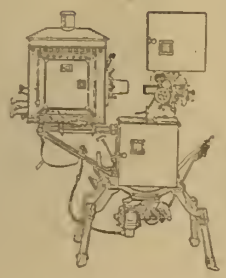
Contrary to the article "Who Should E Responsible For Film Condition?" I woul say that it is up to the exchanges to look aft the exhibitors' machines, for the majority c the exhibitors do not keep their machines i proper condition, and the majority of proje tionists also do not care, as long as they ca get the film through the machines. Now if th exchange tells a manager he must buy part for his machines, the manager must, otherwis he will be without service. I can cite an number of instances where the managers hav refused to purchase new parts because th old ones were still able to be used. Never theless these old parts may be used and use but in the meantime they are damaging th prints of the film companies. So it seems i is entirely up to the exchange to eradicate thi evil of the damaging of their property.

I have a few suggestions that I think woul be of benefit to the N. A. M. L. namely th making of splices. A simple method, mad with cutting of film between the sprocket hole at edge of picture on right hand piece of film and of cutting left film at centre of sprocke hole. This makes a smaller splice than those ordinarily made and yet one that will hold The film of course being rewound from titl onto right hand reel. The reasons for thi are that film will go through machine without a jump provided holes are matched up properly and also in framing the picture up into frame, less of splice will be shown on screen.

Another excellent thing in the booth is two fire extinguishers, one at each machine. The law only requires one, but there is need for two. One does not know when they will have a fire and seconds count in a film fire, therefore an extinguisher handily placed is a benefit.

Speaking of film coming in perfect condition, the Associated Producers Exchange of Chicago, certainly sends out film in perfect condition. By perfect I mean everything, splices small yet enough to hold, going through the machine without a jump, NO EXCHANGE PUNCH MARK to mar the film and the film is waxed when sent out.

One thing more before I close is the designing of the machines of to-day in regard to film traps. Only two machines were ever designed right. By right designing I mean that the back shoes and plate are stationary, the shoes the emulsion side must bear upon. As these are always stationary, thickness of film or thinness will have no effect on the focus of the picture. One other thing in regard to designing is the diameter of the hub. The narrow hub means more tension on film, causing extra wear on sprocket wheels and more scratching of the film.



I had considerable more to say, but find my letter is reaching large proportions and will close now and write another letter stating of other evils of the machines and conditions of film at a later date.

Very truly yours,
P. A. Wills, Projectionist.

Endorse Article on Responsibility for Film Condition

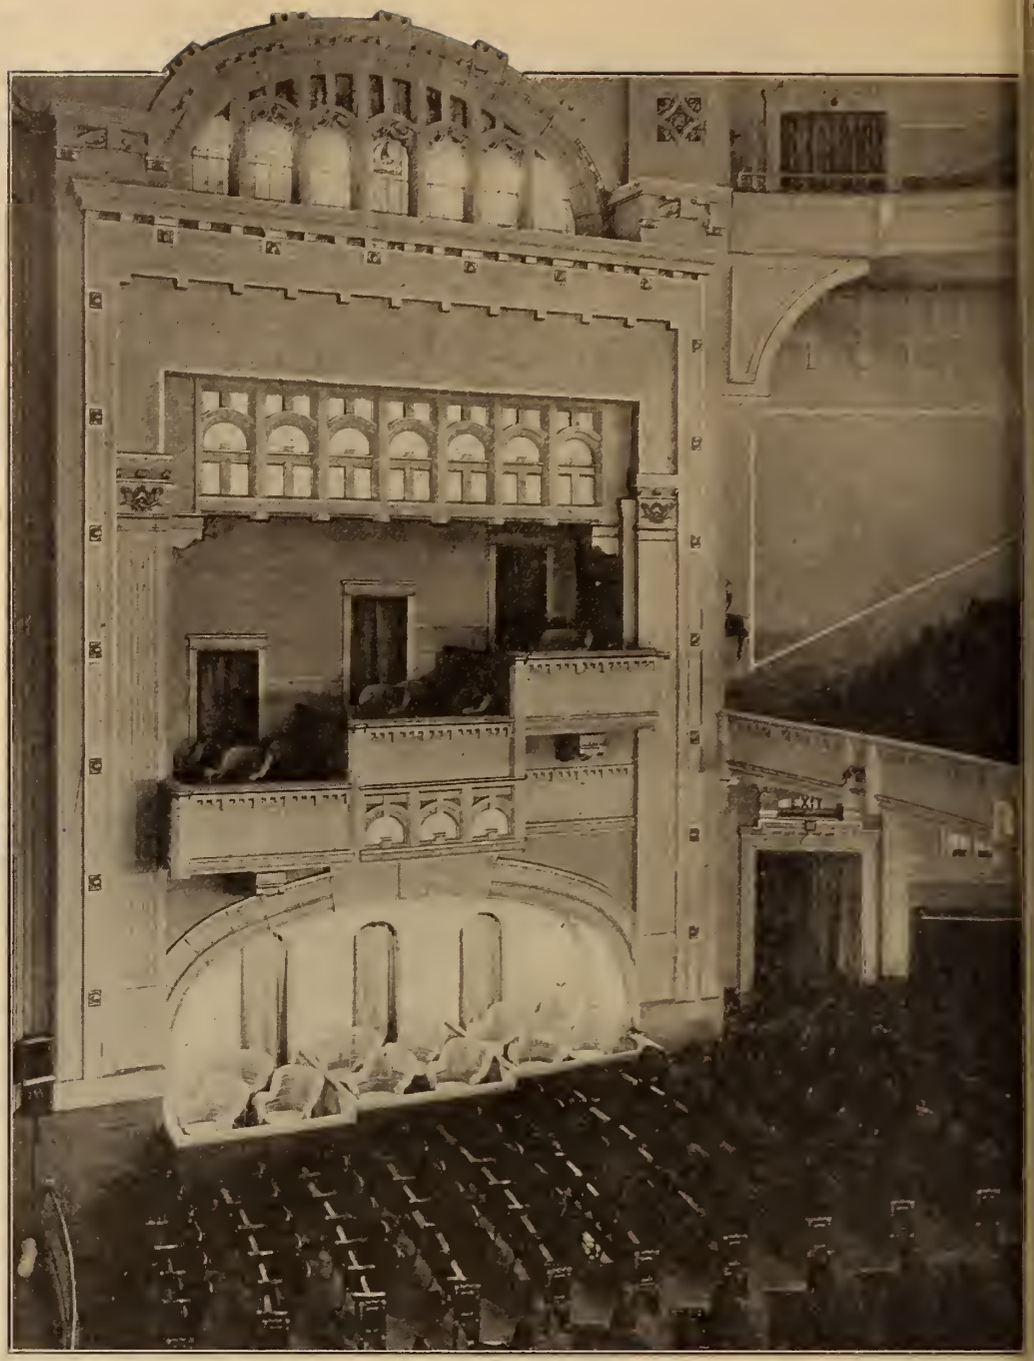
BELOW is reproduced a letter from one of the NEWS readers relative to article appearing several weeks ago. Mr. Scobey's letter is self-explanatory and furnishes plenty of food for thought.

Technical Editor,
MOTION PICTURE NEWS, INC.,
New York City.

Dear Sir: In reading the Projection Department of this week's NEWS, May 14, I became very much interested in an article headed "Who Should be Responsible for Film Condition." No doubt you will remember a series of articles that was sent in by me and appearing in the NEWS, starting in the issue of August 21, 1920. In those articles I took the Exchange, Theatre Manager and Projectionist to task for the condition of film. You wrote me at the time and as you say at the start of the first article, you agreed with me in full.

My opinion as to the cause of bad film has not changed one iota since I wrote those articles. I still contend that service will NEVER be what it should be until there is COOPERATION between Exchange, Theatre Manager and Projectionist.

That you are skeptical as to the sincerity of the Exchange in this matter is not to be wondered at, and I do not blame you, the theatre manager nor projectionist for feeling that way, for as you say, in the past it has been the policy of a party under fire to throw out a smoke screen to cover up with. But I want to correct you in this particular case. I am the Greek that you advise the projectionist to watch out for, but I am not bearing gifts. I am a projectionist myself and I am for the man in the projection room as long as he is a projectionist, but I have no time for the operator who allows equipment to go dirty and oily and running out of adjustment with worn magazine valves, sprockets and rollers, all of which damage film.



I accepted the position of inspector of equipment for the Board of Motion Picture Exchange Managers of Indianapolis, Ind., on these conditions, that I was to inspect and make reports on the condition of machines and service and that I was to be a free agent and was to be absolutely neutral in every respect. Race, color nor creed does not enter the argument, and I want to assure you, the theatre managers and projectionists that as long as I am on the job every one will receive a square deal as far as I can give it to them. I do not claim to know it all and no doubt I will make mistakes, but when I do make one you can be assured that it was not intentional.

In the last three weeks I have made over seventy inspections, and I have been given the heartiest of cooperation by the managers and projectionists, with one exception. I have met the cold shoulder and the frigid air in several places, but I can truthfully say that after explaining my position to the manager or projectionist the atmosphere has warmed up and I have been invited back whenever I was in their city again. You know the old saying, "You are never too old to learn." That applies to exchanges, theatre managers and projectionists as well as anyone else, and maybe they can be taught some things about film that they do not know just as well as you and I.

If there is any doubt in your mind about the need of inspection in the theatres, I believe that I can very soon convince you that you are in error. I will be very glad to forward to you, on request, my report sheets on these inspections. This report sheet is filled out in triplicate while I am in the projection room and is signed by the manager of the theatre. One of these sheets is kept by him, one of them by me and the third one is forwarded to the office of the Board of Motion Picture Exchange Managers, where it is filed for future reference. These sheets show the name of the theatre, city, number of machines and make and the condition that I found them in. I have had one manager out of seventy refuse to sign my report sheet.

Since you gave considerable space in your department in warning the projectionist to beware of the Greek bearing presents, I would request that you add your cooperation in this matter by printing the above.

Yours respectfully,
(Signed) E. C. SCOBEY,
Inspector of Equipment, Ind. and Ky.
1035 South Meridian St.
Indianapolis, Ind.

Simplex Distributor Issues House Organ

A neat crisp copy of Western Theatre Equipment Company's house organ, "Equipment News," has just been received and it is such an interesting issue, we feel that just a few words concerning it will not be out of place in these columns.

The Western Theatre Equipment Company are the Northwest distributors of the Simplex projector and report very promising business for their respective territory.

The motive behind the printing of this particular issue is to introduce the family group of the W. T. E. staff to the many exhibitors in the Northwest and also to give some idea of the many forms of theatre equipment handled by the W. T. E. Mr. Ben Shearer, the president, feels that in these present days of advance business methods, one of the factors which go toward determining the success of any concern, is the quality of relationship that exists between a concern and all its customers.

Mr. Shearer wants his customers to have an opportunity of knowing what he looks like and also of knowing the appearance of his co-partners and in this way allowing the customers to become acquainted with the different men in the W. T. E. to whom they daily write, in sending orders, etc.

When a customer realizes that Ben Shearer parts his hair on the left side, wears a black knitted tie without a stickpin, and has sharp, penetrative, sincere-looking eyes, he takes a certain satisfaction in feeling that he really knows the man to whom he is writing.

A short history of the rapid progress of the Western Theatre Equipment Company, from the first acquiring of a Simplex franchise up to the present day, is given on page three along with a carefully outlined policy of the company, and further on in the issue is given a list of the recent Simplex installations, made by the W. T. E.

This issue, as a whole, is indeed attractive and very interesting. It ought to make a very favorable impression on the exhibitors in that territory and we look forward to receiving all the future editions of "Equipment News" and wish "all the more power" to its editors in speeding up the next issue.

Notes from Equipment Manufacturers

The valuable feature of chain store service was given a demonstration recently when the United Theatre Equipment Corporation, operating stores in thirteen of the leading cities, equipped the Four Horsemen producing companies with their projection equipment in the various cities wherein they are exhibiting.

The Four Horsemen companies are exhibiting their wonderful film in a manner harmonizing with the class of this feature, inasmuch as only new projectors are used.

The United Theatre Equipment Corporation's stores fitted up the Power's projectors with Hallberg speed indicating device, so that the picture could be played in exact synchronism with the musical score. This is of the utmost importance on super-features, as all climaxes and intense actions are accentuated by the clash of cymbals and the blare of trumpets.

The projectionist was free to follow the music score in close detail, as the arc had been automatically regulated by the Hallberg Arc Controller.

The Cameraphone theatre, on East 8th and Euclid avenues, Cleveland, Ohio, has just been equipped with a complete projection equipment out of the Cleveland branch of the United Theatre Equipment Corporation. Mr. Frank J. Masek, projection engineer and manager of the Cleveland branch of the U. T. E., has given this installation his personal supervision and it has excited considerable favorable comment in the Cleveland district.

In the Colonial and Roosevelt theatres of Brooklyn, the Power's machines were installed by Mr. Cumberland, of the U. T. E. Corp., New York branch.

A pair of latest model Power's 6-B machines have been sold to each of these theatres by the New York branch of the U. T. E. Corp., under the management of E. A. Cumberland, well known to all frequenters to the Godfrey Building.

New Rialto theatre—key house of the Southwest. C. P. Anderson, manager of the Oklahoma City branch of the U. T. E. Corp., has just equipped the Rialto theatre throughout with not only the projection room, which has all that a modern theatre should possess, but also has specialized on lobby equipment, electric fountain and many other of the specialties handled by the U. T. E. Corp.

The Elks theatre, at Duncan, Okla., was also equipped by the Oklahoma City branch of the U. T. E. Corp.

The theatres of the New England States are refurnishing in anticipation of heavy business.

The New England territory has always been behind any other portion of the United States, in number of theatres per capita. Statistics show one theatre to approximately 10,000 persons, in New England, against 1 to 5,000 persons, in the balance of the United States.

Among the recent installations reported by Manager Marson, of the Boston branch of the U. T. E. Corp., are:

2 latest 6-B Power's machines to St. George theatre, Framingham, Mass.

2 latest 6-B Power's machines complete to People's theatre, Maynard, Mass.

2 latest 6-B machines (Power's) complete to Bijou theatre, Holyoke, Mass.

2 latest 6-B Power's machines complete, Olympia theatre, Scolley, Mass.

2 latest 6-B Power's machines complete, Majestic theatre, Easthampton, Mass.

REBUILTS MOVING FAST

The Rebuilt Projector Department of the U. T. E. Corp. chain of stores reports an impetus to their spring business. Houses in all parts of the country are discarding obsolete machines and are putting in the wonderful values in rebuilt machines that come from the U. T. E. shops.

Among some of the satisfied recent purchasers of rebuilt equipment from the U. T. E. Corp. are the following:

Diamond theatre, Lake Odessa, Mich.; A. T. Cope, Cope Lake, Mich.; H. Stickney and S. Dodero, Merrill, Mich.; Liberty theatre, Lakeview, Mich.; Vandette theatre, Pentwater, Mich.; Holland Bros., Plattsburg, N. Y.; Kedemah Lodge, F. A. M., Cairo, N. Y.; F. C. Adams, Millerton, N. Y.; R. Smith, Blairstown, N. J.; Repass, Harries Company, Hartford, Conn.; C. A. Curry, Louisville, W. Va.; Box theatre, Budon, Ill.; Norwine Amusement Company, Bonne Tena, Mo.; F. F. Weiss, Fort Dodge, Iowa; Liberty theatre, Channing, Mich.; Amusement Supply Company, Chicago, Ill.; Colonial theatre, Peterboro, N. H.; Ladds theatre, Bristol, N. H.; Roderick Hall, Munson, Mass.; Star theatre, Bristol, N. H.; S. and A. theatre, Houston, Minn.; Delmar theatre, Hancock, Minn.; P. W. Spencer, Manchester, Ohio.

Many Repeat Orders for Marr & Colton Organs

The Marr & Colton Company, of Warsaw, N. Y., builders of both large and small pipe organs, report the volume of business for the first four months of the year double that of any previous period. They are at the present time making arrangements for additions to their modern fireproof plant which will double their capacity.

The two manual organ in the beautiful new Colonial theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., is causing much favorable comment. Many theatre owners consider this organ one of the finest toned instruments in Greater New York. Among recent installations are two organs for the Rea and Meyer theatre chain, Syracuse, N. Y., an organ in the Melba theatre, Canton, Ohio, Star theatre, Dansville, N. Y., the Strand theatre, Chambersburg, Pa., and the new Buss theatre, Easton, Pa. They also have orders for large concert organs for Counihan and Shannon, of Perth Amboy, N. J., and for a three manual organ for the beautiful new Harmony theatre, Detroit, Mich.

Southern Theatre Building Activities

Arrangements also are being made by Fitzpatrick & McElroy to remodel and re-equip the Caldwell Theatre, St. Joseph, of which the also are the owners.

V. A. Anderson, merchant of Gulf Port an Pascagoula, was in New Orleans last week t close contracts with New Orleans firms for th erection of a modern motion picture theatre i Gulfport. The plans for the building hav been approved and the work is to start with out delay. The seating capacity will be 90 and every modern appliance is to be installec

"Plans will be prepared at once for the ne Saenger Theatre on Canal Street. As soon a these are approved and estimates receive building will begin. It will be equipped wit every modern device. There will be all possibl conveniences for patrons.

Said Mr. Saenger: "General Manager Rich ards and myself have recently returned fron a trip to Paris. While there and in New Yor we absorbed the latest ideas in motion-pictur construction and presentation and all of thes are to be embodied in the new New Orlean theatre."

The property purchased by Julian H. and A D. Saenger of the Saenger Interests on whicl the new theatre is to be erected consists of two thirds of the square bounded by Canal, Ram part, Basin and Iberville streets. It is 128 fee on Iberville street, by 188 feet on Rampart anc Basin streets. Canal street will be reached by a 20-foot lobby through the property from Ram part to Basin street, this is to be in front of the theatre.

Mr. Saenger said the new theatre will have a full stage, the same as any other theatre anc will be convertible so that any performance of the speaking stage may be presented.

"There will be a seating capacity of 4,000," said Julian Saenger, and we plan absolutely the largest and finest theatre building in the entire South. As far as moving-picture theatres go, there will be nothing to approach the new structure, not even excepting the famous Capitol Theatre in New York City."

The Saenger interests purchased the property from Leon Jacobs and associates who recently bought the entire square. Saengers paid $250,000, it is reported, for the two-thirds they bought.

ASSOCIATION OF MOTION PICTURE MUSICAL INTERESTS NOW NUMBERS MEMBERSHIP IN HUNDREDS

There is scarcely a state or indeed any important city which is not now represented in the membership of the Motion Picture Musical organization, created to amalgamate the two arts for mutual values and combined strength. Musicians, managers, producers, conductors, composers are in the lists. Have you joined? Send the application blank off today, and help a good idea to help you.

Percy Grainger Is Well Followed by Big Violinist

Readers of this department will remember with what lavish enthusiasm I announced the engagement of Percy Grainger as a motion picture soloist. And yet I spoke of it with the assurance that it was the most natural thing in the world—as it was.

Now comes the information that the Capitol theatre has engaged for the week of May 30th the distinguished violinist, Sascha Jacobsen, who in the humble opinion of the writer, is one of the world's greatest artists, well able to be placed with the set including Heifetz, Elman, Kubelik, Kreisler, Seidel and Zimbalist.

Mr. Jacobsen has appeared as soloist with the leading orchestras of the country; his own recitals have been highly praised by the most conservative critics, and as an artist his ideals have always been held at the highest level one could maintain. It is because of his aloofness from anything which would cheapen his art that Jacobsen's engagement means more than would the engagement of a man who had done " stunts " for the public attention.

Watch the big artists in the picture theatres—there isn't any one who won't succumb to the beautiful opportunity sooner or later. WHO'S NEXT?

Cue Sheets

A careful preparation of cue sheets, the engagement of a large orchestra, is all liable to be wasted if careful preparation in production is not attended to.

To select music by chance with the slight assistance of a cue sheet and then present it to the public is certainly not sufficient. Why should we expect a successful musical production without adequate preparation any more than we should expect a perfectly produced picture without thorough preparation.

The preparation of cue sheets is not in itself sufficient; the engagement of an orchestra composed of ten, fifteen or twenty pieces does not mean better music, but merely more music.

If a theatre decides to feature pictures and music the management must not only consider their policy in securing the best produced and carefully prepared pictures, but they must also decide upon a policy (in conjunction with the Musical Director) for the preparation and correct performance of the music feature if they hope for better music and success.

If an arrangement has to be made between the management and the Union for a series of necessary rehearsals in order to bring about the desired result—by all means let us advocate this arrangement and not present to the public an incomplete production which will never make a striking success.

What a pity it is to see in as many towns and cities a grand display of orchestra with its usual run through on Monday, a horrible performance on Tuesday and Wednesday, a slight improvement Thursday and Friday with the first decent showing on Saturday to be repeated each week until further notice.—LESLIE GROSSMITH, VANCOUVER, B. The Operator's Friend

Two weeks ago the MOTION PICTURE NEWS had an exclusive article describing the Claxo Deodorizing Machine for theatres. This ingenious machine has numerous virtues and benefits for the projectionist. Besides having the faculty of perfuming and deodorizing theatres, the Claxo is a god-send to moving picture operators. It is claimed that the device adds years to the life of the operator, and goes a long way toward preventing tuberculosis and consumption, to which the operator is exposed. It is equipped with a cloth mantle through which the air travels, and as the air passes through this fine sieve-like mantle, all the carbon dust and dirt remains behind. After a day's operation the mantle becomes black as charcoal and covered with the deadly dust which the operator cannot avoid inhaling into his lungs. The distributors of the Claxo are demonstrating their faith in this device by sending it on approval.

Simplex Projectors Used on "Dream Street"

At the opening of Griffith's "Dream Street" at the Central theatre on April 7, the projection was taken care of by a battery of Type S Simplex machines installed by B. F. Porter, Greater New York distributor of the Precision Machine Company, and supervised by Benny Turner, well-known New York projectionist.

It is interesting to note that Mr. B. F. Porter was selected by D. W. Griffith to furnish Simplex equipment for all the former Griffith films, such as "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," "The Fall of Babylon," "Mother and the Law," "Hearts of the World," and "'Way Down East," which latter is at present playing to capacity in New York and other leading cities throughout the country.

In order that the projection of "Dream Street," be accurately timed with the musical score, two Robin's Speed Indicators are included on the Simplex Projectors. Through the use of these instruments, the picture and the music are synchronized perfectly, and the results obtained at the Central theatre are, indeed, worthy of mention. This type of Speed Indicator is now being used extensively in theatres throughout the country, and are rendering great assistance to exhibitors desiring to present their pictures in the most effective manner.

"SNOWBLIND"
(Goldwyn)

Snow Picture That Impresses Because of Splendid Acting and Scenic Values

ENHANCED by some of the finest snow stuff that has ever gone into picture making and enacted by a superlative cast of principals, Russell Simpson, Cullen Landis, Pauline Stark and Mary Alden, each a great type, "Snowblind" rates as a better than average picture in spite of a story, that while original in plot and having as its principal characters unusual personalities, was not the best of material for the photoplay.

The reason for this apparent paradox lies in the fact that Katherine Newlin Burt's story extended over a considerable period in time and to be properly told needed the printed word to explain what each person was thinking about and what they were saying to each other.

Also the ending, supposed to be a thrilling ride in a canoe down the rapids of a mountain river, someway seems rather tame, probably because the shots are too long, the camera being set on the banks instead of following the course of the frail craft through the troubled waters.

Therefore it is to the credit of the cast and the fact that they were working at disadvantage in episodic scenes, that the picture holds attention. Russell Simpson demonstrates once again that he is a character actor of rare ability, Pauline Stark brings to her role all that subtle sympathetic appeal which has made her famous, Cullen Landis makes most of our screen juveniles look like lounge lizards and Mary Alden, once again plays one of those drab, patient, faithful women, which have been her special forte, so well that what might have been just a figure in the story becomes a characterization ranking with the best that the screen has ever presented. Reginald Barker's direction is high class, but the success of the production really belongs to the cast and the camera man. As the first "snow picture" of the season to be played on Broadway it seemed to radiate a coolness that was real. It is a fine hot weather bet for any house. —Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A vital, vigorous picture of the frozen North is "Snowblind," the Goldwyn offering, which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with an all-star cast, including Russell Simpson, Mary Alden, Cullen Landis and Pauline Starke. This is an original story by Katherine Newlin Burt, which tells of a deformed exile from civilization who has committed murder and hidden himself with his younger brother and the latter's former nurse in the vast reaches of the Canadian Northwest. This little group live alone unmolested for fifteen years, in which time the younger brother has grown into sturdy manhood. The nurse, meanwhile, has made herself the slave of the criminal. He fails to appreciate her fine qualities but bullies her upon every occasion.

Then one day the older man finds a girl who has become lost in the wilds. She is a member of a theatrical troupe who has become temporarily blind from the snow. Gartb takes her to his cabin and proceeds to tell her of his manly qualities, taking advantage of her blindness. He tells her that the other two who have lived with him are cast in an unheroic mould. Eventually she has her sight restored and sees things in their true light. Naturally she responds to the younger man, while the older figure finally appreciates the devotion of the faithful nurse. The picture is marked for its vivid scenery and rugged acting, and is well directed.

PROGRAM READER

He bad committed a crime and sought sanctity in the wilds of the Canadian Northwest. He had taken his young brother and the latter's nurse with him. Fifteen years elapse—fifteen years of hate and rancor in the criminal's life. He bullies his comrades, the boy having grown up to a fine specimen of manhood, while the nurse is patient under the stress of the period. Then one day a beautiful, young girl happened across the old man's life. She was blind from the snow. He took her into his cabin and painted rosy fancies to her. He told her that his companions were ugly or deformed, the better to gain a fine impression for himself. Then the girl's sight was restored. What happened? Did she turn him over to the law? Did she respond to youth? Did the old man find regeneration? What of the nurse? These questions are answered in the vital and rugged elemental picture of the North—a picture marked for its action and marvelous scenery. "Snowblind" comes next ————. Don't miss it.

SUGGESTIONS

There is a fine opportunity to stage an effective prologue for this picture—one in harmony witb the action. It carries fine scenery which can be exploited through the lobby by colorful drawings. And you can stimulate interest by announcing it as a vital, vivid, picturesque feature of the frozen North—the land that tries men's souls. A mention of the cast would also be a good angle. Those patrons who have seen Pauline Starke and Russell Simpson will recollect that they are splendid players. Bill it as a Reginald Barker production of a story by the well known short story writer, Katherine Newlin Burt, the author of "The Branding Iron." The title is attractive and can be exploited in a teaser campaign. Get your crowd interested in the fact tbat travelers unaccustomed to the North are apt to become temporarily blind from the snow. Bill it as a tense, elemental picture which carries crisp action and suspense.

"LOVE'S PENALTY"
(Hope Hampton Productions-First National)

Just Another Movie with Bad Story Much in Evidence

PERHAPS there are audiences that look with favor on this sort of a production, old fashioned 10-20-30 melodrama with a bad, bad villain, persecuted heroine, convenient, obvious and commonplace story, but they will not be found in theatres catering to an intelligent public.

There are few of the old time formula ingredients that will be found missing from "Love's Penalty." Miss Hampton has a terrible time before she is allowed to "live happy ever after" and the philanderer gets his in true movie style. Even laying aside the plot shortcomings there is little to recommend the picture. For the most part it is badly overacted. In fact so consistently so that we are inclined to think the fault lies with the direction. The tempo is too forced, theatrical and overdrawn to have just happened that way. Somebody has cracked the whip and said "Act, darn you, act."

The camera work is fair but there has been an inclination to shoot from the same angles. The interiors aren't bad and some very nice exterior shots are in evidence.

As a starring vehicle for Miss Hampton, "Love's Penalty" seems to us to have been a particularly bad choice. Instead of selecting a story that would let her be natural and easy to look at, she is called upon to register every emotion, from the coquettish kitten stuff to that which would tax the capabilities of the greatest of screen actresses. To make matters worse, titles that are as bad as they make them are the rule. The descriptive sentences are flowery and overdone, while the speaking titles talk in the language of such old plays as "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl."

The best cast in the business couldn't make anything but a "movie" out of what has been provided in "Love's Penalty." It seems strange that in 1921 directors and producers will persist in trying to make "a silk purse out of a sow's ear." It can't be done.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

Story written and directed by John Gilbert.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Love's Penalty," is the title of a new Hope Hampton picture which Associated First National exchanges is distributing and which has been booked for the ———— theatre for a ———— days engagement beginning ————.

The story is the ever old and new tale of the girl who loves not wisely but too well and of a revenge that a sister planned and executed against the philanderer. The role provides Miss Hampton with unexcelled acting opportunities and many changes of her wonderful wardrobe.

The supporting cast secured is quite as good as the star and some very fine scenic backgrounds showing famous views about historic parts of New York have been shot. The photography and lightings are adequate and the whole film will meet the approval of those who are fond of melodrama. The picture is in five reels.

PROGRAM READER

The feature attraction which the ———— theatre announces for a ———— days showing beginning ———— is "Love's Penalty" a domestic drama with beautiful Hope Hampton in the leading role supported by a cast of players that measure up to the star's ability in every way. The story told by "Love's Penalty" is the old but ever new tale of the girl who loved not wisely but too well and of a revenge that the unfortunate's sister planned and executed against the man who had taken from her all that she loved and broken up the happy home of her childhood. It is a well done, true to life picture, providing Miss Hampton for the ample display of her talents and beauty as well as a chance to dazzle the feminine sex with her wonderful gowns and wraps. The picture is being distributed by First National pictures but is sold as a separate production and not as a First National attraction.

SUGGESTIONS

Our advice to any exhibitor who plays this picture in a house that caters to a high class audience is to stick pretty closely to the orthodox billing and not to promise anything more than a program feature. If your patrons like them old fashioned and overdone play it up strong from the revenge angle, with your selling talk based on the "virtue has its own reward" and "the wages of sin is death" idea.

CATCH LINES

The ever new but old, old story of the man who respects no woman and whose ambitions know no scruples and of a weak gentle girl who planned a revenge that brought him to the dust and demonstrated once again that virtue will triumph.

One of the screen's most beautiful stars in a vehicle eminently suited to her talents. A picture that teaches a lesson to the girl who believes that she can disregard the conventions with impunity. Her mother and sister dead, her sweetheart believing her bad, forced to walk the streets for lack of money to pay for shelter and all because one man chose to desire that which is forbidden by the laws of morality and of man.

"IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW"
(Robertson-Cole)

A Picture Well Worth Witnessing—Let Them See It

THERE seems to be a desire today on the part of theatregoers for pictures that will give good entertainment and at the same time develop the thinking powers. Everywhere we go it's the same cry—better pictures, good stories with a moral, etc., the kind that will instruct and entertain.

"If Women Only Knew" is a picture of this type with a strong lesson, a lesson that will make its impression no matter where it is shown. The story which is by Balzac is very well handled, from the continuity, which runs so smoothly that many of the sub-titles could be eliminated to the direction and action, which is faultless.

And so cleverly is the story told and so evasive is the ending that it is not until the final scenes that the plot is unfolded and a surprise finish flashed to the spectator. In the opening scenes the lighter moments are played up and show a young man, ambitious to succeed in his studies at college for the sake of his sacrificing mother. But with all his striving, the young fellow has the usual weaknesses for athletics and feminine beauty, with the result that his studies suffer causing failure in his examinations.

In despair he elopes with the town beauty to the big city, in the hope of securing work and happiness. It is not to be, however, for the couple quarrel because of the selfishness of the wife, who is unwilling to partake of the sacrifices which come into the lives of the unsuccessful, and they part.

For contrast, the "other girl" is brought in and in many ways the story points out her love and devotion to the young man. She takes care of his mother and supports her with the little money she has and when the mother dies, the devoted one goes to the big city, only to find the young man in trouble. And it is a touching moment when she asks the judge to pardon him for striking an officer, telling the magistrate that "he has had a great deal of trouble, and his mother has just died."

He is pardoned and a divorce brings them together after a series of highly interesting moments.

It is a story that is told in a different way. Let them see it.—Frank Leonard.

Directed by E. B. Griffith.
Scenario by Gardner Hunting.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"If Women Only Knew," a photodrama based on Balzac's story, "Meditations on Marriage," and directed by E. H. Griffith, will open its run at the ———— theatre on ———— of next ————.

It is a story of the pure and unselfish love of a good woman and the shallow and selfish affection of a frivolous girl. The plot contains a combination of interesting and dramatic moments which are unequalled for their gripping power. And there is not an uninteresting moment in the picture which is due to the splendid work of Gardner Hunting in putting into scenario form this powerful story, which, let us not forget, is from the pen of the renowned Balzac.

The opening scenes should interest the "grads" of the various universities of the country, for they are filled with college atmosphere and were shot in and about Cornell University.

The story tells of Maurice Travers, son of a widow and a popular student at Colburn University. The widow has scraped and saved to send her boy to the university, but realizes that he is fonder of athletics than study. When the young man runs off with the daughter of a wealthy man because of failure in his examinations and discovers that "all is not gold that glitters," the plot takes a strong twist and brings in the "other woman," whose love and devotion to the young man and to his mother tells the tale of strong sacrifice.

The young man runs the gamut of ill luck, until in the end the hall revolves and the sacrificing woman and the man are brought together.

PROGRAM READER

There are few of us who do not like a good story with a moral, but when this story is filled with incident from beginning to end, and incident running from dramatic moments to light comedy—all of us like it.

Such a story is "If Women Only Knew," a Robertson-Cole feature, which will be shown at the ———— theatre the first three days of next week.

The plot is taken from the Balzac novel, "Meditations on Marriage," and is so well told that the sub-titles could be eliminated in many places.

The story tells of the young man and his widowed mother, who has scraped every cent to send him to college, only to find that he has neglected his studies for athletics. A worse fate befalls the young fellow when he elopes with the daughter of a wealthy man and finds that he is unable to support her.

To make things worse the mother dies and his wife divorces him. But he has one friend, a young woman who has loved him from boyhood, and she, through determined efforts, lifts him from the gutter and sets him right again.

CATCH LINES

She thought she loved him, but when they married she discovered that worldly goods were more important than love. Did this marriage end in the usual way? See "If Women Only Knew." It is a splendid story, which will interest and grip you no matter where you sit.

"THE MAN TAMER"
(Universal)

Gladys Walton Has Another Winner Here

THERE is no doubt about Gladys Walton having a well established following by this time judging from the calibre of stories which Universal has given her. "The Man Tamer," the latest expression, is worthy of comparison with her previous releases in regard to entertainment values. It carries a note of originality in characterization and there is plenty of novelty in the development of the incident. The star possesses such a refreshing personality that she makes her work appealing. While her stories have been quite exceptional yet she dominates them by her personal magnetism. Certainly she will win new admirers as the vivacious lion tamer, not only because of her charm and mannerisms but because of her courage in accomplishing the things which the picture demands.

Apparently she has no double in the thrilling scenes which show her taming the vicious brutes, for there are shots—close-ups and medium shots—of her ruling the beasts and compelling them to go through their stunts. Attired in tights, high boots, and a typical circus coat and hat she certainly presents an attractive appearance.

The story revolves around the sawdust ring and the big tops in a majority of its scenes and gets away from the usual orthodox treatment. There is no "Polly of the Circus" slant noticeable. Pathos never enters into the scheme at all. It is simply a well made picture which presents a full number of good sequences, marked for their colorful moments and an abundance of thrills. These thrills, incidentally, start immediately after the introductory scene—one of which shows a lion pouncing upon a trainer knocking him prostrate, and with the latter's arm in the animal's mouth. The star is the hit of the circus, the lion act putting it over. A hit of melodrama intrudes when the proprietor attempts to display some villainy. The heroine leaves the show when a vicious trainer tries to poison one of the big cats and is considerably maltreated as a result.

The romance does not have much of a chance here and is not missed to any extent. The hero, a wealthy, drunken idler, is persistent in his courtship. His father employs the girl to tame him as she does her lions. And this she accomplishes by treating him rough. He gives up his liquor and his idle hours and really goes to work. However, the figure does not invite much sympathy because of his conduct. He comes to the rescue when the circus king tries to renew his compromises. There is a cry of "Hey, Rube!" but the fight is really tame compared to the real thing when the famous call is heard on the lots. The picture is obvious of plot, but it entertains because of the clever incident and ingratiating charm and mannerisms of the star.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An interesting picture of life under the big tops is coming in "The Man Tamer" starring pretty Gladys Walton. It is a story of a lion tamer who with her father has the big act of the circus. The arena is crowded when suddenly one of the vicious beasts pounces upon the father and so injures him that he is taken to the hospital. Owing to the timely intervention of a gay hounder the man is saved from death. The girl shows her gratitude for this brave act, but the young man disillusions her by appearing intoxicated whenever he meets her.

Owing to some villainous attempt of the circus proprietor to dishonor the pretty trainer she leaves the show and secures an engagement in the local vaudeville theatre. The youth's father, realizing that his son is desperately in love, hits upon a scheme to regenerate him by employing the girl to tame him as she does her lions. This she does by teaching him to obey. And with his awakened manhood he saves her from distressing moments when they eventually occur. The picture packs several thrills, carries a deal of atmosphere, is interesting and well acted. "The Man Tamer" will appear at the ———— theatre next ————.

PROGRAM READER

One of the prettiest actresses on the screen is Gladys Walton, the Universal star. She will make her appearance on the ———— screen next ———— in her newest picture entitled, "The Man Tamer," a story of circus life which involves a thrilling animal act. The pretty heroine puts the big lions through their paces. Then something happens. What is it? Did one of the vicious beasts make a spring and injure her? Of course not—but something happened alright. The girl found a job on her hands one day—a job to tame a man with the ability she displayed with the wild animals. Did she succeed? You must see for yourself. Remember next————.

SUGGESTIONS

This little picture deserves a deal of exploitation and can be put over by billing it like a circus. State that it is a story of life under the big tops. Tell that it offers several big thrills which involve escaping lions. Play up the atmosphere. A ballyhoo stunt for a novelty would help. Also use plenty of atmosphere in the way of circus life for your lobby and the exterior of the house. Use stills of Miss Walton in her pretty attire. State that the picture is an interesting story of adventure and romance with a strong tug of sentiment to boot. Play up the title and ask your patrons if men can be tamed like wild animals. This will interest the feminine sex and rouse a deal of argument. Make your copy snappy.

CATCH LINES

See Gladys Walton in "The Man Tamer," a story of a circus girl who could tame a man like she could a lion.

"THE WOMAN GOD CHANGED"

(Cosmopolitan-Paramount)

Regeneration Picture Certainly Holds the Interest

PICTURES of a man or woman's redemption have appeared on schedule time for many, many years and will continue to do so. "The Woman God Changed" is no different from its forerunners in general outline. The regenerating processes are worked out through romantic influences and the spiritual note, which is caught when the protagonist feels herself alone under God's vast canopy. Robert G. Vignola deserves credit for making this conventional story interesting. This he has done by employing one of the privileges of the screen—resorting to the flash-back and balancing it with the fade-out. The development of the feature follows the technique flashed in the play "On Trial." Which is to say that the action is worked backward.

A woman is being tried for murder in a crowded courtroom. The evidence is presented and the scene switches to the incident leading up to the crime and the events which follow. The ordinary courtroom sequence is a dull affair. But Vignola has added some remarkably good touches. A witness does not occupy the chair too long. The scene varies to permit flashes of the spectators. A couple of men in front are interested in the clever lawyer for the defense; a couple of women are remarking about the innocent appearance of the girl on trial; a pendulum is seen swinging in the clock-case symbolical of life itself. It is established that the heroine is guilty. The defense offers no plea until its chief witness, the detective sent to capture the girl in the South Sea Islands, takes the stand, and then the lawyer asks that he tell his story in his own way.

The logic may falter here somewhat because it goes into such intimate detail. The man in the chair relates how he captured her, how both became derelicts on an island when the boat bringing them back sank beneath the waves, how he made her promise to return with him, how he tried in vain to obey his duty, all to no avail when he found himself in love with the girl. There is a spiritual significance in the regeneration. The testimony in court is continually balanced with the dramatic flash-backs. When the case is finished, the defense puts in a plea for acquittal stating that the woman was a murderess but is not now in the sight of God. The jury is compelled to bring in a verdict of guilty but recommends mercy, and the judge places her in the charge of the witness for life—as his wife. The picture is made to ring as true as far as the purposes of the plot permits. It is well acted by Seena Owen, E. K. Lincoln and H. Cooper Cliffe. The clever direction makes this offering a highly interesting work of its kind.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Donn Byrne's famous story, "The Woman God Changed," has been converted into a photoplay and will be offered as the attraction at ———— theatre for a ———— run beginning on ————. The picture comes here backed by the strongest commendation of the New York press. It is the story of a beautiful dancing girl, who shoots dead her common-law husband when he seeks to desert her. For five years she is followed by Thomas McCarthy, a detective, who finally arrests her on the Island of Tahiti. However, the ship on which they take passage is destroyed by an explosion at sea, and Anna, the girl, and the detective are washed upon a desert island.

There the two find that they have fallen in love with each other, and, though McCarthy continues faithful to his duty, he promises to secure a prison term for Anna and to marry her when she is free. Years pass before they are rescued, and in the meantime the girl has been regenerated by the real love of a clean man. Taken back to America, the girl is placed on trial, and the jury is so impressed by the way that the girl has converted the dross in herself to gold that she is sentenced to serve the rest of her natural life in the custody of her husband.

PROGRAM READER

A remarkable cast, including Seena Owen, E. K. Lincoln, Lillian Walker and a score of others almost equally as well known will be seen in "The Woman God Changed," the Cosmopolitan production from the story by Donn Byrne, which comes to ———— theatre ————. It tells of the regeneration of a woman who has murdered her Common-law husband, the transmutation of her soul coming when she and the detective who has been following her for five years are shipwrecked on a desert isle. It forms a wonderful love story, with the detective still true to his duty, but promising to marry the girl when she shall have completed her prison term. But the jury is so impressed by the conversion of the dross in the girl to gold that the sentence is a peculiar one.

SUGGESTIONS

This story undoubtedly caused a great deal of comment in your community when it was published in "Hearst's Magazine," and the exhibitor should recall the fact and start a debate on the question of whether real love can regenerate a woman. It will be easy to start a newspaper debate and probably scores of people will write in with instances.

For the lobby there should be a suggestion of the desert island, and it is practical to make a cut out of the three-sheet with the two figures that will add to the interest.

The title should be used strong, but with all due reverence.

"THE SILVER CAR"

(Vitagraph)

This Picture Falters After a Couple of Reels

THE latest Earle Williams started off like a house afire, indicating to the spectator something in the line of fascinating mystery with a clever crook as the god of the machine. Then it faltered by switching its story to a Graustark sort of plot with the action very similar to what is exposed in one of the mythcial kingdom comic operas. The author should stuck to his original idea for it is in the crook mystery photoplay that the star looks his best. His repressed style of acting, his calm demeanor are well suited to the exposition of the crime melodrama. But placing him in mythical kingdom stories bring out his inability to interpret adventurous romance.

For two reels the suspense is almost overwhelming as one wonders if the international crook, Trent, will be caught. There is a big reward for his capture. He has been saved from death while fighting in the trenches and has journeyed to England to locate the buddy who rescued him. There is much mystery concerning the latter. Both had previously admitted their true identities. So Trent finds his man, falls in love with the youth's sister, and one is held at strict attention wondering what will come next. Then like a bolt from the sky, the picture takes up a different course and wanders off into a fantastic melodrama having to do with secret treaties, diplomatic troubles and what not. A mysterious count from the Balkans has stolen the treaty from the susceptible youth which was the cause of the latter enlisting under a different name. The hero, proving himself on the square is entrusted with the mission of recovering the stolen papers and bringing the Balkan noble to strict accountability.

The suspense is lost here and never regained. The action becomes real picturey because it has to do with the hero masquerading as a chauffeur in order to rectify the mistakes of the Englishmen. There is not much atmosphere established in the Balkans. One sees the chauffeur-hero driving his employer about and engaging in a mild flirtation with a mysterious woman—a member of the nobleman's suite. This character really has no place in the story except to make it complicated and permit Mona Lisa to display her vamping proclivities. A miniature of the limousine in which the hero is racing, encountering a mountain landslide is well done. But the subsequent scenes showing him a prisoner in the tower are superfluous. The mysterious woman is killed to make way for the renewal of the other romance. The hero makes his escape in a silver car, is carried to an Eastern port by a warship and thence overland to England according to a subtitle, and meets with his reward—recognition by English authorities and a blissful romance.—Length 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

By Wyndham Martyn.
Directed by David Smith.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Silver Car," which will be the attraction at the ———— theatre next ————, is a melodrama with an international atmosphere, carrying several surprising twists amid much rapid action. It is a visualization of Wyndham Martyn's famous novel, "The Secret of the Silver Car," and offers Earle Williams an exceptionally fine role in which he can display his talent. The production was made under the direction of David Smith, and in the cast are such popular players as Kathlyn Adams, Geoffrey Webb, John Steppling, Mona Lisa and Eric Mayne.

The story is one of suspense and mystery. It has the spectator guessing from the first flash. There are several thrills and many big scenes in the production. The plot has to do with the recovery of a stolen secret treaty between Great Britain and a Balkan kingdom. The nobleman who put over this intrigue has obtained the document by blackmail. The hero, an American and a reformed crook, accepts the commission to secure the treaty—a mission upon which three have lost their lives. The adventure of this youth are intensely dramatic. A love interest has been interwoven in the plot and many spectacular scenes are provided.

PROGRAM READER

Next ———— you will find it necessary to watch for "The Silver Car." This mysterious automobile and its lone occupant, who drives like mad, will appear at the ———— theatre. Earle Williams is the man at the wheel, and the car is a high class foreign product. It is a fascinating picture, this one featuring the popular Vitagraph star. He has a story which permits him plenty of opportunities to show his talent. The action is crammed with adventure and hairbreadth escapes. There is something doing nearly every minute. Romance comes into expression in a fascinating manner. Rest assured that "The Silver Car" is one of the cleverest pictures of the season. It is thrilling, romantic, dramatic and rich in spectacular action.

SUGGESTIONS

You can put out a bunch of placards for this picture, starting them off at the top with the sign, "Last Warning!" Then follow up in the succeeding lines with a description of the car, its mysterious mission and the lone occupant, who drives like the wind. State that he is known to police officials, who are requested to keep a sharp eye upon him. You can finish with the expression that it is thought he will hide at the ———— theatre. Play up Williams. Emphasis the mystery element. Tell that it is a fascinating crock melodrama of an international flavor. Capitalize with the title and invite all your patrons to come free of charge who possess silver colored cars. Link up with local auto stores.

"TWO WEEKS WITH PAY"
(Realart)

Light in Substance But Thoroughly Pleasing

THERE is a big difference between this picture and "She Couldn't Help It," a previous release in which the vibrant Bebe Daniels starred. It is nearly up to the calibre of "Ducks and Drakes," though lacking in spontaneity and humor to be classed alongside of it. The simplest way to characterize it is to call it a clean, inoffensive, picture which is almost certain to get over because of the magnetic personality of the star. It is easily obvious and of course, unoriginal in theme, characterization and incident. And it will not start an audience on a laughing spree. However, it carries sufficient vitality to keep moving to the conclusion principally because the star has the center of the stage and puts over her scenes in a refreshing manner.

As the title indicates, the picture concerns a shop-girl who earns a vacation of two weeks with pay because of her ability to close quick sales. A lounge lizard type of manhood saunters into the shop—a modiste shop, by the way—and endeavors to vamp her into an engagement. His entrance is the cue to introduce the "drammer," for he next bobs up at the coast resort determined to square accounts with the attractive girl who snubbed him. She has registered at the hotel under her correct name of Pansy O'Donnell, but the clerk at the desk, having an eye for beauty and possessing a good memory for movie faces thinks she is doubling in brass as it were. He thinks she has used the name O'Donnell instead of Marie La Tour, the famous actress, to hide her identity and find rest. She attempts to explain but the portly clerk is one of those fellows who can't be kidded. So the girl accepts the situation.

The romance enters when the town sport gains an introduction via a mud bath. She thinks him one of the wealthy Smiths of the resort, but he is only the proprietor of the local garage. The action up to this point is mild and revolves around numerous exits and entrances of the figures. The proprietor of the modiste shop arrives and enters into the girl's scheme and does a rushing business taking orders from women who strive to imitate the dressy Marie. The stage is all set for the denouement with the anticipated expose which is brought about by the "lizard" sending for the real Marie to come and witness how the masquerader is getting away with it. Pansy has just completed a high dive for the benefit of local charity and has made the affair successful. The scene is put over with a mild thrill and some little humor by the star. Miss Daniels appears as the actress, too. There is a moment of indignation, followed by one of explanation and the picture is over.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Film patrons who have followed the screen career of the vital and vibrant Realart star, Bebe Daniels, are certain to find rich entertainment in her latest release entitled "Two Weeks with Pay," when it appears at the ———— theatre next ————. The story concerns the holiday of Pansy O'Donnell, a pretty salesgirl in a smart modiste shop. When the time for her vacation begins her employer lends her an elegant wardrobe which she is to wear at an exclusive seaside resort. Thus she will advertise his modes. When she reaches her destination she finds herself involved in an auto accident.

But through the mishap she makes the acquaintance of another victim of the smash-up, who eventually leads her to the altar. Arriving at the hotel she is mistaken for a famous film actress, and, though she protests, the guests persist in believing her the noted "Diving Venus." They beg her to assist them at a water carnival, and poor Pansy is compelled to dive from a dizzy height. In time her real identity is established in a melodramatic manner. But all ends happily. The picture is charmingly staged and acted.

PROGRAM READER

She accepted two weeks with pay and found herself at a famous seaside resort. Her introduction to the place was not very auspicious because she met with an auto accident which landed her in a mud puddle. But listen, girls! Wouldn't you encounter mud and accidents if it brought you a chance to meet and fall in love with an attractive fellow? Then the girl arrived at the hotel and was mistaken for a celebrated film actress. What was she to do? Did she masquerade as the other? What of her romance? Did she have a good time at the beach resort? See "Two Weeks with Pay" at the ———— theatre next ————, starring pretty Bebe Daniels. The picture is lively and charming and splendidly acted.

SUGGESTIONS

You can make a snappy line of copy for the exploitation of this picture. Treat all your copy in a humorous fashion and make something of vacations asking your patrons if they give their employees vacations with pay. Play up Bebe Daniels, telling that she has one of the liveliest and most interesting pictures of her career. Play up her frocks and announce that she puts over a veritable fashion show. This notice will interest the feminine patrons. Play it up as a slice from life—a story of a little shopgirl who took a vacation and found her days filled with startling adventure and a happy romance. The title can be put over in blind teaser ads, and in several other unique ways. Run a lot of shorts for the newspapers and your program notices.

"THE BUTTERFLY GIRL"
(Playgoers-Pathe)

Little Entertainment in This Weak and Sugary Story

IT will take a great deal of indulgence on the part of the average spectator to give this feature any consideration as entertainment. Founded upon a weak and sugary recipe, padded excessively beyond its normal two-reel length, treated with little imagination, and acted with a minimum amount of color, "The Butterfly Girl" will in all probability be dismissed as much ado about nothing. Since it contains no dramatic ingredients whatsoever, the director might have dressed it up with some polite incident, thus giving it a measure of spontaneity. Instead he has played safe. The picture offers a series of close-ups or medium shots with the players not moving about to any extent, but actually standing still. There is no continuity. An episode is flashed and then neglected entirely to be replaced by some more naive incident.

There is thought behind the characterization but it could have been made consistent with the title. The heroine is a silly flapper type of girl who is a victim of her own foolish whims and caprices. She runs away, becomes involved in puppy-love affairs at a vacation party through which she pouts in the proper fashion, enters the business world and performs several naive and unique pranks, elopes with a sorrowful Romeo and cuts up capers which might be more entertaining as reading matter between the covers of an "Elsie" book. The picture did not cost much to make. Exteriors seem to dominate the mild action. One scene shows the "butterfly" being invited to luncheon by her employer. The entrance of the restaurant is shown and their exit is made without any flash of the interior. This is just a sample of how the incident is glossed over here.

To keep it going for five reels, much extraneous padding is offered. Close-up after close-up is shown and these are balanced with lengthy titles written in very flowery fashion. The "butterfly" has her mild adventures which may be termed a series of pretty poutings. The hero is one of those sad puppy-lovers who is kept on the jump every minute. To judge from his serious manner one would think he is trying to play a modern Hamlet instead of a modern Romeo. It will be impossible to take this picture seriously. It is amateurish in every department. There is material for a polite two-reel comedy and nothing else. It is as light and feathery as the coating on a cup custard. Marjorie Daw makes a pretty heroine, but King Baggot is badly miscast as a near "heavy."—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Edith Folsom ..... Marjorie Daw
Lorna ..... Fritzi Brunette
Ned Lorimer ..... Ned Whitney Warren
John Blaine ..... Jean de Briac
H. H. Van Horn ..... King Baggot
Mary Van Horn ..... Lisle Darnell

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A story of love, youth and summertime is "The Butterfly Girl," which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next————. This attractive little picture presents Marjorie Daw as a star in one of the sub-deb type of roles. She is a girl who is in love with love. She is a gay butterfly who has no worries, no cares, other than falling head over heels in love and out again. And the more love affairs she has the happier she is. Edith Folsom is this young flapper's name. She has hearts dangling in shreds for her. The dominant male becomes meek and worshipful. She leaves scores of broken hearts at home when she goes to the city.

But there comes a time when she falls seriously in love. Upbraided by her hostess for leading such a butterfly existence, Edith finds employment in a brokerage office. But her easy-going manner prevents her from taking business seriously. She is a butterfly at heart—that is, until her employer's wife points out to her the danger of pursuing her present course of adventure. She elopes and settles down. That is Edith Folsom. The picture is a pleasing little picture of the youthful days of life—when the days are rosy with romance and adventure. It is certain to take patrons back to their youth.

PROGRAM READER

A picture of the glorious days of youth—when all of life was rosy and filled with adventure and romance—that is "The Butterfly Girl." This delicious little character study of a shallow-minded girl who accepted love and life as she found it, not caring for the responsibilities, is certain to appeal to a vast proportion of picture goers. It teaches a lesson in deportment. It teaches that the business of constantly falling in and out of love doesn't pay. The picture will come to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— with a cast that includes pretty Marjorie Daw. She makes an ideal type for the part of the gay butterfly who had one love affair after another and who realized that constancy pays in the end. It is a picture of youth and love and summertime.

SUGGESTIONS

You might stimulate interest in this picture by pointing out that it teaches a lesson for parents whose children are approaching maturity. Ask every mother with a growing daughter to come and see this picture. And make a bid for the matinee girls. Tell them that it is a fascinating little picture of youth, love and summertime. Make a bid for the younger set. Stress that the heroine was a butterfly who had been allowed a great amount of indulgence until she thought that all of life depended upon her falling in and out of love. Play up the title. Ask your patrons to come and enjoy themselves. Describe it as a refreshing and delightful picture of young romance. Play up Marjorie Daw and run stills of her. A prologue might be used which features some ballet dancer dancing to Grieg's "Butterfly."

CATCH LINES

She had fallen in and out of love a score of times—so many times that she couldn't keep track. Then one day she met her match. Did she settle down? See "The Butterfly Girl."

"THE HEART LINE"
(Pathe)

Entertaining Chiefly Because of Fake Medium Scenes

THERE are certain points of appeal in this picture which are undeniable. Producers have neglected the fake medium or palmist as a central character of a story for some time. Therefore there is real interest here because of the novel idea and its clever treatment. But adapting a novel such as this one by Gillet Burgess, which contains several characters of equal importance and which becomes quite complex in the intricacies of its plot does not make for perfect lucidity. Also the producers have kept a surprise for the end. This surprise is built upon a case of mistaken identity and while an audience will be fooled they will be bewildered in the process, for until the end it appears as if the hero was falling in love with his own sister.

"The Heart Line" is not orthodox in its development. Leah Baird, featured in the production, plays no part in the final clutch, and two other roles are equally as important as hers. Then again she is not the conventional heroine of the screen. She is however, a great deal more human as the wandering, free and easy "good pal" of a big city's false bohemia.

The picture opens with a prologue of a train wreck which serves to hide the identity of the leading character and prepare for the punch at the end. Skipping twenty years the hero is seen as a fake palmist who tells the foolish young girls who come to him all the flattering things they want to hear about themselves. Miss Baird, as Fancy Gray, is his secretary. They have made a compact not to fall in love. but Fancy breaks it. The palmist however, becomes enamoured with one of his clients. This is the girl whom one is led to believe is the man's sister. Then there is a cheap clairvoyant introduced—a woman who holds seances for a less select audience. To her comes the old man of the railroad wreck who is still seeking his little boy. A "spook" is framed to fool him, but he discovers the fraud and reveals that the boy he is seeking is not his son, but a ward entrusted to his care by an old business associate. Some fine titles aid to get over this spiritism sequence. The picture in fact is saved by the interest created in these scenes together with those showing the cheaply Oriental home of the palmist. Fancy is loverless and goes back to her childhood home. The palmist rises above his environment and marries the girl he loves.

We do not see why it was necessary to have a real spirit introduced into the picture. It is not in harmony with the tone of the whole picture, and is unconvincing as well as being unnecessary. Leah Baird wins considerable sympathy in an appealing role. Jerome Patrick, as the palmist, is well cast and of striking personality, but he certainly overacts. His breast heaves with emotion at a most unnatural rate.—Length, 6 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Heart Line," which will be the feature attraction at the ———— for ———— days beginning ————, is a production which dares to leave the beaten paths of motion picture construction and present an unusual and interesting phase of life in a thoroughly interesting manner. Taking as its hero a young man who finds a very remunerative and easy livelihood may be obtained by working as a fake palmist, the picture is a clever expose of the tricks used by unscrupulous spiritists and mediums. Eventually the young man rises above his occupation and takes up an honest vocation.

Granthope, the palmist, is a lovable trickster. He deals out optimism at five dollars a deal. He makes people's dream castles seem castles of real brick and stone. Only later on do they discover that his castles, too, are flimsy, unstable things, which fall before stern realities. Then Granthope, the great advisor of the lovelorn, has to reckon with his own heart line. His own castle in the air is knocked to the ground.

Leah Baird is the featured player in this interesting picture. She plays the part of a country girl, who finds the drifting, care-free life of a big city's bohemia to her liking. Others in the cast include Jerome Patrick, Frederick Vroom and Ruth Sinclair. The picture was adapted from the well known novel by Gelett Burgess and was directed by Frederick A. Thompson.

PROGRAM READER

We all love to be fooled, said a very noted American at one time. Young Frank Granthope discovered how true it was. So he took up the softly luxurious life of a fake palmist. Still he was a lovable trickster. For five dollars he would paint the most rosy dream pictures to spread optimism and good cheer. And if they did last for only a little while, at least he had spread happiness for a short time.

"The Heart Line" will be the main attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. We believe this picture will interest you. It is built for entertainment and takes for its material a new phase of life. New and original plots come seldom in picturedom. Here is one offered for your enjoyment. Leah Baird is the featured player in "The Heart Line." The picture is adapted from a novel by the popular author, Gelett Burgess, and it was directed by Frederick Vroom.

"LIVE AND LET LIVE"
(Robertson-Cole)

Well Below the Average with Its Hackneyed Story and Direction

THIS picture looks like a melting pot of all the hackneyed and time-worn situations that were found in the ten, twent' and thirt' plays of a decade ago. In fact it runs the well known gamut of emotions which formed the background of "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," "In the Bishop's Carriage," "Why Women Sin," "Why Girls Leave Home," and others of a like character. There are flashes of "Way Down East," in the intricate pattern, too. And through this conglomeration of wildly melodramatic ideas runs a preachment which fails in its mission because it is associated with so much clap-trap. The picture is far removed from realities and resembles the product of nickelodion days in its story and direction.

William Christy Cabanne should keep to the megaphone and leave the pen alone, for the theme of this play is out of date, having been used so often as to miss its mark. The author-director starts off by showing a girl thief, restoring a stolen book because of thoughts of mother—and desirous of going straight. The scenes are unduly arbitrary and convenient. On a train she meets a girl who tells her of a rich uncle with whom she expects to live. But owing to an elopement she passes up her relative's offer. This is the cue for the heroine to masquerade as the other and palm herself off as the real niece. The action becomes real hectic at this point, jumping from one hokum scene to another and painting life as a crazy quilt. The inhabitants of a small town must be represented as narrow and intolerant; a crippled girl must needs be wheeled around in a chair, radiating sunshine and hopeful of a cure which is effected by having her tumble—chair and all down a stair-case. Such a fall would prove fatal in all likelihood or else make her more crippled than ever.

This is just a sample of the mistakes the picture carries. The "Way Down East" moment arrives when a relentless, narrow-minded mother chases her daughter out into the storm because she forgot her honor. This scene is presented in harrowing close-ups in order to stress the emotion. The girl goes out into the night and her body is taken from the river, a suicide victim. This is the place for more hokum with the natives chasing the innocent man and threatening to punish him right in his own house. The heroine straightens out the complications, admits her identity, reforms the intolerant characters and all is over. The offering is burdened with tremendous close-ups and sob sister titles. It is a picture of very little merit, being old-fashioned in every department.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture of a melodramatic character which revolves upon a theme which teaches the way of the transgressor is hard is "Live and Let Live," written and directed by William Christy Cabanne. The production will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— with a cast that includes several well known and talented players, such as Harriet Hammond, George Nichols, Dulcie Cooper, Dave Winter, Josephine Crowell and others. The picture points out the futility of leading a life of crime and the futility of intolerance.

The heroine, Mary Ryan, has given up her life of theft, assumed the identity of a girl friend, and been taken into the household of the other's uncle, who naturally doesn't know that she is an imposter. She rapidly falls in love and is instrumental in regenerating her so-called relatives from their narrow viewpoints. The picture carries several counter-plots which are well united to the main line of action. In fact the picture carries every known sample of element which spell drama. There is humanity, intolerance, romance, intrigue, hate, jealousy, love, pathos and sentiment. Certainly enough qualities to satisfy the most complex personality.

PROGRAM READER

She had stolen an old lady's pocket-book, but was compelled to give it back through memories which crowded her mind-memories of a dear departed mother. She was determined to go straight. She caught a train and found a girl friend who had intended taking up residence with an uncle, but who in reality was eloping. So the reformed thief assumed the other's identity for the sake of finding a home and shelter. She found these things, but she also found rancor, hate and intolerance. What happened to bring a change of viewpoint to these misguided lives? What became of the reformed thief? Did she return to a life of crime, or did she find love and happiness? See "Live and Let Live," a picture of stirring drama. At this theatre next ————.

CATCH LINES

She came to the community determined to have a home. She found herself surrounded by narrow, bigoted people. Did she scatter the clouds? See "Live and Let Live."

"THE SCARAB RING"
(Vitagraph)

Alice Joyce Has Fair Mystery Melodrama Here

IT will be surprising to Alice Joyce's following to see her as the protagonist of a mystery melodrama. "The Scarab Ring" may be classified as such but it fails to maintain the quality of suspense—an element needed in this type of story to make it successful—because the incident is so clearly planted before the mystery begins. The beginning of the action is exceedingly mild with considerable walking around on the part of the characters attired in evening clothes. The introduction presents a death-bed scene, the victim being the father of the heroine and her younger sister. While he is represented as a benefactor, in reality he has lived a more or less crooked life. His dying request is that the older girl will not tell her sister of his shady business deals.

This shady business incidentally, introduces the villain, who aware of it, attempts to compromise the heroine. He has threatened to expose the scandal unless she consents to his marrying the sister. The figures in the story are all assembled at a reception in the young woman's home. While rearranging her sister's frock she catches her ring and the scarab is torn from its setting. The mystery enters when the "heavy" is murdered on the night of his appointment. By introducing circumstantial evidence the heroine is indicted for the crime. The suspense is not exceptional here because the incident is so well mapped out in advance. Her fiance, a lawyer, takes up the defense and smashes the weak testimony by bringing forth that the scarab ring can be easily duplicated. Her innocence established it is something of a surprise to discover her admitting her guilt in a confession to her lawyer. However, sympathy is her reward because she killed the victim is self-defense.

The courtroom scene is weak and really has a small place in the action. The picture bears evidence of padding, particularly in its reception scenes and a counter play of romance between the sister and a callow youth who has altogether too much prominence in the story. From this outline one can see that the picture carries no evidence of originality in its theme and development. The ring itself is the one point of novelty. The director has not paid much attention to the mystery angle. He has treated his story without much imagination. The feature is well staged, some of the sets being expensive, and the acting is always acceptable. Miss Joyce plays the part with little expenditure of emotion. Fuller Mellish, always a capable actor, is deserving of bigger parts than a dying father who expires in the first reel.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Scarab Ring" is the title of the Alice Joyce production which comes to the ——— theatre next ——— and ———. There is no question that it will interest the average picture patron because of its unique and different plot, and because it carries such appealing qualtiies as crisp action and accumulative suspense. The picture offers Miss Joyce unlimited opportunities in the way of emotional acting. The role of Constance Randall is different from anything the star has previously assumed, and presents her in an entirely new light. The story of "The Scarab Ring" is one of unusual interest, holds the attention from the first flash and at times fills the audience tense with emotion, suspense and mystery.

The love element is introduced early in the story and is well developed. In fact two love stories run simultaneously. The element of mystery deals with the solving of a crime of which the heroine is accused, due to circumstantial evidence in the form of a scarab ring. This scarab is supposed to be the only one of its kind in existence. A clever lawyer, the father of the heroine's sweetheart, proves that there are scarabs and scarabs, and that it is foolish to claim any one thing as the original of its kind. Upon this theory hinges the action of the story. The picture carries several surprising twists and is well acted.

PROGRAM READER

A stirring melodramatic production of love, mystery, suspense, enacted by a strong cast of screen favorites, headed by charming and talented Alice Joyce, under the direction of Edward Jose, is "The Scarab Ring," which will be the feature attraction at the ——— theatre next ———. It is a film which grips the interest and holds it until the final scene. It is a picture which will keep you guessing until the end. If you like good mystery stories, one that keeps you on the anxious seat with suspense, then "The Scarab Ring" will entertain you. It revolves around an Egyptian antique, which is the only clue to a baffling mystery, and the police trace the ownership to the heroine. The girl is accused of the crime and tried. The state builds up a strong case, which is shattered.

SUGGESTIONS

This is a mystery melodrama which should be exploited for its mystery angle. Lay stress upon the solving of crime. Emphasize the picture as one which constantly interests through its amount of action and suspense. Play up the scarab angle, telling something of the Egyptian lore connected with the story—its history. Mention that Alice Joyce has a different picture here—one which employs her emotional talents to the fullest. You might get up some interesting copy concerning the description of a royal scarab which is missing. State that it was purchased in Cairo eight years ago by a gentleman named Randall. Last heard of in New York. Liberal reward for information. Such data will excite interest. Teasers will help a great deal, too. Play up catch lines. Play it up as a fascinating mystery romance.

"THE LAST CARD"
(Metro)

Interesting Murder Mystery Carries Clever Touches

BAYARD VEILLER has had enough experience in writing murder mysteries to feel perfectly at home in arranging one for the screen. Sponsoring his first production for Metro he has shown a knack of direction comparable to his playwrighting talent. The director has taken Maxwell Smith's magazine story, "Dated," retitled it "The Last Card," and made it into a clever murder mystery. The scenes are arranged skilfully with emphasis placed upon their suspensive value. There is a fine balancing note of child interest with some incident which carries surefire appeal—especially in the delightful manner the mother plays with the youngster. Mr. Veiller has used discretion with excellent results, there being no stressing of sequences to put over certain elements.

The action is placed against backgrounds which have little of the studio stamped on them, although the picture could not have been made without studio facilities. The plot itself is quite novel and revolves around a murder committed by a jealous husband who causes an innocent neighbor to be indicted for the crime. The victim is a young college rake who has a job of tending furnaces to pay for his tuition. The murderer surprises him with his wife, follows him into a neighbor's cellar and kills him. A heavy snowfall covers up the evidence of the body which has been dragged out at the beginning of the storm. The ending cannot be guessed and one is put in a suspensive state wondering how the crime will be exposed.

Up to the adjournment of court the picture builds easily and surely to a definite climax. But with the adjournment the offering loses its tempo and the suspense is over. Even the conclusion can be anticipated. The murderer happens to be the lawyer of the defense and it is his purpose to try the case weakly and save himself. This gives May Allison her only principal scene when she arranges an expose of the crime by convicting the criminal through bringing him in intimate contact with the atmosphere of the case. His conscience compels him to confess, the wires are tapped and he is caught. This anti-climax discounts to an extent the clever arrangement of scenes in the forepart of the picture. It seems to us that the offering ended in the courtroom and the subsequent confession scene could have been staged with a few titles and a series of flashbacks, even though such a development might not have carried the intensity demanded. Miss Allison is called the star of this picture, but she has very little to do. Frank Elliot, as the criminal, carries the burden of the plot and plays with considerable poise and finesse. Al Roscoe makes the innocent husband natural. Despite the anti-climax the picture is certain to keep one thoroughly interested. The titles are excellent.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

That a woman's instincts, intuition, sixth sense—call it what you will—can sometimes solve a murder mystery where the machinery of logic fails is shown in the fascinating melodrama, "The Last Card," which comes to the ——— theatre next ——— with May Allison as the star. Bayard Veiller, the author of the memorable "Within the Law," is responsible for the direction of this exceedingly clever picture. The offering is adapted from Maxwell Smith's popular magazine story entitled "Dated," and gives to Miss Allison an opportunity such as she has seldom had upon the screen. Others in this capable cast are Albert Roscoe, Frank Elliot, Irene Hunt, Dana Todd, and the clever child actor, Stanley Goethals.

The star has the role of Elsie Kirkwood, the happiest married woman in town until her husband is put in jail for the murder of a man whose body is found in the basement of their home. Sudden inspiration makes her realize that a criminal will always return to the scene of his crime, and by stressing this logic and adding other links to the chain of her circumstantial evidence, she is able to apprehend the real murderer. The picture builds with ever-increasing suspense.

PROGRAM READER

"The Last Card," a Bayard Veiller production for Metro, and starring pretty and talented May Allison will be the feature attraction at the ——— theatre next ———. It unfolds in the most gripping way the manner in which a clever female Sherlock Holmes unravels a murder mystery. In this case the "woman" is not implicated in the crime, but is the chief aid in tracing the perpetrator of the deed. The story deals with a mysterious murder, with circumstantial evidence pointing to an innocent man. The woman's remarkable intuition comes to the fore and enables her to absolve her husband. It is a picture calculated to make every one pay the utmost attention. It carries big action and suspense. Can you solve it?

SUGGESTIONS

You might play upon the well known fact that the feminine sex is usually gifted in power of intuition. You can state that a woman's sixth sense enables her to see danger—that it aids her to defend herself. You can state that every woman is gifted with unusual instincts for the solving of crime. Stress this fact as forming the background of this highly entertaining mystery melodrama. Play the title, stating that May Allison has a trump card here—her best picture to date. Announce that the picture defies solution, so clever is the direction.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

BALTIMORE

A plea for the prohibition of all sex pictures in Maryland was made before the City Club of Baltimore on May 21 by Rev. Dr. Clifford Gray Twombly, of Lancaster, Pa. Dr. Twombly declared that only 20 per cent of the people want such films and that they pack the theatres to the tune of a profit of $200,000 to $2,000,000 for the producers of a six-reel. He stated 50 per cent. of the pictures exhibited in Baltimore were good, 40 per cent bad and 10 per cent passable.

Antediluvian is a word used advisedly as befittingly descriptive of the receipts of Baltimore motion picture theatres in general for the week of May 16-21. A group of wideawake house managers are pinching themselves to keep up to the minute on finding out what happened. Some are of the opinion the time is approaching for the big theatres to feel the slackened receipts like the smaller places have been undergoing for a few weeks. A combination of affairs taking in the closing of the horse racing Spring meet the presence of a circus, hot weather and unemployment is advanced by a number of the interests as the underlying principle.

Frank H. Durkee, who is at the head of a string of residential motion picture theatres, has started work to enlarge his Palace theatre on Hoffman street. "Heavier operating costs demand increased revenue," says Mr. Durkee. "We need more seats to help bring that about and trust that an increase of 500 to 1,800 at the Palace will count."

From chief usher at the Capitol to manager of the Poplar is the latest rung of the ladder to be climbed by Albert Clark. Manager Clark has been identified for years with the interests of which J. Louis Rome is the directing head.

SPARTANBURG, S. C.

All orphans of Buncombe County, North Carolina, were guests at the showing of Mary Pickford in "The Love Light," at the Majestic theatre, Asheville, N. C., May 16. Automobiles provided by citizens of Asheville carried the children to and from the theatre. The orphans, who are public charges, were deeply appreciative of the generosity of the management and it is planned to provide the children with occasional opportunities to view pictures peculiarly attractive to them.

A. C. Thornton, formerly manager of the Strand theatre at Newport News, Va., has assumed charge of the Bijou theatre at Spartanburg, S. C. Mr. Thornton has installed new electrical effects throughout the building, and a new and larger stage has been constructed in order to permit larger musical comedies to be added to the moving picture programs. The Bijou's improvements recently have entailed an outlay of approximately $15,000.

The State of North Carolina is going to embark in the motion picture business as a civic investment. In order to impress more vividly upon the school children of the State the interesting history of the Tar Heel commonwealth, the State has concluded arrangements whereby every step in the development of North Carolina will be protrayed realistically on the screen.

Slide sets and several thousand feet of films will be prepared immediately and distributed among the schools of the State immediately, and further films will be made as rapidly as possible.

CANADA

Manager George Clark, of the Allen theatre, Vancouver, B. C., has entered upon a season of special productions with admission prices raised five cents for the lengthy series of big releases. The pictures include "The Passion Flower," "The Golden Snare," "Playthings of Destiny," "Man, Woman, Marriage," "The Mark of Zorro" and other releases. These will be given one-week runs and the general admission fixed for evening performances is a flat 50c and for matinees, 30c.

The Russell theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, opened a summer season of special pictures and vaudeville on May 23 with the presentation of "The Whip" as a revived attraction. The policy of the theatre is to give two performances nightly and two regular matinees each week. Prices range from 15c to 55c and feature pictures are booked for week engagements.

King Snell, late manager of the Dominion theatre, Ottawa, was given a rousing send-off at the regular luncheon of the Kiwanis Club of Ottawa, of which he was a member, on Friday, May 13, on the occasion of his departure for New York City, where he will take up new work. The Kiwanians sang a special farewell song in his honor and showered him with tributes.

R. A. Scott and Barney Graves, of Vancouver, B. C., have purchased the British Columbia rights to the Dempsey-Brennan fight pictures and the first run of the feature was booked by the Columbia theatre, Victoria, B. C. No announcement has been made regarding plans to screen these fight views in any other Canadian province.

Clarence Boden has been appointed manager of the Globe theatre, Vancouver, B. C., in succession to W. McDougal, who is now identified with the Allen's Vancouver house.

The moving picture projectionists of Vancouver, B. C., arranged to hold their annual ball at Lester Court on May 18, one of the unique features being special lighting effects which were worked out by a committee of experts.

WESTERN NEW YORK

E. J. Hayes, manager of the Buffalo First National Exchange, has returned to Buffalo from the New York convention, bubbling over with enthusiasm bebause of the great time he had in Gotham. Ben Davis of the New York exchange is in town exploiting "The Kid," which opens a week's run at the Shubert-Teck May 29. The same week Manager E. O. Weinberg presents "Peck's Bad Boy," at the Mark-Strand and is planning a big newsies' party on the Saturday in advance of the opening in co-operation with the Buffalo Evening News. Of course, Eddie will get a lot of free publicity out of the stunt.

Several new members are expected to join the F. I. L. M. Club of Buffalo as the result of a get-together dinner in the Hotel Iroquois last Monday, when the many advantages of the organization were explained to non-members by President M. A. Chase and other officers.

D. L. Faralla, comptroller and assistant treasurer of Realart Pictures was in Buffalo last week. He is making a tour of the company's exchanges. He found the local office in excellent shape, he announced. Harry E. Lotz, Buffalo manager, reports business booming throughout the territory. The Buffalo Mark-Strand is now showing a large number of Realart pictures.

Earl L. Crabb, former manager of the Buffalo Strand, was in Buffalo last week where he announced the formation of System Theatres, Inc., to take over a number of houses in the state, the first of which is the System, Syracuse. This theatre was formerly the Top, and later the Palace. Mr. Crabb has severed his connection with the Buffalo Motion Picture Corporation, which he formerly represented in New York.

Fire which started in the inspection room of the Fox Film exchange in Franklin street, Buffalo, Monday, May 16, destroyed 225 reels of film and did damage amounting to $25,000. Five girls in the room at the time escaped injury. The timely closing of the door to the vault saved $100,000 worth of other films.

BUTTE, MONT.

It has been decided at a conference of the Butte, Montana theatre owners and managers to cut the operating hours of all moving picture houses and all other places of amusement, including vaudeville, to 4½ hours daily from 6:30 to 11 p. m. The new order went into effect May 22. This will permit of three shows nightly as usual at 6:30, 8, and 9:30.

The conference was called to determine whether or not the theatres would continue to operate under present conditions, and it was concluded an attempt would be made to run evenings with one matinee on Sunday, every theatre in the city agreeing to this plan.

The Ansonia, Montana, Silver Bow, Rocky Mountain and Harrison Avenue theatre amusement companies were represented. These firms operate the Ansonia, Orpheum, Broadway, Rialto, American, Liberty and Harrison Avenue theatres in Butte. They were confronted with the serious problem of cutting expenses owing to decreased attendance following the closing down of all the copper mining properties. Since the mines have closed Butte's population has dwindled materially.

SAN FRANCISCO

Pathe News pictures were made on Mother's Day, May 4, of the congregation of Dr. Gordon's congregational Church in San Francisco. Dr. Gordon is famous for his question box sermons. One of the questions asked was "What do you think of Blue Sunday?" and he preached against blue laws. Roy Stewart, picture star, was introduced to the congregation, and he delivered an address favoring pictures and against blue Sundays. This attracted considerable publicity throughout the city. The idea was conceived by Walter W. Kofeldt,, manager of the San Francisco Pathe exchange.

Mr. Kofeldt is a member of the publicity committee of the chamber of commerce and business organizations' Northern California boosting campaign. The week of May 24, the Emporium, largest department store west of the Mississippi staged an industrial exposition on the entire third floor. The only representative of the motion picture industry selected for a booth was the Pathe exchange. It contained a complete inspection room equipment and the pictures shown were a trailer on the Sky Ranger, Pathe's latest serial.

The College theatre on Market street which recently changed hands has again been sold to Mrs. Olive Grogg and Miss Sylvia Grogg, both formerly of Bakersfield where they operated the California, Bakersfield, Hippodrome and Pastime theatres and recently sold them to the Gore brothers and Sol Lesser after putting the houses on a profitable basis.

SOUTHWEST

J. C. Shannon will leave Dallas, Texas, soon to represent the F. B. Warren Corporation at Atlanta, Georgia. Doak Roberts, formerly with the Associated Producers, will take Mr. Shannon's place as manager of the Dallas office.

J. W. Williams, of Dallas, Texas, has arranged with H. W. Ferguson to handle the Independent Film Service Films at Oklahoma City; also to handle all Oklahoma business from the Oklahoma City office. Mr. Williams, through the Independent Film Service, will also handle the products of the Parker Film Company in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Lester Durland, booker for the Pathe exchange at Oklahoma City, has been transferred to Fort Smith, Ark., where he will represent the Universal.

Realart at Dallas, Texas, has a new manager in the person of J. K. Beach, who succeeds L. E. Harrington, resigned.

Charles Parson, president of the Tri-State Distributors, has left Dallas, Texas for the summer and will possibly not return before next October. His family accompanied him and after spending a short while in Kansas City, Chicago and New York, will go to his summer home in the main woods.

A. Van Deventer will have charge of the Dallas office during Mr. Parsons absence.

P. E. Dial and R. M. Moore have taken over the Cozy theatre at McAlester, Okla., and changed its name to Select.

MILWAUKEE

Many Milwaukee theatre managers have been talking lower admission prices recently. The majority of the down town houses have been getting 44 cents but two of the principal ones are now down to 33 cents. Ascher's Merrill went to 33 cents several weeks ago and the Butterfly which is controlled by the Newman interests of Kansas City went to 33 cents last week showing the Cosmopolitan production of "Buried Treasure." The Rialto, a new Saxe house of the grind variety which is getting 33 cents, recently reduced its children's admission to ten cents. The Theatorium, another Saxe grind house of small capacity is getting 15 cents.

Considerable excitement prevailed in the Milwaukee motion picture circles when the Gayety, a burlesque house, opened up for the summer with ten cent pictures, changing daily.

The Strand and the Alhambra managed by Edward J. Weisfeldt and Leo Landau, respectively, are getting 44 cents.

"COLD STEEL"
(Robertson-Cole)

Good Acting in This Ordinary Western

IN all probability the clever acting of J. P. McGowan, who plays a "native son" in a compelling style without once resorting to mock heroics, and some other members of a well balanced cast, will put this ordinary Western over. Certainly it carries very little ingenuity of theme and characterization. It is at best a character study, telling a story of old-fashioned American pluck tinged with a motive of revenge. McGowan, in the titular role of "Cold Steel," is the son of an unfortunate prospector and rancher who was framed on a murder charge and compelled to flee the country. His property has been stolen from him by the framers who dread the march of civilization which would deprive them of their cattle lands.

The son is a mining engineer, engaged in constructing a dam, which when erected would spell disaster for the cattle bandits. The father has told the youth of the frame-up and the latter takes up the task of executing revenge in a manner which indicates ultimate success. He has a cool manner—one in perfect keeping with his nickname. And he is fearless when danger confronts him. The quartette of villains endeavor to put him out of the way, but he circumvents their efforts and succeeds in bringing them to justice. Those who are less obedient to the law are dispatched by the gun route.

That's about all there is to the plot. A weakness of the picture is the lapse of continuity—the long time it takes in building to the climaxes. And the romantic note seems entirely out of place. The hero in ordinary experience would be too busy to stop work to pay attention to flirtations. Perhaps Kathleen Clifford in the opposite role is somewhat to blame since she is not the ideal type for the part, there being too much of the sophisticated ingenue in her appearance and style of acting. There is some good incident, particularly in those scenes which present the villains trying to put something over on the hero and his success in outwitting them. Up to this point the offering falters because of so much planting of extraneous detail, and the action jumps around a great deal.

There is a lesser villain—the high collar type—who has his inning in trying to dishonor the girl. This is old stuff but it permits the hero to put over some thrills as he madly chases through a vivid rainstorm in pursuit. The elemental punches are not as compact as they should be—to make this a high class Western. The scenes are mostly exteriors and there is some picturesque appeal in them. The titles weaken the action to some extent because of their descriptive character. McGowan stands out like Babe Ruth in a ball game in the title role. He will probably put it over.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Cold Steel" is the attractive title of the feature which will be presented at the ———— the last half of the current week. It is a throbbing, elemental picture of adventure, romance and intrigue and has for its background the colorful scenery of the West. The story concerns the attempt of a group of cattle men to frustrate the efforts of Steele Weir, a mining engineer, commonly called "Cold Steel," because of his courage under fire, to put through a huge dam and reservoir. The cattle men well know that the engineering feat means the progress of civilization—that the cattle lands will be swallowed up in the march of industry. They have sinister motives, too.

Years before, when "Cold Steel" was an infant, they had shot his father in a poker game, he being the victim of a frame-up. With the old man's dying breath he requests the son to avenge himself. The young man abides his opportunity, but when he strikes he sees to it that there are no loopholes through which the culprits may crawl. The murderers who have been at large are all compelled to pay—some with their lives. The picture carries rugged action, is well acted by J. P. McGowan and others, and is certain to furnish a full hour of entertainment.

PROGRAM READER

His father had told him that the treacherous cattle men had deliberately framed him, taken away his hard earned money, stealing his cattle and lands and compelling him to leave the community where he had struck it rich. These cattle men had feared the march of civilization. So years later their victim's son confronted them. And they soon learned that he was a son of the old man. They soon knew why he was called "Cold Steel." He could look a gun in the muzzle without flinching. He was as courageous as he was dominant. And his father's enemies soon were frustrated in their plans. He executed revenge in a manner befitting a son of the West. But "Cold Steel" could love, too. He had time to pay attention to the call of romance. See "Cold Steel," a fascinating picture of the West—a rugged picture which carries a full quota of action and suspense. "TWO WISE WIVES"
(Lois Weber-Paramount)

Interesting, Especially to Women, Because of Character Contrasts

LOIS WEBER proves here once more that she is capable of drawing the characters of screen husbands and wives with remarkable skill. "Two Wise Wives" is a married life story which entertains pleasantly, without presenting any startlingly dramatic situations. The picture is not, however, made up of frothy material. If it has no gripping story or action to make people sit up in their chairs, it presents enough sympathetic sidelights on those little phases of married life which eventually become of paramount importance to give the audience satisfaction. Taking two wives, opposite in character, Miss Weber draws her contrast between them steadily and surely from the very opening shot. If it were directed or acted less capably such emphasis as is placed on trivial events like the disposal of tobacco ashes and the menu for breakfast would grow decidedly tiresome. But Miss Weber plays up these pleayune domestic affairs very cleverly and gets her story moving onward before it is too late. And she could not have found in filmdom four better types for her characters than her principals—Louis Calhern, Claire Windsor, Philips Smalley and Mona Lisa.

The titles add to the effect immeasurably. One sums up the two wives concisely. "The first," it reads, "plans to do the things that will please her husband, and the other the thing that should please him because she wanted it to."

No doubt "Two Wise Wives" will prove essentially a woman's picture. This is largely because of the domestic story and also because of the number of fashionable gowns shown off in a shopping sequence. The production is very elaborate throughout, with a number of luxurious interiors.

Few married life pictures are as wholesome as this. Neither in theme nor treatment is it objectionable. It simply shows two wives, one of the clinging vine type, "too much in love with her husband to reason how to please him," and the other a hypocritical woman who plays the loving wife in order to gratify her own desire for riches. These two couples are brought together for a week end, and the second wife tries to win her way into the heart of the other's husband. It ends somewhat unsatisfactorily in the woman's repentanee and the man's renewed faithfulness. "Two Wise Wives" is not, of course, a picture for children or the man who likes action, or the girl who likes romance and heavy drama, but it is entertainment for a high class audience of adults.—Length, 6 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Lois Weber, one of the few and the most successful of woman motion picture directors, has made another picture which will be offered to the patrons of the ———— theatre on ————. This successor to "What's Worth While?" and "To Please One Woman" is entitled "Too Wise Wives." It is a surprising human story of American life, and American husbands and wives.

Miss Weber shows a remarkable knowledge of human nature in this picture. She draws her screen characters with swift, clean-cut strokes, and she reveals perfectly the truth that the affection of a woman for her husband cannot always be judged by her external actions. Many a wife is able to play the role of a loving wife only as long as it is necessary to fool her husband, and then set out to enjoy herself until it is time to take up the role again.

The characters of these two wives are direct opposites. One pleases her husband to obtain her own selfish ends. The other, loving her husband with all her heart, annoys and pesters him with her display of affection. These parts are portrayed admirably by Claire Windsor and Mona Lisa. Others in the cast are Louis Calhern and Philips Smalley, the husband of Lois Weber. The picture will be shown at the ———— theatre for ———— days.

PROGRAM READER

Another Lois Weber production will be offered at this theatre on ————. "Too Wise Wives" is the title and it lives up to the standard which you may expect from the producer of "What's Worth While" and "To Please One Woman." Miss Weber, who is not only the director but the author as well, is the most successful of women motion picture producers. She is noted for her ability to draw an accurate picture of American domestic life, and she proves this again in "Too Wise Wives." This is a story of two wives—one of whom loves her husband devotedly, but who pesters and annoys her husband with an excess of affection. The other is apparently, a loving and devoted wife, seeking ever to please her husband, but who is really seeking only her own selfish ends.

In the cast are Louis Calhern, Claire Windsor, Philips Smalley and Mona Lisa, a quartet of screen players equalled in one picture.

SUGGESTIONS

If you can get over the idea that this is a married-life story which is entirely unobjectionable and which is a remarkably clever and true-to-life portrayal of two very different types of wives, it is the best line of action to pursue. Boost it as a Lois Weber production, and mention her past successes, "To Please One Woman," and "What's Worth While." A feminine appeal which should not be neglected is the wealth of beautiful gowns which are shown in the picture. Various catch lines suggested by the titles which are reprinted in the press book would make good teaser campaigns.

"GET YOUR MAN"
(Fox)

Buck Jones Feature Consistent in Action and Suspense

THIS, we believe, is one of the best pictures starring Buck Jones that the Fox forces have turned out in some time. Jones has been placed in a variety of roles. He has been, in addition to the conventional Western hero, a minister and a country boob, but here he comes back to a picture which is essentially one of action and which at the same time takes him away from ranches and cowpunching. There is value also in the scenic background which becomes an important factor in the latter part of the picture. A blizzard sequence is realistic and the snow scenes are high class.

The story opens in Scotland where the star is cast as a hard-toiling miner. He is of the "boob" type, and is in love with a girl who does not return his affection, but action, not romance, is the keynote, and the early reels contain good suspense and excellent photography when a cave-in far below ground is shown. Jones, working amidst mud and rain and heaps of debris, saves himself and his rival in love from death.

Then the action skips to Canada and the story becomes a typical Northwest Mounted Police yarn. Jones is sent on his first assignment, which happens to be the apprehension of his old Scottish rival. Another girl becomes involved to supply some more romance, and from then on there is the pursuer and the pursued supplying healthy, vigorous action, not the most vigorous ever seen on the screen, but sufficient for entertainment. The climax takes the form of a flight through a blizzard, which, as stated above, is well-made and convincing.

While not unorthodox in its story, "Get Your Man" serves to place Buck Jones in a new setting and to get in suspense and action. Then again there is the appeal to the adventure-loving public in the Northwest Mounted sequence. The development of the story is not always congruous and the sub-titles contain some trite phrases such as "I want to get away from it all," which is an example of highbrow nothingness, so time worn as to be now a subject of satire.

Supporting the star are William Lawrence, as the villain, and Beatrice Burnham as his leading lady. The story is the work of Alan Sullivan, and the direction was by George W. Hill.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Buck Jones, the hard-riding, hard-fighting Fox star, has an excellent role in "Get Your Man," which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. Jones needs no introduction to the movie fans of ————. He has been seen at the ———— theatre in many of his previous successes and it is expected that hundreds of his admirers will welcome this announcement that they will have another opportunity to see their favorite.

"Get Your Man" is a picture of thrills and romance. The story opens in Scotland, where the star plays the part of a hard-working miner. Disappointed in love, he tries his luck in Canada, the "land of opportunity," which gladly receives him. He is taken into the Northwest Mounted, and from then on the picture is crowded with dramatic situations and thrilling moments.

The star lives up to the reputation he has acquired as one of the most virile and daring of all screen stars. His "stunts" are real and his fights convincing and realistic. He is supported by a cast of popular players, including Beatrice Burnham, William Lawrence and Helene Rosson.

PROGRAM READER

Buck Jones, sportsman, athlete and marksman, appears as a member of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police in his newest Fox picture, "Get Your Man," which the management of the ———— theatre has obtained for ———— days, beginning ————. Buck Jones' pictures are always pleasing—they are real, gripping stories of brave men and courageous women, and they take one to a land of adventure and romance. There are remarkable storm scenes in "Get Your Man." All the fury and power of a blizzard of the Northwest is pictured on the screen, as the star, of the Mounted Police, and the criminal fight each other and the blizzard in the midst of the snow buried forest.

SUGGESTIONS

Tell them this is a gripping Northwest Mounted story. There is an appeal about this picturesque body of men which is undeniable. Point out that there is some fine snow stuff in this picture. The star is the biggest selling argument. Mention his last pictures and then explain that his role in "Get Your Man," while as vigorous and virile as ever, is varied. Make use of the slogan used as a subtitle, "To the ends of the earth if necessary—but Get Your Man."

"SCRAMBLED WIVES"
(Marguerite Clark Productions-First National)

Slender Story Makes Just Average Starring Vehicle

AFTER an absence from the screen of several months, Marguerite Clark presents her initial production with her own company in "Scrambled Wives," an adaptation of the stage farce of the same name, written by Martha M. Stanley and Adelaide Mathews.

"Scrambled Wives" as a play was extremely slender in plot, although rather original, if there is anything new about the story that gets its start on a "white lie" and its complications from the necessity of protecting that lie with others, and in as much as the picture version after an auspicious start from largely interpolated matter, follows the play closely, the result is rather too many titles and too little actually interesting incident to be productive of a show that the average fan is going to hail as a hit.

However, the role of the flapper heroine is eminently suitable for Miss Clark and she manages to put enough pep in her work to keep the picture from being boresome. The direction is good, the staging adequate and occasionally some of the situations register as amusing. The titles are largely lines from the play needed to tell the story and explain the reason for a lot of running around, hiding behind curtains, etc.

In support of Miss Clark is a cast of good types playing the orthodox farce comedy characters. Leon P. Gendron is the star's leading man and makes rather a good impression, although he hasn't much to do. The best male role in the show is that of "John Chiverick," played by Ralph Bunke. Mr. Bunke earns some laughs, but it would seem that he missed many opportunities.

Undoubtedly the picture is much too long, six reels, and possibly if it was judiciously trimmed, the result would be beneficial. Some Prizma process scenes not up to the usual Prizma standard are used.

All in all, not very good or not very bad. Just a picture whose story could have been told in two reels. A vehicle for the star which will just about slide by with her admirers.—Length, 6 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Petite Marguerite Clark, famous movie star in Paramount pictures for many years, is the principal film attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ———— in the first production at the head of her own company, "Scrambled Wives."

The picture is an adaptation of the late Broadway stage play of the same name which kept New York audiences laughing for the better part of a year. The picture version has retained much of the humor and cleverness of the original, with a lot of new material added that is good for an audience's interest.

In the role of the "flapper" heroine Miss Clark has a part eminently suited to her talents. The supporting cast is excellent and the picture has been magnificently produced. With so popular a star, playing in so well known a vehicle, "Scrambled Wives" should prove one of the banner attractions of the season.

PROGRAM READER

"Scrambled Wives," adapted from the famous stage farce playing the better part of last season on Broadway, with petite Marguerite Clark in the leading role, that of the flapper who elopes with a young chap hardly known to her after being expelled from school, and thus gets herself in a lot of trouble, is the attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

The picture is the first production in which Miss Clark has appeared since severing her connection with Paramount and is also the first vehicle to be released since she formed her own company, Marguerite Clark Photoplays Co. In support of the star is a strong cast of favorite players, each one specially selected for their roles. The feature is a comedy drama with many clever situations and complications to the plot. Good titles add to the feature's entertaining qualities. The production is in six reels and was directed by E. H. Griffith.

SUGGESTIONS

Play up Miss Clark's return to the screen and the fact that this is the initial production at the head of her own company. Make your advertising snappy, giving a little hint of what the story is about. Give a little history of the play from which the picture was adapted, promising a light, pleasing story with Miss Clark in a characteristic role. For prologue we would suggest light music, preferably a ballad with stage setting pretty and artistic. The scenes of the first part of the story, taking place in a boarding school girl's room, could be used to advantage. The picture doesn't recommend itself as a good one for lobby display.

CATCH LINES

A peppy little story about a flapper who was married and unmarried all in the same breath, and who had a terrible time keeping her terrible past from the right man when he finally came along.

Just as charming and amusing a light little comedy as Miss Clark has ever had for a starring vehicle. The story of a wife that was and then wasn't, and a "past" she had which the right man shouldn't know anything about, according to feminine deductions, until after she had him safely hooked.

"CHARGE IT!"

SOME few phrases are potent with dramatic suggestion, and "CHARGE IT" is one of them. In the EQUITY release of that name the suggestion is carried to a full fruition, for it is one of the most dramatic productions put forth for a long time. Clara Kimball Young takes the leading part, and she interprets it as only Clara Kimball Young can. For the excellent advertising that is putting it over, Mr. Nat Rothstein is responsible.

REALART PICTURES CORPORATION
469 FIFTH AVENUE ~ NEW YORK

To The Exhibitors of America:

IN considering the attack that is being made upon me and upon the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, each exhibitor, I believe, should pass judgment upon the basis of his own experience with me and with the company I head. The exhibitor is interested particularly in his own case and I urge each of you—in the midst of this agitation based upon inaccuracies and exaggerations—to decide whether you have been fairly treated by me and by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. I want you to judge whether my activities since I entered the motion picture business—first, as an exhibitor 18 years ago, and as a producer for 10 years—have made for greater prosperity for exhibitors and for the upbuilding of the industry.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation entered the exhibiting field only after certain exhibitors entered the field of producing and distributing pictures and put forth an organized effort to take from us our stars and directors. The attack was focused upon us because we were the only company that had been so foresighted as to gather around us the stars and directors best equipped to furnish the public with the sort of entertainment it demanded. Our strength was built by years of genuine service to exhibitors and to the public.

Our stars and directors were told that the exhibitors controlled the best theatres and that therefore in order for the stars to get higher salaries the stars must join hands with them. Our distribution was threatened and there was no alternative but to acquire theatre interests in localities in which conditions beyond our control seemed to make it necessary in our best judgment to safeguard our business.

Only by a wide distribution of Paramount Pictures can we insure the revenue necessary to maintain the quality that exhibitors and the public demand. The prosperity of each exhibitor is linked with the producer. He must have a steady supply of good pictures. He must have a wide outlet for our product. Neither of us can succeed without the other and knowing this we have made every effort to cooperate with the exhibitor in order that he may prosper.

The attacks upon me are an effort to make the exhibitors believe that we are attempting to drive them out of business—that we do not value their good will. I want every thinking exhibitor to know that we are primarily a producing and distributing organization and our only thought is to please the exhibitor. Our exhibiting interests work to the advantage of exhibitors as a whole in that they widen our distribution in localities in which we otherwise would not be permitted to obtain a fair revenue for our product. Thus, by wide distribution, we bring about an equalization of rental prices throughout the United States so that the smaller exhibitors will not be forced to bear more than their share.

The statement that I no longer control the policy of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and that I obey Wall Street is too ridiculous to make necessary a denial.

The policies of the organization are those laid down by me and every exhibitor who knows me must appreciate that I sanction only one way of dealing, and that is the way that is fair to both sides. I never have knowingly harassed nor embarrassed an exhibitor and I stand as I have stood for the last ten years, giving every support to the exhibitor in the knowledge that I head an organization of trained picture makers trying in every way they know how to aid the exhibitor to regain his prosperity.

I feel that it is deplorable that for selfish reasons men will work to tear apart an industry and to create dissension instead of building good-will between the component parts of our business: the exhibiting, the distributing and the producing branches. Now, of all times, too, we need a united force to fight the agitators who are attacking us from the outside.

It seems hardly necessary to state again the truth about the misstatements that have been made regarding the case of Mrs. Dodge. We had no interest with Mr. Black at the time this deal was first made, but when the question came up, Mr. Black was requested to make every effort to help Mrs. Dodge. After an unsuccessful attempt to come to a fair understanding with Mrs. Dodge, Mr. Black turned the theatre back to its original owner, Mr. Emmons, who now controls the property. Mr. Black has absolutely no theatre interests in Morrisville, Vermont.

Our arrangement with Mr. Black in New England was made only after a certain group gained control of so many theatres in New England that we found ourselves in a very dangerous position and the security of our distribution was threatened. We joined with Mr. Black in order that the people of New England could see Paramount Pictures. We will welcome an investigation and the publication of the facts in the New England situation by any group of disinterested exhibitors.

Never before has there been such a feeling of good-will between Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and the exhibitors of the United States. Agitators, attempting to build themselves, are attacking us in an effort to destroy that good-will which, I feel, is an asset to the exhibitor as well as to ourselves. We must work together that our industry shall prosper.

Each exhibitor is interested in his own problem and no fair-minded exhibitor has ever found me anything but a friend to him when he has sought my aid in the solution of any of his difficulties.

I feel sure that the exhibitors of the United States will recognize as false these accusations, and will agree that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is a good influence in the industry and not a foe to the exhibitors of America.

"A PRIVATE SCANDAL"
Realart's Birthday Production

THE LID IS OFF—

All the time we knew that with May McAvoy starring in a story by Hecto Turnbull, with an all-star cast, directed by Chester Franklin, from the script b Eve Unsell, it would be SOME picture.

We didn't turn handsprings, because that's not Realart's way, but there wa every provocation in the wide world to do so. Here is a big box-office dividen coming to every owner of a Realart Star Franchise on the occasion of Realart second birthday. Put in your booking preference for an early playing date—an cash your dividend now with a picture that will rank high among the great scree productions of the year.

"A Private Scandal" is the sort of audience picture that exhibitors pray fo when they go to bed at night.

That's Realart's judgment and on it we stake our reputation for square dealin and straight talking.

A TRIUMPH IN EMOTIONAL REALISM

Real life as it is lived by real men and women. "A Private-Scandal" takes an ordinary American household and involves it in a dramatic maelstrom that thrills you and bears you irresistibly upon its swift moving current.

It brings to the screen something distinctive in emotional acting. May McAvoy? The critics have given her credit for some flawless performances in the past. But wait till you see this wonder-girl in Realart's Birthday Picture! Witchery! Fire! Gentleness! Nobility! Pathos! It's the kind of acting that does things to your heart-strings and makes your voice husky when you talk it over with the family afterwards.

For this is a family picture—the sort of picture that attracts new patrons to your theatre, and unites new fans with old in enthusiastically praising your judgment in booking productions that entertain.

"THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM"

THE WANDERLUST

We had always wondered what the Wanderlust was, and where you caught it, so we started off to find out for ourselves. We traveled East and West and North and South, but couldn't locate it anywhere, so we went home. And then we discovered we had had it all the time.

HIDES AND GO SEEK

Our trapping trip started from Fort Chipewyan, in Northern Canada. The writing of tiny footprints in the snow looked like hentracks to us, but Baptiste knew how to read it. He showed us how they work the skin game in the wilderness.

VOICES OF THE SEA

Standing on the shore and listening to the huge waves crashing on the rocks, do you ever realize that the mighty sound is merely a medley of many tiny whispers? All these voices, joined together in one great chorus, form the Call. Its answer is known only to those "who go down to the sea in ships."

A TALE OF THE FUR NORTH

Seated around the campfire, we said, "Captain, tell us a story." So Ingmiluk, the Eskimo, told us how he was betrothed while still a baby on his mother's back. How he married the girl of his mother's choice, and how they lived happily ever since. An unusual picture enacted in the original locations by the characters themselves, and presented in a striking manner.

CROWNING KING BLIZZARD

"Where are the snows of yesteryear?" sang the poet. When we reached Quebec in the dead of winter, we were sure we had found a good part of them, if not all. Next time a blizzard is mentioned, we'll remember that land where the slogan is, "The more, the merrier."

ONE PEAK WAS PLENTY

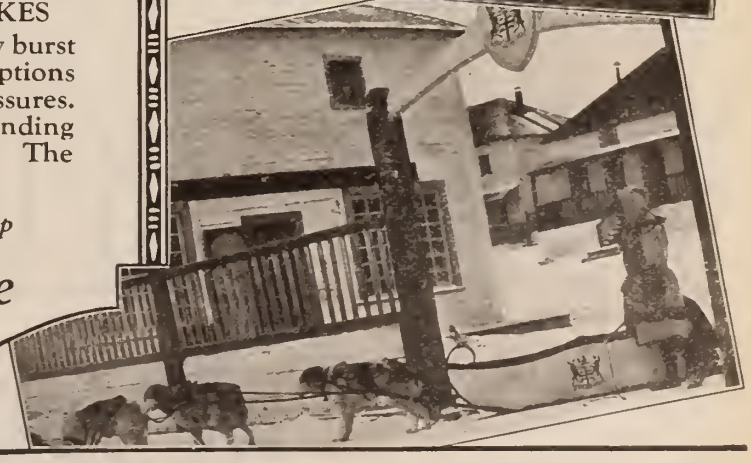
We started all right, but soon discovered why Mt. Assiniboine is called the American Matterhorn. And coming down was as hard as getting up. Back in camp, instead of planning another climb, we said in chorus, "One peek is plenty."

SOMETHING TO WORRY ABOUT

The janitor at Yellowstone Park is a prize. His heart is always in his work. Even in zero weather when the snow lays thick, he whistles cheerfully down below at his task of heating all outdoors with his hot springs and geysers. It's a grand little valley with safety valves and percolators indulging in an orgy of blowouts.

FALLING WATERS

Water is the most fascinating element we know, so we ran away with him one day from his home in the mountains. Hammering and banging our way over ledges and falls with other runaway streams, we finally reached the sea, where we poured and roared with him up and down the coast till nightfall.



THE GREAT MIRROR

Every pool holds a neater, cleaner world than the one you live in. At sunrise, before the wings of morning stir, Nature holds a gigantic mirror before your eyes. Dizzy mountain peaks stand on their heads and broad rivers are flecked with clouds till a curtain of fog shuts off the phantom pictures for the day.

THE VALLEY OF TEN THOUSAND SMOKES

In June, 1911, a pleasant Alaskan valley suddenly burst forth in one of the most remarkable volcanic eruptions known to man, forming a vast area of steaming fissures. Year in and year out they pour forth their never-ending columns—a mighty valley of gigantic fumeroles. The world's greatest natural marvel.

The Opinions of 4 Great Editors

Wm. A. JOHNSTON
"M.P. NEWS"

"PRISCILLA DEAN deserves much more than passing credit for her fine dramatic work in 'REPUTATION.' It is not too much to say that in point of emotional effect her work in this picture has not heen excelled by that of any other screen actress. In 'REPUTATION' a powerful screen story has been developed with skill and sureness of direction. With its wide audience appeal, 'REPUTATION' should prove one of the strongest pictures of the season."

MARTIN J. QUIGLEY
"EX. HERALD"

"The remarkable performance of PRISCILLA DEAN is the outstanding feature of her latest production. In 'REPUTATION' Miss DEAN frequently touches, and in certain scenes surpasses, the finest previous work of her career. It is strong, suspenseful drama and affords entertainment of the very first class. The story is one of more than passing interest and it has been woven into effective drama by Stuart Paton, the director. It is a strong, interesting picture — a colorful melodrama that has an almost universal appeal."

JOS. DANNENBERG
"WIDS"

"AS A WHOLE- good entertainment values aided by excellent photography and character work of the star. STORY —Mother-Daughter roles worked out to dramatic conclusion with a stage career as the background. DIRECTION — excellent. PHOTOGRAPHY — seldom has better work been seen. LIGHTINGS — excellent, especially in the night scenes. CAMERAWORK—brings some splendid results.—STAR—gives excellent performance in the dual role—her character work is unusually fine.

"UNIVERSAL has given you something good to work on with this. Put your big play on the Star. She's worth it."

ARTHUR JAMES
"M.P. WORLD"

"Eyes misty thru tears shed over the horrors of foreign film invasion are herewith advised to dry up and brighten, and subjoined is one of the reasons why. The big, new production, American-made and entirely American in conception, development and treatment, will give cheer to the lachrymose and solace to the sorrowing.

"'REPUTATION' is one of the really great feature productions of the year. Miss DEAN in the portrayal of three roles is remarkably able in their enactment. We congratulate Mr. Laemmle and his artists on this production. It is another great advance toward the goal we all are striving for—complete and satisfying entertainment."

Those initials as a part of a signature are on more than 200,000 motion picture exhibitor contracts in the theatre safes or filing cabinets of the United States.

For seven years in this industry those initials have stood for business honor; for keeping faith with exhibitor-customers; for a clean and honorable relation between seller and buyer.

During this time those initials have represented an agent or officer of other companies. From now on, they represent a principal, not an agent. There is nothing new in saying that they represent a principle. They always have represented the principle of commercial honor.

We will procure for and offer to the exhibitors of this country motion picture productions of able and powerful directors – including some work from young (and already successful) directors who are themselves willing to work; men who have done work that others have sought to claim and usurp.

F. B. Warren Corporation does not produce motion pictures. We are a mercantile sales organization delivering to theatre owners the best possible product that can be attracted into a vigorous and square distributing company.

To Get Money You Must Have A Box Office Feature Now

This is outdoor weather and you need more than the ordinary program picture in your theatre

This super-feature picture on Divorce, the great question of the day, is the photodrama to play right now.

There is no gamble for you in "The Wild Goose." It's a sure winner for two reasons.

First: Every story Gouverneur Morris writes is a success and "The Wild Goose" is one of the greatest that ever came from his pen. A million people read it in Hearst's Magazine and every one of them will tell a dozen people not to miss the picture.

Second: The pre-release showing at the Rialto, New York, drew more money into box office during hot, clear, outdoor weather than any picture or any musical or dramatic play in New York that week.

It takes real hits to fill theatres now. That's why you should play "The Wild Goose," a doubly tested hit, at once.

Play something else later. Play "The Wild Goose" now.

This picture would have equalled, if not beaten, the Rialto's great "The Wild Goose" record if it had rained two days.

Real hot summer weather prevailed all the first week.

Now watch for the second week's record of "The Woman God Changed," which we will publish next week.

It calls for nerve to advertise previous to opening that box office figures will be announced.

From Wednesday on, the Rivoli, did turn away business every night and big business at matinees.

Cosmopolitan Productions are today always big box office winners.

What They Will Do For You

HERE'S a comedy release that will captivate everyone, young or old, as sure as shooting.

Every kid in the land knows Aesop's fables,—the hare and the tortoise, the goose that laid the golden egg, and all the rest. Grown-ups quote them; children read them and love them; all will want to see them on the screen, modernized. They've been advertised 2600 years!

Cartoonist Terry is clever; his drawings are delightful, once seen your crowd will come back for them again and again. They're a true novelty and a mighty good addition to any program.

Try them on yourself: and then count your laughs!

"Excellent production and splendid story sure to please. If you want a good one, get this."
—Wid's Daily.

Towering mountain peaks crowned with white—mile upon mile of banked-up snow —"Snowblind" will cool your house and make your patrons happy—just as it did in the world's largest theatre last week.

"Some heaven-sent inspiration must have influenced the Capitol Theatre in its choice of pictures for the current week. With the suffocating heat of yesterday threatening to wilt the audience, one could almost feel waves of frigid air drifting out from the screen as the reels of blizzards and snow-covered hills and valleys unrolled in 'Snowblind.'"

"'Snowblind,' like most of the Goldwyn productions, brings sturdy plot and splendid acting to the screen of the Capitol this week."
—N. Y. American.

"For glistening snowbanks in the distance brought buzzes yesterday. One felt he would like to drop into one of them and roll about for a few minutes."
—N. Y. World.

The Opportunity

Here is the Independent Exchangeman's chance to get a series of ten features, that will compare with anything being produced today and which can be booked to the big first runs because they will "draw."

Released in September and approximately one a month thereafter.

In a recent advertisement we implied that we had certain stories which go to make up productions that the market wants. Our hint was sufficient in many cases, but there is still open territory.

We cannot, under terms of our contract, advertise our productions by author or star series in priority, but we list here our Affiliated Series of Productions, with date when picture will be ready for release.

September 1st		Johnny Hines in "Burn 'em up Barnes"
October 1st		Kay Laurell "Lonely Heart"
November 1st	(Story)	"The Source of the River"
December 1st		Margaret Beecher in "Sunshine Harbor"
January 1st	(Star)	"The Camel's Back"
February 1st	(Story)	"The Lost Trail"
March 1st	(Star)	"The Man Who Couldn't Lose"
April 1st	(Story)	"'Jerry' For Short"
May 1st	(Star and Story)	"'Get-there' Coniston"
June 1st	(Story)	"Thunder and Lightnin'"

Each picture is produced by the seasoned and tried organization that has succeeded in the more difficult comedy field with "Torchy Comedies."

With Mr. Burr's management, and successful stories approved by the public in play or book form, we believe we have an unbeatable combination.

There is still something left to your imagination in this advertisement. Write us for full information, which will be gladly sent to reputable local distributing organizations having the facilities to reach the best theatres in their respective territories.

Romance—Drama Mother-Love

No "sex stuff"—yet powerful in its treatment of a beautiful romance and the world-old love of a mother for her son.

No exaggerated thrills—yet gigantic in its strength of logical dramatic construction which becomes more and more gripping as the reels unwind, reaching a climax that is expected to make film history.

In short, no typical "movie material," but rather a photodrama that would rank among the foremost American plays of the day were it presented on the stage.

Written and produced by the creator of many stage achievements and one who has accomplished much in the progress of screen technique during the past six years, this production will prove an innovation that will make itself felt at the box-office.

THE treasure vault had been found and the blazing jewels of a long dead king were before their eyes at last.

But in the moment of their victory they were surprised by the envious, unscrupulous prince and the jealous adventuress, overcome by force, bound and left to die.

It has the mysticism of the East and the fiery action of the West.

It was to forestall that very thing that they had made their compact,—"no fair falling in love."

But it is as easy to stop Niagara as to keep a woman from loving the man of her choice. One was to be hurt; one was to suffer; and as usual the woman paid.

Palmistry, spiritualism, romance and Bohemianism combine in this heart-tugging story.

"A Sensational Success—Likeable and Whimsically

Verdict of the Critics Is Unanimous

SENSATIONAL SUCCESS

"Best loved child actor a sensational success. One of the funniest, most likeable, whimsically delightful films the screen has seen. Jackie is great. This rollicking imp of mischief is different from other comedians. Superlative comedy, convulsive in effect. You just can't laugh any more."—New York Mail.

HOLDS THE LIMELIGHT

"Everybody's boy wins fresh laurels and is delightful. Jackie has come back with a batting average of 1,000. He holds the limelight with the surety of Babe Ruth and everybody is happy. He is adorably cunning and never 'smarty.' Cements his clutch on the public heart. The picture is handled with the eye of a showman."—New York Journal.

JACKIE IS WONDERFUL

"Little Jackie Coogan is wonderful. He has a whole variety of facial expressions. Mirthful, amusing."—New York American.

WILL DELIGHT ALL

"It will delight young and old. A clever, wholesome picture with delightful sub-titles." —New York Telegraph.

A REAL JOY

"This kid is a wonder. The picture will please the grown-ups and be a real joy to the kiddies."—Variety.

SOLID MERRIMENT

VOL. XXIII JUNE 11, 1921 No. XXV

Who Threatens Independence?

He is a bulwark against monopoly; he is a force against the dangerous accumulation of factory-made pictures; he furnishes the individuality of treatment, the freshness of ideas that make for the different picture; he is the well spring of the open market.

His product is greatly needed.

Charles Pathe emphasized the idea seven years ago when, upon withdrawing from the General Film Company, he announced his desire to have an organization similar to a book publishing house, an independent distributing concern that would encourage, everywhere, the film author and producer by being able to market profitably his wares.

The comparison is a good one. What would the book world be today if most all of the stories came from only a half dozen sources of creative effort and bearing the style mark of as few a number of hands?

The health of the box-office today depends very largely upon the picture, marked by originality of conception and individuality of treatment—upon a sufficient number of such pictures. It is the different picture that attracts, often in spite of crudity of treatment or other glaring faults. It is sameness that palls upon the public taste, even when technically the picture has what we term a "satin finish."

Commercially, the matter is of supreme importance. It is conceivable that aggregate box-office returns will vary many millions of dollars throughout the year because of this one factor or lack of it. It is conceivable that this is the main trouble today with the box-office. Certainly we will all admit that there is too much "sameness" in pictures.

We need the independent producer? What are we doing to encourage him?

It is a question that every distributing concern in this business may well and seriously ask of itself. So may the exhibitor; so may the entire industry. For the concern of the box-office is the concern of all.

What is it that the independent producer needs and asks for?

He wants first of all a distributor in whose operations he has implicit confidence.

He wants to know that his picture will get the fairest kind of treatment, that it will not be used to help sell other pictures, that the distributor be not committed to other pictures so that he must advance them at the expense of the independent producer's—in other words he wants, primarily, a fair and square deal, a deal whereby all pictures handled are sold on their merits and on nothing else.

Then he wants to know that his picture will be merchandized for all it is worth. And this demands more than the ordinary picture salesmanship. It demands a correct rental policy and above all it demands exploitation, exploitation clear through—and big and forcefully—to the picture-going public. Exploitation is the mighty factor.

The matter of financial arrangement isn't so important. If the independent producer gets a fair deal and forceful merchandizing he can turn elsewhere and get financial help—to keep on making pictures. And he should finance himself. He must from now on. It is money in his pocket, if he does.

Then, of course, he wants first-run representation. He makes a big point of this.

We are fully aware of the importance of first run showings: but we can't believe that the way is arbitrarily closed today to the good enough independent picture.

It takes about 400 features per year to meet our present first run requirements. Will anyone tell us of any one or two or three producing firms which—even all together—supply as many first run calibre pictures?

Again, the investment in first run theatres today is considerably greater than the entire investment in production and distribution. A half billion dollars is at stake here. These theatres have got to have good pictures if they are to last. Are these huge investments to be sacrificed to uphold a comparatively small producing concern? Can they afford to keep good pictures out? Can they be run successfully unless they are run as theatres only, regardless of any producer ownership or tie-up. Do they dare risk a greater investment for a greater one? Of course not!

We are told that first run theatres won't pay the proper prices to the independent picture. If that is true then we will close this editorial with the blunt statement that the first run theatre is the force that is killing independent production; that, thereby, it is standing in the way of the healthful and successful development of the picture and the picture industry; that it is thereby treading a straight course toward its own future bankruptcy. If independent production is to stop we wouldn't want to invest a dollar in first-run theatres.

But we can't believe that any first-run theatre is short-sighted enough to encourage its own ruin.

Walker Asserts Trust Methods Are Growing

CHARGING that powerful interests were attempting to "trustify" the motion picture industry, Senator James J. Walker, counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, at a "welcome home" lunch given at the Astor Hotel, June 1st, threw the following bombshells in an address:

"Powerful interests on the West Coast influence banks not to advance capital to independent producers."

"Where banks are reluctant to refuse loans, the first-run situation is pointed out, and the fact that the control of theatres is in the hands of First National, Goldwyn, Famous Players and Fox, is indicated."

"That Famous Players is continuing to grab theatres wherever possible."

"That Adolph Zukor controls and is the guiding hand of five of eight directors of the First National organization."

Warning that in view of these facts the exhibitor is seriously threatened, Walker advanced two methods to combat the "trustification":

(1) A 100% organization of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners.

(2) A new organization of independent producers and directors to release productions in theatres affiliated with the M. P. T. O. A.

Present at the luncheon, among others, were representatives of Famous Players, Fox, First National and Goldwyn. Later, representatives of First National were quoted as denying such portions of the speech as referred to their company, pointing out that in none of the organization's branches are "eight directors" in control.

Business Slump Hits Middle West : : :

IN a letter describing conditions now prevailing in the Middle West, W. F. Dagon of Springfield, Ill., declares that the "most disastrous slump the motion picture has ever known is now taking place throughout the Middle West. Business has fallen off in some houses to such an extent that not enough money is being taken in at the box-office to pay the men in the orchestra pits," declares Mr. Dagon, who continues as follows:

"High-priced films are being shown and the exhibitors are not realizing any more on them than they are on the cheaper pictures. The public seems to have stopped going to picture theatres suddenly and entirely. The weather in this section has been abnormally hot, which has added to the general depression. Every exhibitor is facing a serious situation. No relief or betterment is expected before fall, and it is a long time until September 1.

"Already some of the theatres are planning on reducing the overhead by eliminating the orchestras. Others are setting back high-priced program pictures and are booking in cheaper features, bought on the open market. No reduction in admission prices is looked for, as exhibitors feel that if they cannot break even with the number of people they are playing to now they will have a slimmer chance with less admission. It is agreed that not enough patrons would be attracted at lower prices to offset the loss by the reduction. The idea of having to operate a theatre from now until September 1 at a loss every week does not sit well with the exhibitor.

"Business in the Chicago zone is reported as being off 50 per cent. since the first of the year, and getting worse daily. Some of the houses have lowered their prices, and others have given their orchestras two weeks notice. St. Louis, never a great show town, is reported as being 'in the dumps for fair.' Peoria, Ill., reports a tremendous decrease in patronage, while Springfield, Ill., business is about the poorest ever known.

"Something will have to be done, and quickly, if the average motion picture exhibitor is to stay in business. Film rentals will have to be lowered—a great deal. Percentage pictures are not drawing enough to give the exhibitor sufficient share to pay his 'nut.' Theatres whose leases are now expiring are confronted with enormous increases in rents. This in the face of the poorest business many have ever known.

"Widespread unemployment and general reductions in wages are given as the chief reasons for the depression. Also the unusually hot early summer, which is causing people to flock to the ball parks, amusement parks and public parks in greater numbers than ever before. Usually Saturdays and Sundays can be counted upon to deliver the bulk of the 'nut.' They are no better than other days now. The only real business comes between 7 and 8:30 in the evening, which is not enough to make things go. Some of the theatres have gone in for heavy advertising campaigns, thinking to force business. It has resulted in some increased attendance, but the bills have been so big that scarcely anything has been gained.

"In Springfield, Ill., free motion pictures will be shown in the public parks all summer. One of the leading churches is using a feature every Sunday evening. Of course this will prove a fine thing for pictures in general, but it is anything but helpful for the exhibitor today. Some will say the exhibitor has been making plenty of money in the past four or five years. True, some did make money. But most of it has gone back into the business in beautified theatres, larger orchestras, added conveniences and other luxuries. The motion picture fan of today expects the best every time he pays his admission. He cannot be charged more now that business is bad, and he will "holler his head off" if he is obliged to sit through a mediocre picture. On top of all this there are a number of bills pending in the legislature which, if passed, will cause a majority of the theatres to shut up shop.

"What's the exhibitor to do? Suggestions are in order."

"You Can't Please 'Em All, All the Time"

J. S. Woody, of Realart, Discusses the Question of Screen Reviews and Opinions

THE subject of reviews is one that has long engaged my attention, even before reading the recent three-cornered correspondence between Robert Sherwood, Motion Picture Editor of Life, William A. Johnston, Editor of THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS and J. A. Partington, the prominent California exhibitor, which has appeared in The News. It is not my intention to enter into any controversy regarding the policy which may or may not actuate these reviews. Rather would I stand aside and glean from the debate something that would assist me to settle to my own satisfaction some questions which have rankled within my own mind for a considerable period, questions which have arisen from just such reviews as are the subject of these letters.

To quote from the aforementioned correspondence: Life says, "My reviews . . . express the unbiased opinions of an appreciative observer . . ."

The News: "It's the audience viewpoint that counts, not the reviewer's taste."

And Mr. Partington says: ". . . And some day I expect to find—a newspaper or magazine critic who will truly reflect the public taste for pictures."

All, you will note, agree that a review should be as nearly as possible a reflection of the audience's taste. Granted that the average critic does try to catch that reflection, how is one to reconcile himself to that conclusion, or to arrive at any conclusion from a comparison of the reviews which appear in trade-journals, magazines and newspapers?

Wherein lies their efficacy? For instance, suppose that an exhibitor, to get right down to cases, wishing to show a certain picture, consults the various mediums for an expression of opinion to help him reach a definite conclusion either for or against the production. While, in a great number of cases, he will find a consensus of opinion either definitely for or against a picture, he will find in very many other instances a summary of reviews such as I have taken very briefly, but verbatim, from the most recent publications. Herewith follow reports from exhibitors covering the pictures which have been shown in their theatres during the past month:

Famous Players

"The Gilded Lily"—"Went over big. Everybody liked it and said so." (West). "This one was mediocre. Business was only fair." (East).

"The Easy Road"—"We label this a good picture." (West). "Despite poor picture, attendance was on the average." (East).

First National

"The Passion Flower"—"The best picture Norma Talmadge has had in a long time." (Mid-West). "This one didn't please so well." (Mid-West).

"Jim the Penman"—"Good picture, which played excellent business for week." (Mid-West). "Lionel Barrymore is through as far as we are concerned. Terrible receipts." (Mid-West).

Realart

"The Little Clown"—"A gem of a picture." (East). "Fair production." (West).

"The Plaything of Broadway"—"Extra big business for the week. Public seemed pleased with story, star and her ability." (West). "Nothing great about the picture." (Mid-West).

Vitagraph

"Black Beauty"—"Excellent production; cleaned up." (South). "Proved a terrible flivver." (East).

Universal

"The Big Adventure"—"Did more than well for us and pleased." (West). "Poor picture which did not have much pulling power." (Mid-West).

It is not necessary for me to point out that the cumulative value of those reports, to the exhibitors, is absolutely nil. While they seem to indicate that it is the exhibitor's opinion that is offered, yet in the main, it may be that it is only an expression based on the comments of one or two patrons. But here is a list from another publication which no doubt reflects the exhibitor's own idea of the picture's worth, although some of them also mention what the patrons thought:

First National

"The Master Mind"—"A gripping picture that held my audience to the last foot." "A really wonderful production."—Lyric theatre, Stuart, Fla. Small town patronage. "Nothing to it for a small town."—F. L. Clark, Cozy theatre, Hazen, Ark

Note that both reports particularly mention the "small town."

"Twin Beds"—"A good picture—extra good drawing card. Failed to draw—no fault of picture."—Odeon theatre, Hardin, Mo. "Pleased only about 30 per cent. of patrons—still kicking about it."—Fairy theatre, Knox, Ind.

In this instance, the Odeon theatre points out that causes other than the picture itself were responsible for poor attendance, while The Fairy theatre calls particular attention to the picture's shortcomings.

"Harriet and the Piper"—"Played to good business. Patrons well pleased."—Lee theatre, Breaux Bridge, La. "Consider picture weak. Disappointed patrons."—Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb.

There again is an instance of absolutely opposite opinions.

Fox

"Just Pals"—"I like it the best of any Buck Jones to date."—Idle Hour theatre, Dunlap, Iowa. "When they put Buck Jones in a picture like this they are putting him out of place."—Grand theatre, Rock Falls, Ill.

Those two exhibitors took the occasion to comment on their ideas of what constituted a good and a poor vehicle for Buck Jones, their opposed opinions concerning the same picture.

"The Little Grey Mouse"—"A dandy program picture and pleased majority."—Mystic theatre, Marmath, N. D. "A poor story . . . people walked out."—Opera House, Arlington, Iowa.

"The Texan"—"Pulled better than usual for Tom Mix. Patrons liked it."—Dreamland theatre, High Springs, Fla. "Story poor. Patrons not well pleased."—Murray theatre, DeFuniak, Fla.

METRO

"Old Lady 31"—"A real picture . . . worth booking."—Wigwam theatre, Oberlin, Kansas. "Sorriest picture we have shown in five years . . . no good whatever."—Comique theatre, Jamesport, Mo.

One exhibitor, you will note, does not hesitate to recommend this picture to his contemporaries, while the other does not give it a leg to stand on.

PARAMOUNT

"Brewster's Millions"—"Sure to pull them in, and will please most of them."—Elite, Weeping Water, Neb. "A very keen disappointment."—Opera House, Greensboro, Alabama.

REALART

"The Outside Woman"—"A most excellent comedy that pleased whole audience."—Bryn Mawr, Chicago, Ill. "Audience tried to laugh but couldn't."—Opera House, Greensboro, Ala.

The fact that this story contained a good element of mystery appealed to one man; the other criticised it because it was not obvious enough, while a third is enthusiastic, as this comment from the very latest returns, a trade paper of the June 4th issue, shows:

"This, without any exceptions, is the best picture we have had this year. Don't be afraid to advertise this one and raise the admission. It is worth it."—Opera House, Elgin, Oregon.

VITAGRAPH

"Black Beauty"—"The best picture I ever ran, bar non."—Elite and Cozy theatres, Pratt, Kansas. "Don't be misled. It's good only for children and that is only last half reel."—Happy Hour theatre, Walnut, Iowa.

So much for the exhibitors—a third list compiled from a different publication gives us the opinions of the trade-paper reviewers:

METRO

"Cinderella's Twin"—"As a whole my be set down as likely box-office asset."—(Review). "Just misses being very commonplace."—(News).

GOLDWYN

"What Happened to Rosa"—"Madcap action and amusing farcial situations distinguished this picture—excellent speciment of broad comedy."—(Review). "Mabel (Normand) has a mediocre one here."—(News).

VITAGRAPH

"Her Lord and Master"—"Distinctly excellent Alice Joyce offering . . . presents star at her best."—(Herald). "Hardly heavy enough for Alice Joyce."—((Review).

FOX

"The Tomboy"—"Highly amusing . . . and should go well."—(World). "Is pleasantly entertaining and that's about all."—(Review).

REALART

"The Magic Cup"—"Thoroughly satisfactory entertainment."—(World). "Poor story for Constance Binney."—(Wid's).

While still another list offers in tabloid form the criticisms as set forth in the daily newspapers:

FAMOUS PLAYERS

"The Faith Healer"—"Most intelligently treated photodrama of the season."—(World). "Rather painful."—(American). "One of the most rugged, gripping themes on the screen in some time."—(Sun).

In this case I quote four different comments, and the results show a three-way split on personal opinion.

METRO

"Without Limit"—"It is really an epic of the screen."—(Telegram). "Curiously and exasperatingly disappointing."—(Times).

FAMOUS PLAYERS

"The Love Special"—"So well adapted that none of the thrills are lost in the telling."—(Globe). "Photoplay as a whole does not proceed smoothly and never reaches any climax, either thrilling or amusing."—(Times).

"The Whistle"—"Interesting feature."—(Telegram). "The photoplay is unusually dull and held little of interest."—(Sun).

"Sacred and Profane Love"—"Miss Ferguson is even better on the screen than she was on the stage."—(Telegram). "Was bad enough as a stage play. If anything is worse on the screen."—(Mail).

REALART

"Ducks and Drakes"—"Set like a cameo and photographed beautifully. More pictures like it . . .

Bright Outlook for National Convention

Motion Picture Theatre Owners Plan Biggest Event of Its Kind Ever Held

WITH the National Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to be held in Minneapolis, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 27, 28 and 29, less than a month away, President Sydney S. Cohen and the members of the convention committees are working to make it one of the biggest events in the annals of organized exhibitors.

All plans are being made with a view to having the convention purely a business session and to make constructive plans for the continued growth and development of the organization.

During the sessions of the executive committee in Washington, Secretary of Labor J. J. Davis expressed his appreciation of the work now being done by the exhibitors, and declared that he was also interested in their problems.

Among the matters of grave importance to the exhibitors that will be threshed out to a final solution at the convention will be the question of taxation. The committee on taxation appointed in Washington has been holding continuous meetings in New York, giving the subject exhaustive study, so that a complete report may be made to the delegates in convention assembled.

Action will also be mapped out to rid the exhibitors of the burdensome music royalty that is now being exacted by some of the music composers and publishers.

One of the revelations that will be of decided interest to every exhibitor in the United States will be the report of the committee on exhibitor-producer relations, and the report of the special Committee of Nine that was appointed last September to investigate the producer-exhibitor activities.

Members of the M. P. T. O. A. Committee of Nine are: President Sydney S. Cohen, New York City; Vice-President C. C. Griffin, Oakland, Cal.; Treasurer E. T. Peter, Dallas, Texas; C. L. O'Reilly, New York City; W. D. D. Burford, Aurora, Ill.; Charles H. Bean, Franklin, N. H.; Fred C. Seegert, Milwaukee, Wis.; J. T. Collins, Rutherford, N. J., and Col. H. B. Varner, Lexington, N. C.

There will also be submitted to the delegates a new, equitable and uniform contract. A tentative contract has already been drawn up and has been submitted to the producers. The special committee appointed at Washington came to New York and visited several of the producers with a view to having the contract put into effect in the near future.

Independent exhibitors from all parts of the country are cordially invited to attend the convention at Minneapolis, where they will be admitted to the convention floor and entitled to a voice during the sessions. From reports coming from all points the headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A., the indications are that it will be the largest attended convention in the history of the industry.

Senator James J. Walker of New York, National Counsel of the M. P. T. O. A., has just returned from an extended trip through the country, where he addressed several thousands of exhibitors. He reports unbounded enthusiasm on the part of every one, and everywhere heard exhibitors planning to attend the convention.

Exhibitors everywhere should forward their requests for accommodations to the office of the M. P. T. O. A., 1482 Broadway, New York City. A transportation committee is now arranging for special rates to Minneapolis on the basis of a fare and a half for the round trip.

The committee on arrangements for the convention is as follows:

W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis, chairman; C. L. O'Reilly, New York; Glenn Harper, Los Angeles; E. T. Peter, Dallas, Tex.; A. R. Pramer, Omaha, Neb.; J. C. Ritter, Detroit, Mich.; and Fred Seegert, Milwaukee, Wis.

West Shows Confidence in Building Theatres

By Arthur S. Kane

"THE Fall market should be a good one and continue so throughout the season. The holding up of production should make a greater demand for those pictures which will be available. I did not find exhibitors prone to reduce admission prices. Instead they are building more, larger and better theatres. In San Francisco alone four tremendous downtown houses are under construction. A fifth Fall outlet for first-run attractions will be the Curran, a legitimate house beginning an all-picture policy at the waning of Summer. This will make five San Francisco theatres requiring first-run pictures, in addition to those operating now. The four Market Street houses are the Granada, Loew's State, the Union Square and the Junior Orpheum. Mention should be made of Turner & Dahnken's new theatre in Sacramento, which is in addition to Charles Goddard's magnificent J Street theatre, the present T. & D. theatre and the commodious Strand.

"In Los Angeles Loew's State is going up, occupying a tremendous frontage on Broadway; and Sid Grauman has broken ground in Hollywood. In surrounding cities T. & D. and Claude Langley's, Gore Bros. & Sol Lesser and other operators have projected new houses. A fine new theatre has recently been opened in San Pedro. The industrial condition of Los Angeles and Southern California is as good as during the war.

"In Fresno, the raisin capital, three big theatres are in progress, in addition to Kehrlein's Kinema, Beatty's Liberty and the others already existing. This is a tremendous expansion of theatre interests in a town the size of Fresno. The new houses are the T. & D., Ackerman & Harris' and Markowitz & Jackson's.

"At Santa Fe, New Mexico, ground has been broken for a new theatre. The present Paris theatre there is operated by Mr. Claussen.

"An important element in Denver is the projected rebuilding of the Tabor Grand theatre. This famous legitimate house of the early days, built by Senator Tabor, is at the corner of Sixteenth and Curtis Streets, with its Sixteenth Street entrance across the way from the entrance to the America theatre and its Curtis Street entrance opposite the Rialto.

"Several suburban theatres are projected for the city of Denver, which as yet is believed to be under-theatred in the residence districts.

"Thomas Snell opened Decoration Day in Eldorado, Kan., a palatial house of 1,800 seats with Harold Lloyd in 'Now or Never' and the Edward Jose production 'What Women Will Do.' Baker & Grubel are to rebuild their Electric in Kansas City, Kan., to hold 2,200 seats. Other building is in prospect in Kansas City territory.

"In some places exhibitors, becoming frightened by business depression, or expected depression, or by rumors of it, adopted policies of playing only pictures which they could secure at the cheapest rentals and cutting down their advertising expenditures. The result has been that they have not done the business. This would have been the result—whether there had been any depression or not. Other showmen fought the devil with fire. They booked only the best pictures they could get and went after business with advertising equal to any they had done—or increased it. These houses have fared better. They are talking optimism. In fact, among most of the exchange men and exhibitors with whom I have talked, the spirit of optimism prevails.

Adolph Zukor Lays His Case Before Exhibitors in Denying Charges

President of Famous Players-Lasky Asks for Unprejudiced Judgment

IN a statement addressed "To the Exhibitors of America," Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, denies the various charges lodged against him and the company which he heads and asks exhibitors to judge individually on the basis of their own experiences whether they have been dealt with fairly by him and the Famous Players-Lasky organization. Mr. Zukor's statement follows:

"In considering the attack that is being made upon me and upon the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, each exhibitor, I believe, should pass judgment upon the basis of his own experience with me and with the company I head. The exhibitor is interested particularly in his own case and I urge each of you—in the midst of this agitation based upon inaccuracies and exaggerations—to decide whether you have been fairly treated by me and by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. I want you to judge whether my activities since I entered the motion picture business—first as an exhibitor 18 years ago, and as a producer for 10 years—have made for greater prosperity for exhibitors and for the upbuilding of the industry.

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporation entered the exhibiting field only after certain exhibitors entered the field of producing and distributing pictures and put forth an organized effort to take from us our stars and directors. The attack was focused upon us because we were the only company that had been so foresighted as to gather around us the stars and directors best equipped to furnish the public with the sort of entertainment it demanded. Our strength was built by years of genuine service to exhibitors and to the public.

"Our stars and directors were told that the exhibitors controlled the best theatres and that therefore in order for the stars to get higher salaries the stars must join hands with them. Our distribution was threatened and there was no alternative but to acquire theatre interests in localities in which conditions beyond our control seemed to make it necessary in our best judgment to safeguard our business.

"Only by a wide distribution of Paramount pictures can we insure the revenue necessary to maintain the quality that exhibitors and the public demand. The prosperity of each exhibitor is linked with the producers. He must have a steady supply of good pictures. We must have a wide outlet for our product. Neither of us can succeed without the other and knowing this we have made every effort to cooperate with the exhibitor in order that he may prosper.

"The attacks upon me are an effort to make the exhibitors believe that we are attempting to drive them out of business—that we do not value their good will. I want every thinking exhibitor to know that we are primarily a producing and distributing organization and our only thought is to please the exhibitor. Our exhibiting interests work to the advantage of exhibitors as a whole in that they widen our distribution in localities in which we otherwise would not be permitted to obtain a fair revenue for our product. Thus, by wide distribution, we bring about an equalization of rental prices throughout the United States so that the smaller exhibitors will not be forced to bear more than their share.

"The statement that I no longer control the policy of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and that I obey Wall Street is too ridiculous to make necessary a denial.

"The policies of the organization are those laid down by me and every exhibitor who knows me must appreciate that I sanction only one way of dealing, and that is the way that is fair to both sides. I never have knowingly harassed nor embarrassed an exhibitor and I stand as I have stood for the last ten years, giving every support to the exhibitor in the knowledge that I head an organization of trained picture makers trying in every way they know how to aid the exhibitor to regain his prosperity.

"I feel that it is deplorable that for selfish reasons men will work to tear apart an industry and to create dissension instead of building good will between the component parts of our business: the exhibiting, the distributing and the producing branches. Now, of all times, too, we need a united force to fight the agitators who are attacking us from the outside.

"It seems hardly necessary to state again the truth about the misstatements that have been made regarding the case of Mrs. Dodge. We had no interest with Mr. Black at the time this deal was first made, but when the question came up, Mr. Black was requested to make every effort to help Mrs. Dodge. After an unsuccessful attempt to come to a fair understanding with Mrs. Dodge, Mr. Black turned the theatre back to its original owner, Mr. Emmons, who now controls the property. Mr. Black has absolutely no theatre interests in Morrisville, Vermont.

"Our arrangement with Mr. Black in New England was made only after a certain group gained control of so many theatres in New England that we found ourselves in a very dangerous position and the security of our distribution was threatened. We joined with Mr. Black in order that the people of New England could see Paramount pictures. We will welcome an investigation and the publication of the facts in the New England situation by any group of disinterested exhibitors.

"Never before has there been such a feeling of good will between Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and the exhibitors of the United States. Agitators, attempting to build themselves, are attacking us in an effort to destroy that good will which, I feel, is an asset to the exhibitor as well as to ourselves. We must work together that our industry shall prosper.

"Each exhibitor is interested in his own problem and no fair-minded exhibitor has ever found me anything but a friend to him when he has sought my aid in the solution of any of his difficulties.

"I feel sure that the exhibitors of the United States will recognize as false these accusations and will agree that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is a good influence in the industry and not a foe to the exhibitors of America."

Censorship Bill Passes Florida House

THE Futch Censorship Bill, which in its original form, provided for a board of censorship with power to pass on all films, slides and advertising matter connected with the exhibiton of the same, in the State of Florida, has been amended and in its new form has passed the House by a vote of 50 to 3.

The new bill provides for the appointment, by the Governor of the State, of three members of the National Observation Board, and requires that all pictures shown in the State must be passed by this Board, or by the National Board of Censors.

Universal Salesmen Meet

The annual convention of the Universal Film Salesmen comprising the Philadelphia and Washington territories, will hold forth at Atlantic City, Saturday, June 4.

H. M. Berman, general manager of exchanges, will preside, assisted by E. J. Smith, district manager, in charge of these respective districts.

"News" Chicago Office Moves

THE industry's plan for enforcing the observance of the thirteen points of motion picture production, agreed upon early last March and announced at that time, will be put into effect July 1st. Pictures made after that date will be reviewed by the editorial committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and must conform in every respect to the restrictions imposed by the various provisions embodied in the thirteen points, it is announced.

This was agreed upon at a meeting of the Producers' Division of the National Association on Thursday, May 26th. Resolutions were passed at the meeting ratifying in their entirety the essential provisions of the pre-release review plan which was originally drafted and adopted three months ago by the Committee of Fifteen of which Adolph Zukor was chairman.

The editorial committee will be composed of one representative each of the producing and distributing company members of the National Association. Pictures which are passed by this committee will carry, in the main title, notice to the effect that it has been approved by the editorial committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

In the event of the rejection of a picture by the Editorial Committee, it will be reviewed by a committee of appeals, composed of the heads of the various companies, nine of whom will constitute a quorum and five a majority.

Gabriel L. Hess, chairman of the censorship committee, reported that in thirty-six states, censorship legislation had been introduced; that in thirty-three states such legislation has been defeated; in two instances censorship laws had been enacted, but in one of these—Massachusetts—the law will be inoperative for about two years, owing to the fact that a referendum will be invoked to ascertain the sentiment of the Massachusetts voting public. In one state, Illinois, a censorship bill is still pending.

Senator Walker Addresses Exhibitors in Chicago

Senator James J. Walker, who has been making a trip across the continent in the interests of the M.P.T.O., and Sam Berman, of New York City, were the honored guests and principal speakers at a luncheon held by the Illinois Exhibitors Alliance in the Cameo Room of the Morrison Hotel, Wednesday, May 25th, at which President L. M. Rubens, of Joliet, presided.

In opening his address, Senator Walker congratulated the Chicago exhibitors on the defeat of censorship in the Windy City and declared that during the course of his transcontinental tour he had found exhibitors everywhere deeply interested in their respective state organizations and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. He characterized the recent executive meeting of the M.P.T.O. of A. at Washington as triumph for organized exhibitors and as marking a change in the indifferent attitude towards the industry, which has heretofore pervaded official circles at the Capital. The senator predicted an amendment by Congress to the copyright law favorable to exhibitors in the matter of music taxation and said that a congressional investigation into the five per cent. film tax was probable. The blue-law movement was roundly condemned, and the senator expressed it to be his opinion that the recent showing of "Under the Shadow of the Dome" was subtle propaganda of reformers to antagonize Congress against the industry.

Senator Walker also touched upon the much discussed Mrs. Dodge-Black transaction and said that although Black had finally acquired the widow's theatre, the house was standing idle due to the fact that the M.P.T.O. of A. had blocked Black's attempt to get a license to run shows in Morrisville, Vt. He also urged exhibitors to be on the alert, stating that it is his belief that the menace of a trust development in the industry—one which would deprive them of their theatres or cut off their supply of pictures—would confront the exhibitors within the next twelve months.

Others who spoke at the dinner were Sam Barman, who discussed the Famous Players-Lasky and the Lynch activities in the South and predicted a further cut in liability insurance rates; Secretary W. D. Burford of Aurora, who told of the recent Washington conference; and Vice-President Joe Hopp of the national organization, who discussed the 'Under the Shadow of the Dome" showing at Washington.

Law Increases Salaries of Penn. Censor Board

Increasing the salaries of the members and employes of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors; opening the way for materially increasing the number of employes and for boosting the annual payroll of the board from $35,000 to $81,000 a year, Governor Sproul on May 24 signed the McConnell bill which thereby became a law of the Commonwealth.

Under this law the salary of the chairman of the board is raised from $3,000 to $3,600, the secretary from $2,400 to $3,300, and the vice-chairman from $2,500 to $3,300. It creates the new post of executive clerk at $3,000 a year, to replace a chief clerk at $1,800; provides for the appointment of additional inspectors, clerks, and stenographers and other subordinate employes, and increases, in most cases, the pay of present employes of these classes.

The McConnell bill was introduced after an almost identical measure had been defeated in the Legislature. In fact it contained just enough changes from the bill that was defeated to make it constitutionally possible to have it reintroduced.

Introduce Bill to Repeal Wisconsin Blue Laws

Repeal of Wisconsin's old blue laws, so as to legally allow Sunday baseball and movies, is provided for in a bill introduced in the senate on May 26 by Senator George Czerwinski of Milwaukee.

The Czerwinski bill would classify "such work as may be necessary in connection with public diversion, sports, games, or play" as a necessity and therefore exempt from the operation of the blue laws.

The measure has been referred to the senate committee on state affairs and will come up for a public hearing soon.

Blue laws have been on the Wisconsin statute books since the first session of the legislature, more than half a century ago, but in late years there has been no general attempt to apply these laws to anything except general commercial pursuits.

"There is a growing sentiment all over the state favoring the repeal of the so-called Sunday blue law, as applied to theatres and other amusements," said Senator Czerwinski. "In many sections of the state prosecutions have been started to close theatres and prevent baseball games. I believe that this section of the statute should be repealed and I have presented a bill to accomplish that purpose."

It is expected that this bill will arouse the opposition of church organizations who take the stand that it is too broad in its application and might mean a "wide open Sunday."

Moss Made Vice-President of Warren Corp.

Announcement is made of the election of Edgar Moss as a vice-president of the F. B. Warren Corporation, with jurisdiction over the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh offices of the new organization. Mr. Moss resigned last week as Philadelphia manager for Associated Producers.

Mr. Moss entered the picture business several years ago in the Chicago office of W. R. Hearst's first International Film Service and later joined Paramount in Philadelphia, where he became one of that organization's star men. Last year he joined F. B. Warren, and his election to a vice-presidency of Mr. Warren's company is regarded as signal recognition of his ability.

Becomes Director of Second Theatre

W. Griffith Mitchell, for the past two years managing director of the Majestic Gardens theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich., one of the Butterfield string, has taken over the management of the Regent, another Butterfield house, in addition to his duties at the Majestic Gardens.

The Regent, during the theatrical season is a combination house, but during the summer season will go over to a policy of big feature films.

W. D. and B. D. Russell in New Producing Alliance

W. D. and B. D. Russell announce that they have withdrawn from the firm of Russell-Griever-Russell, of Chicago, and formed a new company which will be known as Russell & Russell.

The new firm is planning to make some big feature pictures and negotiations with a well known star are practically closed, according to W. D. Russell.

A detailed announcement as to production and distribution plans is expected within ten days.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., Add to Chain

Gore Bros., Adolph Ramish, and Sol Lesser announce the addition of another important theatre link to their large West Coast Theatres, Inc., chain. Glendale theatre, situated in the heart of the business section of Glendale, California, about ten miles from Los Angeles, is the latest addition. Through a mutually desirable arrangement, this new addition has been made through affiliation with the Glendale theatre owners, Louise T. Goodno, W. C. Goodno, and William A. Howe.

Oklahoma Ass'n Opposes Clara Smith Picture

At a meeting in executive session at Oklahoma City, Okla., last week, members of the Theatre Owners' and Managers' Association of Oklahoma adopted a resolution pledging themselves not to use and to discourage the production of the proposed Clara Smith pictures, the Al Jennings, Henry Starr, Dalton brothers and other such pictures, which are believed to be made possible by notorious publicity.

No Women on N. Y. Censor Board

Despite that the Women's Republican Organization of New York state has indorsed three women for a place on the state censor board, it was learned on excellent authority this week that Governor Miller will name no women to the body.

Famous Players Earnings

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Consolidated Statement (which includes the earnings of subsidiary companies owned 90% or more) reports for the quarter ended March 26, 1921, net operating profits of $1,519,947, after deducting all charges and reserves, including Federal income and excess profits taxes.

After allowing for payment of dividends on the preferred stock, the above earnings are at the annual rate of $25.52 on the 206,849 shares of common stock outstanding in the hands of the public.

Various Newspapers Still Attack Censorship

THAT anti-censorship editorials continue to appear in the press of various sections of the country is shown by the reports which have reached the Motion Picture News office recently. The action of the City Council of Austin, Texas, in ruling that regulation of local theatres was unnecessary, aroused considerable comment in the local papers. The Council decided that motion picture theatres are at present clean without a legal overseer.

The Tucson, Arizona, press, in answering the criticizers of "Passion," who stated that the picture was historically incorrect, commented editorially that "the moving picture is an agency for good, not an agency for evil. It needs less censoring and fewer fools to fuss at it."

You Can't Please Them All

will help the industry."—(The American). "The story is just frothy and inconsequental."—(Journal).

Would space or patience allow, I could go on indefinitely, but the above examples are sufficient to illustrate what I wish to point out—perfectly obvious, I will admit—that no two reviewers quoted thoroughly agree on the merits or demerits of those pictures mentioned, except in the one or two instances.

And right here let me add that it does not appear to me to be either wise or necessary for reviewers to comment on the box-office value of the pictures they criticise. That is an angle that not one reviewer in a hundred is qualified or competent to judge. There are so many things that enter into this phase of a picture's potentialities that unless a man has been on the inside looking out, he is very apt to be swayed in his opinion by what he thinks is "exhibitor's sense."

And even the exhibitors themselves are bound to disagree regarding a picture's box-office value. Put a number of exhibitors in a room and show them a picture and the chances are that you will get a wide divergence of opinion on the money-making merits of the production. This is no reflection on their business sagacity; it simply means that each exhibitor figures from his own angle; he knows his neighborhood and the class of clientele to which he must cater.

And in the last analysis the only real criterion by which to judge a picture's box-office value is performance; in other words, you can't tell what a picture is going to do until it has been run!

In concluding, let me say that to differences of opinion we are indebted for all progress, not only in the motion picture industry but in all lines of human endeavor. When a man is dissatisfied with a thing, he is more likely to strive to fashion something better. All down the line in mercantile establishments it means constant catering to the varying tastes of the multitude,

Decrease in Capitalization Shown in Incorporations

Companies incorporating in the motion picture business in New York state during the past week, show a decided falling off in the aggregate amount of capitalization. While eleven companies incorporated and filed the necessary papers in the Secretary of State's office at Albany, the total amount of capital stock was but $213,500. The largest capitalization was noted in the papers of the Baltic Amusement Corporation, capitalized at $90,000, with I. Gordon, D. Kraus and M. Gordon of New York, named as directors for the first year. Other companies entering the business include:

The Sebern Amusement Company, $10,000, J. and Elsie Segal, Joseph Bernstein, New York; Motion Picture Tradepapers' Credit Association, $500, E. K. Gillett, L. W. Boynton, James Beecroft, New York; Reo Photoplays Corporation, Brooklyn, $50,000, Abraham Halprin, E. Newmark, E. Gabay, New York; Moore-Megley Company, $15,000, M. E. Moore, M. M. Megley, May Keroff, New York; Tobias Keppler, New York; Original Tip Top Four, Inc., $5,000, Theodore Weller, H. R. Webster, H.S.Hechheimer, New York; West Brook Amusement Corporation, $10,000, Charles Goldreyer, J. J. Prendergast, J. A. Doyle, New York.

M.P.T.O.A. Is Commended for Resolution

N. Y. Makes False Advertising a Misdemeanor

A bill introduced by Assemblyman Betts, a newspaper publisher in western New York, has been signed by Governor Nathan L. Miller. It is of interest to the motion picture industry. The bill, which hereafter will be known as chapter 520 of the laws of 1921, becomes effective September 1. It provides that any person or concern offering for sale, or who advertises in any way, shape, or manner, or circulates any merchandise or service that is untrue, deceptive or misleading, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

A Good Film Can Have No Frontier

So Declares Charles E. Whittaker in Protesting Embargo on Foreign Films

I GATHER from some letters I have just received from New York—not from the trade papers, which, like other newspapers, are a little haphazard in their delivery by the Post Office—that there has been a good deal of fuss raised owing to the recent success of some German-made pictures. I am even informed that there is an attempt being made to put an embargo on the importation of foreign pictures. It has occurred to me that, as an unprejudiced observer, I can usefully offer a few truthful remarks, which may be words of either warning or comfort.

You and I well know that the agitation for an embargo is the sheerest insanity. Nothing will prevent foreign pictures coming to America, just as nothing will prevent American pictures going abroad. If on its arrival in America a foreign picture proves to be a good picture, the public will fall over each other to see it, and everybody concerned with its purchase, distribution and presentation, as well as the audience, will feel jolly and have a great time.

If the motion picture is an art, you cannot stop it at the frontier. This is not a question of Germany or any specific country. If a good picture comes from Iceland, or Capetown or Vladivostok it will be shown and be successful.

The embargo-agitators are not fools, I assume, and are aware of the above obvious truism. But their outcry enables us to take stock and view the position in its just perspective. This is the time for plain speaking.

What is the truth of the matter? The agitators are afraid. For five or six years, as producers and distributers, they have been getting away with murder. They have "jipped" the exhibitors; they have doped the public. They have foisted immature actresses, acrobats, cowboys and opera singers, as well as their "lady friends," on a long-suffering public. Nobody, not even the trade press, has had the courage to tell the truth that ninety-seven pictures out of one hundred produced in America were the bunk. Along come "Passion" and "Deception," and they knock your eye out. "Cabiria" was made, I think, in 1913. Judged by that standard, neither "Passion" nor "Deception" represent a superlative advance with the years. But they are acclaimed as masterpieces. Why?

Because our own standards and productions are extraordinarily low and senseless and unconvincing.

I hate to be thought an intellectual snob, or a highbrow, or super-critical; but my honest belief is that these pictures were successful because they were made by people who were not merely talented, but educated to a far higher degree than the average found in the American studios. You, as a journalist, may remember a saying of Charles Henry Dana of the N. Y. Sun: it was to the effect that whilst he did not consider a classical education indispensable to a reporter, the man who had read Sophocles in the original Greek would probably write a better account of a dog-fight than the man who only knew English. I go further and say that our producers—directors, actors, scenario-writers—being, in the mass, uninstructed in the rudiments of their own professions, few of them students of literature or drama, are going to be driven off the map if they are not careful, by others—possibly Germans, or French, or English—who do know what they are doing because they have passed through a definite apprenticeship to their craft.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The article submitted herewith is taken from a letter addressed to William A. Johnston, editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, under the date of May 13th, by Charles E. Whittaker, who is well-known in motion-picture circles as a photoplaywright. Mr. Whittaker was formerly associated with WORLD FILM and is now in Berlin serving in the capacity of production advisor.

For five years our pictures have been directed by illiterate roughnecks, promoted property-men, decayed actors, and others of similar calibre. Our actors have no training, in comparison with the European actor who must study and play in the classics, know how to dance the mediaeval dances, fence with foil and rapier, and know the niceties of costume of the various periods; when to use the lace handkerchief and snuff-box, and how to make a bow or a curtesy to a lady, and how to kiss a woman's hand. If the actor who played De Choiseul in "Passion" had not learned these things, his interpretation would not have been so convincing as it was. The Dumb Isaacs of our industry who are shrieking out for an embargo may say that these things don't affect an actor who has to play the part of a detective; but the first thing an actor has to learn is poise, which is the near relative of taste, neither of which can be attained without the special theatrical training I have described.

So far for historical films, in which the erudite European, given proper studio equipment, will outstrip us, thanks to the lamentable lack of historical teaching in American schools, and the low order of intellect by which our industry is at present represented. This is not a plea for scholastic training; but is an argument for tchnical training in a gigantic industry. We need more directors like Cecil and William De Mille and John Emerson, all of them men of high scholastic attainments, dramatists, in whom learning has not swamped the human sympathies—and fewer directors of the type of..... but names of the other type will occur to anybody who thinks for a moment.

When it comes to a question of modern stories, we can breathe more easily. In a wilderness of pictures I have seen in Berlin, I can only say that my outstanding impression is one of general tragedy and gloomy endings. The worst picture I have seen was a German-made picture of life in Arizona. It proved conclusively, as other German pictures of America have proved, that the German has a desperately poor comprehension of other countries. It was his wretched judgment of other people that brought Belgium, England and America in turn into the war. His fundamentals are all at variance with ours. He is still an acute monarchist, despite the flight of William II; and it is still generally accepted that the German Republic is only a temporary expedient, destined to be supplanted sooner or later by a monarchy. He is still eaten up with class distinctions, more so than any country men in the world, and he lives on tradition. Not a single man of any eminence in Germany was born poor, like—to cite a few instances in England and America—Lloyd George, Lipton, Edison or Carnegie. He is blown hither and thither by a strong ingrained anti-Jewish feeling. There are no Jewish Judges, officers, or high ministers of State, and if a Jew desires to become one or the other that I have mentioned he has to be baptized and become a Christian. And the German woman is in by no means the happy position of the American woman. She may not open an account at the bank without her husband's permission, nor may she apply for a passport without his sanction. The German has not changed over-night from what he was in 1914. He cannot understand us, and therefore many of his modern intimate pictures which have attained success in Germany are distasteful to our perceptions. The whole climax of one successful picture here turned on the physical and muscular weakening of a young acrobat solely as the result of continued sexual excesses with a young woman, thereby leading to his death in a flying-trapeze stunt in a circus.

So far as modern pictures are concerned therefore, the embargo advocates need have no fear; but, if our public has developed a taste for historical pageant or spectacle, the European is going to make us weep tears of blood; and if he ever gets to understand modern life as we know it, what with his better and more powerful stories, his intelligent directors, and above all his excellent actors and actresses, the Has-Beens of our industry, now hanging on merely because they look wise or shout loudly, can kiss themselves good-bye.

I am no pessimist, my dear Johnston, but I honestly think that the time has come for a grand house-cleaning in the preduction end of the industry. We need fewer "guys" and "ginks" pulling down fat salaries, fewer incompetent dummies as actors who are merely good-looking types, less beefing against the inevitable, and above all more study. We are in for a fight, and we must have in our ranks only those who are best equipped mentally for the fight.

This does not mean that we need all be highbrows. Shakespeare was a well educated man, knowing Latin, French and Italian, but he used to get lit up frequently and tell dirty stories.

Yours for more and better talent,

CHARLES E. WHITTAKER.

My dear Mr. Johnston:

If everybody feels as I do after reading your editorial on "Men," you would receive at least 10,000 letters from various members of the picture industry in which we are all so vitally interested.

To my way of thinking, it is as finished a piece of literature as has been composed for practical purposes and with sure-fire practical results if taken seriously; that has been printed in many a day.

Sincerely yours,

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 220 SO. STATE ST.

Comedy Film Exchange is the latest to move into the new film district, and has opened its new offices at 734 S. Wabash Avenue. William Orr and Jack Hayes will continue the business, Mr. Hayes remaining in charge of the country trade.

Ascher Brothers have changed the policy of their West Englewood Theatre, which hereafter will offer a straight picture program, omitting the five acts of vaudeville, which for some time past has been a part of the entertainment at this house.

Danny Gray, Marshal Neilan's film editor, brought Ray June, head Neilan cameraman, and Dave Kessen, second cameraman, out to the Rothacker Chicago laboratory recently, to see how the Neilan First National Productions were printed. The Neilan party, which was en route to the coast, included Wesley Barry's mother, Colleen Moore and mother and Mrs. Kessen. They were on their way to Hollywood to shoot remaining scenes in "Bits Of Life," Neilan's next picture. Danny Gray left the party at Chicago and proceeded to George Ade's home in Indiana, where he joined Mr. Neilan. Ade is writing titles for "The Lotus Eater," in which John Barrymore stars. E. J. Briant, manager of the New Orleans First National Exchange, was a Chicago visitor last week and took advantage of the opportunity to inspect the Chicago Rothacker Laboratory.

Mary Miles Minter spent the week end in Chicago en route to New York where she will embark for Europe at an early date. Miss Minter carries letters of introduction to some of the crown heads and nobility of different European countries and indications are that she will have a wonderful vacation. Miss Minter was the honor guest at a very delightful dinner to members of the trade press and others, which was given at the Drake Hotel, Saturday night by Harry Willard, Chicago manager for Realart.

The rights for Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin to "Along The Moonshine Trail," a remarkable prehistoric animal picture, filmed by Major Herbert M. Dawley, have been acquired by Selected Films Exchange.

William Hirshberg, formerly with Metro, has joined the sales staff of Doll-Van Film Corporation, and will cover city territory. Messrs. Vandawalker and Graumont of Doll-Van, report business is excellent with them as they are in a position to meet the present wants of exhibitors for medium priced pictures.

Harry Spanuth, of Commonwealth Pictures, has bought "The Daughter Of Eve," a five-reel feature, being put on the market by W. P. Howells Sales Company, of Illinois.

The widely heralded D. W. Griffith feature, "Dream Street," will have its initial Chicago showing at the Studebaker Theatre, where it will open on June 6th for an indefinite run, according to Cress Smith, manager of the Chicago United Artists Exchange. Harry Reichenbach will exploit this feature, which practically is a guarantee that everyone in Chicago will know of its opening.

W. G. Maxcy and Ray Cummings report the sale of their theatres in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, the Grand Opera House, the Orpheum and the Majestic to Saxe Brothers of Milwaukee, who will operate the houses as high grade motion picture theatres. Mr. Maxcy is president of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, which has provided scores of motion picture theatres with Bartolas and Barton Organs, and will continue his connection with the motion picture industry through his association with this company. Mr. Cummings also will continue to be associated with the industry as a theatre man, it is understood.

J. F. Cubberley, manager of Associated First National Pictures, Minneapolis, passed through Chicago last week on his return from the national meeting of First National in New York. Mr. Cubberley reports business is not up to standard in his territory but looks for a marked revival in the late summer and fall.

Salesmanager Belford, of Pinnacle Productions, has returned to Chicago after visiting New Orleans and other Southern cities, and reports the Neal Hart series of Western features continues to be a drawing card in the districts he visited and that "Black Sheep," the latest release, is proving the best box office success of Neal Hart's career, to date.

Salesmanager Eichenlaub, of Chicago's First National Exchange, has added two more salesmen to his force, W. H. Tracy, formerly connected with the First National organization and more recently with Universal, who will cover Central Illinois and Charles Dingman formerly connected with Paramount and Vitagraph, who will cover Eastern Illinois for First National.

Al Lichtman, accompanied by his secretary, was in Chicago last week conferring with Manager Ben Beadell, of Associated, on future sales plans for the organization.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, and Irving Thalberg, manager of Universal City, stopped over in Chicago on their way to the coast for a conference with District Manager Herman Stern, who last week assumed his new position with headquarters in Chicago, and Manager Lesserman of the Chicago Exchange.

Clara Kimball Young, who was in the city this week making personal appearances at the Roosevelt, went over big with the audience at Ascher Brothers' fine downtown house. She appeared in connection with the showing of "Straight From Paris," her latest feature film. Miss Young also appeared at the hospital benefit given at the Colonial theatre, Sunday, where she made a popular hit. Her Chicago appearances were arranged by Ike Von Ronkel of Favorite Players, who is handling the latest Young pictures in this territory.

Robert Buttolph, of World Film Corporation, was in Chicago this week on his way to the Coast. Mr. Buttolph has just completed a tour of the principal eastern cities and reports that while money is very tight, independent exchange men are keeping a stiff upper lip and are really stretching a point to buy pictures for Fall and Winter release. Mr. Buttolph feels that the principal danger to the independents, and therefore the exhibitors, is the flooding of the American market with cheap foreign made product and believes that the independents and exhibitors should get together and take steps to have it barred.

Joe Friedman is back at his desk at Celebrated Players Film Corporation, after a two weeks' vacation passed at Atlantic City with his family. He is looking fit and declares that he put all business aside during his sojourn at the eastern resort and is feeling very much benefited by his rest.

Favorite Players have moved from their old offices, 63 E. Adams street, to 726-32 S. Wabash avenue and workmen are busy putting the final touches on the new exchange, which will be much more commodious and convenient to the trade than the former quarters.

"Peck's Bad Boy," the widely advertised picture featuring Jackie Coogan, has opened for an indefinite run at Orchestra Hall following "Passion," which ran at the big Michigan Avenue theatre for three weeks. The same splendid orchestra, which won the plaudits of Chicago daily paper music and motion picture critics, will be retained for the run of "Peck's Bad Boy."

Loew Theatre to Open in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Marcus Loew's new theatre in Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, N. Y., "The Alpine," will open Monday night June 6th with elaborate ceremonies. More than thirty screen and stage stars will be the guests of Marcus Loew at the opening, it is announced.

Music and the Picture

What Is the Ideal Cue Sheet?

By Charles D. Isaacson

ALWAYS the cue-sheet is with us; or rather I mean it is still one of the problems of the film-music world. That tremendous improvements have been made in the development of the cue-sheet none can gainsay, in comparing the present example with that of only two years ago. From the cue-sheet maker with his publishing axe to grind to the fellow with his head in the clouds, forgetful of the fact that merely because a composition was written does not mean that it is also published and it must be available in order to be useful—from the highbrow to the all-jazz fiend, from the chap thinking of the big theatre symphony orchestra to the one who can only conceive of the player-piano music roll—there's a big field for the onlooking, much-offended and abused theatre conductor.

I have always contended that a cue-sheet was merely a convenience to the theatre musician; it is not intended to be law, unchangeable as Einstein's theory, nor as difficult of understanding; I have always contended that the cue-sheet becomes immoral when it is used to sell music, composers, individuals. I shall continue to insist that the cue-sheet is not right unless it puts the power within the local man's hands to score his pictures with such music as is available within his own library, even if that library is terribly cramped.

A cue-sheet, according to my humble opinion, should be principally an analysis of the picture's moods and musical opportunities. Let me explain. The intent of the cue-sheet maker is to enable the musician to set music which accentuates the emotions of the different scenes. He only suggests a given composition to help the musician, and because that composition happens to fit in.

But the composition which is indicated is not the only one in the world. There are hundreds of substitutes; possibly the one mentioned is the best, but if it isn't available, then something else will do almost as well.

But why does the cue-sheet maker mention a particular number? What is there about Blankety-Blank's "Special Symphonic Poem" which makes it so admirable in this moment of the film? Indeed, we return to the point, what is the emotion of the film moment?

Now, from my point of view, the first duty of the cue-sheet maker should be to analyze the picture in its change of moods, emotions, situations:

First part, simple pastoral settings; sunny lazy weather; we want to keep sweet, wholesome peacefulness in the events; until

Entry of Jim. "Such and such" is the title. Now here it is the author's desire to create a suspiciousness about Jim; he is nervous, shifty, with a manner which subjects him to a fearfulness on the part of all who meet him. Rather agitated mysterious music; which is to be kept up until

Entry of Marguerite. "Such and such" is the title. This character is beautiful, very naive, wholesome, ingenuous; it is desired to make a bright, happy, intensely simple mood all through her appearance in the action. Keep this until the Opening of scene in Hardware store. This is the busiest place in town, and action, plenty of it, is required. So to the end.

Now, speaking for the musicians in theatres whom I have met, I can say without fear of contradiction, that without a single mention of a single composition, better results will be had from such a method of procedure than with the average cue-sheet I've seen.

In other words, if the musician knows what he's to score to, he can select his music from whatever he has or can get easily. If he is simply working blindly, with a lot of music suggested, he doesn't know what that music has been named; moreover, he can't guess from "Razoo" that something eccentric is being performed, although "Hearts and Flowers" may inform him that it's one of those sweet moments in life which is portrayed.

Tell the musician the dramatic, emotional and mood construction of the picture, inform him when the mood changes, the key situations, characters, and you'll find the average musician is right up to the standard. He'll make good. He'll have a better first performance than he would have arranged from a lot of names of compositions, which he may or may not have in his possession.

It is along this line of reasoning that I urge the Kineto Company to cue-sheet their Urban Reviews. Possibly they went too far in that direction. Realizing this, they are not called Cue Sheets but Musical Indications. The way it is done is shown on page 3599.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Sentimental Tommy—

A delightful picture that many liked. Business good. (East.)

Classiest picture of the year, but fails to draw the crowds. (Middle West.)

Great picture. Went over fine Everybody enjoyed it, consequently big business. (West.)

Deception—

Held up fairly good for second week. Picture well liked by audiences. (East.)

Found this one to be a fair picture with average box office receipts. (West.)

The Great Day—

Fair picture to fair business. (East.)

Sacred and Profane Love—

Fairly entertaining picture. Average box office value. (West.)

The Witching Hour—

Fair picture, fair receipts. (East.)

Buried Treasure—

Marion Davies doesn't usually draw well, but with the extra advertising given by the Hearst papers, this drew well. (Middle West.)

Good business on second week of run. Box office receipts still going fine. (West.)

The Faith Healer—

Played to good business first three days, then fell off. Bound to suffer by comparison with "The Miracle Man," but a splendid production throughout. (Middle West.)

The Easy Road—

Good attraction. Meighan in excellent role. Big opening on Memorial Day, and held up better than average. (Middle West.)

The Home Stretch—

Corking good picture and one that appeals to large percentage of photoplay patrons. Business better than has been for several weeks. (Middle West.)

King, Queen, Joker—

Full week but not to a full house. Great sets, photography and scenes. Material for a great comedy but not with Sidney, who did nothing but overact and kill any possibility he might have had of being accepted by the public as a comedian. Poor business all week. (West.)

What Every Woman Knows—

Picture appealed strongly to our audiences and business was good during its run. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Bob Hampton of Placer—

One of the best pictures of the year in our estimation. Plenty of action and sustained interest. Custer's last stand brings a real thrill. Excelent box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Best western picture we have shown this year. A treat for those who like this sort of entertainment. High class all through. No rough stuff. Business better than average for summer. (Middle West.)

Pleasing picture, fair receipts. (East.)

Peck's Bad Boy—

Great. One of the best drawing cards of the season. (Middle West.)

This one brought great business. Very entertaining and well liked by all ages. (West.)

Dinty—

Fairly entertaining to average business. (East.)

Sowing the Wind—

Best thing Anita Stewart has ever done. Played to fine business throughout the week. Artistic and satisfying from every angle. (East.)

The Sky Pilot—

A very good warm weather attraction. Pleasing throughout. Entertainment value quite high. (West.)

The Passion Flower—

Norma Talmadge is idolized here and she won many new admirers in this production, which is highly entertaining, as well as artistic. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Made in Heaven—

Very nice picture, box office showed up well. (East.)

Wet Gold—

A genuine novelty, and despite poor direction and a conventional story, went over fairly well. Unusual title and some excellent exploitation angles. A picture you have to push and push hard. (East.)

Fine picture and good business. (West.)

Boys Will Be Boys—

Will Rogers in one of his best. Plenty of room for effective exploitation with this picture. The best week that I have had in two months. (Middle West.)

Hold Your Horses—

REALART

Two Weeks with Pay—

This one went over great. Bebe Daniels is always a big favorite here. A full house all week. (Middle West.)

Drew nicely. Bebe is building up a big following. (East.)

The House That Jazz Built—

Don't Call Me Little Girl—

The Outside Woman—

Sheltered Daughters—

The best thing Justine Johnson has yet done, and it shows promise. Her other pictures were so bad that business on this was just 'fair to middlin'' but believe that her next will draw and so on. This one was a fairly entertaining picture on a moss-grown theme. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

Reputation—

This certainly went over big, making it necessary to hold over for second week. Patrons seemed pleased and box office receipts were satisfying. (West.)

Tremendous business. Picture has universal appeal. (Middle West.)

Desperate Youth—

Gladys Walton becomes a better drawing card with every picture. This was good and business was fair. (Middle West.)

Society Secrets—

The Wallop—

An ordinary western picture. Business fair. (East.)

METRO

Polly with a Past—

A good picture, well acted and attracting excellent business. (East.)

Without Limit—

Fine picture and brought good business. (West.)

The Little Fool—

Fairly entertaining with usual business. (West.)

Hearts Are Trumps—

Very good entertainment in this picture. Brought more than average business. (West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Through the Back Door—

Great. Best thing from Pickford so far. Business fair at beginning of week, but picked up and held it over for entire week, though only booked for three days. (East.)

A typical Mary Pickford picture which gave the audiences what they came for. Pleasing, entertaining and full of genuine humor. Good house all week. (Middle West.)

Dream Street—

Great. Wonderful attraction. Capacity houses at advanced admission prices. A photoplay treat. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

Keeping Up with Lizzie—

Clever satire on society life. One continuous laugh. Our audiences all seemed to be having a fine time. Good business in spite of heat. (Middle West.)

Partners of the Tide—

Old stuff. Little human appeal and dangerously close to being 'mushy' in spots. Took it off after three days, though it was booked for whole week. (East.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

Good Women—

Trite story well presented. Average business. (Middle West.)

Invites Kids to the Show

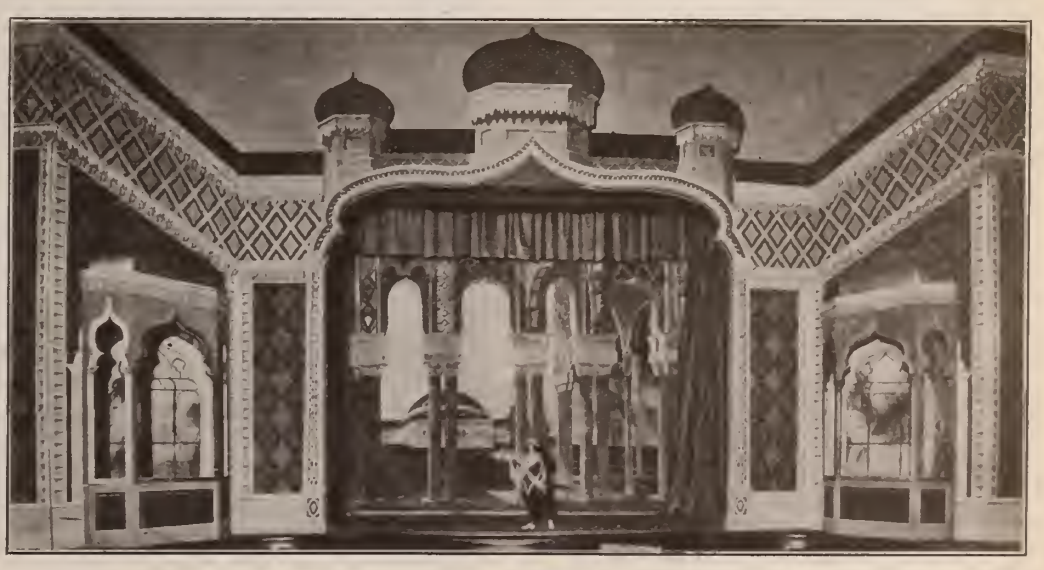
Patterson Makes Play for Young America as Exploitation for "The Kid" Engagement

"GET the kids talking about your show—and they'll bring, or send the grown-ups," is the theory on which Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion theatre, Atlanta, based his exploitation of "The Ole Swimmin' Hole." And another test of Mr. Patterson's cleverness was that not even the most sophisticated suspected Mr. Patterson's little stunt.

When "The Old Swimmin' Hole" was booked Mr. Patterson advised the Boys Club of an Atlanta Y. M. C. A., made up of newsboys, that he would esteem it an honor if one hundred and fifty members a day attended the theatre, to see the picture, as his guests. Tickets in blocks of one hundred and fifty were distributed—and it's a safe bet that Atlanta would have gone without its afternoon, as well as morning paper, if some such scheme hadn't been adopted, for whenever Mr. Patterson and the Criterion is mentioned, the Club, to a boy, signifies its earnest desire to lay aside all work and go.

The boys who went on Monday spread the joyous tidings, and Tuesday's crowd added to the clamor. Until, by Wednesday, when you stopped to buy a paper, you had to wait until the embryonic captain of finance finished telling a part of his gang "what happened next." And most of the boys told their "regular customers" about the picture at the Criterion, which worked out excellently from the box office standpoint.

The scheme was tried out again on "Peck's Bad Boy" and was found to work with even greater success. So Mr. Patterson, with his quiet, unassuming, but one the less loyal support of the Boys Club, is reaping a thousand-fold benefit from the kindness he is showing them.



Another angle which Mr. Patterson never overlooks is the feminine outlook. When Mr. Patterson has pictures as censor-proof as "The Ole Swimmin' Hole" and "Peck's Bad Boy," he makes use of his mailing list of representative, worthwhile Atlantans—chiefly women be it noted—and always receives the enthusiastic support of the Woman's Club, and the local branch of the Better Films movement.

And it is worthy of note that no attraction yet has been sufficiently keen in Atlanta, to make the slightest impression on the Criterion's loyal following.

Another Showman Uses the Aeroplane Delivery Stunt

Delivering a film by aeroplane with the attendant exploitation angle being sufficient to warrant the expense is once more a matter of record. Saul S. Harris, manager of the Arkansas Enterprises, of Little Rock, Ark., recently found that the express company had failed to deliver "The Gilded Lily." He immediately telephoned the Dallas Famous Players-Lasky Exchange to send a print by aeroplane. In an hour the picture was on the way. In five hours, at 5:30 p. m., the machine had arrived and at seven o'clock, regular starting time for the night show, the picture was on the screen.

Fine "Deception" Campaign

Cleveland Theatre Obtains Loan of Rare Sixteenth Century Knick-nacks

"DECEPTION" received an exploitation campaign and a presentation at the Stillman theatre, Cleveland which set new standards for the city.

With the aid of Fred E. Walters, Paramount exploiter, M. A. Malaney, publicity director of Loew's Cleveland theatre, obtained some of the most costly and beautiful specimens of sixteenth century knick-knacks in existence.

The articles, valued at more than $15,000 were displayed throughout the auditorium. The exploitation men also tied up with William Krause, collector of costumes, for twenty duplicates of the garments of that period.

The ushers donned the outfits which consisted of short-coated waists with white cuffs, pantaloons and leather boots. The doormen wore short coats with ruffles, cuffs. buckles, short pants, and leather boots. The colors were Tudor English, brown and green. When the ushers accosted the patron to take him to his seat his salutation was, "What Ho."

Following the opening performance the Cleveland critics got into an altercation over some cutting which the Ohio censors had done and in consequence many columns of free publicity was forthcoming. Manager Mark Gates arranged a prologue for the picture that is a model of brevity, simplicity and effectiveness. The orchestra plays Spitalny's arrangement of "Songs of Merrie England." The curtain rises on a medieval castle in silhouette. The audience has barely time to take in the view when the castle gates open disclosing the screen. Simultaneously the picture is flashed.

C. A. Selzer, prominent art collector of the city, loaned the Stillman theatre a full suit of armor of the time of Henry VIII. This suit of armor was set up in the Stillman theatre lobby, with proper settings, and labels, just as in the museums. During the week, Malaney enlarged his circle of interest by taking this suit of armor out on Euclid avenue for a walk. The armor paraded the busiest street in Cleveland just at the noon hour, and had a procession several blocks long in its wake. Mrs. Cedric Glenn, wife of the operator of the State theatre was inside the armor.

Kantner Arranges Series of Window Displays

Oscar Kantner, Paramount exploiteer for the Indianapolis exchange, and Harry Kornblum, manager of the Criterion theatre, Evansville, Ind., arranged a series of window tie-ups in Evansville, which featured artistic cut-outs. A leading florist shop, furniture store, and music store were co-operated with for window displays.

In each window a single large cut-out was used. Kantner also showed the possibilities of hooking up with the titles of the picture. The quotation for the florist tieup being especially effective for the mother's day display.

A cut showing two of the displays appears below.

Goldman's Prologue for "Deception" Gets Praise

Tieing up his prologue and musical features with the atmosphere of "Deception," William Goldman, managing director of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, was able to secure unusually effective results. Goldman's prologue worked into the picture perfectly and in this respect was the best thing he has accomplished at the Missouri. This was done by using five singers, a setting taken from the picture, two buglers and a scrim.

The title of the picture was first flashed upon the scrim and then faded out as the stage lights came up, revealing the hunting lodge of King Henry VIII with five singers in costume gathered about a table. The old drinking song, "Down With the Dead Men," was sung. The stage lights were dimmed out and the picture continued, still being projected upon the scrim. The two buglers sounded the call for the hunt and as the words of the song, "The Hunt is Up," which was in the film, appeared, the singers on the darkened stage rendered it.

The Missouri enjoyed a big week with "Deception" in spite of the first warm weather of the season.

LAST week found a most attractive vocal number on the New York Rivoli theatre bill, staged by Managing Director Hugo Reisenfeld as a prologue to "The Woman God Changed."

Real Indian music—Omaha, Pueblo and Cheyenne—was used in the stage number, "An Indian Idyll." Josiah Zuro, who stages most of the small musical gems at the Reisenfeld theatres, sought out the most typical Indian melodies, one by Cadman and two by Lieurance, as the basis for the stage number.

To have used the original Indian melodies in all the primitive simplicity and quaintness would not have offered the full tonal qualities to which modern audiences are accustomed and which the theatre demands, so Mr. Zuro chose the three elaborations which he believed to be truest interpretations despite their broader idioms —Cadman's "From the Land of the Sky Blue Water" and Lieurance's "Pakoble" (The Rose) and "Pa-pup-ooh" (Deer Flower).

Cadman's song is an elaboration of an Omaha tribal melody originally set down by Alice Cunningham Fletcher, which has become one of the most popular Indian compositions. In the opening bars there is represented the flagelot love call of the Omahas.

Lieurance's songs are elaborations of Red Willow, Pueblo and Cheyenne melodies. "Pa-pup-ooh," according to the composer, is a Pueblo farewell song and was confided to the author and recorded with the promise that the singer's identity should never be made public. Deer Flower is one of the daughters of the chief of the Red Willow Pueblo Indians. The song is elaborated from a flute melody. "Pakoble" is another flute melody. It was composed by John Turkey Legs, a Cheyenne, and was recorded on the Cheyenne reservation in 1912.

The three Indian melodies were arranged by Mr. Zuro into an atmospheric stage number in which Mary Fabian, soprano, and Georges DuFranne, tenor, dressed in native Indian costumes, appeared. The beauty of the production was heightened by the special stage setting designed by R. L. Forkum, the noted poster artist. The setting, the true color values of which cannot be sensed from the accompanying photograph, was the first designed by Mr. Forkum for a Riesenfeld theatre, and, while decorative in treatment, was nevertheless highly realistic.

If Mr. Cullen had accepted all the invitations that flowed into his office he would have had to hold the tribe a month.

Cloakey Uses Puzzle Idea to Advantage

Manager Oral D. Cloakey of the Lyceum theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, formerly the manager of the new Allen theatre at Cleveland, Ohio, sprang something new for the presentation of "A Small Town Idol" at the Lyceum during the fourth week in May when he conducted a combination puzzle and drawing combination. Angular sections of Ben Turpin's portrait were mixed up in a two-column advertisement in the local newspapers with the request that the pieces be clipped out and patched together, after which the contestant was expected to make a drawing of Turpin's face from the picture. Three cash prizes were offered and all drawings were shown in a downtown window.

Saenger Theatre Gets Results with Lobby Displays

Two of the recent exploitation stunts put over by G. F. McCormick, manager of the Saenger Greenwood theatre, Greenwood, Miss., are explained by the accompanying cuts.

The lobby display shown for "Behold My Wife" and "Get Out and Get Under," both on the same bill, created a great deal of comment, a lot of Mr. McCormick's patrons wanting to know if he was going to give away a Ford in some sort of a contest.

The "Blackbirds" stunt worked quite as well although Mr. McCormick, so he advises us, wasn't able to catch live blackbirds for his cage and had to content himself with two mounted specimens. The bird on top of the cage is a crow.

Hammond's "Little Clown" Ballyhoo Goes Big

A pretty, graceful little girl of about fifteen or sixteen, dressed as the most adorable of little clowns, in a suit of black and white satin, and carrying a battered old suit case in one hand, with a shabby but friendly little mongrel dog tucked under the other arm, wandered around the streets of Atlanta for three days recently—apparently somewhat bewildered by the rush and bustle of it all, looking as if she had just stepped from the ring of Barnum & Bailey's.

Her answer to all questions put to her was that she was looking for the Forsyth theatre, where Mary Miles Minter was playing in "The Little Clown." She was remarkably glib about the picture, the theatre and all that—but not so glib about questions that were more personal.

Small wonder, for she was Frank Hammond's exploitation for "The Little Clown," which played at the Forsyth reecntly.

Another and equally effective bit of exploitation on this picture was Mr. Hammond's special early morning matinee for mothers and club-women, to convince them that it was a picture their children should see. The picture was heartily endorsed by these ladies, by the local branch of the Better Films movement, and teachers in the public schools of the city were asked to recommend it to their children.

"Bob Hampton" Indians Get Great Welcome

New Garrick Theatre, Duluth Exploitation Meets With Fine Success

MARSHALL NEILAN'S "Bob Hampton of Placer" at the New Garrick, Duluth, due to its unual advertising possibilities and presention given it played to a week's capacity siness despite the first summer weather d strong competition.

Seven of the Glacier National Park iefs were in the city for the showing d were utilized for an elaborate progue and publicity. The opening Sunday s arranged as Field Day for Amateur otographers and was worked in connction with a local photographer who ve as a prize a twenty-five dollar kodak r the best snap-shot of the Chiefs. Front ge publicity was secured on the Indians ery day of their engagement.

The entire company called upon Mayor ively at the City Hall where they were esented with the key to the city. At rk Point School studies were called off ile the pupils packed the assembly to ar a talk by Chief Curly Bear and watch native Indian dance. At the Board of ade the galleries were packed and tick- were forgotten while the Indians in the t gave their dance. At the Commercial ub and Kawanis dinner the assembled embers gave the Chiefs welcome to the y—and incidently great publicity for Bob Hampton of Placer" and the Garrk theatre. Visiting Fight Fans many om surrounding towns numbering some ree thousand, applauded the Chief's eech and dances at a Fight put on at e Shriners Auditorium which brought em down to the show the last day.

The prologue arranged by Managing rector P. F. Schwie was produced in o episodes or scenes and was acclaimed the dramatic critics as a greater esentation then even the presentations en "Passion," "Kismet" and others which Mr. Schwie received much newsper publicity. In the scenic and musical effects for "Bob Hampton of Placer," Mr. Schwie showed the real value of a prologue in motion pictures. The musical arrangement for the presentation was as follows: Overture Maestosa movement from Indian Invocation "Natoma" (Herbert) with slow curtain with orchestra going into "Dagger Dance" disclosing an Exterior, forest scene, Indian camp with Tepees and Indians seated in front of tent and around camp fire. Lighting entire blue stage. At full open stage the Indians sang their weird native song after which they went into their dance accompanied by their own tom-toms. At the height of their dance three shots were fired off stage, the rumble of wheels were heard and the crack of whips and horse beats told the Indians that a wagon train was coming their way. At this signal the Indians hurriedly broke camp, arming themselves filed through the trees and off stage. At this conclusion of the first scene full stage dark and immediately up on the blue for second disclosing another setting being an exterior—a log cabin in a clearing at the foot of the mountains. This scene disclosed a girl seated on a log by the cabin who sang "Land of the Sky Blue Water." During her song the Indians crept on stage and behind trees. At finish Miss Dale used as her exit, entrance into the cabin. Through the transparent windows the audience could see the action transpiring within the cabin—the struggle between the girl and the Indians and as a climax the burning of the cabin obtained by stage red fire.

Weld's Stunt Brought Both the Police and Publicity

Arthur E. Weld, acting manager of the Strand theatre, Waterloo, Iowa, was playing "Brewster's Millions" and wanted to pull something original in the way of exploitation, so he framed with a friend to rob the theatre of $1,500 in bogus bank notes. Weld made a lot of noise about the loss of the "bank notes" and someone in a crowded lobby heard him, which was the idea, and telephoned the police.

Straight up to the Strand came Waterloo's chief of police ready for action. Weld explained quietly that the person who telephoned the alarm didn't wait to hear the rest of the story, that the money was bogus and used for a lobby display.

The chief of police went up in the air at first but the reporters who had rushed to the scene on a tip that the Strand had been looted began to "guy" him. He had a good sense of humor and gave out a statement for the press; that was good for the front pages along with a recital of the stunt that Weld had put over.

The newspapers ate up the whole thing and all Waterloo read about it the next day.

The six girl ushers of the theatre were covered with these notes, pinned to paper dresses. A few blue-lawers of Waterloo were shocked and started to protest but the newspapers printed stories of this stunt too. The girls were used as animated posters in the lobby when they weren't on duty inside. They were good business getters.

Mr. Weld designed special window cards and broke into the exclusive stores which had refused to tie up in the past. One jeweler who had been in the business forty years and had never permitted a card in his window before, fell for one of Weld's tieups.

Ingenuity and 24 Sheet Make a Fine Window Display

A. S. Nathan, Paramount exploiteer for the New Haven exchange, and Mr. Higginbotham, manager of Fox's theatre, Conn., used nothing less than a 24-sheet poster cut-out in a window tieup with Clark's music store for "The Inside of the Cup." The cut-out depicted a symbolic enactment of the theme of the story, and conveyed a distinct message. These figures, more than life-size, towered over the sidewalk and arrested the attention. Nathan says it was one of the most compelling tieups he ever arranged.

Hammond Installs Automobile in Lobby as Exploitation

For simple, inexpensive, yet effectiv exploitation, the second-run theatres i Atlanta seem to be scoring over the bigge first-run houses. The Strand theatre i one of the most notable examples of this and while there is never any elaborate elec trical effects or special and expensive stuff there's always something in the lobby o the Strand to capture attention.

For instance, a short time ago, the thea tre played "The Speed Demon." Ton Mix is a favorite with patrons of th Strand, but they know him as a "ridin fool," who is more at home on horseback than on the ground, and in "The Spee Demon" he is a dare-devil automobil racer.

So, to emphasize the difference. Fran Hammond, who is in charge of all th Lynch houses in Atlanta, with the excep tion of the Howard, planned to install a automobile in the lobby—not just any au tomobile, but some special kind. Th Hanson automobile is made in Atlanta, s Mr. Hammond arranged a tie-up wit them, with the result that a beautiful littl speedster, bright scarlet as to paint, shin ing silver as to trim, and with its tire painted snow-white, stood in the lobby a week, with a cut-out of Tom Mix at th wheel, and a sign on it reading, "Tor Mix Swaps his Horse for an Auto i 'The Speed Demon'."

The Hanson people mentioned th Strand and the special little car in thei lobby, for the week—and all the wa round the tie-up worked to splendid ac vantage for both the theatre and the aut company.

Royster Makes the Blind Lead the Lame

Cortland, N. Y., does not possess a theatre that runs Paramount pictures, but it does boast of a newspaper. Homer, N. Y., runs Paramount pictures but it hasn't a newspaper. Cortland and Homer are five miles apart, and Harry L. Royster is Paramount exploitation man for that division.

The Community theatre, Homer, wanted to pull a newspaper stunt for "Something to Think About." So Royster went into Cortland and asked the Cortland Standard if they would give the picture a boost in both towns. "What can you do for us?" asked the Standard. Royster said he would see. So he went back to J. P. Johnston, manager of the theatre, and the manager cashed in on his good will among the merchants of Homer and Cortland. Royster was able to present the Standard with a full page of co-operative advertisements from the merchants of the town five miles away. The layout was the first Cortland had seen.

The More Kids, the More Business, Says Moore

The astute and enterprising motion picture theatre manager of today is not content to direct all his advertising at the adults, in spite of the fact that they pay larger admission fees. He knows that he needs "the kids" to make his house a paying proposition—to fill it at the afternoon performances—and therefore he devotes a considerable amount of thought to ways and means of attracting them to his place. Especially is this true of a picture that has a special appeal for the children like "The Kid."

Having booked "The Kid," G. R. Moore, owner and manager of the Lion and Royal theatres in Bellevue, O., made a special effort for the children's patronage in his two-day showing at the Lion and one-day engagement at the Royal.

Kendallville, Ind., Has Busy Woman Manager

One of the busiest of women managers of motion picture theatres is Mrs. Charles Du Wan of the Colonial theatre of Kendallville, Ind.

Besides booking the pictures, looking after the advertising, selling tickets and taking care of the manifold duties of a manager which cannot be catalogued, Mrs. Du Wan manipulates the keys of the piano and renders a few special selections for the audiences when the other members of the family become tired of operating the mechanical piano in the theatre.

Pittsburg Theatres Use Two Methods of Exploiting Same Picture

The Rowland and Clark theatres of Pittsburgh, in presenting "A Small Town Idol," resorted to two angles in exploitation to make it the successful box office attraction it was.

The efforts of the publicity department was centered on the newspapers. Big space was used and unusual methods of presentation were effected. The picture was offered simultaneously at the Regent and Savoy theatres. The transients were attracted to the Savoy theatre which is in the heart of the business district. Director of Theatres Jerome Casper, personally designed a lobby display, which was one of the most novel ever seen in Pittsburg. Cut-outs depicting the horse race brought a race track background; three-sheet cut-outs faced the streets, showing Turpin on horseback going at top speed. An entrance to the "Town Hall" was constructed and a cut-out showing Murray and Turpin proved a magnet to the passers-by. A banner at the top of the lobby also had its effect. The result was that the Savoy enjoyed one of the biggest weeks in its history.

The Regent theatre in East Liberty depended almost entirely on newspaper exploitation. The ads were well gotten up, with Turpin, who stands second to none as a drawing card in Pittsburg, standing out prominently in caricature. This theatre also reported extraordinary business.

Moxley Admits Firemen for Moore Picture

For the presentation of "Made in Heaven," during the first half of the week of May 16, Manager J. T. Moxley, of the Allen's Regent theatre, Ottawa, Ont., arranged to admit without charge all members of the Ottawa Fire Department in uniform to any performance during the engagement. This stunt was due to the nature of the story of the picture.

Home Talent Aids Lawfence on "Peaceful Valley"

Just what great results the tie-up with a home talent show or the interest that the public will manifest in the amateur specialty is sure to accomplish is fully exemplified by a recital of the experience for R. W. Lawrence, manager of the Grand theatre, Tiffin, O., in inducing the members of a local dramatic organization to give a repeat performance of their latest production, in connection with his extra day's showing of "Peaceful Valley."

Although the home talent had already done a big business in previous performances and "Peaceful Valley" drawn the usual number of people that turn out to see a picture, the combination show found the Grand theatre packed.

Mr. Lawrence is planning on similar cooperation with the dramatic society in the future.

The audience that crowded to see "Kazan" at the Forrest theatre, Philadelphia, on May 23, when it opened, were interested as much in the performance of a one-armed man at the piano, as in the picture, which is going some. Lieut. Gerard, the performer, lost an arm in the war. It was his right arm, at that, but nevertheless his performance at the instrument with his left arm alone was a feat that delighted every member of the audience, who marveled at the perfection of his attainments. To those who listened alone, there was no indication whatsoever of his playing, so to speak, single-handed, and even the spectators who watched as they listened, could hardly believe their eyes, so skillfully did he handle the score. They went away marveling at his pluck, and incidentally passing on the news of his ability by the best means of all advertising—word of mouth.

Children Help Harris Put Over "Black Beauty"

A drawing test for the children helped put over "Black Beauty" for Saul S. Harris, manager of Arkansas Enterprises, Little Rock, Ark. He offered several prizes among the public schools and a private kindergarten for the best drawings of horses, by children. All sorts of conceptions of "Black Beauty" came in, and the papers helped on publicity. The work of one boy was so good that Mr. Harris put him on the stage at several performances to make free-hand drawings on a blackboard, and audiences pronounced him a genius. The stunt drew a lot of children to the show.

Gives Children Special Rates on "The Kid"

Carl F. Miller, manager of the Strand theatre, Fremont, O., wanted the youngsters to see "The Kid" so badly that he advertised that they could do so at six cents a head, that is on special matinees.

Mr. Miller knows that for a picture like "The Kid" the very best exploitation is that which a crowd of youngsters will give in reviewing what they have seen by word of mouth. Therefore he was willing to sacrifice a small individual profit by cutting the price for children's admissions in order to secure their 100 per cent boost to their parents and relatives. Also Mr. Miller got his restless audiences all together and made room for houses of grown-ups when he needed his seating capacity the most.

West Coast Theatre Arranges Simple Lobby Display

The American theatre, Bellingham, Wash., arranged a simple and inexpensive prologue to "Idols of Clay." The regular stage set was reversed and the canvas covered with a dark varnish. Two improvised studio lamps were made from a single globe and pasteboard. These were suspended from the ceiling. Under one lamp was an artist model who posed in tightly fitting white gauze. A tenor was engaged to portray a sculptor and while he fashioned a figure out of clay he sang an appropriate song. This was arranged by Manager Fred Walters and A. M. Vogel, Paramount exploiteer for Seattle-Portland.

Vogel arranged a tieup with the Owl Drug store. He hired a sculptor to make clay figures which stunt drew crowds all day long. Window cards and cut-outs hooked the stunt up with the picture.

New York Mark Strand Prologue for Mary's New Picture

Carrying out what has become recognized as the most effective way of presenting a prologue, a stage setting suggested by some particular scene in the picture with vocal numbers to suit the action and theme accordingly, Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the New York Mark Strand theatre presented last week a most interesting atmospheric number for "Through the Back Door."

The prologue staged by Director Plunkett is arranged to represent a scene in a Belgian farmyard, as suggested by the rural scene in the picture. It opens to the introduction of "Dreaming Alone in the Twilight" as the Strand Male Quartette, attired in the costumes of Belgian farmers, file in from the day's work—hoe, rake, spade and scythe shouldered respectively.

Upon the finish of that number the lights, which were green and amber diffused at the start, change to green and blue, and the Male Quartette then sings "Absent." This number is very appropriate on this occasion and blends harmoniously with the gradual diminution of the blue lights used for the twilight atmosphere and with the green lights employed to color the verdant surroundings.

Senor Donkey An Aid In "Go And Get It" Campaign

Send a donkey through the streets with a small bale of alfalfa suspended before him on a pole and just out of reach of his twitching nostrils; over his flanks a canvas blanket on which your advertisement appears.

"Blue Sunday" Comedy Given Unique Exploitation

J. Disch, manager of the New Majestic theatre, Cudahy, Wis., grabbed on the exploitation possibilities of the Lyons-Moran "Blue Sunday" comedy and gave it the feature place on his bill.

One of the stunts which Mr. Disch used that brought great results was to get out a little blue tag printed in dark blue ink and attached it to all automobiles which came into town, all of the baby carriages, wagons, conveyances of every kind, and had the trades people attach one to each parcel delivered to the homes in the city.

The tag was made in the form of a regular express tag. It read as follows: "You are not ARRESTED and won't have to APPEAR BEFORE THE JUDGE But don't forget BLUE SUNDAY is on in Cudahy, Sunday, May 22."

Mexican Band Plays Grauman's Theatre, Los Angeles

The celebrated organization of native Mexican musicians came to Los Angeles directly from Mexico City by special permission of President Obregon. Appearing on the brilliantly lighted Grauman stage, decorated in Mexican flags and sprayed with vari-colored lights all typical of Mexican traditions, the band took every Grauman audience by storm.

The organization rendered in its own quaint and fascinating fashion the national airs of the land below the border, and ended each concert with a medley of popular and patriotic American selections.

Hyman's Prologue for "Scrap Iron"

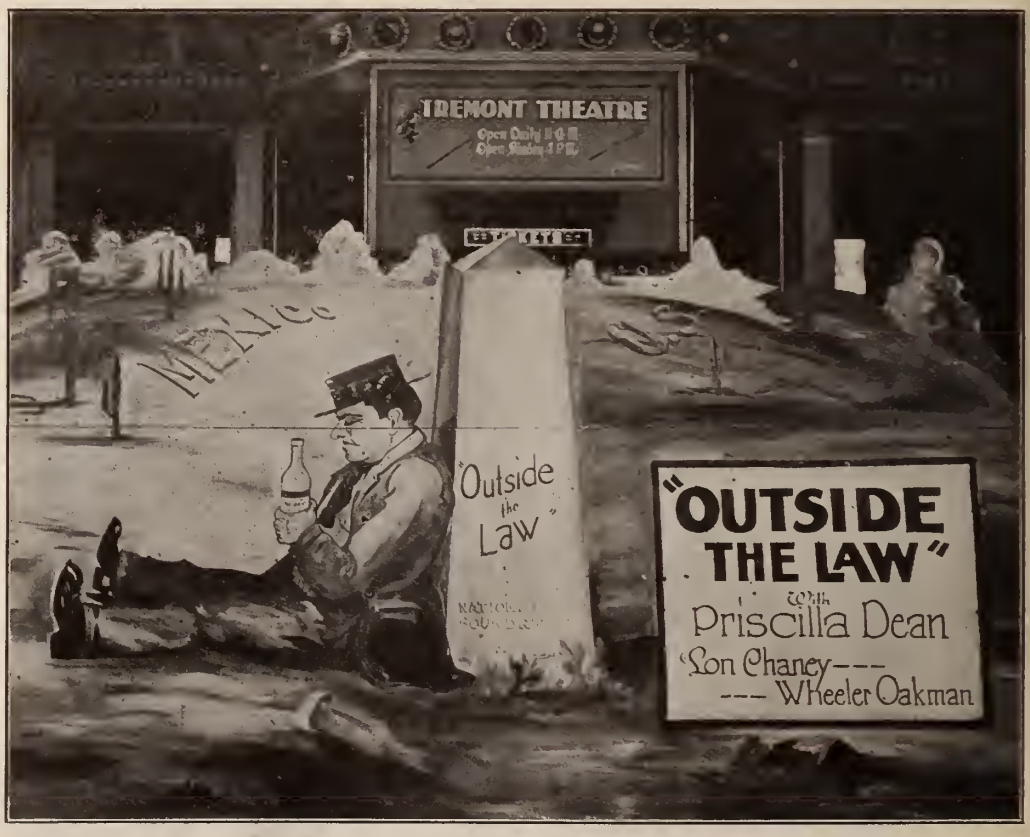
The bellows are practical and sparks fly from the anvils as the singers hammer an accompaniment to the number.

The song is opened with the baritone leading off while standing at an anvil with sledge poised. As the melody progresses the three other voices swell into harmony until the chorus is reached, where all four singers take up the refrain.

Beecroft Uses Now Famous "Black Beauty" Stunt

In putting across the now famous "Black Beauty" drawing test, W. G. Beecroft, manager of the Fuller theatre, Madison, Wisconsin, secured effective publicity by giving the money for cash prizes to a local newspaper and allowing them to run the contest under their name and guidance.



Since a stunt such as this makes a good reader feature the paper started the contest out with a front page top of column story and continued to play it up for several days, during which the film was being shown.

The announcement of the first prize winner secured over a column space on the first page of the local section of the Sunday paper.

Ottawa Theatre Gets Local Cooperation

Every drug store in Ottawa, Ont., conducted a special sale of heliotrope perfume or sold special heliotrope sundaes during the week of May 9—simultaneously with the presentation of the picture bearing the title of "Heliotrope" on the screen of the local Loew house.

Incidentally, the Ottawa Citizen published a combination page in its issue of May 14 to boost "Blind Wives," which was shown at the Loew theatre during the week of May 16. The page consisted of store advertisements which were tied up to the theme of the picture.

Here is an original exploitation idea for "Outside the Law" by E. J. Barnette, manager of the Tremont theatre, Galveston, Texas. Galveston is near enough to the Mexican border, so Mr. Barnette's painting was humorous and effective in attracting attention. The sign was placed on the sidewalk in front of the theatre

New England Exchangeman in N. Y.

W. H. BRADLEY, president and general manager of Peerless Pictures of New England, Inc., will be in New York during the week of June 6. He will make his headquarters at the Hotel Commodore. Peerless Pictures is an independent exchange with offices at 32 Winchester street, Boston, Mass.

Louise Du Pres Signed by Casco Productions

Announcement has just been made by the Casco Productions, Inc., that they have started a series of five-reel productions, adapted from a number of original mystery stories, and have secured Miss Louise Du Pre, former understudy and "double" for Mary Pickford for the stellar role, in the first of these productions which is almost completed and ready for release.

Miss Du Pre's engagement by the Casco Productions, Inc., is by special contract arrangement whereby she is loaned to this new producing company. The first production is being made under the working title of "Faith," and is from an original story by B. C. Rule.

A strong supporting cast has been secured for Miss Du Pre, in which several players formerly of the Famous Players-Lasky forces, will be seen.

"Faith" is said to be ideally suited to Miss Du Pre's particular talent for the portrayal of "child" roles, and in addition embodies all of the melodramatic elements now in popular demand.

"Ten Nights in a Barroom" Completed

L. Case Russell's screen adaptation of the old play, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," is completed, and, according to reports, promises to be one of the big plays of the year. While keeping the characters and heart appeal of the play, the adaptation is thoroughly modernized, the climax being a thriller in which the leading man, John Lowell, and the head cameraman, Joseph Settle, nearly lost their lives. The director, Oscar Apfel, has provided a rapidly moving screen drama from Mrs. Russell's scenario. Baby Ivy Ward plays little "Mary Morgan," while the rest of the cast is made up of tested artists.

Optimism from One Who Knows Conditions

A BIG year ahead! This is the outlook for the fall and winter for the independent exchangeman, according to one of the best known and most experienced traders in the state right business. She is Agnes Egan Cobb, who has been connected with the industry for thirteen years, first at the head of her own exchange, and more recently as a buyer and seller of independent films.

Mrs. Cobb is expecting one of her busiest seasons this coming fall. She sees a constantly growing demand for independent pictures among exhibitors, and a need for high class product by the exchanges. While the needs of exchanges in the various territories differ greatly, Mrs. Cobb states that the most universal demand is for Western features. The exchanges are also seeking pictures with exploitation and publicity possibilities, which are capable of being road-showed.

Mrs. Cobb has recently returned from Baltimore, where she was greatly impressed with the possibilities for state right exchanges in that city. She believes Baltimore will soon enjoy a great increase of population as more industries are centered in the city, and expects that it will be a much better picture city than Washington, where low Government salaries hinder the theatres' business. Mrs. Cobb is soon to leave on a trip through Northern New York State, where she will study the conditions of the independent field in that territory as well as ascertaining the type of pictures most in demand. She believes in keeping in touch with the field, due to the ever-changing needs of the exchanges even in the same section.

Coast Producer Expanding

Eagle Corp., Sponsoring Fairfax Pictures, to Increase Activities

THE Eagle Producing and Finance Corporation, the organization sponsoring Marion Fairfax Productions, is about to enter the producing field on a large scale, according to an announcement from the West Coast.

Several well known directors are practically signed to put on a number of special pictures under this banner and arrangements are now being completed for the financing by the Eagle Corporation of two individual organizations bearing the names of prominent figures in the producing world.

Marion Fairfax's, "The Lying Truth," which is the initial release of the Eagle company, is now finished and arrangements for its distribution will be made within the next few weeks. The merit of this film produced along strictly independent lines which mark the policy of this organization, is said to have encouraged the members of the company to enlarge their activities in the producing field in accordance with their tentative plans on the formation of the corporation some months ago.

John Jasper, manager of the Marion Fairfax unit, is the most prominently known member of the company in the motion picture world. Mr. Jasper, for years manager for Charlie Chaplin, resigned that position two years ago to build the big Hollywood Studios on Santa Monica Boulevard. Affiliated with Mr. Jasper in both the ownership of the Studios and the Eagle company are C. E. Toberman, a Hollywood real estate man, as president, and Charles W. Bradford, on the Board of Directors. These three men, together with F. A. Hartwell, Hollywood capitalists, as secretary and treasurer and J. E. Ransford, on the Board of Directors, comprise the officers of the Eagle company.

"The Eagle Producing and Finance Corporation is an organization backed with ample capital by the various members in it to produce pictures on sane business lines," said Mr. Jasper, in outlining their plans for the future.

Tatra Film Corp. Organized in Chicago

THE Tatra Film Corporation is Chicago's newest motion picture company. S. Fabry, a well known Chicago business man, and L. J. Siakel, formerly a laboratory technician for the Rothacker Film Company, were leading spirits in the company's organizations.

The company is said to have strong financial resources. The stock, which is entirely subscribed, was never offered to the public, and a number of wealthy Chicagoans are among the company's backers.

The corporation has an ambitious producing program and plans to produce both in this country and abroad. Probably the first production will be a historical photoplay. Later the company will enter the comedy and feature field.

John M. Lakin Joins Ritchie Lithograph

John M. Lakin, formerly president of the Acme Lithograph Company, and one of the best-known men in the show print business, recently disposed of his holdings in Acme, with which company he had been identified for the last seven years, and joined the Ritchie Lithograph Company.

Mr. Lakin was practically the creator of the "Personal Service" element in the lithographing field. He is an art critic of considerable repute and his experience in the field of commercial art, together with his knowledge of and wide acquaintance among the artists of the modern school have made his opinions on poster matters very highly valued in the motion picture trade.

Plymouth Pictures to Add to Program

With its initial independent feature, "Every Woman's Problem," completely disposed of to territorial buyers, Plymouth Pictures, Inc., has opened negotiations for the acquisition of a series of pictures, and it is expected that the deal will be consummated within the ensuing week. In line with the policy of expansion inaugurated by Nat Levine, president of Plymouth, the organization plans to place on the independent market a minimum of six high-class attractions before the close of the current calendar year.

Callahan's First Praised

JIMMY CALLAHAN'S first two-reel comedy, "Jimmy's Last Night Out," which is being released through Robert W. Priest, president of The Film Market, Inc., continues to make a hit with everyone who has seen it, reports that company. The story is novel and gives Mr. Callahan and his support, Florence Dixon and Lottie Kendall, excellent opportunities. The scenes are laid in a club, Jimmy's bedroom, a ladies' boudoir, and on a ship at sea when Jimmy is kidnapped by female sea-rovers, as the handsomest man in Atlantic City.

Mr. Callahan's release to follow "Jimmy's Last Night Out," is called "Props." This will be followed by "The Stowaway" and later, by a production now in hand entitled "Wild Women." In the latter production, Captain Charles Downs, Mr. Callahan's chief cameraman, will introduce several novel ideas in trick photography and double exposures.

Mr. Priest went to Atlantic City last Tuesday and remained there two days in consultation with Mr. Callahan and his staff in reference to productions planned for the immediate future. It is the purpose of Mr. Callahan and Mr. Priest to present a line of comedies which will prove novelties to the screen, both as to the type of story and manner of production.

Mr. Priest, being a theatrical manager of long experience, believes that comedies developed on the lines of the noted old stage farces will prove far more successful than productions of the slapstick type, which many times are only rough-house incidents strung together by any excuse for a story. It is his aim to present real stories possessing every possible comic interest and to make these the distinctive type for the Jimmy Callahan comedies.

Brandt Returns from West

President of C. B. C. Back After Busy Period in Coast Studios

JOE BRANDT, president of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corp., returned to his New York offices this week with plans all set for a busy season and a record of hard work and achievement during the two and half months which he has spent at the West Coast.

Mr. Brandt has spent the time at the Coast acquiring several new feature pictures and watching production on many features in which he is interested.

His most important announcement is that the completion of "Heart of the North," the story which Mr. Brandt purchased some time ago from Edward V. Dowing, the author, who is also responsible for many other features, among these "The Greatest Love" featuring Vera Gordon. "Heart of the North," which features Roy Stewart, supported by Louise Lovely is a story of the Canadian Northwest.

Mr. Brandt has also secured rights to several big feature pictures for distribution through his company, on which, he says, definite announcement will come shortly.

A great part of the time was spend by him in watching and helping to direct production on the two-reel Hallroom Boys Comedies featuring Sid Smith, and on Screen Snapshots, the two short subjects which are produced by his company and distributed through Federate Film Exchanges of America, Inc. He announces that Harry Cohn, the producer of Hallroom Boys Comedies, has pushed production on these pictures well ahead of schedule, and that the next few comedies are real laugh-producers, and even better than those that have already been released on the series.

Curwood Drama Is Titled

"God's Country and the Law" to Be First of Arrow Film's Series

ANNOUNCEMENT comes from the Arrow Film Corporation that the first of their James Oliver Curwood series of productions will come out under the title of "God's Country and the Law." This picture now being completed in the Maine woods by the Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., who are producing the Curwood series for Arrow. The story, it is said, is cut perfectly out of the Curwood die—a virile fast moving drama of the North woods.

Gladys Leslie who earned wide popularity and fame with Vitagraph for several years and later in independent productions, is the star of this picture. Her supporting cast is William H. Tooker as Jacques Dore; Cesare Gravina playing the role of Poleon; Fred. C. Jones in the part of Andre and Hope Sutherland as Oachi. This supporting cast was especially selected, and physically and histrionically, it is said, they fit perfectly with the distinctive types written into the story.

The supervising director of this picture and most likely for the rest of the series is Sidney Olcott. As a dramatic director he has become well known in the past several years for his work with Famous Players-Lasky and just prior to joining the Pine Tree organization, with the Goldwyn Company. Independent exchangemen and exhibitors will remember him as the director of "The Belgian."

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow who has made a number of trips to Maine during the making of this picture, is authority for the statement that it is brim full of action and the much sought Curwood atmosphere—woods, virile characters and all sorts of animal life that make up the setting of a Curwood production.

"God's Country and the Law" is being scheduled for an early release.

Neal Hart Pictures Are Sold for the South

Quality Films Service, of Atlanta, has just closed a contract with Pinnacle Productions for handling the Neal Hart feature series in six southern states, according to H. E. Belford, Pinnacle sales manager, who has just returned to Chicago from Atlanta. Mr. Belford reports that while conditions in that section of the country are below normal, the tide seems to have turned and business is on the up grade.

Mr. Mitchell, manager of the Quality Film Service, although a newcomer in the exchange field, is a live wire addition to the industry and already is doing a big business despite the present dull season. He is an enthusiast on the recent Hart pictures and is going to put them over heart and soul.

Warner - Federated Comedy Is Completed

The first Warner-Federated Comedy, starring Monty Banks, has just been completed and received from the West Coast studios, according to an announcement of the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc. The title of the comedy is "Peaceful Alley."

Allene Bay Production Nears Completion

Bert Lubin, president of the Western Pictures Corporation, producers of the new series of six Allene Ray five reel semi-western society dramas, reports that the first of the series will be finished about June 5th.

Three important sales of Associated Photo-plays, Inc., franchises were reported this week for the entire output of sixteen pictures which are scheduled for release within the next twelve months.

After screening "The Wolverine" starring Helen Gibson and "Western Hearts" with Art Staton and Josie Sedgwick, Sam Zieler, president of Commonwealth Film Corporation, signed a contract for sixteen pictures for the New York territory.

No sooner had the ink been dry on the Zieler contract than the franchise agreement was received from the Twentieth Century Film Company, of Philadelphia. Gene Marcus, head of this concern, purchased the franchise for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey. The third contract to be received this week was from the Lion Film Corporation of Dallas, Texas, for the Texan territory.

Last week Mr. Geo. M. A. Fecke, of Boston, decided that an Associated Franchise was just the thing for the New England territory.

Second Federated Snapshots Finished

Federated Screen Snapshots No. 2, second of the new series of the "fan magazine of the screen" produced by Jack Cohn and Louis Lewyn was reviewed this week in the projection room of Screen Snapshots, Inc., by the Board of Review of the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc. and was voted excellent in every way and ready for release. The reel was turned over to Federated for distribution.

Arrow Reports Large Foreign Deal

The foreign export department of the Arrow Film Corporation, through D. J. Mountan, announces that another big deal has been closed with Luporini Bros. of this city for the distribution of twenty-six production now made and those in the process of being produced for the territory of Argentine, Uruguay and Paraguay. The deal was personally closed by F. V. Luporini.

President Thankful for Music Score Offer

SOME time ago a letter was addressed to President Harding offering him the use of synchronized music scores in the private presentation of motion pictures in the White House. The Music Score Service Corp. announces that a letter has been received from the executive mansion in which the President thanks the company for their courteous offering. In addition, William H. Santelman, leader of the United States Marine Band, in a letter to the Music Service Corp., declares that he will be pleased to accept the company's offer of synchronized music scores whenever his band is called upon to furnish music at the White House or at any other function at which the President is present.

Eastern exhibitors are reported to be responding "splendidly" to the new music service. Some of the theatres recently closing for this service include the Strand theatre, Far Rockaway, N. Y.; Sumner theatre, Brooklyn; the new Miserole theatre, Brooklyn; the Flushing, Putnam, and Nassau theatres, Port Washington, L. I.; the Kintzler chain in Brooklyn.

Aywon Film Has Two New Series

Melvin Hirsh, son of Nathan Hirsh president of the Aywon Film Corporation and who is in charge of the company's business during his father's trip to Europe, announces two series of pictures that should prove of interest.

In one of the series soon to be released, the Australian sportsman, "Snowy" Baker will be the star. The other series announced for release will star Will Rogers, Jr., the son of the former "Follies" comedian who is now a popular screen star.

Western Film Exchange Makes Correction

Through an error, it was stated in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS of April 30th that the owner of "Every Woman's Problem" in the Northwest Territory was the Seattle Film Exchange. The real owner is the Western Film Exchange, of Portland, Oregon, according to word received from that company.

"Stolen Love" Will Be Offered Shortly

"Stolen Love," a new five-reel feature, will shortly be ready for distribution, according to an announcement from the offices of Edward Klein, of New York. The picture is now being assembled and edited. It is said to be censor-proof and to contain an interesting mother-love theme, in addition to the romance.

Took Advantage of Fire to Exploit Picture

There was a big fire in the business section of New London, Conn., one night. Almost the entire town witnessed the fight with the flames to keep them from spreading. The next morning, as it always happened, everybody in town went to the scene to see what damage had been done. They found the window of the front all boarded and three three-sheets and three-six sheets announcing "Deception," the Paramount picture, at the Lyceum theatre.

Both Albert S. Nathan, the Paramount exploiteer, and Mr. Murphy, the manager of the theatre realized that the town would talk of nothing else but the fire for the next few days. They spent the entire night hunting for the owner of the store to get permission to board up the windows and paste up the posters. By morning they had the job done.

Kineto Reviews Find Favor in England

"Tatler," who writes two pages of gossip each week for "The Film Renter and Moving Pictures News," one of the leading English trade papers, says in the issue of May 7:

"My old friend Charles Urban used to be regarded as one of the noteworthy pioneers of the home trade in the days when he directed the fortunes of the Kineto Company in Wardour Street. To-day he occupies much the same position in the American industry, where his pioneer work on behalf of the educational film is generally recognized. Charlie is one of those men who are never content to sit still. Having built up a wonderful business in the Kineto Company of America, which concerns itself chiefly, if not entirely, with educational subjects, he has now conceived the idea of furnishing music-cues for one reel pictures."

The music cues which "Tatler" writes have have been furnished throughout the first series of Kineto Reviews and are in preparation for the second series, soon to be released.

Screen Snapshots Run in N. Y. Rialto

By way of proof of the statement made by Jack Cohn and Louis Lewyn, the producers of Screen Snapshots, that the new series of the novelty "fan" news reel would be of such a calibre as to make the big first-run houses everywhere sit up and take notice, the very first release on this new series played the Rialto theatre, one of New York's largest and most exclusive film palaces during the week just past.

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

To Send Eastern Paramount Units West

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION will transfer its producing units from its Long Island City studio to its Los Angeles Studio, as soon as the Paramount Pictures now in the making at Long Island City are completed, according to an announcement made today by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president of the corporation, in charge of production.

"This transfer is made in the interest of economy," Mr. Lasky said. "We shall take every advantage of the California sunshine now that the rainy season in Los Angeles is ended. We are not cutting down production but merely taking steps to produce more economically. The Long Island City Studio will be opened again when the rainy season makes it impractical to concentrate in Los Angeles. We do not believe in operating an enclosed studio, with its tremendous expense for electricity, at a time when we can work more economically in Hollywood. The companies that are now being sent to the Coast will return here in the fall."

Goldwyn Now Editing "Pardon My French"

"Pardon My French," the second Messmore Kendall production starring Vivian Martin, to be distributed by Goldwyn, is now in the process of final editing and cutting. Its first pre-release showing will take place within a short time.

"Pardon My French" is a broad comedy based upon a story by Edward Childs Carpenter, published under the title of "Polly in the Pantry." The continuity was prepared by Harry S. Hoyt while Irvin S. Cobb wrote the titles. Sidney Olcott, who directed Goldwyn's sensationally successful film comedy, "Scratch My Back," by Rupert Hughes, directed.

Unusual Service Offered by Assoc. Producers

Associated Producers, Inc., reports that the ysent a special man carrying four prints of Mack Sennett's "Home Talent" from Los Angeles to Boston recently in order that four exhibitors who booked the picture for a pre-release would not be disappointed. This was necessary because of an unforeseen shortage of prints in Boston.

New Willatt Picture Ready

C. A. WILLAT, brother of Irvin V. Willat, who is producing pictures for Hodkinson release, has just arrived in town with his brother's new picture, "The Face Of The World," which was adapted to the screen from the novel by Johan Bojer, famous Scandinavian author. Mr. Bojer's books have created quited a furor in the literary world. Among them may be mentioned "The Power Of A Lie," "Treacherous Ground," "The Great Hunger," and many others. But it is said that "The Face Of The World" far excels in dramatic construction and absorbing interest any of his other works.

The leading role in the production is handled by Barbara Bedford, the young ingenue who recently scored in Maurice Tourneur's produciton, "The Last Of The Mohicans." Opposite Miss Bedford is Edward Hearn, who will be remembered for his splendid work not only in "Down Home," the first independent Irvin V. Willat production to reach the screen, but in "Keeping Up With Lizzie" as well where he played opposite Enid Bennett in the sparkling picturization of Irving Bacheller's winning comedy.

Gareth Hughes Is Starred

Starts Work on George D. Baker Picture, "The Hunch," for Metro

METRO announces that Gareth Hughes is to be officially starred in motion pictures. His initial appearance as a Metro star will be made in a George D. Baker production, entitled "The Hunch." The first scenes for this picture were taken on Monday of this week at the Metro studios in Hollywood, Cal. "The Hunch," written by Percival Wilde and published in the Popular Magazine, will be the first of three productions in which Mr. Hughes is to appear in the stellar role.

In "The Hunch" Hughe's leading woman will be Ethel Grandin, who retired from pictures in 1917, after three years of stardom at the head of Grandin Films, Inc. Miss Grandin's career began in the old Imp company of New York, in which she succeeded Mary Pickford. Later she joined the Bison Company. Her next connection was with Universal which she left to join Grandin Films.

Others already cast are Ed. Flanagan, of Flanagan and Edwards who played "The Hallroom Boys," and John Steppling, who, after a stage career with Frohman, entered pictures in "Tess of the d'Urbervilles."

Keith Books "Aesop's Fables" Cartoons

PATHE Exchange distribution of the new animated cartoon series by Paul Terry, "Aesop's Fables Modernized," commands the important advantage of bookings throughout the circuit of Keith theatres. This arrangement was effected only a day or two after last week's announcement that Fables Pictures, Inc., would release the comically novel Terry productions through Pathe.

The first five weekly releases of "Aesop's Fables Modernized" are scheduled as follows: June 19—"The Goose that Laid the Golden Egg"; June 26th—"Mice in Council"; July 3rd—"The Rooster and the Eagle"; July 10th—"Ants and the Grasshopper"; July 17th—"Cats at Law."

Pathe News Forces Now in Pathe Building

The entire staff of Pathe News is now housed in the new Pathe Building on West 45th Street, New York City. The removal of the editorial, camera, cartoon and laboratory forces into their new quarters on the twelfth and thirteenth floors of the Pathe Building took place last week and did not interfere in the slightest with the release on Wednesday and Saturday of the regular editions of the Pathe News. The editorial, news, cutting, titling and cartoon departments and the projection room are located on the twelfth floor. The laboratory forces are situated on the thirteenth floor.

George Ade Will Write Neilan Titles

Marshall Neilan announces that he has signed George Ade, famous humorist and author, to handle the titles of the John Barrymore picture—"The Lotus Eater"—produced by Neilan in New York and Florida recently.

Mr. Ade's work for the Neilan film will mark his debut in this field. This author's genius for cramming much meaning into three or four-word epigrams, particularly fits him for the task of titling such a film as "The Lotus Eater." Mr. Neilan is now en route to Mr. Ade's home in Indiana where the film will be projected in the author's home and the work of preparing the titles will be laid out.

High Praise for Kipling Film

Is Hailed as Director Young's "Greatest Achievement"

BESIDES being acclaimed as the "greatest achievement" yet accomplished by Director James Young, "Without Benefit of Clergy," the screen adaptation of Rudyard Kipling's famous story, is said to reveal with remarkable faithfulness the East Indian atmosphere and setting in which the Kipling tale is laid. The picture was recently completed at the Robert Brunton studios on the West Coast and is scheduled for release by Pathe Exchange, Inc., during July.

That "Without Benefit of Clergy" marks James Young's supreme and crowning effort as a director, surpassing even his work in George Arliss's screen vehicle, "The Devil," is the opinion rendered by the Pathe reviewing committee before whom the completed picture was recently screened.

"Mr. Young has proved himself," declares a Pathe statement, "a master in the art of making his characters actually live upon the screen, in giving most vividly the true interpretation of Rudyard Kipling's story in moving pictures.

"To many, Mr. Young did his greatest work with George Arliss in 'The Devil.' This was a superb production from a directorial, as well as all other viewpoints. Still, it is nowise to be considered the equal of his efforts with 'Without Benefit of Clergy.'

"James Young was admirably equipped for the directing of 'Without Benefit of Clergy, because of first hand knowledge of the country, and the customs of India, in which the story was laid by Mr. Kipling.

"Young toured India some years ago, making pictures in Calcutta and other Hindu cities. In these pictures he employed many natives, which gave him splendid equipment when it came to handling the big scenes in Without Benefit of Clergy."

In describing the realistic East Indian atmosphere obtained in the filming of the scenes for "Without Benefit of Clergy" on the West Coast, the statement from the statement from the Pathe homeoffice reads in part as follows:

"So accurately were the life and environment of India reproduced that the screen version of Mr. Kipling's story enfolds what amounts to a travelogue of India, in addition to a tensely dramatic presentation of a story which was prepared for the screen by the noted author himself.

"If a Burton Holmes has turned his cameras on the streets of Lahore he could not have secured a more accurate photographic record of this ancient city of Northern India.

"From the shop of the lowliest merchant to the fashionable Lahore Club, not the slightest detail of construction or equipment was neglected. The picture faithfully displays the strongest contrasts of the development of India by the British with the century-old customs of the natives.

"While an up-to-date steam locomotive is transporting heavy steel beams to the bridge head, an antiquated wooden wheel, belted with earthen cups and kept in motion by a bullock, lifts water from the well at the native dwelling.

"In the street scenes of the production tourists are seen riding in Victorias and phaetons while the native still slings to his rude oxcart with its clumsy wooden wheels. In striking contrast to the modern sign of the apothecary shop is the cast of Ganesh, the God of the Threshold, which appears over the door of the Hindu dwelling."

Ferguson Will Manage Motion Picture Life

Lee S. Ferguson, who launched Franchise, the semi-monthly Associated First National publication, and edited it for six months, has bought an interest in Motion Picture Life, the exhibitors' new co-operative service magazine, 47 West 42nd street. He resigned from First National, effective June 1, to assume the general management of Motion Picture Life, of which Louis Marangella is business manager. Another executive of the organization is Eugene Clifford, Jr., who was until recently in the publicity department of First National.

Vitagraph's superb production of David Belasco's famous stage play presents Catherine Calvert in the stellar role. It has many advantages over its stage predecessor, for it was made in the exact locale described in the story, on a stage that is nature itself. The spoken drama is limited in its ability to convey ideas that the film visualizes in dramatic scenes.

Depicting one of the most interesting and intensely dramatic periods in American history, with a clean, sweet love story interwoven in a background of war, the production has a theme that will appeal to all. Great care and discretion have been exercised in producing the picture. There is just enough of the war of the rebellion to set the story, and not enough to convey the horror of those stirring days. The camera work in these scenes with the war background is remarkable. The bell scene, a spectacle for which "The Heart of Maryland" will always be known, is handled in a capable manner, but though this was the big scene in the play, the picture carries many of equal importance. All in all, the production grips the attention from the first and holds it throughout. Pictures help to cover the lapses of time and change of place and some of the illustrated titles are real works of art.

Miss Calvert was never seen to greater advantage than as Maryland Calvert and her work throughout is practically beyond criticism. Crane Wilbur handles the role of Alan Kendrick in a masterly manner, while Victoria White, Marguerite Sanchez, Jane Jennings, William Collier, Jr., Ben Lyon and Felix Krembs all deserve mention.

Film Given Extended B'way Run

"Woman God Changed" Moved from Rivoli to Rialto

THE popular interest in "The Woman God Changed," the Cosmopolitan Production which had a pre-release showing at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, and the Colonial Theatre, Boston, is reported to have been so great, that the pre-release showing in New York has been extended, and the picture moved from the Rivoli Theatre to the Rialto Theatre in New York, Sunday May 29th.

The New York World began its review of "The Woman God Changed" as follows:

"We peer into the future of motion picture production when we chance to behold so gripping and so fascinating a cinemaplay as that presented this week at the Rivoli under the title. 'The Woman God Changed.' For the Cosmopolitan Company has given to the screen a finished drama of powerful personal appeal, one which sets us thinking about our own conduct and that of those about us. One which certainly will awaken many a lazy conscience and remind it of tolerance, of sympathy and of consideration of others." After describing the story and praising highly the acting of Seena Owen, E. K. Lincoln, Lillian Walker, Henry Sedley, Paul Nicholoson and Joseph Smiley, the reviewer says:

"The direction of 'The Woman God Changed' is superbly handled by Robert G. Vignola. The scenic designing and the outdoor island pictures are far better than the average seen in motion picture plays from week to week. Special credit is due Miss Owen and Mr. Lincoln. For the sensible course the story takes, as well as the beauty of photography and the realistic action of the court-room scenes, there is much to be praised. . . . When we consider the quality of legitimate stage plays that come to Broadway and remain throughout the season and the following summer, doing capacity business all the while, we wonder why such a picture as this could not do likewise. It ought to remain at the Rivoli for months."

Harriette Underhill, critic of "The New York Tribune," writes of "The Woman God Changed:"

"'The Woman God Changed' is one of the most interesting pictures of the year because it has novelty to recommend it. Not only has it a pure plainclothes man, but it has a plot which has not been used before so far as we know, and Robert Vignola has directed it in such a forceful way that it is fascinating right from the start. From the moment the court-room scene was flashed on the screen no one in the theatre coughed, moved around nor whispered. It is a gripping picture and Mr. Vignola certainly belongs in the very small list of directors with imaginations. The story, done differently, might simply have become claptrap on the screen.. . . . Seena Owen plays the dancing girl who murdered her protector when he wavered in his affection, and she plays it beautifully. E. K. Lincoln is nicer than we ever saw him as McCarthy, the high-minded detective."

Eileen Percy is Ready With New Comedy

Among forthcoming Fox productions is one that gives Eileen Percy opportunity to revel in one of the most delightful comedy subjects ever entrusted to her, according to Fox officials. The new production is made under the working title, "The Canyon Kid." W. E. Spencer provided the story of the film, and Philo McCullough, who used to do some of the love "fixing" in Fox films himself, makes his bow in this feature as a Fox director.

Ince's "Mother o'Mine" for Release June 5

Thomas H. Ince's drama of today, "Mother O'Mine," which Associated Producers, Inc., has scheduled for general release on June 5, is said by that company to be one of the finest expositions of mother love that the screen has ever seen.

"Mother O'Mine," directed by Fred Niblo under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince, is an adaptation by C. Gardner Sullivan, of Charles Belmont Davis' novel, "The Octopus." At the time it was published a few years ago it created a sensation in literary circles and was considered the high water mark of contemporary literature. The Ince stamp is also evident in the superb cast which includes such well known players as Lloyd Hughes, Betty Ross Clark, Betty Blythe, Joseph Kilgour, Claire McDowell, Andrew Robson and Andrew Arbuckle.

Marion Davies Starts New Production

Marion Davies, the Cosmopolitan star, has started production on a new picture under the direction of Albert Capellani. Miss Davies' new picture is entitled "The Young Diana" from the story of the same name by Marie Corelli that appeared serially in Hearst's Magazine in 1917-18. It is an interesting tale of English high society life for which Miss Corelli has an international reputation.

In Miss Davies' cast are Forrest Stanley, who plays her leading man and Pedro de Cordoba, who has the role of the heavy.

New Changes in Realart Studio Personnel

In an industry which is notable for the frequency with which the entire personnel of the producing units change around, Realart points out that it may claim for itself a record. In the eight pictures that Maurice Campbell has produced in the past thirteen months, six of them have been made with one star, Bebe Daniels, and the entire group of prop-men, elcctricians, assistants, cameramen, etc., that started with Campbell thirteen months ago are turning out Realart pictures today.

The Bebe Daniels pictures are "Oh, Lady, Lady," "She Couldn't Help It," "Ducks and Drakes," "Two Weeks With Pay," "The March Hare" and "One Wild Week."

Goldwyn Production News

E. Mason Hopper to Direct Moore in Photo Comedy by Rupert Hughes

E. MASON HOPPER has been assigned to direct the next Tom Moore picture for Goldwyn, "From the Ground Up," an original screen comedy by Rupert Hughes, written expressly for the Irish star. The author prepared the continuity as wall as writing the scenario. Work upon it began the latter part of the week.

Frank Lloyd and the company acting in "The Man from Lost River," Katherine Newlin Burt's first story written directly for the screen, left this week for Huntington Lake in the Sierra mountains to film the story. The only members of the cast so far announced are: House Peters, Allan Forrest and Fritzi Brunette.

Director Reginald Barker will turn the Llewllyn Iron Works of Los Angeles into a motion picture plant soon for "The Poverty of Riches," by Leroy Scott.

Will Rogers and his, director Clarence Badger, are cutting and titling "A Poor Relation," the film version of Edward E. Kidder's famous old comedy, photography on which was completed last week. Rogers' previous picture, "Doubling for Romeo," a screen story by Elmer L. Rice, was shown in preview at a Los Angeles theatre on Tuesday night and was greeted by continuous laughter.

Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund of America, visited vice-president Abraham Lehr at the studio on Wednesday and found the Goldwyn authors and actors eager to cooperate in the big festival which he is arranging to be given for the benefit of the Actors' Fund at the Beverly Hills Speedway on June 4th.

Frank Loyd Starts His Twelfth for Goldwyn

Frank Lloyd, who is one of Goldwyn's two featured directors, has just begun work on his twelfth production for that organization. It is "The Man from Lost River," an original screen story by the popular novelist, Katherine Newlin Burt.

Among Mr. Lloyd's early pictures for Goldwyn are "The World and Its Woman," starring Geraldine Farrar; Rex Beach's Alaskan fisheries story, "The Silver Horde"; four photoplays starring Pauline Frederick—"The Loves of Letty," "The Woman in Room Thirteen," "Roads of Destiny," and "Madame X." It was the power, skill and dramatic insight which he displayed in filming "Madame X" which won him the coveted featured position. Goldwyn's other featured director is Reginald Barker.

Three of Lloyd's featured productions are scheduled for release on Goldwyn's fall list—"The Invisible Power," "The Grim Comedian" and "The Man from Lost River."

"Wild Goose" Attracts Favorable Comment

Cosmopolitan Producers reports that its picture, "The Wild Goose," which is scheduled for general release by Paramount on June 5th, has been attracting favorable comment wherever it has been shown. The picture is based on Gouverneur Morris' novel of the same title and deals with the subject of divorce and the disposition of the child, a problem which has become one of the foremost questions of the United States. Seizing upon the timeliness of the theme presented in the picture, ministers have in some instances tied up their sermons on the topic of divorce with the highly dramatic story presented in the picturization of "The Wild Goose." The picture itself does not sermonize but unfolds a story "thrilling with emotion adventure."

Albert Capellani directed the production. Donnah Darrell wrote the scenario. Mary MacLaren, Holmes E. Herbert and Norman Kerry play the leading roles in a capable cast which includes Dorothy Bernard, Rita Rogan, the five-year-old child actress, Joseph Smiley, Mrs. Lucia Backus Segar and D. J. Flanagan.

Irene Castle Picture in Production

Director Edwin Hollywood, who is to direct Irene Castle in a series of productions for Hodkinson release, announces that the first production is now well under way. This picture is tentatively titled "A Broadway Bride," and has been adapted to the screen by Eve Unsell from an original story by Clarence Buddington Kelland which appeared in "Everybody's Magazine."

Opposite the star will be seen Ward Crane. Mr. Hollywood has chosen Charles Gerard for a prominent role in the production. The balance of the cast will shortly be announced.

Universal Industrial Democracy at Fort Lee

AN interesting report of the progress made in six months by the Industrial Democracy at the Universal Laboratory in Fort Lee, N. J., has been issued by Universal. The plan was started last October. Since then waste has been cut down more than fifty per cent, tardiness and absence except for illness have almost ceased; the quality of production has been improved, and the quantity of production has increased, while in addition to the increased wages, the employes are earning a five per cent additional bonus which may possibly be enlarged.

Carl Laemmle, R. H. Cochrance and Irving Thalberg were present at a mass meeting held by the laboratory employes last week. Mr. Laemmle in his address, expressed his appreciation of the workings of the Industrial Democracy, and spoke in high praise of the new spirit of co-operation which has come into existence.

Keaton Scores in "Hard Luck" at California

"Hard Luck," in which Buster Keaton is featured, has been hailed by the San Francisco papers as the funniest comedy that the Metro comedian has yet made. The criticisms were made during the recent showing of "Hard Luck" at the California Theatre, San Francisco. Says Gerald L. Dillon of the San Francisco Bulletin:

"'Hard Luck,' which introduces the side-splitting Buster in two reels of genuine humor, displays him as the coming comedian of the screen, if he has not already arrived."

No less commendatory was the criticism in the Chronicle:

"It's 'Hard Luck' for Buster Keaton, but good luck for the California audiences this week. The two-reel comedy which the solemn faced funmaker contributes to the California programme is perhaps the funniest thing he has ever done . . . Anyone who can sit throughout the last fifty feet of 'Hard Luck' without a heartfelt howl of laughter carries his own blue laws with him." The Examiner also hails this comedy as "about the best that Buster Keaton has made."

Hugo Ballin Completes Third for Hodkinson

Hugo Ballin's new picture for Hodkinson release, which was made under the title, "Ave Maria," has been completed. The release title will be "The Journey's End." A statement from the Hodkinson headquarters declares that this picture "is the first serious drama which has ever been made without a single subtitle from beginning to end." Mabel Ballin and Wyndham Standing are seen in the leading roles. George Bancroft, well known on the speaking stage, makes his screen debut in this picture.

Three Prize Winners at Universal City

Three beauty and popularity competition winners who are making good at Universal City, reports the Universal Film Mfg. Co., are Gertrude Olmstead, Mary Philbin, and Joey McGreey.

Miss Olmstead won the Elks Beauty competition in Chicago, and is at present supporting Frank Mayo. Miss Philbin was second winner and has played in "The Blazing Trail" and "The Harbor Road." Miss McGreey is the winner of the Thomas H. Ince screen competition and is now appearing in Universal comedies.

Lichtman Sales Drive Soon

Sales Force of Associated Producers Ready for Action June 12

THE sales drive which general manager Al Lichtman of Associated Producers, Inc., has announced for the week of June 12 has roused his entire selling force to a high pitch of enthusiasm, reports that company. While the drive is not in any sense a contest to determine which branch office can do the biggest business, the branch managers themselves have chosen to consider it in that light. With every local manager and his staff getting set for the big week there is a promising outlook that the drive will bring out not only some rental records for the individual exchanges but also for the organization as a unit.

Mr. Lichtman's entire selling plan is complete and in the hands of every branch manager. The drive includes every branch office of Associated Producers, Inc., and covers the entire United States and Canada.

That the drive will prove highly successful is a foregone conclusion, according to general manager Lichtman. "This is a sales drive that is backed up by a 100 per cent product," said Mr. Lichtman. "We are not offering exhibitors promises—we are offering them as powerful an array of pictures as there is in the market. Among the pictures which exhibitors will have an opportunity to book during the drive, or at any other time for that matter, are: J. Parker Read's 'I Am Guilty,' starring Louise Glaum; Mack Sennett's 'Home Talent,' released May 22; Thomas H. Ince's 'Mother O' Mine," released June 6; Allan Dwan's 'A Broken Doll,' released June 12; Maurice Tourneur's 'The Foolish Matrons,' released June 19; J. L. Frothingham's 'The Ten Dollar Raise,' released June 26; and Mack Sennett's two great two-reel comedies, 'Made In The Kitchen,' and 'She Sighed By The Seaside.'"

Jack Gilbert to Star in Fox Pictures

The list of screen stars is shortly to have an addition in the person of Jack Gilbert, whom William Fox has elevated, and who will make his stellar debut in an important Fox production, plans for which are now under way.

One look at "Shame," a new Fox production made at Hollywood and which will be screened in New York ere long, convinced Fox officials that in Gilbert, who plays the lead, they had stellar material of more than ordinary promise. His promotion to the rank of star immediately followed.

Jack Gilbert is of the Jack Barrymore type, dark, black-haired and the possessor of an unusually expressive pair of dark brown eyes. He was born in Utah, and has been on the stage ever since he was a small boy. In fact, he was practically "born into the business," as the offspring of two of the country's oldest stock players.

Runaway Train Thriller for Educational

"Lyman H. Howe's Famous Ride on a Runaway Train," in the opinion of many the most bewildering screen novelty that has ever been produced, has been turned over to Educational Exchanges for distribution, and this picture, which has created a sensation in every one of the few showings it has had, will be ready for release about June 12.

"'A new type of screen novelty which gives its audience the biggest and most unexpected thrill it has ever had during a motion picture," wrote the critic of the New York Commercial, after he had seen the thriller at the Capitol Theatre, New York, where it was given a second presentation.

The picture combines comedy and thrills in a thoroughly enjoyable manner. Beginning with some ordinary scenes from the car windows and platforms, the camera suddenly is moved to the front of the train as the train begins to run away down a steep grade. With every mile the train increases its speed until bridges and tunnels are crossed or passed through in such rapid succession that it is almost impossible to count them.

The special musical score prepared by Mr. Rothapfel, making use of all the traps and odd instruments in the orchestra, added greatly to the feeling of reality as the audience more and more felt that it indeed was taking the wildest ride in the history of railroads.

Director Lloyd Starts New Goldwyn Picture

Frank Lloyd, who is one of Goldwyn's two featured directors, has just begun work on his twelfth production for that organization. It is "The Man from Lost River," an original screen story by Katherine Newlin Burt, author of "The Branding Iron" and "Snowblind," two successful western novels which Goldwyn has previously picturised.

Among Mr. Lloyd's early pictures for Goldwyn are "The World and Its Woman," starring Geraldine Farrar; Rex Beach's Alaskan fisheries story, "The Silver Horde;" four photoplays starring Pauline Frederick, "The Loves of Letty," "The Woman in Room Thirteen," "Roads of Destiny" and "Madame X."

Wide Bookings for the Tony Sarg Almanac

George R. Meeker, general manager of Tony Sarg's Almanac, has secured in less than five weeks a 52 weeks' booking at the Criterion theatre, New York, with the Rialto and Rivoli to follow; the Strand in Brooklyn, the Stanley Circuit in Philadelphia; Shea's Hippodrome in Buffalo; the California theatre in San Francisco; and other houses of equal importance scattered throughout the country. By the end of this week the entire territory of the United States and Canada will be closed. The foreign field is being looked after by the Inter-Ocean.

The third of the series in the Almanac is "Why They Love Cavemen" which will be presented for the first time on June 10th at the Criterion theatre, New York.

Imperial Productions to Star Cleo Madison

IMPERIAL PRODUCTIONS, a Delaware Corporation, has completed its plans for the production of six special features starring Cleo Madison whose contract with the Metro Pictures Corporation expires this month. These productions will be made and exploited under the personal supervision of Jesse J. Goldburg.

The plan of production will embrace novel departures from the procedure that has been followed heretofore, from the commencement of productions to the final cutting, titling and even to the point of exploitation. The stories chosen were first passed upon by both Mr. Goldburg and Miss Madison and then a complete synopsis submitted to a committee of five, none of whom having had any connection with motion pictures, one being a professor of dramatic instruction at a University, another the head of a publishing company, the third a noted art dealer, the fourth a producer of dramatic productions who has heretofore kept aloof from photo-plays, and the fifth a minister.

Imperial Productions have opened offices at 112 West 44th St. The first release, the title of which has not been finally selected, will be completed and ready for distribution August 15th. The source of distribution has not been determined upon.

Work is Completed on "Nothing Like It"

Al Christie has finished the production of "Nothing Like It," the comedy that will head the new Christies in Educational's releases this summer. "Nothing Like It" will start the series off with a bang. The leading players will include Dorothy Devore, Eddie Barry, Helen Darling, Earl Rodney, Eugene Corey, Ward Caulfield, and Al Haynes, and among the scenes will be a small town opera house, the Nile River, with "real water," and a chariot race with "real horses."

"Oh Buddy!" has been selected as the title for the comedy to follow "Nothing Like It."

"Four Horsemen" Nears 166th Performance

Keeping pace with record of the famous novel of Vicente Blasco Ibanez, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," the Metro screen version of this story will have its 166th performance at the Astor Theatre, Saturday, equalling the present number of editions of the book.

With its showings in Los Angeles, Pittsburg, Detroit, and Chicago in addition to the New York presentation, it is estimated by the Metro officials that close onto three quarters of a million people have already seen this dramatic screen translation of the Ibanez book.

Constance Binny's new Realart release is "Such a Little Queen," a picturized version of a successful play

Realart Announces Release

"Such a Little Queen" by Pollock Has Constance Binney as the Star

FOLLOWING "The Land of Hope" with Alice Brady, Realart announces that their next release will be "Such a Little Queen" with Constance Binney as the star in the title role. This is the Channey Pollock story that caused considerable comment at the time that it was introduced on the stage at the Hackett Theatre, and was the first vehicle to bring Elsie Ferguson before the public as a star.

The story concerns the trials and tribulations attendant upon the love affairs of the diminutive Queen Anne Victoria, of Gzbfernigambia, and her royal finance, Stephen, King of Hetland. They are forced to abandon their kingdoms by a revolution and come to the Western Hemisphere where their difficulties are increased by the development of unforeseen circumstances. In the screen adaptation of the story all the delicious humor of the original is said to have been preserved and taken advantage of. The scenario was prepared by Clarkson Miller and Lawrence McCloskey.

Constance Binney plays the role of the little queen, and she is said to do some of the best work of her career in this part. Vincent Coleman plays opposite Miss Binney in the role of Stephen of Hetland. Other important roles are played by J. H. Gilmore and Frank Losee. Completing the cast are Roy Fernandez, Jessie Ralph, J. R. O. Perkins, Betty Carpenter and Chub himself, a Boston bull-terrier.

Pickford Picture Is Popular

"THROUGH the Back Door," the latest Mary Pickford production released by United Artists, is proved a triumph, announces that company. Hiram Abrams, President of United Artists, has received no end of congratulatory telegrams and letters from exhibitors upon the success of the production.

One example of exhibitor enthusiasm is the message from Jake Lourie, of Boston, who wired Mr. Abrams, as follows: "Am playing 'Through the Back Door' day and date in Modern, Beacon and Park theatres. Big crowd waiting outside all the time but I can't get them in. The people inside won't go out. They all want to stay and see it twice."

From the Fenray theatre of Martins Ferry, Ohio, Mr. L. Eick, wired as follows: "'Through the Back Door' universallly pleasing. It presents Mary Pickford in all the charm and peculiar talent that has made her name supreme in the cinema world. The exquisite blending of humor and pathos from a harmonious role that is a delight to behold. This is truly one of her greatest works."

The public also has accepted this production as the most enjoyable of its type that Miss Pickford has ever made.

Actress Reverts to Her Baptismal Name

Every woman has a right to change her mind and every girl her name, for one of two reasons—marriage or the stage. But it is not often that you find an actress, well-known under her stage name reverting to her baptismal name. However, Miss "Marion May" exercising her feminine rights has decided to be known henceforth professionally, not as "Marion May," but under her own name of Nadja Ostrovska.

Addition Being Made to Realart Studios

More evidences of Realart's vigorous two year growth is shown by the building activities on the West Coast. A new dressing-room building of one story, covering nearly 5,000 square feet, is just being completed. The addition will provide 17 rooms; 4 of them 12 x 24 feet, for the use of extra people; and 13 smaller single rooms, each provided with lights, running water and all conveniences.

The new scenario addition, providing several roomy offices, has been completed and is ready to occupy. The new scene docks, built as part of the new stage and as anchorage for the diffusers over it, are completed and in use, the whole addition having an area of 7,000 square feet.

You will be glad to know that your special feature subject, "BLACK BEAUTY," proved a very great financial success at my theatre.

For the first time in six years, I broke the policy of my theatre by playing "BLACK BEAUTY" one entire week. We never played a feature more than three days.

I am pleased to say that "BLACK BEAUTY" not only filled my house but a large crowd filled my lobby and stood in line outside the theatre, every one of the six nights the picture was playing.

Apart from the satisfactory box-office receipts, almost the largest in six years, I feel that "BLACK BEAUTY" has created a good will for my theatre, as never before have I shown a picture which gave such entire general satisfaction or more favorable comment.

Besides, a great many people visited the house who seldom ever come to a theatre in this part of the city.

"BLACK BEAUTY" is a picture which everybody should like and every exhibitor be proud to show. Every theatre should make very big money with it as I did.

Yours truly,
J. C. BRADY,
Proprietor,
MADISON THEATRE,
TORONTO.

A STAR WHO IS SOLD 100% TO THE PUBLIC!

Harold Lloyd IS!

We know it. Anyone who is familiar with the facts has to admit it. Everyone who has ever seen a Lloyd feature comedy shown before a theatre audience knows it!

How many stars, feature or comedy, can you say that of? Mighty few. The fingers of one hand will enumerate them. And time and again, in competition with others of that chosen few, Harold Lloyd has proven the greater attraction!

"A whirlwind of laughter through to the finish," says the Cleveland Plain Dealer of one of the Lloyds; "clean, wholesome, genuine entertainment with laughs in rapid succession," says the Cleveland News of another; "in competition with first class opera in one house; a highly thought of feature in another, Harold Lloyd has packed my house at 8:30," says Wm. C. McIntyre of the Rose Theatre, Fayetteville, N. C.; "my patrons tell me that they had rather see Harold Lloyd than any other screen comedian and I am in business to give them what they want to see," says John Thornton of the Liberty Theatre, Electra, Texas; and we have told you frequently what the biggest exhibitors have said of his pulling power.

Forget the length of the Lloyd comedies. Rate Lloyd where he belongs, at the top of the topmost stars in the topmost features!

In the centre is a scene from "Torchy's Millions," a Torchy comedy, also an Educational release. Johnny Hines, the star, is in the oval.

Hutchison Rescues Ann Hastings in Rapids

According to a report from the Pathe home-office, Ann Hastings and Charles Hutchison had a narrow escape during the filming of one of the scenes for the serial, "Hurricane Hutch," in the Ausable Chasm, New York. The star, according to the account, had leaped into the rapids and was followed by Miss Hastings who was required by the script to drive her horse into the rapids in an effort to "rescue" Hutchison, playing the hero role. Overcome by the strong current Miss Hastings and her mount suddenly disappeared from view. Hutchison, it is stated, abandoned himself to the current and succeeded in finally locating Miss Hastings in the whirlpool and bringing her ashore considerably downstream. The girl sustained a badly wrenched ankle, but Hutchison escaped uninjured.

New Torchy Series Announced

JOHNNY HINES, who has taken his place among the foremost of the country's screen comedians, will be featured in a second series of Torchy Comedies through the coming year. The first picture of the new releases, "Torchy's Promotion," has been finished.

This news is contained in an announcement made this week by E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., that Educational has made a contract with the Master Films, Inc., for a second series of "Torchy's."

In fact, the promise of C. C. Burr that Master Films would put into the second series more effort and expense, is fulfilled in the first of the new subjects, with the result that "Torchy's Promotion" is a stronger comedy than any of the first releases, declares a statement from Educational Films' home offices.

"When we took on the first series of Torchy Comedies," said Mr. Hammons, "they were an unknown quantity. It is true that they had in their favor the fact that they were adapted from the well known stories by Sewell Ford which had appeared for several years in big newspapers throughout the United States and Canada, and in national magazines like the Saturday Evening Post, and our implicit faith in the producing organization, but the comedies themselves were not known to exhibitors or the public Like many screen productions, their value was indeterminate until they had been shown to the public."

"The cooperation which we have received from Mr. Burr in particular, and Master Films in general," declared Mr. Hammons, "has led us to make a new contract with Master Films for this second series. True to his promise, Mr. Burr has put into the first of the new pictures more effort and additional expenditures.

"Johnny Hines has become one of the best liked of film comedians. But back of all efforts of the actors must be an organization of solid, substantial people, imbued with the very spirit of the play. Such is the type of organization which has been erected with painstaking care by Mr. Burr."

With a year's effort for a background for Torchy Comedies, Mr. Burr started this work by securing exclusive rights to the Sewell Ford stories, which have millions of readers in newspapers all over the country. Then he went on to build. Johnny Hines was selected as the typical Torchy, and by the time ten stories had been released, Mr. Burr had surrounded himself with a staff of expert co-workers

In addition to Johnny Hines and Dorothy Leeds, who plays opposite Hines, Mr. Burr has surrounded himself with a staff including James Dealey, studio manager, Roy Vaughn, cinematographer; Harry Kiefer, property room manager and Charles Hines, assistant director. A considerable share of the success of these comedies is attributable to the work of Rollo Shorp, assistant to Johnny Hines.

"Torchy's Promotion" is a comedy of fast action, full of screamingly funny situations. Torchy, the beloved office boy of the flaming red head, is discharged by the villainous general manager. Quick of wit and ready at all times for a fight or a frolic, Torchy soon gets back on the job. Sent on a wild goose chase for a fake contract by his persecuting manager, he accidently meets the Big Boss traveling "incog," and Torchy "walks home with the bacon."

New Reeve Series Offered

Educational to Have Weird Two-Reel Comedies Starring Pauline

A RARE combination of writers and actors has begun work recently on what promises to be an unique series of comedies to be released during the coming year by Educational Exchanges.

Here is the line-up: Arthur B. Reeve, the American Conan Doyle, and the creator of the Craig Kennedy detective stories, writing the plays. Dr. J. Robert Pauline, internationally known hypnotist, long a favorite on the stage both in this country and in Europe, playing the part of "Oliver Optix," the hypnotist-detective, the character created by Reeve's pen especially for this series. Adrian Gil Spear, artist and motion picture comedy producer, collaborating with Reeve in the creation of this new screen character and supervising the production of the plays featuring Dr. Pauline.

There will be twelve of the new comedies, which will be produced by the Invincible Photoplays, Inc., and will be known as "Cameo Comedies."

"I have 'gone into the silences' out here at my thinking shop," writes Reeve from his studio at Northport, L. I., to E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, "and Gil Spear and myself are knee deep in manuscripts for the series of movie stories for Dr. J. Robert Pauline. I can say with all modesty that I believe these stories are among my best works, if not the very best."

Among the earliest of the new "Cameo Comedies" will be "Spoofing Spooks," a portrayal of the events that follow when a man who has gone into hiding and is believed to be dead, appears in person and tries to pass himself off as a spirit, and "Fixing Fakers."

The cast of the Cameo Comedies is not yet complete, but it is understood that Dr. Pauline will be supported by Dorothy Mackaill, who made a success in Torchy Comedies, also released by Educational, and by Helen O'Neil, the Irish Carmen.

"Foolish Wives" Completed

Stroheim Cutting Huge Universal Production—Cost Over $1,000,000

A DAY which a whole lot of people, and most of all Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, have been impatiently awaiting, has at last arrived. The day is May 19th. The reason why this is considerable day is that "Foolish Wives," the gigantic production on which Erich Von Stroheim has been working for ten months, was finished on that day. The news was contained in a telegram to the chief, and the proof of the huge amount which has been spent on this accurate and splendid reproduction of Europe's most sumptuous vacationing center, Monte Carlo, was received a few days later in the regular weekly cost sheet.

The Universal cost tabulation shows that on May 13th $1,006,-681.10 had been expended. This, of course, will be greatly increased before the picture can be offered to exhibitors. The ordinary selling percentage of a picture is 35 per cent., and to this must also be added the cost of cutting, titling, prints and exploitation supplies. In acual dollars and cents this picture will stand the Universal a million and a half dollars before a dollar is taken in.

In addition to the huge buildings which were erected on the Universal City property, extensive sets had to be put up at Monterey and at West Lake, where the final scenes of the picture were taken. These outside sets alone accounted for $250,000 or more, of the money which went into this production, and the 2,000 extras which were used on all three of these locations counted for $138,477 more. The item of lighting is not as yet completed, the total so far received amounting to $73,343.53.

Mr. Von Stroheim has already started to cut the 300,000 feet of negative down to workable proportions. His assistant directors and two of the cameramen who were on the job with him will be engaged in this work for some time to come. "Foolish Wives" will not be released until some time in September.

Vitagraph Busy on Coast

"Wallingford" Story to Be Ready Soon; Other Units Are All Active

VITAGRAPH'S production activities at its Western studios at Hollywood, California, are being speeded up every day, it is reported, and within three weeks' actual capacity production will have been reached. Pretentious plans are now materializing that promise a strong and interesting collection of releases for this company in the carly fall.

"The Son of Wallingford," Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester's personally directed super-feature will be finished within the next couple of weeks. The authors will take the negative to the Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn for editing. Mr. Chester is enthusiastic over the results he has obtained and promises to have one of the biggest pictures of years.

William Duncan and Edith Johnson, who are now finishing their special production, "Where Men Are Men," are to continue in pictures of this special production character, and these will probably be of about the same length as "Where Men Are Men"—seven reels.

Another Curwood special is now being prepared by David Smith, one of Vitagraph's biggest directors. Antonio Moreno's new feature, "The Secret of the Hills," a story of romance among intrigue which fits this handsome young star exceptionally well, is now being completed by Chester Bennett, the director.

Larry Semon is constantly producing a two-reel special comedy, and is reported as doing the best work of his career. His next is "The Fall Guy." Larry's latest actual release played two of Broadway's biggest theatres last week, day and date. Jimmy Aubrey is now at work with his director and continuity writer on the first comedy of a new series.

Earle Williams has returned from a brief vacation at Coronado and will start a new production as soon as continuity is prepared.

Gloria Swanson Starts "The Shulamite"

Gloria Swanson started this week on "The Shulamite" for Paramount with Mahlon Hamilton as leading man. The cast also includes Russell Simpson and Lillian Leighton. "The Shulamite" was scenarized by J. E. Nash from the play and novel—the former by Edward Knoblock and Claude Askew, the latter by Alice and Claude Askew.

R-C Pictures in Big Cities

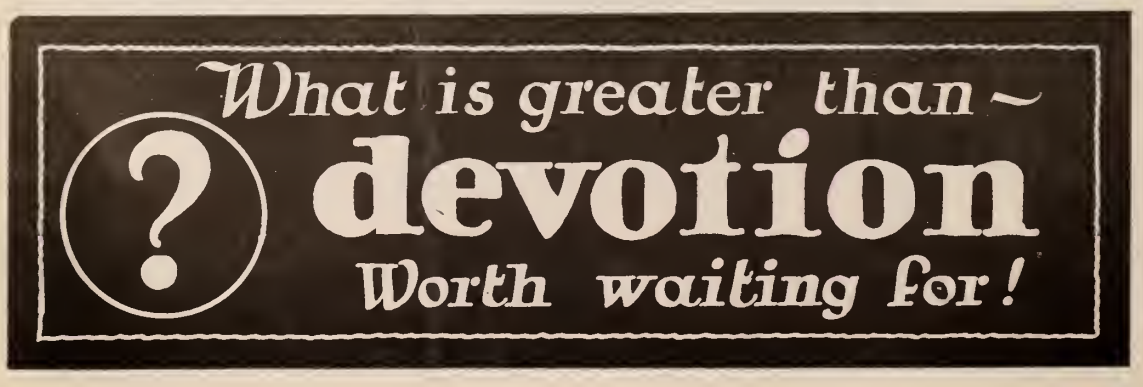
Many First-Run Bookings Closed for Theatres in Important Towns

FURTHER evidence of exhibitor interest in Robertson-Cole productions is provided in the recent first run bookings in important cities, reported from the various branch offices.

"Black Roses," with Sessue Hayakawa in the leading role and "Salvage" with Pauline Frederick, are setting a fast pace. The frequent booking of these productions reflects again the growing popularity of these stars.

"Black Roses," for instance, has been booked for first runs in both the Criterion and City Square theaters, Atlantic City, Robertson-Cole getting two first runs in the beach resort. "Salvage" was paid a similar compliment by Edward O' Keefe, proprietor of the Atlantic City theatres.

The Strand theatre of Flint, Mich. has landed first runs on "Black Roses," "Beach of Dreams" and "If Women Only New," a group of R-C subjects. Milwaukee also will see "Beach of Dreams" and "Nobody's Kid," the Mae Marsh production at the Toy theatre while the Crystal theatre of the same city has booked for first run the Gasnier production "Good Women" and "See My Lawyer," with T. Roy Barnes. "See My Lawyer" and "What's A Wife Worth?" also go to the Branford theatre of Newark for first screening.



"Beach of Dreams" and "Nobody's Kid" also have been booked for first run by the Robbins Amusement Company for their Majestic theatre at Utica while the Alhambra landed "Seven Years Bad Luck," the Max Linder subject. "What's A Wife Worth?," the William Christy Cabanne production, has been picked by the Savoy theatre, Syracuse, for first run.

The popularity of Robertson-Cole subjects is increasing rapidly on the Coast and in San Francisco. In Oakland, for example, the M'Arthur theatre, conducted by J. J. M'Arthur, will screen "Seven Years Bad Luck," "The First Born" and "Black Roses," for first run. The San Francisco office also reports the booking of "813," the Arsene Lupin story, by the College theatre, San Francisco, for first run and "One Man in a Million" for first screening at the Tivoli theatre.

"Three Musketeers" to Run on Broadway

HIRAM ABRAMS, president of the United Artists Corporation, has just closed a contract which provides for an extended engagement of "The Three Musketeers" at the Lyric theatre, New York City, in the fall. It is stated that a $2.50 top price will prevail. "The Three Muskeeters" is now being produced on the West Coast with Douglas Fairbanks in the leading role.

It is also announced that the presentation of "The Three Musketeers" at the Lyric in the fall will be staged by Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Strand, New York City. The picture will be about ten reels in length and, according to Mr. Abram's report, will be the greatest screen production yet made by Fairbanks.

Educational to Release 12 All-Star Comedies

TWELVE all-star two-reel comedies are announced as the latest acquisition made by Educational Film Exchanges.

This new line of comedies, being produced by the California Production Corporation will be distributed by Educational during the next year, the pictures to be released one each month.

The all-star cast that will play in these extraordinary comedies include, so far, such well-known actors and actresses as Louise Fazenda, Chester Conklin, Neely Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, Eddy Baker and Baby John Henry, Jr. The entire group of players will appear in each of the pictures, which are to be known as "Punch Comedies."

"The Love Egg," the first of the new series, was brought to New York recently and shown before a private company of motion picture critics and distributors.

Edgar Comedies Liked by Japanese Fans

The Movie Club, of Tokio, Japan, is the latest fan organization to express their appreciation of the Edgar Comedies, which are released by Goldwyn. In a recent letter to the Goldwyn director of publicity, this club requested that pictures of Goldwyn stars be forwarded, and stated that the club considered the Edgar Comedies especially high class.

Max Linder has sent invitations for the New York preview of his new five-reel comedy "Be My Wife," which will take place at 8:30 Tuesday evening, June 7, at Aeolian Hall, 34 West 43d street, New York City. The French comedian has arranged something novel for the premiere screening of this picture, the nature of which he refuses to divulge, intimating that everybody who attends will be highly pleased.

Current Paramount Issues

"The Wild Goose" and "The Traveling Salesman" Set for June 5

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE in "The Traveling Salesman," a picturization of James Forbes' play, and the Cosmopolitan production, "The Wild Goose," directed by Albert Capellani, are announced as the Paramount pictures released June 5.

"The Traveling Salesman," was directed by Joseph Henabery. Shown on Broadway recently, this picture was declared by metropolitan critics to be full of good comedy. Because of the immense popularity of the Forbes play on the speaking stage, it is argued by Paramount officials that people will be naturally attracted to film theatres to see this play on the screen. One of the funniest incidents in the picture is the poker, which also was one of the most interesting features of the spoken play.

"The Wild Goose" is from a story written by Governeur Morris which was published serially in Heart's Magazine, and later published in book form. The production was made by Albert Capellani. The cast includes Mary MacLaren, Holmes E. Herbert, Dorothy Bernard, Joseph Smiley, Norman Kerry, Rita Rogan, Lucia Backus Segar and others. The picture has received a tremendous amount of publicity in all of the Hearst newspapers throughout the country, in each of which the novelization of the picture has run serially.

"Dream Street" Booked by Comerford

Mr. E. Comerford, of the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, has booked the latest D. W. Griffith production, "Dream Street" for all his theatres including his houses in Scranton, Wilkes Barre, Pittston, Carbondale, Sunbury, Honesdale, Olyphant and Dunmore.

Pathe Names Releases Set for June 12th

PATHE announces its short-subjects scheduled for release the week of June 12. "Danger's Doorway" is the title of the seventh episode of "The Sky Ranger," the new Seitz serial in which June Caprice is co-starred with George B. Seitz. The fourteenth episode of the new Ruth Roland serial, "The Avenging Arrow," scheduled for release is "Shifting Sands." The current chapter is said to reveal further proof to admirers of Miss Roland that she is inexaustible in feats of physical strength and daring.

The title of the new Hal Roach comedy featuring "Snub" Pollard, which is scheduled for release on this date is "Where's the Fire?" Pollard appears as a fire chief in the comedy, which is said to be one of the funniest yet produced at the Hal Roach studios.

Pathe Review No. 107 presents a number of interesting subjects. "Tile Tales" is an insight into the manufacture of mosaic, or little tiles, and their different decorative uses. "Hold Your Horses" shows a few slow-motion examples produced by Novagraph of New York's Mounted Police in action. "Underneath the Big Top," the current Hy Mayer "Capitol Travelaugh," gives intimate views, humorously shown, of life behind the scenes in the circus; and "The Theft of the Rainbow" is an old Indian legend, telling the story of the pond lily, produced in exquisite Pathe-Color.

ABOUT PLAYERS

BETTY BLYTHE declares that her engagement, while playing the title role in "The Queen of Sheba," was one of the most delightful of her screen career. Miss Blythe is one of these few fortunate women possessed with beauty, ability, feeling, and a sunny disposition. She fairly radiates with the charm of being happy, contented and grateful for all the good things which have come to her in life, including her earned success.

It is not surprising, therefore, that she not only lives up to all the flattering information regarding her, given out by one Herbert Howe, her official press representative, but even surpasses his modest description of her beauty and charm. Miss Blythe has, also, the evidence of a great understanding of life in reality, as well as how to portray it upon the screen. While she does not indulge in temperament herself, she can understand it in others—even in the beast of burden assigned to carry her across the desert, in the giant photoplay dominated by her performance. "Every few feet the poor old camel would simply lie down" explained the beatiful "Queen." "It was exasperating—especially for the director. The camel had no regard for footage nor for his 'royal passenger.' But I could understand how he felt—away from his own country and his own kind. There are many times when one feels like 'lying down on the job' and if I were compelled to live away from California, and to 'act' when unhappy, I would probably indulge in temperament, too." Which illustrates Miss Blythe's consideration for the world at large, and accounts for her rapidly growing popularity as an artist and a woman.

Lule Warrenton, for many years a popular actress of the stage and screen, who made her first public appearance as a baby in arms, back in 1863, and who appears in George Loane Tucker's "Ladies Must Live," announces from her ranch, Virbert Lodge, that she has recently made a shipment of a thousand boxes of grape fruit, oranges, lemons, figs, dates, loquats, avocados, apricots, grapes and kumquats to Europe, via the Panama Canal, at 75 cents a box less than by rail routes.

Mrs. Warrenton, who has the leading feminine character role in "Ladies Must Live," hails from Michigan. In her early career she was a teacher of elocution in Notre Dame. She has played many Shakespearean roles, headed her own company, produced many childrens' plays, has acted, directed and written scenarios. She has not forsaken acting for fruit farming. It is a paying pastime.

Antonio Moreno has donated his pet speedster to the Actor's Fund Benefit, and it is to be raffled off at the pageant on June 4. The diminutive flivver, containing a motorcycle engine, attracted considerable attention when Moreno imported it from San Francisco. The star declared he would use it as a convenience against the no-parking laws, as it is possible to park the cootie roadster in a shop window while making purchases or having a shave.

The car will be displayed in a downtown window until the day of the pageant when Moreno will take it out to enter the race against Fatty Arbuckle. After this event it will be awarded to the person holding the prize ticket. Officials of the Benefit expect to realize several thousand dollars in the raffle.

Though Doris May and Wallace MacDonald were married only two weeks or so ago, it seems that everyone at the Coast was utterly convinced that they had been married for several months and were keeping it a secret.

"As a matter of fact," Mr. MacDonald confessed when interviewed at the Goldwyn studios a couple of days before the wedding, "when the rumor first started I hadn't even proposed to her. That was September, and I didn't ask her till December. Of course I met her long before that—a year ago last March. . . . And, yes, it's true, I asked her that very night if she were engaged. It was at a party in the Hollywood Hotel."

He pulled out a carefully sealed envelope.

"This is the marriage license," he said, smiling. "It's a funny thing. I just got the license to marry Doris May and now I come out here and propose, an hour later, to Sylvia Breamer!"

He smiled toward Miss Breamer, who is leading woman in "A Poor Relation."

"I think both my choices are good ones," he said.

Mrs. Reginald Barker, wife of the film director, celebrated her recovered strength after an illness of six months by calling for her husband at the studio the other day.

Mrs. Barker was Clara Williams before her marriage and is identified to thousands of pictureviewers as "Carmen of the Klondike," in which she starred under Reginald Barker's direction. She was one of the best known Thomas H. Ince-Triangle actresses. During her long illness Mrs. Barker regularly viewed films on a screen in her boudoir.

The Cause And The Consequences Of Rubye de Remer's Action.

People may fancy that the superfluous "e" of Rubye de Remer's first name is to be attributed to a caprice. They are right. At the age of ten Miss de Remer discovered that she and her two sisters, Sady and Lucy, had plebeian names. So she called a conference, that resulted in the three girls becoming Rubye, Lucy and Sadye as suited the dignity of their years. Miss de Remer little recked the orthographic consequences to the Ruby's of the nation. Since becoming a popular film star she has received innumerable letters from young sub-debs bearing the jewelled name, all announcing that they had adopted the "e."

George Walsh, upon the completion of the George Walsh special, written and directed by his brother Raoul Walsh, returned to New York from California, where the the picture was made. He is just as much a booster for li'l ol' New York, as the Hollywood enthusiasts are for their beloved California. Mr. Walsh states he is glad to be back, hopes to stay, thinks New York is the place to make pictures; thinks New York is the place, anyway. Opposite George Walsh will be seen Meriam Cooper, when "Serenade," the "Walsh" production, is released, by First National.

A play in which Charles Ray is not a country boy is now in production. In it Ray is a college youth. Mary Anderson plays opposite him.

Bessie Love recently won the dancing contest between various Los Angeles film stars and was awarded a large silver cup by Louis J. Gasnier.

Virginia Lee, with a favorable screen record to her credit, has departed from New York to join a motion picture company in Tulsa, Oklahoma, where productions starring Franklyn Farnum, and featuring Miss Lee, will be made. Miss Lee was selected for the series of pictures, after many aspiring applicants had been found wanting.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

FIRST hand information on the film situation in Germany and other European countries, will be obtained by William Desmond Taylor, Director of the coast lodge of Motion Picture Directors' Association, and world war veteran, who has booked passage on Mauretania for June 9th. He is about to leave the hospital where he underwent minor operations.

Primarily, Mr. Taylor is making the voyage at the recommendation of his physicians, but he will combine service with convalescence. He denies that he is vacationing or that he will make a picture at the London Lasky studios. He will remain abroad four weeks.

Mr. Taylor last set foot on the Mauretania gang plank in official capacity as an officer of British artillery, when the huge liner was operating as a hospital ship. Bon voyage!

Denison Clift, famous as a scenarist and director in Los Angeles, and formerly head of the William Fox scenario department, has, according to the London "Times," scored an emphatic hit with two productions in England, "The Diamond Necklace," by Guy de Maupassant, and "Demos," by George Gissing. It is announced that in the fall Mr. Clift will make pictures under his own name for England, the Continent and America.

"Demos," a great tragedy by the late George Gissing, has made a great impression upon the London picture trade. Denison Clift wrote his own scenario and produced the picture, which was trade shown at the London Palace on April 26th. Many celebrities were present, including Beatrice Harraden. Sir Rider Haggard led in the ovation that was given the presentation of the picture, and declared it faultlessly artistic, and the greatest British photoplay that has yet been made.

Mr. Clift declares that the greatest opportunities in the picture world today are abroad. He left Los Angeles last June for a world tour, but stopped in London to produce for Ideal Films, Ltd. His success has led to the establishing of productions bearing his own name, the first of which will be made this fall.

"American audiences want foreign subjects and atmosphere, as a relief from their own," says Mr. Clift. "But the pictures must be technically the equal of our best American films. My object is to produce great British and Continental subjects for an international market; and in these pictures the greatest artists abroad will appear. The atmosphere will be that of England, Southern France, Morocco and old Spain."

Ignace Jan Paderewski visited Reginald Barker while the Goldwyn producer was putting a very temperamental feminine star, aged fourteen months, through a scene in "The Poverty of Riches."

When the scene was completed the famous musician—who had generaled the armies of Poland—approached the film man.

"I shake hands with you," he uttered in eloquent sympathy.

The next time Victor Schertzinger wants a jazz band going full tilt while he is making a picture, Frank Lloyd says he earnestly hopes it will be on some other set than the one next to his. Lloyd likes music pretty well—but so, unfortunately, does Johnny Harron, who plays in Lloyd's production of "The Grim Comedian" for Goldwyn. Particularly does Johnny like jazz. And so entrancing was the jazz produced by the Schertzinger orchestra that Johnny was irresistably drawn to it.

Before the picture was finished Frank Lloyd found that he was usually minus an important member of the cast just at the time he was most needed. Half a dozen times a day a strong-armed emissary had to be dispatched to drag the young Johnny back on the job.

Can deafness be converted into a blessing?

Charles Taylor, veteran dramatist and director of Oliver Morosco's picture, "The Half Breed," offers convincing proof that it can. Living for years in the Great Silence, Mr. Taylor has made his affliction serve him.

Mr. Taylor's loss of hearing progressed gradually through torturing months following injury in a railroad accident. One day, unable to hear the band in a parade, which he saw, he realized the time had come when he had completely lost his hearing. "I had the world to myself from that moment," Mr. Taylor explained. "There were no distracting noises, and, ironically enough I found myself seeking out quiet places. It was then the great field of motion pictures was impressed upon me as an important factor. Although I had been writing for and producing on the stage for a score of years, I saw with new learning the value of action and situations. For to me, stage plays, had become motion pictures, too. I saw the need of building pictures that would 'talk' for themselves. The 'silent art.' to me, is most interesting."

In a picture starring William Desmond, under Fox banner, directed by Charles Giblyn, will be found Rosemary Theby. Miss Theby is working in two pictures at once, one an Emmett Flynn special, the other, the Giblyn production.

Robert G. Vignola, director of special productions for Cosmopolitan Paramount, is in the midst of his vacation, and has left Atlantic City for Hot Springs, Virginia, where he will endeavor to lay aside his thoughts along motion picture lines, and devote the greater part of his time to golf. Mr. Vignola put in a most strenuous year, including the direction of a series of notable pictures which include such well known box office attractions as "The World and His Wife," "The Passionate Pilgrim," "Straight is the Way," and his most recent release, "The Woman God Changed."

Mr. Vignola's last picture, not yet released, is "Enchantment," starring Marion Davies. To it he has devoted the best there is in him, and with the recommendation his former efforts assure, we may look for a picture such as we hear a great deal about, but seldom see.

George Archainbaud is one of the few Selznick directors now wielding the megaphone and is directing Eugene O'Brien in a new screen play under the working title of "Clay———" in which Ruth Dwyer will be seen as the leading woman.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last sixteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to February 5, 1921.

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

ALL DOLLED UP (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....MAR. 12
"Pleasing offering with the star in an ideal role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture, though we had only average business with it and it did not come up to my expectations as a box office attraction." "A nice little picture, with no special attraction. Gladys Walton scores again, as a pert little 'flapper,' and is gaining quite a following." "Dandy little picture. Had more than the usual business with it." "Good business attended this feature. Picture pleasingly done."

"Incredible plot, but has appealing moments."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good picture. Receipts poor." "Played this on a double bill with "Plaything of Broadway." The two make a pleasing program well liked by our patrons." "Rather weak as a drawing card. A good picture, but attractive only to a selective few. Just a fair house for the week."

AMATEUR DEVIL, AN (PARAMOUNT) BRYANT WASHBURN...MAR. 12
"A decidedly mediocre comedy with Washburn."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Two days to average business."

BARBARIAN, THE (PIONEER) MONROE SALISBURY.....FEB. 26
"Fine backgrounds but very little action."—M. P. News.

BARE KNUCKLES (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL.....MAR. 19

BARS OF IRON (STOLL FILM CORP.) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 19
"Just an ordinary production."—M. P. News.

"Fairly interesting, though would be more convincing if developed humorously."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A wonderful picture which sure did go 'over the top.' Brought large box office receipts and much satisfaction from the audiences." "Fairly good picture with average business." "A splendid picture, well made, well acted, beautifully staged, but for some reason or other it didn't pull them in and business was only average." "Clever story with many new angles which makes a very high class and interesting photoplay. Drew splendidly and we played to big business for the week." "Great story. Story good; closely knit—but Lewis Stone and Florence Vidor gripped the attention from start to finish. Stone's work immense." "Good picture, but not much drawing power."

BELOW THE DEADLINE (ASCHER PRODUCTIONS-STATE RIGHTS) WARNER-BIRON.....APR. 30
"A well made melodrama, full of action."—M. P. News.

BEYOND PRICE (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....MAY 21
"An inconsequential story not suited to Pearl White."—M. P. News.

BIG ADVENTURE, THE (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 23
"Simple heart interest picture carries some appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Poor picture which did not have much pulling power. Played to poor business." "Did more than well for us and pleased."

BIG PUNCH, THE (FOX) BUCK JONES.....FEB. 19
"Buck Jones as a minister; a dull picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good entertainment. Extra big business one day."

BIG TOWN IDEAS (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....MAY 28
"Rural comedy-drama is fairly amusing."—M. P. News.

BLACK ROSES (ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA.....APR. 30
"Hayakawa has entertaining mystery picture here."—M. P. News.

BLAZING TRAIL, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....MAY 7
"Some moments of interest in Mayo's latest."—M. P. News.

BLUSHING BRIDE, THE (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....MAR. 19
"Exceedingly weak; might have made a good Sunshine."—M. P. News.

"Wesley Barry saves the show."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played to a capacity house all week, aided by some unique exploitation. Eight Blackfeet Indians, first time off the reservation, a cowboy." "Disappointing. Not as clever as quartet, and the name Wesley Barry all served to attract much interest." "This picture is in no wise out of the ordinary. Business was only fair, though the fact that it was circus week was partly responsible."

BOYS WILL BE BOYS (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....MAY 28
"Quaintly humorous, simple story with Will Rogers."—M. P. News.

BRANDED SOUL, THE (STOLL-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 19
"Redemption story carries little appeal and is badly overacted."—M. P. News.

BREAKING POINT, THE (FROTHINGHAM-HODKINSON) BESSIE BARRISCALE.....FEB. 5
"More than a vehicle—a well-sustained marital drama."—M. P. News.

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS (PARAMOUNT) ROSCOE ARBUCKLE...FEB. 5
Exhibitor Comment—"Sure-fire winner. Pleased the audiences immensely. Box office returns much larger than usual." "Good comedy bringing the usual business." "This is a splendid picture and went over big with our audience. Played to large business for one week." "Capacity houses on opening Sunday in spite of heavy rain all afternoon and evening. A big winner with the public." "A great picture. It pleased my audiences, consequently the box office receipts were larger than usual." "'Fatty' went over in this picture in a surprising manner. Picture played to capacity for seven-day run." "Don't miss this one, a really big box office play." "Best box office returns in three months. Thoroughly pleased and people talked about it which brought increasing throngs." "Tickles 'em stiff—doing big." "This picture got plenty of laughs. An old favorite which is done over well in film form."

BURGLAR PROOF (PARAMOUNT) BRYANT WASHBURN.....FEB. 12
"Washburn's best one in a dog's age—a real comedy."—M. P. News.

"Spectacular production, but story is unimpressive,"—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Big production. Story not convincing. However, it is the best thing the star has done so far. Fair box office value." "Interest holding picture lavishly produced, but failed to pull during its run at this house and we played to poor business." "This picture flopped and was pulled off in middle of week run and another film substituted."

BUTTERFLY GIRL, THE (PLAYGOERS-PATHE) MARJORIE DAW.....JUNE 4
"Little entertainment in this weak and sugary story."—M. P. News.

CABINET OF DR. CALIGARI, THE (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST..APR. 16
"A radical departure; highly artistic and imaginative."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This powerful picture is very unusual and a distinct novelty to our patrons. Went over big during the week."

CHARMING DECEIVER, THE (VITAGRAPH) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Mild interest because of its conventional treatment."—M. P. News.

CHEATED LOVE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS.....MAY 28
"Carmel Myers has a gem in lifelike picture."—M. P. News.

CHICKENS (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....MAR. 26
"Forced comedy and hokum never ring the bell."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Brought average business. Fair picture." "Played this on the program with the Universal feature 'If Only Jim,' starring Harry Carey to two days of extra big business." "Not as good as previous McLean-May productions and the 'feminine half' of this combination was sadly missed. Still this picture was good and drew well." "Too weak even for the chickens. Wouldn't even stand on a double program as a comedy." "About the usual Douglas MacLean feature; good farce, but not up to '23½ Honrs' Leave.'"

"Interesting crook story with rich details and heart interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Splendid picture, but rather heavy for this time of year. People left theatre feeling oppressed. Big opening, however." "An out of the ordinary picture; had to keep it over a second week." "Splendid picture which gave Thomas Meighan, who is a favorite of our patrons, excellent opportunities to show his ability as an emotional actor. Played to big business." "They seemed to like this one and it brought good patronage." "Record-breaking crowds. Equaled our biggest specials in drawing power." "One of Thomas Meighan's best pictures; entertaining, attractive and is a good subject for exploitation. A good house all week." "Went big with us, both from audience standpoint and the way it drew."

CLOSED DOORS (VITAGRAPH) ALICE CALHOUN.....MAY 28
"Easily obvious picture carries mild interest."—M. P. News.

COINCIDENCE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 21
"Light, but breezy enough to get over."—M. P. News.

COLD STEEL (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....JUNE 4
"Good acting in this ordinary western."—M. P. News.

COLORADO (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....FEB. 19
"Mayo's latest strong in action."—M. P. News.

COLORADO PLUCK (WILLIAM RUSSELL).....MAY 28
"Has not the action they expect of this star."—M. P. News.

CONCERT, THE (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 5
"Another stage vehicle adaptation which flops."—M. P. News.

CONNECTICUT YANKEE IN KING ARTHUR'S COURT, A (FOX) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 12
"Mark Twain modernized in an appealing picture."—M. P. News.

COUSIN KATE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE.....FEB. 12
"Alice Joyce has strong personality in 'Cousin Kate.'"—M. P. News.

DANGEROUS MOMENT, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS...APR. 16
"A light and pleasing romance of Greenwich Village."—M. P. News.

DECEPTION (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 30
"Historical drama is colorful and impressive."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Went very big. Tremendous production."

DESPERATE YOUTH (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....APR. 30
"Goes back to the early days of pictures, but is entertaining."—M. P. News.

"A complex story, well acted and entertaining because of action."—M. P. News.

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

DOLLAR A YEAR MAN, THE (PARAMOUNT) ROSCOE ARBUCKLE APR. 9
"Weak humor and hokum make this a poor effort."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A sure-fire attraction, which brought extra large box office receipts." "Fatty Arbuckle always a sure bet and this picture proves to be no exception. Capacity house all week." "Unfortunately, Fatty Arbuckle does not live up to his fan's expectations of him. This is no worse than previous feature-Arbuckles I've played—but it was no better, and business was poor." "Went over great. Fine audience picture." "Arbuckle good drawing card, but vehicle is very poor. Public greatly disappointed." "Good picture to good business for week run." "Roscoe Arbuckle in 'The Dollar a Year Man' and Larry Semon in 'The Rent Collector.' Good combination and one that pleased, although attendance dropped. Arbuckle picture not as well liked as previous releases."

DUCKS AND DRAKES (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....APR. 9
"Bebe Daniels has a lively offering here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Best Bebe Daniels has to her credit up to date. Business was better than it has been for several weeks." "Bebe Daniels goes her former productions one better in this picture. A snappy production that brings results at the box office." "A good picture. They liked this one and went away and told their friends about it. Business was good."

DYNAMITE ALLEN (FOX) GEORGE WALSH.....MAR. 5
"Disconnected and wildly improbable melodrama."—M. P. News.

EAST LYNNE (BALLIN-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 26
"Modernized version of play and book should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Stormy weather held down attendance on this picture, but those who saw it were pleased and we are holding this excellent picturization of the famous stage play over for a second week." "We were disappointed. Less than usual matinee and night crowds."

"Rather mild for Thomas Meighan."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Our patrons seemed to like this one which played to excellent business for one week." "Thomas Meighan draws no matter what sort of picture, or role he has. This production an excellent one, and played to excellent business." "Showed in conjunction with Lloyd Hamilton in 'Moonshine.' A week's capacity business. The picture offers a good field for exploitation. Thomas Meighan at his best." "Nothing extraordinary in this picture, but business was fair." "Not as good as some of the other Meighan pictures. Meighan well liked, however, and matinee business was particularly good." "An ordinary story put over by the star's personality. Business was good." "We label this as a good picture. The box office statement was better than average." "Thomas Melghan always a big favorite at this house. Business good, despite first warm spring weather." "Thomas Meighan. Despite poor picture, attendance was on an average." "A good picture, carefully worked out, which drew well."

EDUCATION OF ELIZABETH, THE (PARAMOUNT) BILLIE BURKE.....FEB. 26
"Billie Burke has real opportunities in polite comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Women came to see Billie and the gowns. Did better than expected, as she has not done well at all of late." "A fair picture. Nothing extraordinary. Average business." "One of the star's best, but it only drew fair business." "Played it on the bill with 'Sunset Sprague' (Buck Jones) to extra big business two days." "Two days to average business." "The picture drags in several spots and needs improving, but the name, 'Billie Burke,' filled my house for a week."

EXTRAVAGANCE (METRO) MAY ALLISON.....MAR. 5
"Interest dulled by a too lengthy picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A program picture with nothing out of the ordinary to recommend it." "A fair picture to fair business."

"De Mille scores another ten strike; a great audience picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"DeMille's pictures always draw immense crowds. This was proved interesting, but not startling. Patrons like the atmosphere of affluence which permeates these pictures. Constantly large attendance." "This one packed the house every performance. A very fine entertaining picture and patrons semed well pleased." "A fairly good picture with business about as usual." "Drew a capacity house all week. Considered one of the best attractions that has been produced in months." "Very good. The people came the first day in response to wide advertising and they told their neighbors it was a good pictnre." "A very good picture. Handicapped by strong opposition." "Went over big on the second week of its run." "Gorgeous costumes and dazzling scenic effects, but the picture drags in spots. A good box office attraction." "Pleased those who saw it, but not enough saw it." "Gradually built up as run progressed, but not as big as anticipated." "Excellent picture and attendance almost a record-breaker. Patrons liked picture, much desirable comment heard. Opens second week May 8."

Exhibitor Comment—"Attracted capacity audiences for a seven-day rnn." "This picture attracted big audiences and house was packed every performance." "The kind of picture patrons expect to see Mae Murray in. About the best she has done. Consistent business with a clientele she has built up." "Only Mae Murray's tricky costumes, and dancing held this up. Business just fair, despite heavy advertising." "Superb production. Well directed, extravagantly conceived and a good audience picture." "Held up well for a two-week run. As a whole big pictnre from every angle." "Star is popnlar and in consequence picture went over all right." "Went over big. Everybody liked it and said so." "This one was mediocre. Business was only fair." "Big every day and they all liked it." "Exceptional fine settings and surprise features of story appealed strongly to our audiences, and we did good business with this picture." "Went over big for full week." "Going fine in its third week."

"Unpleasant story depending on acting and unusual twist to story."—
Exhibitor Comment—"Comfortable business, which is better than expected Holy Week. Picture has great possibilities as a drawing card under normal times." "So bad that it was taken off after one day and 'Lying Lips' substituted."

GOD'S GOOD MAN (STOLL FILM CORP.) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 26
"A poor production from all angles."—M. P. News.

"Dream Theatre" Embodies Ideas of Country's Finest

Oklahoma City Has Southwest's Most Beautiful House

A symphony in brick and stone.

Conceived in dreams and realized at a cost of $700,000, the Criterion theatre embodies in its name all the ideals of its builders.

An architectural triumph, a monument to motion pictures, the "eighth art," a wonderful tribute to Oklahoma City, an achievement of an ideal, a dream structure and a thing of unbelievable beauty, the Criterion stands on Main street today, as Oklahoma City's first real expression of art. It represents the high point that culture and civilization of the southwest has attained. The theatre opens its door Wednesday, April 27, at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Here is a theatre to which the whole southwest can point with pride. It is the finest motion picture theatre in the southwest. Residents of Oklahoma City can go out and tell the world it has one of the most beautiful cinema houses in the country. There are larger, but few finer.

Like the Capitol in New York, the Circle in Indianapolis, the Tivoli in Chicago, the Newman in Kansas City, and the Gaumont in California, the Criterion is a theatrical monument for an entire section. It stands as a tribute to a new art and is an artistic triumph. It marks the dawn of a new era of motion picture exhibition for the state.

It is truly a symphony in brick and stone, a dream of splendor converted into a reality.

For more than a year architects, carpenters, stone masons, bricklayers, electricians, painters, artists and decorators have been laboring with infinite care, that plans conceived in three years of study and dreaming might be realized. And now, embodying innovations that have never been used in any theatre, the Criterion is as complete and as perfect as the hands of men can make it. It is fireproof throughout and seats 1,900.

Great as is the triumph of architect and builder, this marvelous theatre is but the setting for the most artistic presentation of motion pictures yet devised. Within its walls, motion pictures will move on to new heights of achievements—to new fields of conquest, as the greatest form of entertainment yet devised.

As day after day, for more than a year, passersby noted the splendor with which the structure towered above barricades, there were few could believe that such a building could be given over entirely to motion pictures. There are still those who doubt that it will be used only to house shadows. But these have never seen motion pictures as they will be presented at the Criterion.

Combining the highest form of lighting effects, music and atmosphere, the Criterion management will make of movies a vivid symphony, a synchronized scheme of pictures and music, a refined and elevating entertainment within the reach of all through the medium of popular prices.

The Criterion front eliminates brilliant signs and substitutes a changing color scheme with a beautiful glass front. Reflectors behind the art glass cast a glow across the street. This is claimed to be the only theatre front of its kind in the United States

Of superlatives, there are too few, to describe the interior. And this, considering that the gorgeous and novel art glass front with its flashing colors, raises the anticipation of the one who enters to the highest point.

Great as is the expectation on entering, the reality is more wonderful. Money has been spent here with a lavish but judicious hand. Luxury, splendor and comfort have been achieved only through the painstaking care and planning of each and every person who had a hand in its building.

The box office, the crystal chandeliers that adorn the lobby, the thick Wilton velvet carpets into which one's feet sink deep in foyer, aisle and promenade, the wainscoting of highly polished Circassian walnut, the mural paintings in oil, that fill the wall panels, the huge art glass light globes, the decorative proscenium arch, the gorgeous velour draperies and curtains, the lights that change to fit the mood or whims of the moment, the music that swells from the mammoth organ, and the luxurious furnishings in every nook and corner of this dream structure blend in the realization of luxury, comfort and refinement.

Here is a place where the care of the world may be forgotten; a place where fresh and cooling breezes will blow in the summer time; where nerves are soothed and hearts cheered.

The lobby dazzles. The deep foyer with its thick carpets and wide stairways leading to the promenade delights. But when one reaches either the top of the stairway leading to the mezzanine floor or a point half way to the stage on the parquet floor he feels like breaking loose and cheering for someone—for someone who could plan such a structure. It is at these points that the full splendor, the sunbrust of the proscenius arch, breaks.

Blues, golds, old rose and old ivory blend with blue velour draperies and curtains. Brown leather-upholstered seats and blue and brown striped carpets, the oil mural paintings, mountains and streams, done in browns and blues harmonize with the walnut wainscoting and the old ivories. Varying tints and colors filtering through wide expanses of art glass cast a soft light over the theatre, and play over the decorations.

There is nothing in the large structure that has no purpose, every detail being worked out with a definite aim. The grill work finished in old ivory provides openings for the washed air that is forced into the theatre by huge fans or for air that is being drawn from the building. It is through a large amount of grill work in the proscenium arch that Monsoon fans, twelve feet in diameter, draw air in and out. It is through grill work capped with artistic decorations that hot air is rushed in the winter and washed air in the summer.

The Criterion is a compact theatre. It is unique in that it aims to popularize the mezzanine floor. What is known as a balcony in other theatres is called a mezzanine floor. On entering the foyer one does not know whether to go upstairs or to stay down. There is a suggestion of splendor and luxury in the glimpse that can be had of the promenade, and the suggestion becomes a fact when one lands at the top of the short flight of stairs. In the promenade there is the realization that money has been spent lavishly but tastefully. Deep cushioned settees, floor lamps, mirrors, French doors, tables with telephones for the convenience of patrons, beautiful rest rooms elegantly furnished and heavily carpeted, opening into the promenade and tea room that opens off from the promenade, make this floor one of the attractive features of the theatre.

A closeup of the organ grill. Behind this the pipes are concealed in lofts

It is from the mezzanine floor that the best impression of the theatre can be obtained. Here may be seen huge art glass light globes, a palatial chandelier that hangs from a dome resplendent with colors and lights, the unique ceiling effect worked out in art glass and large electric light globes, and the full beauty of the proscenium arch with its art glass reflectors and organ grill work.

Loges are located on the mezzanine floor. The smoking room, a den-like effect, where men may smoke and see the pictures while large fans draw out the smoke tops the mezzanine floor. In the center of the top of the floor is the large projection room.

There are no boxes in the Criterion.

The clock is six feet high and ten feet wide

There are five tiers of loges, which are carpeted and furnished with cushioned wicker chairs. These loges are the best seats in the house. The mezzanine floor seats about 950 and the parquet floor the same number.

There are no columns. Every seat is good, it being the plan of the structure to eliminate "dead" seats. A special arrangement of the minusa screen eliminates all angles, and Powers projection machines equipped with Peerless arc controls take care of a long throw. The Austin organ, which cost $25,000, and is the largest in the state, is built into the structure. Pipes occupy lofts on either side of the stage, giving a double effect. The console, or organ operating board, is located in the harp-shaped orchestra pit, and the organist sits with the eighteen-piece symphony orchestra.

The structure, while built primarily for the movies, is in reality a double theatre. The stage is the largest in the city, and is five stories high, being built entirely of concrete. There are two orchestra pits, and the stage can be extended if ever a change of policy is decided upon. In such an event the stage could be extended over what is now the orchestra pit, and a portion of the floor could be removed from over a secondary orchestra pit.

In the Criterion, there are two heating systems one providing steam heat, in those parts of the building where gurgling radiators will not interfere with perfect hearing; the other, a hot air plant, which supplies warmth in the main auditorium.

Likewise, there are two systems for cooling, or ventilating the theatre. During the day, when the summer atmosphere outside is hot, the warm air is sucked in through great shafts, passed over a screen of iced water, then forced out into the building by means of four 6-foot fans. After nightfall, when the outside air has cooled, a Monsoon system of ventilating is used. That system includes twin fans, twelve feet in height, which suck the air in from the sky, at the top of the building and blow it out into the interior of the theatre.

There are three stages as the plan is now worked out for the atmospheric prologues that will precede many of the pictures. Columns and separate curtains of blue velour mark the division. An old rose sateen curtain is drawn back from the center and reveals the blue velours. The middle of the curtain rolls up and reveals the screen. These curtains are used in all the show periods, and they give an added dignity to the picture presentation.

Hominess, ease, luxury, cheer, restfulness and refinement best describe the atmosphere, that all which has been described, accomplish.

And this is what the movies have given Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and the southwest.

Troy, N. Y., Will to Have New $500,000 Theatre

A new $500,000 motion picture house is to be built in Troy, N. Y., the house to have a seating capacity of at least 3,000 persons and to be located in River Street, in the heart of the business section of the city. Joseph and Edward Murphy, of Troy, and Frank P. Dolan, of Albany, are interested in the project, and it is rumored that the Strand interests have also become connected with the new theatre. It is planned to begin building operations during the coming summer.

Complete Children's Nursery Part of New Lansing House

Building Combines Business Offices, Theatre and Large Public Hall

One of the most brilliant and successful openings in the theatrical history of the Middle West took place at Lansing, Mich., April 27, when W. S. Butterfield's magnificent Strand theatre and Arcade was formally dedicated after eighteen months spent in construction.

Seating 2,000 the Strand is one of the finest theatres in the state, and among the most ornate and elaborate in this section of the country. Its construction marks the culmination of seventeen years of theatrical endeavor by W. S. Butterfield in the state of Michigan, and is looked upon as the biggest achievement of his career as a showman.

Hundreds of prominent theatrical men from all sections of the country were present and the event attracted thousands of people from territory adjacent to the Michigan capital city.

Located in the heart of Lansing's business district, the theatre and arcade structure has a frontage of 109 feet on the principal thoroughfare and a depth of 330 feet. Because it marks somewhat of an innovation in a combination theatre and business block the building is attracting the attention of architects and others interested in modern construction. The entire structure is of steel and concrete and absolutely fireproof. The theatre proper is approached by a wide arcade 165 feet in length. The arcade is finished in the warm, brilliant colors of Southern Spain. The grand foyer is a two-story affair constructed in Kane stone and illuminated by concealed lights. A gracefully curved marble stairway leads to a promenade which in turn serves as an approach to the mezzanine lounge, a series of beautifully decorated and furnished salons. A completely equipped nursery with colored maid in attendance is one of the modern features of the playhouse. The theatre proper is designed after the style of Louis XIV with decorations of old rose, ivories and roman gold. Classical columns supporting the cornice start the proscenium arch, containing the proscenium boxes and with a graceful sweep forming the sounding board. It arches from side to side starting with a laurel leaf festoon plaque allegorically representing music and dance.

A stage with a forty foot opening, equal depth and sixty feet in height is equipped to the smallest detail. A "Major" dead front switchboard controls over 5,000 lights used throughout the theatre the house being so wired that lighting effects in white, amber or blue may be alternately employed during the presentation of a picture or other attraction.

The heating is provided by a Reynolds "Unit Heat Generating Equipment" with I. L. G. fans and blowers for ventilation, the air in the theatre being changed every seven minutes.

The operating booth is a steel room 15 x 20 feet equipped with two Powers machines of the latest type, stereopticon, spot lamps and transverters capable of generating one hundred amperes.

The arcade portion of the big structure is given up to forty-six shops and offices, a mammoth recreation hall, containing bowling alleys, tea rooms, barber shop and club rooms, while the second floor in addition to a number of office rooms houses a beautiful convention hall and ballroom, 165 feet in length by 60 feet in width. Modern kitchen equipment is also found in conjunction with this hall permitting the

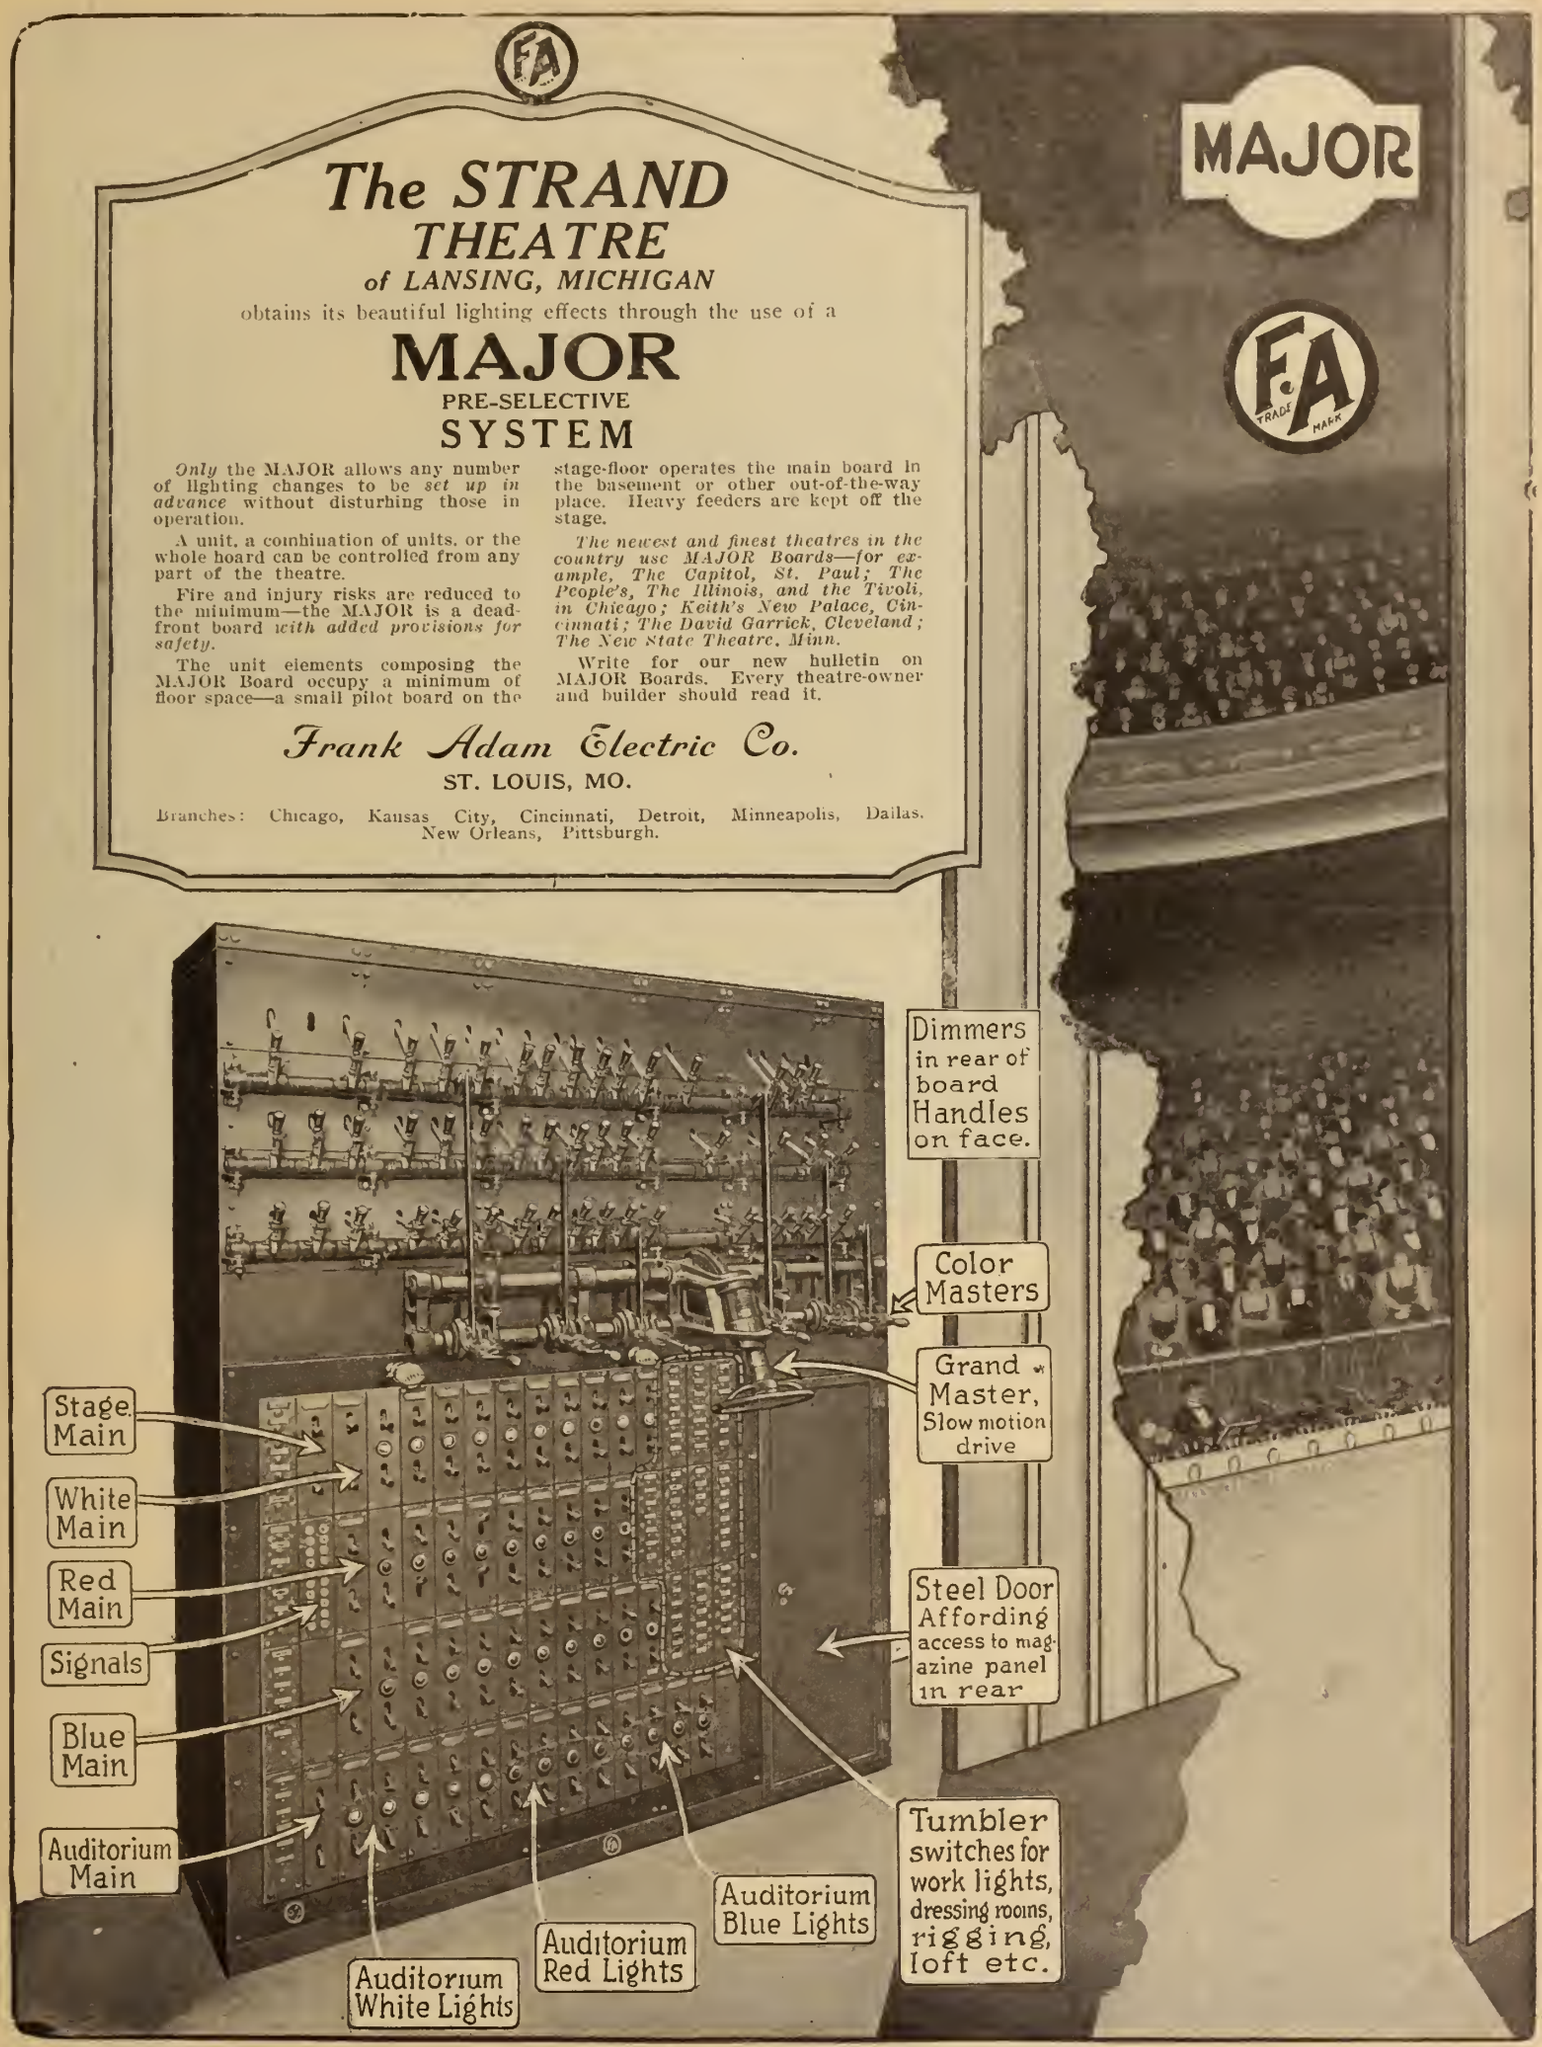
MAJOR
PRE-SELECTIVE SYSTEM

Only the MAJOR allows any number of lighting changes to be set up in advance without disturbing those in operation.

A unit, a combination of units, or the whole board can be controlled from any part of the theatre.

Fire and injury risks are reduced to the minimum—the MAJOR is a dead-front board with added provisions for safety.

The unit elements composing the MAJOR Board occupy a minimum of floor space—a small pilot board on the stage-floor operates the main board in the basement or other out-of-the-way place. Heavy feeders are kept off the stage.



The newest and finest theatres in the country use MAJOR Boards—for example, The Capitol, St. Paul; The People's, The Illinois, and the Tivoli, in Chicago; Keith's New Palace, Cincinnati; The David Garrick, Cleveland; The New State Theatre, Minn.

Write for our new bulletin on MAJOR Boards. Every theatre-owner and builder should read it.

Loew Opens Another; This Time in Salt Lake

Salt Lake's newest moving picture and variety house opened last week. It is Loew's State theatre. The house was formerly the Pantages theatre, but it has been remodeled, rebuilt and redecorated and refurnished.

The foyer opening off the main lobby is decorated with gray and old rose. The entire floor in every part of the house is covered with taupe carpets. The drapes hanging in the foyer, in front of all exits and back of the boxes are a beautiful shade of rose carrying out a gray and old rose color scheme.

While new seats have been placed in the house, the most inviting are those found in the boxes. Comfortable wicker armchairs with upholstered seats number four chairs to a box. The ladies' room on the right of the main foyer, carries out the general decorative scheme and is daintily furnished with wicker furniture, and the walls are lined with mirrors.

To the left of the entrance is the gentlemen's retiring room, beautifully furnished in blue leather lounge chairs and smoking stands. On the mezzanine floor, running around the entire foyer, are comfortably arranged nooks, furnished with deep seated chairs and lighted by floor lamps of striking design.

A feature of the projection is the screen which has been specially built for this theatre. Instead of simply letting down a white drop on which to show the pictures, a cabinet has been constructed. While it is portable, it is rigid when in place, and it is due to this rigid screen that the best results are obtained." A mammoth pipe organ has also been installed by the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company and cost $25,000.—Hunt.

News From the Canadian Field

John Hazza, for seven years proprietor of the Empress theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, is the manager of the new Capitol theatre, Calgary, Alberta, which was recently opened by the Famous Players Canadian Corp. This company has bought out the interest of Mr. Hazza in the Empress theatre, Edmonton, and he has been appointed district representative by the corporation with jurisdiction over the company's houses in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Chief White Elk, Indian moving picture star who played a role in "Out of the Snows," made personal appearances at the Colonial theatre, Vancouver, B. C., during the week of May 9, when this feature was the film attraction.—GLADISH.

From the Owner

THE owner of the Dixie Theatre in Athens, Texas, speaking of his Westinghouse motion picture equipment, says: "You talk of satisfaction in the way this equipment is working—it can't be beat. We are getting a picture 12 x 16 feet with a 75 foot throw on only 35 amperes and the best light you can imagine."

In selecting motion picture equipment to produce a steady white light for good projection, you can make no mistake if you depend entirely upon Westinghouse—the pioneer in the design and manufacture of theatre equipment.

Pennsylvania Legislature Amends Law Governing Construction of Theatres

Prospective Builders of New Houses May Now Obtain Revenue from Offices in Same Building

It has just come to light that a bill amending the building laws governing theatre construction in first-class cities of Pennsylvania (that is Philadelphia and Pittsburg), that was passed by the legislature this year and has been approved by the Governor, contains provisions of vast importance in that it legalizes the use of parts of motion picture theatre buildings not used specifically for theatre purposes, for office and store rooms hereafter. The significance of the amendment lies in the fact that it provides the way for purchases of sites for theatres to obtain a far greater investment return, in the form of rentals of stores and offices, than it was heretofore possible to obtain from such properties when they were used exclusively for theatre purposes. The effect of this, it is believed, will be that prospective purchasers of theatre sites in costly centers of business will be able to pay prices for such sites that heretofore were prohibitive and thus find it profitable to acquire the best located properties for theatre purposes.

Under the old law it was illegal to construct any kind of quarters above a theatre auditorium, except a concert hall, and no theatre building, in a first-class city, could contain store or office rooms unless such rooms be cut off from the theatre proper by an areaway, or unless the theatre happened to be a corner property.

The new amendment is interpreted as meaning that, under certain restrictions to insure safety from fire, etc, stores and offices can be built above and immediately adjoining the auditorium in a theatre building.

The pertinent clause of the amendment, which was introduced in the House of Representatives, by Mr. Glass, under the title of House Bill No. 1074, was passed by both branches, and was approved by Governor Sproul on May 5, is as follows:

"Any portion or portions of the premises bordering on a main street and not required for the uses of the theatre may be used for offices, stores or rooms for similar purposes provided the walls, ceiling and floors separating such portion or portions from the theatre proper are built or constructed of such fire-proof material as shall be approved by the Bureau of Building Inspection and the Fire Marshall, and that the portion or portions so used for offices, stores, or rooms for similar purposes shall be of first-class construction and shall have no openings connecting such offices, stores, or rooms for similar purposes with the theatre proper and also that a fireproof exit is provided from the theatre on each tier equal to the combined width of exits opening on opposite side in each tier communicating with balconies and staircases leading to the street in a manner provided elsewhere in this section."

Allen Theatre Opened Last Month

The new Allen theatre, Montreal, Quebec, got away to a splendid start under the management of George Rotsky on Saturday evening, May 14, the great playhouse being finished in every detail before the opening performance. The opening attraction was First National's "Lessons in Love," starring Constance Talmadge, and there was a very interesting program of opera, orchestral music and minor pictures. One of the numbers was an operatic presentation consisting of one act from Verdi's "Rigoletto," by a company of selected vocalists. The musical portion of the bill was presented under the direction of Luigi Romanelli, of Toronto, general musical director of Allen Theatres, Ltd., and Maurice Poure, permanent conductor of the Montreal Allen orchestra.

The New Allen is a monument to Canadian labor and industries, a great proportion of the materials and equipment being Canadian products. All painting and decorating was done by T. Jagmin, the art decorator of Montreal. Yolles and Rotenberg, Ltd., were the general contractors. All furniture was supplied by Bell's Galleries, Montreal, while Josephine De Witt supplied all the artificial flowers and foliage. The Office Specialty Mfg. Co., Ltd., Newmarket, Ontario, provided office and other fixtures and equipment while Knight Bros. & Grant, Toronto, made the lighting fixtures. All marble, tile and terrazzo work was done by the Mariotti Marble Co., Montreal, and uniforms for the staff were made by William Scully, Ltd., Montreal. E. Dussault was the contractor for the light iron work and metal lathing and George W. Reed & Co., Ltd., attended to the roofing, ventilators, fire doors and general sheet metal work. The Robert Simpson Co., Ltd., Toronto, supplied and installed the gorgeous draperies, carpets, curtains and other cloth effects. The large electric sign was made by the Macey Sign Co., Ltd., Toronto. The electrical engineers were the Canada Electric Co., Toronto, and the woodwork was done by the William Rutherford & Sons Co., Ltd., Montreal. Safes were installed by the J. & J. Taylor, Ltd., Toronto.

The projection room equipment, consisting of a battery of three Power's Projectors, was installed by the Perkins Electric Co., Montreal.—GLADDISH.

Many Theatre Owners Have Wrong Ideas on Pipe Organs

Prominent Manufacturer Gives Some Pointers on Installation

By DAN W. BARTON, Sect. of BARTOLA MUSICAL INSTRUMENT CO., CHIGAGO, ILL.

Many exhibitors are under the impression that a pipe organ can only be properly installed in theatres that have been provided with organ lofts, and for this reason are hesitating on the installation of a pipe organ. The general impression is that a building has to be remodeled at a great expense providing organ lofts for the reception of the instrument.

This is not the case. There are now on the market different types of pipe organs that if the exhibitor will be careful in his selection the installation can be made in any theatre at a nominal expense and with practically as good musical results as in theatres where the organ lofts are arranged for in the plans. As a matter of fact, in a great many cases it can be done with even better musical results, for there are a great many architects who design new theatre buildings and provide organ lofts without having themselves a first-class knowledge of organ installations, music or acoustics, and in the design of the theatre they give the general outlay and architectural beauty all the preference and then place the organ lofts in whatever space there happens to be left. This results in many instances in the organ being so situated that it is impossible to receive 100 per cent satisfactory musical results, as, for instance, the theatre with a balcony wherein the organ is situated might be over the proscenium arch. In this case the instrument is too loud in the balcony and too soft in the rear of the downstairs portion. When the matter is called to the attention of the builder it is said that it would have been impossible to provide organ lofts in any other place without spoiling the general appearance of the theatre.

Which is of the greatest importance? The music, which is conceded to be the vital factor in the entertainment, or the general appearance of the theatre?

Properly located organ lofts allow the sound waves from the organ chambers to be distributed equally in both the balcony and the downstairs portion of the theatre, and some of the most beautiful theatres in the country have organ lofts so arranged, proving beyond a doubt that it is not necessary to give the theatre an improper organ rendition in order to get good architectural appearance. The theatres that were constructed some years ago, before the provision for organ lofts had become a necessity, are divided into two classes—one the small theatre, which in reality is four walls and a roof, and the other the old-time opera house, which is fitted with a stage and boxes on either side of the same, and as a rule the boxes have an exit opening from the boxes onto the stage. In theatres of the first-class there are makes of instruments that are designed to be placed in the orchestra pit, and let it be plainly understood that because an instrument is designed to be placed in a pit it is not a hurdy-gurdy with caliope tones that was originally designated as a pit instrument.

Several organ builders have recognized the fact that many exhibitors own theatres and have a clientele of patrons that appreciate really good music and beautiful tone quality and are in the market for instruments of this character on account of the ease and no expense of making installation.

It is also possible to install a regulation type of pipe organ of medium size in these theatres by building platforms on either side of the screen above the exit doors, on which a medium-size organ can be mounted with the swell folds facing the audience and the installation can be covered with very good-looking grilled work or imitation flowers and decorations.

There has also been tried the deep pit installation wherein a very deep pit is placed where the orchestra pit would ordinarily be and a very good sized pipe organ of standard construction can be installed therein without interfering with the picture. The fact that the main part of the instrument is underground and the pit has to be made of such material as to be absolutely damp proof is the drawback to this method of handling the installation. In the other type of theatre, the old-fashioned Opera house, is the production is straight pictures and the stage is not used except for prologues, a perfect installation of a pipe organ can be made on the stage and in these cases many times the musical rendition is even better than in theatres of the newer type with badly situated organ lofts. If the stage is also to be used for road shows and other attractions then the installation can be made by using a part of the theatre boxes, usually the upper tier of boxes on both sides.

There are instruments on the market fitted with electric actions that are especially designed to be adapted to such installations and an organ of very good size can be thus installed with very little expense of remodeling and with excellent musical results.

The exhibitor who is told that an organ cannot be installed in his theatre without a great cost of remodeling the building is simply talking to a man who is trying to sell him the wrong type of organ. The purchase of an organ must cover not only an instrument of first-class material and excellent tonal rendition, but an organ that will fit the installation and if care is taken in such selection there is no theatre, new or old, that cannot be fitted with a first-class organ and at a low cost for installation.

Nemo Theatre, Cleveland, Installs Organ

Manager Trinkner, of the Nemo theatre, Cleveland, Detroit Avenue and West 84th Street, has just installed a $5,000 Bartola organ. He wanted his patrons to know what he had done for their pleasure, so he consulted Fred Walters, exploitation manager for the local Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, for advice. Walters is of the opinion that an exploitation manager's business consists in boosting everything pertaining to a theatre. Not the picture alone, but the attributes of the theatre as well. So, without any charge for service, Walters fixed Mr. Trinkner up with a drawing for a herald that brought the people flocking into the theatre to hear the new instrument. Instead of stating baldly that an instrument of superior quality had been installed, Walters devoted the first page of his herald to this: WHAT DOES WALLACE REID KNOW ABOUT WOMEN? Turn inside and you see the one word, NOTHING. The third page said, "But the patrons of this theatre will enjoy good music, etc."

Equipment Operating Projection Questions Answered

"Automatic" Keynote of Motion Pictures of Tomorrow

A Paper by Henry O. Hubbard at S. M. P. E. Convention

What ideal atmosphere with in the theatre will mean for health and comfort and enjoyment can hardly be overestimated. The incidental possibility is here opened to create a new art, namely, to use all of such controllable conditions within the theatre to add the climatic suggestions appropriate to the action of the play exactly as now we add the appropriate incidental sounds and music. This is strictly within the field of the motion picture engineer who is concerned with all the arts and crafts which affect the net results of the art which he serves.

I look to see a phenomenal rise in the art of incidental sounds, including music, the human voice, and those characteristic noises like the clatter of hoofs, chug of the motor, patter of rain, sighing of the wind, crackling of the fire, and the splash and roar of the sea. Such sounds, if perfectly rendered, add intensity to the realism of the film, but their production must be made automatic and independent of the direct use of a hundred separate noise makers. It is not so much volume as enunciation and accuracy of imitation. Acoustic science will analyze all needed sounds so that their recorded sound wave curves, suitably engraved, may automatically and with high precision produce the exact sounds called for. Their sequence, intensity, and synchronism with the film will be controlled by perforated rolls or punched cards or both. Such cards now control all textile looms for figured weaves, and the automatic accounting and statistical tabulation in modern plants. The making of such sounds, true to nature, will be an art comparable in importance with that of the incidental music and speaking voice, and will contribute a factor essential to perfect realism in the motion picture art.

The psychologist, composer, and physicist will join in devising new kinds of incidental music and sounds for each play, so that with every action the effective emotional background will be supplied. The orchestra will not be present. The artists will execute the incidental music once for all and so perfectly that it will compare with the film, and will be produced on the same basis of automaticity and synchronism by perfected mechanical means. The motion picture engineer will here be vitally concerned.

I look to see perfect and automatic rendering of the human voice audible to every observer of the picture. Only the crudest beginning is yet in evidence. Speaking parts will be added to the silent drama which today is open to the criticism that the characters are seen speaking but cannot be heard. The modern drama with its play of wit as well as action demands the spoken parts, but they may not be spoken from the stage since amplification distorts the finer overtones which are essential to perfect enunciation. At lower amplitudes we may hope for more nearly perfect speech rendering but the defective sounds such as s, f, zh, may require artificial modification in the recorded speech curves. Wireless music and telephone are already here. We can provide telephones by which auditors with defective hearing may clearly hear the speaker on the platform. All the master sounds—music, speech, and noises incidental to the story may be produced in the acoustic laboratory of the theatre adjoining the projection room, and be delivered automatically in synchronism by direct connection with the film movement. Each auditor will receive, if he so desires, the music, speech, and sounds by perfected telephone attached to the back of his seat. The standard adjustment could be gaged as to quality and intensity so that for the average ear the sounds are true to nature and subject to volume regulation by each patron. As such mechanism is perfected, it will be less and less in evidence, just as the lamps are concealed in modern lighting and the projector is relegated to a room outside the auditorium. Eventually only the effects will be perceived.

In motion pictures all skilled movements of hand, foot, or body may be speeded up, slowed down, or transformed, selected, blended, and reproduced before everyone who desires it, an unparalleled adjunct to education, or rather a new pedagogy. Can we imagine a collation by slow-motion pictures of all the skill of the world in arts, crafts, sports, and other bodily motions? The startling fact that experts and champions do not know the secret of their own skill makes them helpless to impart it. The skill dies with them. The motion picture knows no such limitation. It can record by the slow motion camera-projector combination and reveal the secret of such high skill, and can impart that skill to the whole world, the film repeating the movement as often as needed and at the optimum learning speed. Such films may be multiplied until all can learn the highest skill attained by man in any or many lines desired. Motion analysis and high speed cameras can do more. A hundred masters may contribute to a single skilled art, the best elements being selected and combined on the screen in one picture, a consummate model excelling any skill yet attained by man.

May I point out, purely as examples of countless applications, one or two easy next steps in motion pictures. Composite of instructor, college, and textbook. Take two very popular and common arts, dancing and the piano. Project moving footprints from below on a ground glass floor showing the steps of a given dance. The pupil follows the steps with his feet regulating the movement from slow to normal as skill develops. The same film which projects the footprints may also give a lifesize picture of a skilled dancer executing the same step in exact time with the moving footprints, or slightly in advance of them, the picture turning so to follow the turns of the dancer and remain in view. From time to time helpful hints in print could be included as part of the film projection, giving the perfect evolution by the phantom footsteps taught by diagram, picture, instruction, and music all in perfect synchronism, and all selected as the most skilled rendering available.

Apply the motion picture to piano self-instruction. Project above and along the keyboard from one side of the piano a motion picture of the master pianist's hand, showing his fingers executing, say, the chromatic scale. A plane glass plate set at 45 degrees forms a camera lucida which reflects the picture to the pupil's eyes. He can thus follow the master's hand and every setting and stroke of each finger, and every turn-in of the thumb. The silent phantom of the master's hand, the immortalized skill, would be better than the presence of the master himself and far less disconcerting, for with joined ends the film could patiently repeat the motion as often as needed, and at any speed, steadily faster as skill developed. Likewise every difficult bit of technic could be taught by masters whose movements would be recorded as we now record their music. The engineer must design simple and suitable propectors for the purpose, as easy to operate as a metronome, and a set of instruction films must be prepared by masters of their art.

Similar films will be used for teaching the skill of all arts, in handling tools, manipulating materials, in sports and other daily activities, where skill or economy of effort are of concern. Is it too much to hope that we shall begin at once a complete program for making available to all human beings perfect models of all skilled motions. This would mean a new era in education, a new art of pedagogy. Self-education thus made possible may solve the inadequacy of schools and teaching staff to instruct the population of the entire world.

Can you picture the realization of this ideal through the motion picture? Surely thirty years of determined research by you gentlemen can easily make this possible, and it could be as much less as our vision and effort is increased. With a true vision of the importance to the world of this achievement we could accomplish it in a very few years. The motion picture would then be the supreme habit educator of the race, new and more excellent models being developed summing up the experience of the world, so that no new skill is lost, and our children may all begin at the highest point of skill yet or any here attained.

A unique merit of the motion picture which will make it of supreme value is that every individual who has an idea to give forth can him-

This change does not alter the nature of the movement itself but makes for greater efficiency. The steel cross pins which engage with the cam have been equipped with tempered steel rollers which in action are retained on the pins of the cross by a thin steel flange that is attached to the actuating cam and locking ring by four set screws. Instead of the pins of the pin cross coming in contact with the cam by a sliding frictional motion, the rollers make possible a roller contact. The result is that the point of contact constantly changes; the movement operates with a minimum of friction and remains in accurate adjustment for a much greater period of time.

Keith Circuit to Open Theatre Near Broadway in New York

Arcadia in Bush Terminal Building Promises to Be a De Luxe House

B. S. Moss, acting for the motion picture department of the B. F. Keith Circuit, announces a new theatre de luxe to be called the Arcadia in and adjoining the Bush Terminal Building at 130 West Forty-second Street, New York, to be devoted exclusively to the presentation and exploitation of photo-dramas, photo-comedies, photo-spectacles and any special feature films that warrant booking. The Arcadia will open on Labor Day. It will seat 700 people and the price scale will be $2 at night and $1 at matinees, with two performances daily and all seats reserved.

Mr. Moss promises a jewel box of a theatre in the Arcadia, which will have wide, comfortable seats, broad aisles and so much space between the seat rows that one can pass between them without stumbling over earlier arrivals. Seating capacity will be sacrificed to comfort. The theatre will be walled with silks and tapestries and hung with costly salon paintings.

The entire decorative scheme will be original and beautiful. The 700 seats will all be on one floor and the arrangement of sight lines, lighting, color blending, projection, ventilation, regulation of temperature, adjustment of high, non-flickering visibility is in the charge of scientists. The ideal of the Arcadia, as stated by Mr. Moss, is a de luxe theatre for motion pictures. The discriminating picture fan will escape crowding and waiting in line at the box office and will find seats as comfortable as the chairs on a club-house veranda. A concert orchestra, assembled by a symphony director, will give the Arcadia musical distinction, and the grand organ will be another feature.

The Arcadia is of interest to the public, in real estate circles and to makers of feature pictures. The producer of special films destined for the world market will have in it an unusual plant for exhibition and exploitation. The Arcadia will exhibit any feature that it selects without the usual hard conditions attending a Broadway showing, and will follow it up with booking of from 1,000 to 2,000 days of Keith picture time. This Keith engagement alone, starting at the Arcadia, promises to render a picture producer sufficient income to pay production costs and render a profit.

The Arcadia, near the busiest corner in the world, will have strikingly beautiful electric signs advertising its current attraction to the vast crosstown traffic of Forty-second Street and also plainly visible to the north and south traffic of Broadway. No better exploitation for a feature film can be imagined than a run at the Arcadia, which will be open to all producers without prejudice, the quality of the production being the only element considered.

Real estate circles are greatly interested in the Arcadia because it opens up for theatrical development a busy block hitherto sacred to business. Irving T. Bush, president of the Bush Terminal Company, is making extensive alterations in the lower floors of the Bush Terminal Sales Building, and is also improving the plot between this and the Knickerbocker Annex. The Arcadia theatre and the Old Towne Tavern will result from these improvements. A three-story building wi cover the site between the Bush Termin and the Knickerbocker and the entranc to the Arcadia theatre will be from Forty second Street through the new structur The theatre proper will be on Forty-firs Street and will take in the present Bus Terminal auditorium.

Cross and Brown were the real estat agents who negotiated the lease of th Arcadia theatre to B. S. Moss for th Keith interests.

Activities in Winnipeg

The Starland theatre, one of the older moving picture houses in Winnipeg, has been closed by Mr. Leach to make way for a new 2,000-seat theatre, the cost of which is placed at $500,000. This theatre is to be ready for use next fall, according to present plans. Property adjacent to the Starland has been acquired as a part of the site for the new, big house. The new building is being built by A. R. McNichol of Winnipeg and will be leased by the Winnipeg Amusement Company, in which Mr. Leach is interested.

Mr. A. Young, manager of the Fraser theatre, Vancouver, B. C., is completing the erection of a small but modern moving picture theatre just four blocks from his present house. The new theatre seats 750 persons.

R. S. Miller, manager of the Starland theatre, Winnipeg, which is now being torn down to make way for a new theatre, has been appointed manager of the new College theatre, which will be opened about June 1 by the Winnipeg Amusement Company, Limited.

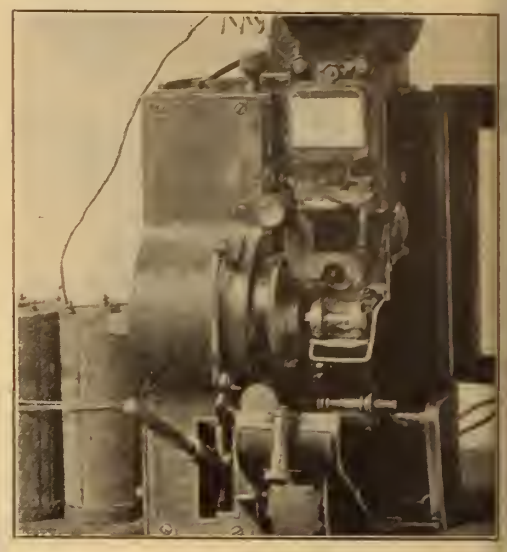
A New Movie Supply House

Harry Blumberg, for the past seven years associated with Charles Calehuff and the United Theatrical Equipment Corporation, has opened a new supply house at 261 N. Thirteenth Street, Philadelphia, in the heart of the film industry, where he will handle new and second-hand projectors, screens, generators, carbons, theatre supplies of every description and a portable motion picture machine for non-theatrical use. Mr. Blumberg has obtained the exclusive agency for the Rembusch screen, used in many of the leading theatres in the territory.



Mr. Blumberg is generally conceded to be one of the leading experts on Powers' projectors. His thorough technical knowledge on all projection matters will enable him to act in the capacity of consulting engineer on all projection problems.

New Invention

A new invention recently put out, it is claimed, means a wonderful advantage to any moving picture exhibitor. It is named the "Nick's Automatic Circuit Breaker,"

"Nicks" attached to the projector and is for the purpose of preventing fire, for the examination of the film and for the cover of the white screen.

It consists essentially of an electric circuit held open normally by the film itself, but closed when the action becomes otherwise. If the film breaks or stops due to broken sprocket holes, the circuit is closed and shutter automatically drops between the light beam and the film.

This shows "Nicks" attachment

Another feature of this invention is a signal to the operator immediately when the loop is lost or film becomes too tight, or when any other than normal conditions exist.

The "Nick" is new, and does not take the place of anything else, but is claimed to be a safety device.

Deserts Legitimate for the Silver Screen

The Lyric theatre, after a career of 15 years as a legitimate house in Cincinnati, will in the future be operated as a moving picture house. The property recently passed into the hands of McMahan and Jackson, who operate the Gifts theatre. While plans have not been entirely perfected, McMahan and Jackson announce that the theater will be operated during the summer by the same interests which controlled it last year.

Music Article

you will observe, an atmosphere which is sufficiently characteristic, that the task of the musician is clearly indicated. There is nothing in this whole little classic which detracts from the tone of it, nor loses for one moment the clearly captured spirit of mysterious Morocco. . . Oscar Wilde in one of his famous books said: "If you want to visit China, stay at home and dream of China as you've been led to believe it exists." . . . The same might be said of Morocco. I have been to that bizarre and picturesque land but I venture to say that all of Morocco is not as my imagination and my history have told me it is. I think there's a lot of America and Europe in it. That is why in this trip upon which Mr. Urban takes us, I must be thankful to him for his art, in retaining all of Morocco's charm and color, without intruding one single false note. This is real art, by the way—to capture the soul of a land, and present it undiluted and unchanged.

If the musician will be only half as conscientious, he can make the showing of "Morocco" fit for a connoisseur and an educator and all with a touch of the wanderlust in their veins.

"Morocco" calls for a performance of a single kind of music all through its showing. I can say that you need not "score" this picture with any regard to titles. Just delve into your library and bring out any composition which has Moroccan atmosphere and you'll find Mr. Urban's picture is as admirable as Saint-Saen's Suite Algerienne"!

Here's the picture in a nut shell — the architecture of the old Moors, narrow, dark streets, with infinite numbers of pergolas and arched entrances. Bearded, dark-skinned men in sweeping cloaks of Arabian design. Women, moving slowly like ghosts, faces covered, afraid to be seen by men. Men astride swinging old donkeys laden with product. Bizarre market places, with people haggling and bargaining for a penny's reduction, bootmakers and other manufacturers on the bare earth, legs under them. A very gloomy atmosphere, suggesting the day of the Old Testament and the life of the people of the middle ages. Travelers from the deserts of Arabia, far Egypt. Religious fervor, crooning, desolate, monotonous music of the minor key. Keep to the minor key and croon away in Oriental style and you won't go far wrong.

But this is not enough; although from my point of view this is better than the conventional cue-sheet which runs like this:

Time—Title "So and So"—Name of composition—Composer—rhythm.

Now, what is the conductor to use in his music, after he has the mood? Here it is perfectly in line to suggest some compositions—some—as many as you like, with variations for large theatres, small theatres and medium theatres—with variations for those who like classical, popular or even jazz.

Thus in the same Kineto review I mention, the suggestion for music which might be selected is like this:

I would suggest for the background of music to be used during the entire performance (and indeed starting about two minutes before the flash of the screen, to capture the mood and spirit of the audience in advance) any of the following compositions:

Saint-Saen's "Suite Algerienne."
Zollner's "Midnight at Sedan."
Weber's "Abu Hassan."
Massenet's "Scenes Alsaciennes."
Cornelius Overture to "Barber of Bagdad."
Beethoven's "Ruins of Athens."

Incidental Music of Marouf (this opera is laid in the very atmosphere of this picture—the whole action is coincidental with it).

Incidental Music of "Lakme," also "Martha."

Of course it is understood that the above compositions are scarcely to be obtainable by any but the big orchestras, although I am certain that organists can procure the Saint-Saens, Massenet and Cornelius numbers if desired. However, there are several substitutes for smaller organizations:

Extracts from Egyptian scenes of "Aida" will prove substitute, also themes from "L'Africaine," "Pearl Fishers," "Prophete" and even "Tales of Hoffman."

Other themes which are adaptable but not so accurate:

"Orientale" of Cesar Cui.
"Dance Macabre" of Saint-Saens.
"Chorus of Dervishes from Ruins of Athens."
"Hebrew Song and Dance" of Zimbalist.
Chaminade's "Flatterer."
"Where My Caravan Is Resting" of "Lohr."

Among the popular song publishers there is a raft of "Oriental" numbers,—foxtrots, one-steps and novelty numbers. In lieu of anything better these will do.

I have given vast gobs of thought to the music cue-sheet. I am convinced that a standard form of cue-sheet should be adopted by all music-workers and producers, and that is one of the things the Association of Motion-Picture-Musical Interests can work out. I am convinced that with this standard cue-sheet there must be prepared the Musical Dictionary which was discussed at the convention, and which has already been well named Musictionary—a volume to segregate hundreds of thousands of compositions into "moods, emotions and effects" so that if a conductor wants music for "Joy" he can find in his musictionary the hundreds of parts of music which will suffice for the purpose.

The Musictionary can become a fact. But it's a tremendous undertaking. In the meantime, we can do the best we can, by indicating in every cue-sheet.

Time—Footage—Title or Action—Tempo of Music — Rhythm — Mood — Suggested title of composition, with substitutes for various types of houses—publisher.

In connection with this article which I have had standing on my desk for several weeks, awaiting an opportunity to run it—comes this splendid letter of E. H. Charlton, of the Columbia theatre, Baton Rouge, Louisiana. I am publishing it in full with Mr. Charlton's Cue-sheet suggestion.

Mr. Charlton's Cue-Sheet Outline

Much has been written regarding the proper cueing of screen productions by the orchestra, yet very little has been said about the "cue" sheet.

The "cue" sheet can make it comparatively easy to carry out the desired atmosphere, or it can make the task quite difficult.

I present this in behalf of the hundreds of leaders who are located in small cities where their bills run from one to two, and possibly three days, and also the leader who has a moderate sized library. The different producing companies send out as many different styles of "cue" sheets, some good, some fair, and one (although evident care is expended on it) not quite good.

Theory without practical application is, of course, of no value. I mention this because the obvious intent of a "cue" sheet is to help the leader, to enable him to select his program in keeping with the action and atmosphere, and to get his music out in a reasonable length of time. A "cue" sheet giving good, clear, concise instructions and information is necessary.

While in the army my entire library was destroyed. I have been and am building up a new one. I have at the present time close to 1,050 numbers. No matter what size one's library may be, every "cue" sheet will call for some number or numbers not in one's library. The "cue" sheet is supposed to cover that situation, you say—to enable the leader to substitute where he has to. All right. Let us analyze the needs of the screen. What is the essential in supplying the atmosphere? Mood, with Rhythm and Tempo. What then conveys to the leader, more than anything, the correct substitute? A Tempo — Mood — Rhythm instruction.

I have here on my desk, five different types of "cue" sheets. They follow:

First—Luz. He uses a lot of abbreviations hard to read and after all, the essential is omitted. He calls for a "S.HY.ROM.CON MOTO." I understand the abbreviations, as do others, but as Goldberg would say, "It sounds well, but doesn't mean anything." Mr. Luz neglects to instruct one as to whether a 2/4 or 12/8 is more suited, and there certainly is a difference. Many neutral scenes are improved by using a 6/8 rather than 4/4. I do not enjoy very much success with his sheets. I want to say in justice to Mr. Luz, however, he evidently takes pains with his preparation of sheets, but he has overlooked the one thing that is of more help than anything else. He, as a composer of suitable music, is splendid. I have much of his works and use them frequently.

Second—Paramount by BENYON. He comes closer to the leader's need by indicating on some of the numbers their general tempo, such as Moderato or Andante, etc. But he does not state the rhythm. This sheet is rather clean-cut and easy to read.

Third—Goldwyn by WINKLER. Mr. Winkler has contributed much to the musical end of the screen as a composer-arranger. His sheets are also clean-cut and easy to read, but lack the key to enable one to successfully substitute.

Fourth—Metro by BERG. Mr. Berg also is closely connected with the betterment of music for the screen. His "cue" sheets have a splendid little talk on the first page regarding action, atmosphere and the high points in the picture, and if he indicated Mood—Rhythm—Tempo, I venture to say would be as near perfect as any existing.

Fifth—First National by BRADFORD. This, in my estimation (and I am the one that has to do the work for fitting my library to pictures) is the most serviceable cue sheet issued. It is clear, easy to read and tells you kind of number and Tempo—Rhythm. It is every easy to substitute with this sheet.

May I suggest the ideal "cue" sheet standardized? I have been in this work for the past thirteen years, with the exception of time in the army. At present I am in a city of 27,000, teaching at the State University and directing an orchestra of eight at night. The house uses organ afternoons,—both at night. This city is close to one of 400,000 and the people here know what is going on, and they demand as good (on a slightly smaller scale) as that presented in the larger city close by. The house I am in here is a new beautiful theatre, seating about 1,150. The pictures are what are termed first-run. I have to use thought in playing my screen productions. Yet my bills run but two days. Wednesday being the one exception. I cannot review my pictures with pad and pencil as do the leaders in the large cities where their bills run from one week to two. I must depend on the "cue" sheet. When there is an error, my organist notes and calls my attention to it when I come down to lay out the music.

Why can't the producing companies use a standard "cue" sheet and one that is clear, instructive and complete? The enclosed, while similar to some now in use, employs the good of all.

I trust you will give this space, and any criticism will be more than welcome. I believe, however, that it covers at least that phase of the work.

I thank you.

E. H. CHARLTON.

Association of Music—Picture Interests Advances

COMMITTEE OF FIVE:
I accept with pleasure your invitation to to act on the Board of Directors of the Association of Motion Picture Musical Interests.
Sincerely,
NAT FINSTON,
Tivoli Theatre, Chicago, Ill.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE:
In answer to your letter of May 14, I beg to accept your invitation to become a member of the Board of Directors of the Association of Motion Picture Musical Interests.
Truly,
O. G. SONNECK,
G. Schirmer, Inc.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE:
Your favor of the 14th inviting me to become a director of the Association of Motion Picture Musical Interests has come duly to hand. In answer I beg to state that I highly appreciate the honor you confer upon me by this invitation and take pleasure in accepting it.
I trust that I may be able to be of service to the association and shall be glad to render it whenever it may be wanted.
Truly yours,
HERMANN IRION,
Steinway & Sons.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE:
I am in receipt of your favor of the 14th inviting me to become a member of the Board of Directors of the Association of Motion Picture Musical Interests. Would say that I cheerfully accept and if elected will do all in my power to further the cause of music at any and all times.
Sincerely,
CHAS. K. HARRIS,
Harris Pub. Co.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE:
I accept your invitation to become a director of the Association with the greatest pleasure and place my best efforts at the disposal of the Association, in the purposes of which I wholeheartedly believe and for the success of which I will work to the best of my ability.
Sincerely,
E. R. VOIGT,
Boston Music Co.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE:
It is with a sense of genuine pleasure that I learn of my selection as a member of the Board of Directors of the Association of Motion Picture Music Interests. It gives me pleasure, not alone because of the distinguished company in which I find myself, but because I have cooperated and will cooperate with this association in the hope that its propaganda may be spread broadcast and its influence felt in every motion picture theatre.
May I add another word: The association is in its infancy. With a godfather like yourself and five other fathers like Rothapfel, Riesenfeld, Lutz, Tremaine and Briel, the babe sure will develop into a healthy, hearty youngster.
Sincerely,
H. S. KRAFT,
N. Y. Concert League.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE:
It will be an honor to have you present my name as candidate as you suggest in your kind letter, for the Executive Committee, and anything I am able to do for the cause will be done to the best of my ability.
Sincerely,
SCOTT BUHRMAN,
"American Organist."

COMMITTEE OF FIVE:
I will be glad to serve as a member of the Board of Directors if the rest of the folks think as you do.
Do not know how valuable I will be, but will do my best to bring all good to all good.
Sincerely,
MRS. A. K. BENDIX,
Bendix Music Bureau.

"The Guide"

(Clyde Cook Comedy—Two Reels—Fox Film Corp.)

HERE is one of the best slapsticks of the year. Clyde Cook has never been funnier than as a Swiss guide "who knew the Alps ever since they were little knolls." The laughs are numerous and well distributed throughout the entire picture. Cook appears on the scene with Alpinstock, rolled stockings, plumed hat and velvet suit. The opening scenes are in a Swiss hotel with Cook acting as bellboy, porter and clerk. After some good, and one or two refreshingly novel hotel gags, the mountain climbing sequence begins. Cook leads the party, who, roped together, wend their way over studio rocks. One or two long shots of great scenic beauty are interpolated. A stout climber has difficulty in squeezing through a pass, so Cook blasts the rock, first prolonging the suspense in fine style. Finally the party reaches the top of the mountain and rests at the "Ye all Inn." Cook is a scream when he attempts to eat asparagus, which leaps away from him every time he opens his mouth.

The guide is sent out to milk a goat. He tries to catch one in a bear trap. Director Jack Blystone has put a pair of horns on a horse and called him a moose. It is very ridiculous and almighty funny. A bear is worked in. This animal gets in a cave with the guide. After an exodus of stone and dirt from the mouth of the cave, Cook calmly walks out wearing a huge bearskin coat. The girl is kidnapped and there are some ski scenes to end the picture. The action is laid amidst snow almost entirely. By reversing the films, the effect of Cook walking upright up the side of a precipice is obtained.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Bang!"

(Mermaid Comedy—Two Reels—Released Thru Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

THIS is a rapid-fire slapstick which should be a welcome addition to any program. It is a Jack White production, featuring Jimmia Adams, Lize Conley and Earl Montgomery. "Bang!" has some fine animal scenes. There is a dog which allows syrup to be poured all over him, and a cat which mixes it up with the dog and a rooster which does likewise. But the picture does not depend upon these animals for all its fun, however. A Western saloon and a bad man are used for some shoot-'em-up action. Then there is a whirlwind chase with good riding on the part of the principals. In one spot the horses ride directly into the camera. It is a splendid thrill, for the animals do not turn aside, but apparantly gallop, unswervingly into the lens. An audience will feel as if it has been trampled upon.

There may be too many scenes of men falling neck-deep into a muddy puddle to please some audiences, but on the whole it is funnier than the average slapstick.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Sweet Revenge"

(Gayety Comedy—One Reel—Released Thru Educational Exchanges, Inc.)

This is a polite comedy of high order, having as it does a neat comedy idea as its basis. It is not uproarious, nor is it not expected to be so, but it is not insipid, and it is a worth while comedy filler. Thornton Edwards, Teddy Sampson, Mary Wynn and Henry Murdock are featured.

A discarded sweetheart, whose former lover is engaged to another, decides to have some fun with him. She insists upon his dining with her in order to give him back some of his old love letters. To do this he is obliged to break a diner date with his fiance. This he does by pleading sickness, but before he can get away, he is given some headache pills by the solicitous sweetheart, which he slips into his pocket instead of swallowing. The girl then discovers that the pill is poison and hurries to the doctor. Meanwhile her lover is dining with his old sweetheart. The picture has a good finish with everything explained.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"The Life History of Frogs and Toads"

(Kinto Review—Second Series)

HERE'S a most peculiar reel and one that is interesting from the fact that frogs and toads, although well known to the human family in their various stages of development on land, little is known of the different stages that take place in their lives from the time the egg is hatched up to the period in which these young "jackals" leave their under water homes.

It must have taken a great deal of time and patience to get the correct data which is most interesting in many ways. For instance, few of us know that toad spawn develops very rapidly and very few of us have any idea of the peculiar appearances of the young Mr. Tadpoles with their feathery gills as they swim about in wild efforts to obtain food.

And then how many of us have seen these young fellows when their gills have disappeared and the hind legs begin to appear. Under suitable conditions they become quite lively as the views show and increase in size.

But it is not until protuberances begin to appear behind the head that the young tadpole "takes on" a most comical aspect. These protuberances are the advance guard of the front legs which when full grown enable the "young fellow" to leave the water.

When he does he develops a most abnormal appetite and hesitates at eating nothing that is digestible. And when after eating a good dinner of worms a finger is poked into his mouth, the hungry young "land lubber" tries his best to get it into his mouth and down his throat.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Swat the Fly"

(Kineto Review—Second Series)

WE all know that Mr. Fly is a very bad actor, especially at this time of the year when millions of his kind are taking to the wing and hovering about the sugar bowl or anything that attracts his taste, disguised in the role of the "deep dyed villun."

And he certainly is a "villun" judging from the damage he does, for he is not at all careful in the selection of his food, tainted meats of all kinds being his favorite dish, or in distributing little particles of said meat in such a way that any human eating thereof runs a fifty-fifty chance of getting one of the dangerous diseases which wreck the human body.

In this one reeler "Kineto" goes to the very bottom, digs up the causes and effects, and in a very clear manner lays them before the spectator that they may act as a warning to those who are careless when the "pest" is around.

There are five different species of flies which are particular offenders and many views show them eating sugar, decayed flesh, syrup, etc., and then the delightful way they have of mixing the ingredients when opportunity presents itself. When a particularly instructive caption announces that "It is not a far cry from the cuspidor to the consumptive" and the following views show Mr. Fly in the role of the "dirty villun" again, one is bound to sit up and take notice of the warnings which are given.

Among the important scenes are those showing the larvae with its legless maggots; close-ups of the eyes with their myriads of lenses; the strong tongue; "flies fresh from the manure heap to the table"; and laying eggs on paper.

The reel also goes into details and shows explicitly the manner in which the pest can be combatted.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Their Dizzy Finish"

(Hallroom Boys Comedy—Two Reels—Distributed Thru Federated Film Exchanges)

PERCY and Ferdie enter the taxi business here. A dilapidated Ford offers an opportunity for some amusing gags. The picture opens with the two Hallroomers collecting tin cans. These are made into a Ford. Then follows a wild ride with Sid Smith apparently taking a considerable amount of punishment in falling off the car and tumbling all over the street In the later half of the picture Percy and Ferdie run a railroad, with the madeover Ford serving as the trolley. This sequence ends the picture. Sid Smith neglects his car to make love to a girl, there is a smash-up, and the Ford reverts to type—a heap of tin cans. The last scene shows the boys gathering up the tin cans preparatory to getting a new car.

"Their Dizzy Finish" should not fall down. Sid Smith's tumbling and some good gags make it a satisfactory comedy able to give average entertainment.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"An Angle in Idaho"

(Chester Screenic-Educational)

THE appeal in this one is to those interested in fishing. With its locale laid in the outdoors of the great Northwest, the reel shows some beautiful scenic effects, just the kind to place the mind of the spectator, whether he has the poetic nature or not, in the land of dreams.

Many views of the salmon are also shown as they glide through the silvery waters, to be caught sooner or later by the fisherman on the hook or in the net. After viewing various scenes picturing the mountains, its torrents, the countless gorges and beautiful wild streams, the angler's paradise is shown. This is a selected spot in the mountains, the river flowing through at a slow pace, with the angler quietly manœuvring his rod and line to entice the fish—a really delightful scene.

If your patrons are interested in fishing you can't miss on this one. If they're not, the reel has plenty of wild scenery.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Constance Talmadge has serious moments here; picture fairly interesting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Delighted our people. Box office kept busy." "Played to a capacity house the entire week, but it would not be fair to give the credit to the picture alone, as it was run in conjunction with a week's musical festival, featuring works of local composers." "Only average picture, but it took well with our patrons and we played to excellent business." "They like Constance so they liked this one. Big business." "Surprised Connie's friends, and, while it was entirely different, they liked it. Went over big." "One of the best vehicles Constance Talmadge has ever had. It is something more than pure farce, having a logical idea behind it. An excellent box office attraction."

"Propaganda and spectacular melodrama are blended here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew very well despite the fact that it was the week before Easter." "A regular woman's picture—result, big houses and box office returns that tripled as the engagement continued. Held over for second week." "Held over for second week to better than average business." "A somewhat rambling story. Chief interest centres about the lavish scenes. A good box-office attraction." "Continued to draw crowded houses on second run." "Opinion as to entertainment value greatly divided. Business good." "Big picture, lavishly produced. Made money for us."

MAN OF THE FOREST, THE (HAMPTON-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST .....MAY 28
"Will be ranked high by the melodrama fans."—M. P. News.

"Mostly good clothes and subtitles, with little action or incident."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture, but poor business." "Katherine MacDonald is well liked by women patrons, so business was fair, due to patronage of feminine contingent." "Made a nice hit and fine attendances reported throughout. Was combined here with Sennett's 'Love, Honor, and Behave,' which went good."

NUMBER 17 (FOX) GEORGE WALSH.....MAR. 19
"Convenient melodrama carries some excitement."—M. P. News.

NUT, THE (UNITED ARTISTS) DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS.....MAR. 19
"Entertaining in spots, but needs editing."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Exceptional business for week during Lent. Picture not up to Fairbanks' standard." "Fairbanks has slipped in this picture. It is much poorer than the 'Mark of Zoro,' and while many patrons came to see him the first few days, the rest of the week's bnsiness was poor." "Went over big. Some adverse criticism to the effect that it was not up to star's standard." "Fine picture which brought good business." "Brought big business. Pleased my patrons and was a drawing-card." "Find this an average picture with the usual business." "This picture went over big. It has very good entertaining values" "Fine business with this picture. My patrons like Doug and of course turned out strong to see his picture." "The picture is not no to Douglas Fairbanks' standard, but has an appealing title and offers a good field for exploitation. A good house the entire week." "Running this a second week to big business." "This picture was in no way extraordinary, but it played to big business because of the anniversary that surrounded it and the extra advertising."

OATH, THE (MAYFLOWER-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST..APR. 23
"Rather disappointing in spite of faultless production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture, but only drew our regular partons." "Held up consistently all week. Audiences liked it. A good box office attraction." "Very fine picture, but rather heavy for summer entertainment."

OFF-SHORE PIRATE, THE (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....MAR. 12
"Not enough substance for picture entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Viola Dana always draws a good house for me, and this was no exception. An entertaining little pictnre. Business good."

"A well made, entertaining Buck Jones feature."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"A very good Charles Ray picture but failed to please majority. Played to exceptionally poor business for seven days." "Fine picture which drew good business." "An nnusually delightful bit of screen entertainment which the entire city flocked to see. Censorship would not be worrying the industry if there were more films like this." "An excellent picture from every angle and business was splendid. Went over big." "The picture was shown at an opportune time, during Boys' Week, and it played to a capacity house for seven days." "Charles Ray in a beloved classic—an irresistible combination. Business excellent throughout week."

"CHARGE IT"

(Garson-Equity-State Rights)

Interesting Picture of the Eternal Triangle

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG seems to be entirely successful with triangle plays. Her latest, "Charge It," while of a familiar pattern in its general outline, is developed with enough originality to make it above the ordinary in this brand of drama. It is the exposition of what is occurring in millions of homes, when the wife, allowed to have a charge account, permits herself to take advantage of it and plunges her husband head over heels in debt. In this picture, the opening shots reveal a very happy, lovey-dovey couple—each wrapped up in the other's personality—each sacrificing little selfish pleasures that the other might be rewarded in some way.

This habit of the bride to say "Charge It!" to the clerks in the stores soon brings a rift in the domestic happiness—a rift which is augmented by the conduct of a philanderer whose object in life seems to be taken up with attracting other men's wives. Our heroine's husband is provoked at her charge account, and indulges in a bit of scolding. He is supposed to be struggling along, although the upkeep of his house spells a goodly income. A time comes when the wife is provoked into seeking companionship with the other man if for no other reason than finding someone who will sympathize with her. But she surprises him with another woman. So thoroughly discouraged she seeks employment as the coat-room attendant at a restaurant.

One does not know just how the picture will develop at this point. And in its favor is a note of novelty. The husband happens to patronize the restaurant and discovering his wife, arranges a reconciliation. She has learned to suppress her impulse of getting into debt or allowing herself to have merchandise charged. There is a fine little sermon to be gained from this picture without those in charge making it a preachment. It is really a slice of life though the figure of the other man tends to make it picturey at times. Yet the character is needed to round out the conflict. The offering could be trimmed of some extraneous footage, particularly as it applies to a valet and his daughter, who really have no place in the plot and hinder the otherwise compact continuity. The titles are praiseworthy although some of them could be shortened. The direction is first rate. The scenes are cleverly arranged against appropriate backgrounds and the detail and intimate touches are correct. Miss Young gives a performance marked for its sincerity. Her supporting cast contains several popular names, such as Betty Blythe, Nigel Barrie and Herbert Rawlinson. All furnish good portrayals.—Length, 6,900 feet.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Clara Kimball Young is the star of "Charge It!" which comes to the———— theatre next————. This is a novel development of the ancient triangle and permits the star to display her marked talent for emotional expression. As Julia Lawrence she is happy and contented as a bride. Her husband allows her to indulge her caprices and whims and gives her a charge account in the stores. But she takes advantage of it by charging one thing after another—until her husband says stop!"

Piqued at his conduct she leaves him when the argument develops into a quarrel and tries to find sympathy with a man whose object is to win wives away from husbands. But she finds this so-called friend with another woman. The distracted wife finds employment as the coat-room attendant at a restaurant. Her husband comes there one evening and discovers her. A reconciliation is effected and the wife learns that too much charge account does not pay. The picture is genuine in its touches. And succeeds in holding the interest. Miss Young is supported by a well known cast that includes Nigel Barrie, Herbert Rawlinson and Betty Blythe.

PROGRAM READER

Do you allow your wife to have a charge account? Does she take advantage of it by charging every purchase, until at the end of the month you don't know where you stand in your bank book? Do you countenance your wife running you into debt at every occasion? Do you believe in charge accounts? Did you know that you have to have charge accounts in clubs, etc.? See Clara Kimball Young in the fascinating picture of domestic trouble and happiness, "Charge It," at the———— theatre next————. This picture will teach many married couples a lesson in the manner of finding happiness. Many matrimonial ventures are unsuccessful because of this habit of charging everything at every occasion. Herbert Rawlinson and Betty Blythe are in the cast.

SUGGESTIONS

The unusual plot in this domestic triangle is sufficient for you to make capital of in your copy. You can print a lot of cardboard teasers of fairly good size with the words, "Charge It," written across. These will excite curiosity. Also play up the title in other ways. Tell of Miss Young and her fine supporting cast. By all means mention Herbert Rawlinson, Nigel Barrie, and Betty Blythe. They have all been stars and the latter is the star of the much-talked-of "The Queen of Sheba." Use catch lines written around the title. Stage a prologue in harmony wtih the theme. Play up the picture as comparable to "Hush," stating that it is a fine entertainment.

"THE BEAUTIFUL GAMBLER"

(Universal)

Time-Worn Picture Obvious All the Way

THIS Universal picture may be catalogued as time-worn material, the theme and characters having done yeoman service for many years. Anyone who is a steady patron of the photoplay can anticipate every scene, and once the figures are planted it is easy to guess the denouement. It isn't that the subtitles give it away; but that the line of action is so orthodox that captions aren't really needed. Peter B. Kyne, the author, is capable of much more imagination than what he displayed here. He has taken a western setting with a mining camp as the background of his conventional characters. An old settler is allowed to get into debt, which introduces the mercenary villain whose purpose is to foreclose the mortgage unless the former consents to giving him his daughter in marriage. She performs this sacrifice willingly, although there is no love lost between them.

The action switches here and develops along another track through introducing the renegade son of a 'Frisco lawyer. One can see the eventual romance. The young man is turned out of home and wanders, in the course of time, into the mining camp, where he flourishes a healthy bank roll and attracts the wife of the villain. There follows some cut and dried incident in which the old settler commits suicide—a bartender employee has a brawl with the vicious owner of the saloon, and a fire in which the villain is supposed to have lost his life. Naturally the regenerated hero takes the wife (thinking her a widow) to a distant city. He is in his hotel room when the dead man turns up very much alive. A tussle occurs and the bad man drops dead from a bullet fired by a gun which the real murderer tosses into the room. From a fire escape he had been abiding his opportunity to execute revenge.

So the hero is indicted for murder. It is improbable that he would refuse to clear himself. The very presence of another man in his room could be made to indicate burglary or self-defense. Which would have been a good defense seeing as how the dead man could not testify in his own behalf. However, he takes the stand and refuses to answer questions fearing that such a course might implicate his sweetheart. The picture finishes according to Hoyle by introducing the real murderer who has been located at the last moment and who confesses to the crime. The youth's father had come to the rescue as the lawyer for the defense and a reconciliation occurs when the young man shows that he has found his manhood. The picture has very little merit as to plot and the incident is extremely old. At best it is only a two-reeler padded out to feature length.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Molly Hanlon ..... Grace Darmond
Miles Rand ..... Jack Mower
Lee Kirk ..... Harry Van Meter
Jim Devlin ..... Charles Brinley
Judge Rand ..... Herschel Mayall
Mark Hanlon ..... Willis Marks

By Peter B. Kyne.
Scenario by Hope Loring.
Directed by William Worthington.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A picture of Western life—of a mining camp in the heart of the desert—of a girl who sacrificed herself on the marriage altar to save her father from debt—that is "The Beautiful Gambler," adapted from a Peter B. Kyne story. The picture comes to the————theatre next————and————with a cast that includes Jack Mower, Grace Darmond, Harry Van Meter, Herschel Mayall and others. The daughter, played by Miss Darmond, has entered matrimony with a man she detests. He is the proprietor of the camp saloon. He threatens to ruin her father unless she consents to become his wife. She has no alternative and accepts the bad bargain.

In the course of time the leopard shows his spots and when his saloon burns the natives think that he perished in the flames. This is the reason that his wife ran away with the reformed son of a San Francisco lawyer. It is while on their honeymoon that the bad husband turns up and is killed. The hero is tried for murder but is absolved from blame when the real culprit is captured. The picture is interesting.

PROGRAM READER

She was a beautiful girl who to save her father from ruin married the gambling proprietor of the dance hall. It was a marriage entirely hateful to her. Yet she put up with a bad bargain. She ruled over the chips and roulette table. Then one day a STRANGER walked in—a good-looking man who impressed her with his courage. There was a brawl, the lights went out—the saloon burned and the wife and the man went away. What followed in their lives was tense with adventure and excitement. See "The Beautiful Gambler," a Universal picture featuring a cast of favorite players, including Grace Darmond and Jack Mower. The picture is a Western melodrama that carries thrills, fast and lively action and plenty of color and atmosphere. At this threatre next————

SUGGESTIONS

Since this picture has not much to recommend it the best plan would be to use the soft pedal. Just state that it is a Western that packs quite a wallop—that furnishes the spectator with plenty of excitement on occasions—that it features Grace Darmond, who has a long experience on the screen, and Jack Mower, who will be remembered as a leading man. The title may come in handy for some special exploitation. But the best angle is to concentrate upon the billing of the picture as an interesting Western. Don't give away the plot. This would be courting danger for many would stay away if they knew how old-fashioned is the story. Play safe by calling attention to a good Western that packs plenty of punch.

Exhibitor Comment—"Drew a pleasing attendance with average results." "Used in conjunction with 'You Can Never Tell.' Average business, but it increased at end of week." "Nothing extraordinary about the picture, but Alice Brady is always a sure bet here. Showed in conjunction with Buster Keaton in "Nelghbors." A good house all week."

PARTNERS OF FATE (FOX) LOUISE LOVELY.....FEB. 26
"A good average program attraction."— M. P. News.

PARTNERS OF THE TIDE (WILLAT-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 2
"Entertaining sea picture here."—M. P. News.

PASSION FLOWER, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) NORMA TALMADGE.....APR. 16
"Wonderfully acted and artistically produced adaptation of stage success."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Business excellent, as it always is when I play a Talmadge picture. This was more favorably commented on than anything Norma Talmadge has played in a year. Colorful, vivid, and realistic." "The best picture Norma Talmadge has had for a long time. Proved an excellent box-office attraction." "Nothing like a Talmadge picture to get the crowds but this one didn't please so well, though business was up to expectation." "A great many people were disappointed in the story but they came to see the star. Business was up to standard." "A splendid feature film which lived up to Norma Talmadge's high standard. Played to much better than average business during the week of its run." "A second run, helped considerably by the fact that the play of the same name was in town, too. The tragic ending spoiled it for many fans, but business was brisk all week." "Went over fair, but drew big business on account of the star." "Capacity business, which is usually the rule with a Norma Talmadge production." "Many comments both for and against from patrons, but picture did good business." "Like all Norma Talmadge pictures, this went over good and drew satisfactory business." "Good picture to the usual good business that Norma Talmadge always brings."

"Well produced domestic drama that will please."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Ran well for the entire week. Big houses set the stamp of their approval on this picture." "Held over for second week because of tremendous business. Generally pleased." "Business held up very well for second week. Pleased our patrons." "A good picture that played to good business." "A slender story produced to bring Dorothy Dickson into pictures. Not a strong box office attraction." "Found this to be a fair picture. Business about average." "A great attraction. This one brought large box office receipts." "Second week to fair business." "Good picture played to better than average business for week." "Lavish but not satisfying. Drew well but did not build. "Very good. Two days to extra big and big business." "Exceptionally well liked by everybody. One of the best opening Sundays in weeks. Kept up satisfactorily."

PENNY OF TOP HILL TRAIL (FEDERATED FILM EXCHANGES) BESSIE LOVE.....MAY 7
"Bessie Love returns in worth-while romantic comedy drama."—M. P. News.

PERFECT CRIME, A (DWAN-ASSO. PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.MAR. 5
"Director and star make character study interesting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The plot of the picture is good but the production lacks pep." "Originally booked for week, but pulled on Wednesday, warm weather partly to blame for unsatisfactory business."

PLAYTHING OF B'WAY, THE (REALART) JUSTINE JOHNSTONE.....MAR. 26
"Justine Johnstone scores in satisfactory offering."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pretty poor stuff. Justine doesn't live up to expectations, after all the press-agent flub-dub about her." "A fairly entertaining production that drew average business." "Nothing great about the picture, but it is a creator of public interest and filled my house all week. Offers a good field for exploitation." "Good picture, well cast and directed. Public well pleased." "Extra big business for the week. Public seemed pleased with story, star and her ability as an actress."

PRICE OF POSSESSION, THE (PARAMOUNT) ETHEL CLAYTON.MAR. 26
"Ethel Clayton gives clever performance in mild entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Does not come up to Ethel Clayton's standard. A fair house all week, but an unsatisfactory picture." "One of the poorest things Etbel Clayton has ever done." "A fair picture and fair puller."

PRINCESS JONES (VITAGRAPH) ALICE CALHOUN.....MAR. 12
"Light offering affords fair entertainment."—M. P. News.

PRISONERS OF LOVE (RELEASED BY GOLDWYN) BETTY COMPSON.....JAN. 29
"Very unusual and artistic drama."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Charming, dainty picture. Opened to better Sunday in several weeks. Well liked, but no unbounded enthusiasm." "Pleased our patrons and drew good business." "Attracted in a pleasing manner and netted quite pleasingly." "Only an average picture which played to fair business."

PROXIES (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 23
"Interesting picture of crooks and redemption."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Positively the worst business in several years. Nothing about it to arouse interest." "Just an average program picture. Nothing to get excited over." "This feature proved one of the best business getters of the year and was generally liked by our patrons." "Didn't draw any too well for me, but pleased fairly well those who saw it." "Just fair, especially from box office standpoint." "Audiences commented favorably on this production. Business fair. Acting of cast good."

PUPPETS OF FATE (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....APR. 30

Exhibitor Comment—"Viola Dana always a sure bet here. She lives up to her reputation in this picture. Good house all week."

REPUTATION (UNIVERSAL-JEWEL) PRISCILLA DEAN.....MAY 14
"Interesting picture might have been more dramatic."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Shows here on its first release and went over big. An alluring title which attracts interest. A full house all week." "Great box office attraction. Splendid picture, although incredulous in spots. Fair business."

RICH GIRL, POOR GIRL (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....JAN. 29
"Gladys Walton scores in heart interest story."—M. P. News.

ROAD DEMON, THE (FOX) TOM MIX.....FEB. 26
Exhibitor Comment—"Tom Mix always a favorite here. Business good. picture fair."

ROADS OF DESTINY (GOLDWYN) PAULINE FREDERICK.....APR. 9
"Hopeless story enhanced somewhat by star's splendid acting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pauline Frederick is not up to her usual standard in this production and it can't even begin to compare with 'Madame X.'" "Artistically and dramatically, very fine, but did not get the business. Miss Frederick's admirers did not like her in this. Sorry, for thought it was great, myself."

SMALL TOWN IDOL, A (SENNETT-ASSO. PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 19
"Mack Sennett gives a three ring circus here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Second week to good business." "Sennett has given us one of the best comedies of the year in this picture and it is a laugbing success from start to finish. Broke house records first week of its stay bere and we are holding it for a second week." "Fairly good picture, but we had poor business with it. "Picture lived up to the advance notices given it by critics and we played to splendid business during its run." "Attracted capacity business for week's run." "Sennett has produced one of the best comedies ever screened and it did a big business at our theatre during its entire run." "Broke the house record on opening and held over for second week." "Good summer stuff. One of the funniest comedies ever made." "Held it over for a second week to box office returns almost as much as the first week. If it had not been for two days of hot weather we would have beaten the first week. Picture, curiously enough, appealed here mostly to men." "Well liked, drew fine and receipts pleasing."

"THE BLACK PANTHER'S CUB"
(W. K. Ziegfeld)

Cost Much and Achieves Little Worthy of Praise

THERE is only one thing that makes this picture deserving of any great praise and that is the lavishness with which it has been produced. There is every evidence that no one was stinted and that the objective was a really big super-special. But in spite of valiant efforts on the part of a formidable cast, "The Black Panther's Cub" fails to register as vital drama.

The faults are plainly apparent. They are, a story that is unreal, artificial and theatrical, and direction that spends so much time stressing minor details, developing a continuity and obtaining atmosphere, with conventional, long shot camera work, that any real dramatic moments it might have had are lost in a maze of short scenes that cut back and forth in a most confusing and unsatisfactory manner.

The theme not new but always dependable is the argument of whether heredity or environment make the man or in this case the woman. Florence Reed has the principal role, playing two parts, a mother and daughter, and gives a very creditable performance especially as the elder woman. Norman Trevor's undenied talents, even without his voice, are practically wasted in the leading man's role. He is a good type for the part, after they get by a sequence where he is supposed to be a young man, and that is all. Tyrone Power is the heavy but he too gets small opportunity.

The story of "The Black Panther's Cub" is English and Parisan in locale. It was written by Ethel Donoher and suggested by Swinburne's poem of the Roman queen, "Faustine." Verses of the poem are used as titles from time to time.

Emile Chautard directed, sticking to the old French school methods and never for a moment lets his cast register any contrasts in style of acting or in the tempo of the scenes. Each sequence is a hectic, "keep moving," repetition of the others spending all its time telling the story and none in providing entertainment as it goes along. In spite of a lot of money spent and wonderful sets correct in every detail, it is just an average program picture.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

"Faustine" ..... Florence Reed

Adapted by Philip Bartholomae from the story by Ethel Donoher and suggested by Swinburne's poem "Faustine."

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Black Panther's Cub," a most elaborately produced drama on the age-old problem of whether heredity or environment make the man, or in this case the woman, with Florence Reed, the famous Broadway emotional star, in the leading role, and such supporting players as Tyrone Power, Norman Trevor, Earle Fox, Paula Shay and a host of others just as well known will be the feature picture attraction at the ———— for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

The picture is a super-special directed by Emile Chautard, with its locale in England and Paris. Miss Reed plays a dual role, that of mother and daughter. The picture is in seven reels. The story is by Ethel Donoher and was suggested by the Swinburne poem, "Faustine," which in turn concerns the famous Roman queen.

PROGRAM READER

The ———— theatre offers "The Black Panther's Cub" as its principal picture attraction for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

The feature is an adaptation of a story by Ethel Donoher suggested by the famous Swinburne poem, "Faustina" about the Roman Queen of the same name.

A cast of characters that embraces a score of Broadway stars is not the least of the many attractive features of "The Black Panther's Cub." Florence Reed, talented emotional star, has the leading role, while others who are equally famous, are Norman Trevor, Tyrone Power, Earle Fox, and Paula Shay.

The story is founded on a theme of unusual importance, the age-old question of whether heredity or environment make the man or rather in this case, the woman. The production was directed by Emile Chautard, one of the few great French producers, remembered for such great pictures as "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," etc.

CATCH LINES

The Black Panther had a cub and decency enough still left to ask her one respectable friend, a man of course, to give the child a fair chance to be that which her mother had not. And so twenty years after, Clive, Earl of Maudsley's adopted daughter, proved whether tainted blood will overrule the teachings and example of a clean environment.

A big picture enacted by a cast so great that such stars as Florence Reed must share honors with Tyrone Power, Norman Trevor, Paula Shay and Earle Fox.

"SCRAP IRON"
(First National)

Greatest Prizefight Picture Ever Made

UNLESS we are to figure that Charlie Ray's big following among the 'flappers" isn't going to be interested in a picture that is 99 44/100 per cent prize fight, with the romance noticeable by its absence, this ought to go over for a hit. Certainly it is most timely, with the Dempsey-Carpentier fight now the topic of the day, and certainly the men are going to eat it up, for it has the best prize fight stuff, including actual fistic encounter, ring side shots that are the ultimate in realism, bits of comedy and a hundred fine types of the pug and his followers, that has ever come to the screen. And for all of this it is still Ray's picture even to the boxing itself. The star handles himself like a Carpentier and his battle with Tom O'Brien as "Battling Burke" is no "love taps" affair. It is an honest to goodness clean prize fight that will make any male and a lot of the feminines forget that they are looking at a picture or else the camera man has put more "fool-'em" stuff on his crank than we have ever seen.

"Scrap Iron" is an adaptation of one of Charles E. Van Loan's S. E. P. stories. It is rather shy on plot, but the idea on which the production is founded has been developed with a lot of likeable incident and little detail that entirely makes up for the lack of story.

Besides playing the leading role, one that keeps him in about all the scenes, the star is announced as having directed the production. In this connection it must also be admitted that he has shown himself possessed of a fine sense of contrast and first class judgment of tempo. There are times that from a masculine standpoint Ray shows too much of an inclination to pose and overdo his little mannerisms, but this very thing may save the picture with the flappers and is a part of his stock in trade.

And best of all is the exploitation angle, based on the coming International encounter in July.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

John Steel ..... Charles Ray
John's Mother ..... Lydia Knott
Midge Flannigan ..... Vera Steadman
Bill Dugan ..... Tom Wilson
Battling Burke ..... Tom O'Brien
Big Tim Riley ..... Stanton Heck
Matt Brady ..... Charles Wheelock
John's Chum ..... Claude Berkeley

By Chas. E. Van Loan.
Directed by Charles Ray.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Charles Ray is the author and director of "Scrap Iron," his latest feature which will be shown at the ———— theatre next ————. This story by Chas. E. Van Loan, the short-story writer, permits the star to flash his rare talent in the role of a youth whose mother is everything in his life. She has brought him up to respect the law—to show kindliness to everyone. And she does not want him to cultivate his primitive instincts. There comes a time, however, when the little family is in dire straits and John, as the youth is known, enters the prize ring and fights to keep the wolf from the door.

His sweetheart has not responded to his advances and he gets even after his success in the ring, by failing to encourage her when she attempts to renew the romance. "Scrap Iron" is perfect Ray material. The youth which he does so ably on the screen lives again in this picture. It carries a rich vein of pathos, a note of sentiment and some exceptional scenes in the ring. These are rich in color and atmosphere. Mr. Ray is supported by a clever company. The star's direction is on a par with his interpretation.

PROGRAM READER

Charles Ray, the star who stands at the top of his profession—Charles Ray, the superb delineator of youthful types—Charles Ray, the star who has made small town life part and parcel of film entertainment, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in his newest success entitled "Scrap Iron." This picture is an adaptation of Chas. E. Van Loan's short story and permits Ray to flash his familiar talent in the role of a youth whose mother dominates his every action. He is a prize fighter who is compelled to put on the gloves to keep the wolf from the door—even though his profession is against his mother's wishes. The picture carries abundant thrills, a clever romance, moments of pathos and heart interest and is certain in its appeal. Don't miss it.

SUGGESTIONS

You can tell them that Charles Ray is coming in "Scrap Iron," a picture in which he is the star as well as the director. Emphasize that the superb delineator of youth on the screen has in the offering a picture calculated to win new friends as well as keeping the old ones. You might play up the author. Before his death he was a favorite contributor to the popular magazines. And he sure knew how to write. Play up the title. Now that the big fight is coming off between Dempsey and Carpentier July 2, it would be a good angle to link up with it and advise your patrons that they won't have to journey to Jersey City to see a fight when there is one at the ———— that provides royal entertainment. The lights with Ray and the paper—these are sufficient to attract the crowds.

CATCH LINES

See Charles Ray in "Scrap Iron," a picture with a punch. See the likeable star in the prize ring.

"Scrap Iron" is Charles Ray's newest picture. Don't miss it. It is a great entertainment.

"Enjoyed fair business for week run. Opened to big business. Audiences commented favorably on production." "A splendid production with a title that is a business getter. A capacity house at my theatre for a week's run." "Went over fair to fair attendance." "A fair picture. It disappointed many, however, who came, attracted by the combined names of Barrie and DeMille and went away disappointed at the lack of action and general slowness. On the other hand it charmed an equal number. Business was brisk." "Nice picture, but quiet to interest many. Hardly a normal business." "As entertainment a good picture, but failed to draw for me." "Public opinion divided. Well directed and fairly good picture, but there is no special punch to create more than a passing comment." "One of the best pictures of the season. William DeMille has adhered carefully to the main points of the original story and has maintanied all of Barrie"s charm. Lois Wilson and Conrad Nagel are excellent in the star roles."

"THE ROAD TO LONDON"
(Associated Exhibitors-Pathe)

Bryant Washburn Exploits London in This Feature

BRYANT WASHBURN has picked out the best spots in and about London, turned the camera upon them and with the aid of a rather weak story emphasized their importance.

Piccadilly Circus and all the other famous thoroughfares, large and small, act as part of a background in which the Thames River and the surrounding scenery, and the principal temples of interest are also introduced.

Mr. Washburn works very hard through the five reels, jumping into automobiles, taxis, canoes, etc., even using the little "jaunting car" drawn by the usual donkey, in order that he may accomplish his object, namely, the escape of Lady Emily from the clutches of a bold bad duchess.

One thing, we'll say about the filming of these scenes is that the star seemed to have all London working for him while he was on the job which began with the traffic cop stationed at Piccadilly Circus and ran the gamut down (or up) to the railroad officials.

The opening scenes show Washburn at Piccadilly Circus standing amidst its vast throng, the cameraman taking a splendid panoramic view of the place during its busiest hour. It is here the story begins, the star playing the role of a young American millionaire in search of adventure. It comes, in the form of a young woman called Lady Emily, who is riding in her car and who is said to be mistreated by "the Dutchess."

As the story amounts to nothing and is a series of "chases" up to the finish without any attention being paid to plot, rhyme or reason, the spectators mind must fall on the impressive exteriors.

The cast which is fair and rather small seems to be composed of English actors who either over act or become passive in their work.

Joan Morgan, who plays the feminine lead, is a very pretty young lady, but is rather amateurish in her role.—Frank Leonard.

PROGRAM READER

Bryant Washburn, the well known star, will appear on the screen in his latest production in this theatre on————of next————

And he is said to have one of the best pictures of his career in "The Road to London," a production fairly bubbles over with excitement and romance.

It is the story of a young American of the dashing sort who is on a business trip to London with his father, a well known oil king. Having an hour to spare before leaving the young man strolls down amidst the roaring life of Piccadilly Circus, and there as he stands on the curb, sees the girl who is to lead him into romance and adventure.

It happens that the young lady is seated in an automobile when the young American received the S. O. S. signal from the young lady. He tried to answer it by following her in a taxi, but it was not until the next day that he had a chance to serve. Rex was haunting Emily's neighborhood when she found a moment to ask him to help her.

With real Yankee pep and nerve he helped himself to a doctor's runabout and the adventure had begun in earnest.

The picture is well directed and has a splendid cast.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Here's one that should interest the patrons and give good satisfaction. It is a tale of a Yankee who steals an English bride and will be seen at the————theatre on————of next week under the title of "The Road to London," with Bryant Washburn in the star role.

Rex Rowland, a dashing young American on a business trip to London with his father, a well known oil king, had an hour to spare before leaving and amidst the roaring life of Piccadilly Circus, sought a little adventure.

As Rex stood on the curb he beheld a beautiful automobile going by and in it none other than the pretty Lady Emily, a helpless plaything in the hands of a stern and determined duchess.

The young man received the S. O. S. signal from Emily's eyes and tried to follow her in a taxi, but it was not until the next day that he had a chance to serve. Rex was haunting Emily's neighborhood when she found a moment to ask him to help her. With real Yankee pep and nerve he helped himself to a doctor's runabout and the adventure had begun in earnest.

The picture is well directed, has a splendid cast of players who work in beautiful backgrounds.

"KING-QUEEN-JOKER"
(Sydney Chaplin-Paramount)

Fails to Come Up to Expectations

SYDNEY CHAPLIN having proved his talent on a number of occasions, it comes as a surprise to see him hitting below par in this feature of which he is the star and director. "King-Queen-Joker" comes to the screen as out-dated material, with its burlesque of court life and the revolution of the common "peepul." Chaplin went to Europe a year or so ago and it is said made this picture over there. Probably had he put it out sooner it would stand some kind of a chance. But as it is now, it seems a futile attempt to make entertainment out of weak material. In watching the expressions of an audience in a neighborhood house where the offering was shown, the impression we gained was that the spectators wondered what it was all about.

Chaplin tries to play straight at times here, then when he suddenly switches to the baldest kind of slapstick, it tends to make the picture confusing. He has arranged his scenes so that long shots are mostly conspicuous and this is fatal for farcical pretentions. Then again he has permitted himself to overact in most of the situations. Compressed into two reels, with the camera at close range and with Charlie Chaplin or some other gifted comedian, it might get over. There is a deal of foolish byplay with Sydney Chaplin doubling in brass as a king and a barber. The revolutionists are determined to overthrow the former and they run across the barber who apparently is a wonderful double. He is taken to the royal chambers, while the real ruler is spirited away. There is the plot in a nutshell.

The one funny scene in this overdone picture is the banquet episode which shows the star cutting up along the lines of his brother's style when the latter first broke into the movies. It is slapstick with a capital S. But even here he allows the long shots to discount the effectiveness of the scene. The piece should have been exaggerated to the limit with every incident far-fetched and smacking of burlesque. But the picture is allowed to develop some serious moments. And this course is also fatal when it was Chaplin's intent in all probability to provide amusing moments. The offering will not stand comparison with our best two-reel satires or burlesques. It succeeds in being quite tiresome, not only because of repetitious detail, but because of its slender plot.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Sydney Chaplin is the star of the five-reel satire on kings and courts and revolutions which comes to the————theatre next————and————. The star, who is also the director of this captivating comedy, fits into the stunts and incident with much of the talent of his illustrious brother. In fact one would appreciate the fact that his name is Chaplin. The scenes of the piece are laid in a mythical kingdom and the star plays a dual role, that of a king and a barber.

The little kingdom is on the point of a revolution. The common people have tired of their profiteering king. So they use a barber to double for the king while the latter is spirited away. The barber fools the court attaches, and the rest of the entourage. But his actions at the banquet are positively disgraceful. But the court attendants dismiss the breach of etiquette because the king is drunk. In time the real king is rescued from his plight. And the barber is ordered to be shot at sunrise but escapes to become the king of the razor and strop again. The picture scintillates with plenty of amusing incidents.

PROGRAM READER

How would you like to be a king for a day? A barber takes his chance and gets away with it, for a while at least. Sydney Chaplin, one time famous comedian and brother of Charles Chaplin, returns to the screen in a ludicrous five-reel fun fest which will intoxicate you with mirth. The new picture is "King-Queen-Joker." Mr. Chaplin has returned to the screen after an absence of three years. With all the fun he could gather in Europe and America. The comedy deals with a king whose dominion is in the throes of a revolution, and a barber's assistant. The king is kidnapped and the barber takes his place. Out of this situation arises the comedy moments. Don't miss "King-Queen-Joker" at the————theatre next————

SUGGESTIONS

You can put forth a number of striking titles for the exploitation of this feature. Copy prepared in a novel manner with snappy dialogue or snappy phrases will get the patrons interested. Run a quiz box in your newspaper briefs. Play up Sydney Chaplin as the brother of Charlie Chaplin, and a first rate clever comedian who is only overshadowed in the film by his illustrious brother. Tell that he returns as the star and director of this picture after an absence of three years. Send out circular letters announcing Sydney Chaplin. You can put out an attractive herald using the star's face for the king and joker and his leading lady for the queen. Your copy can be linked up with poker terms. The best angle is to make your advertising campaign snappy.

"THE BEACH OF DREAMS"
(Haworth-Robertson-Cole)

Desert Island Picture Conventional in Theme and Treatment

THE desert island formula is the "grand daddy" of them all in screen production. It has been used since the days of the three reelers when producers were groping in the dark for story material. The original producers of this antediluvian pattern should be receiving royalties. He would be able in that event to have gold lined studios and a gold-plated desk. About every blue moon the ancient idea is lugged off the shelf of discarded things and dressed up for the screen. "The Beach of Dreams" is no better nor worse than what has gone before. The conventional characters and action and incident are all assembled in their proper places with nothing out of order.

Regeneration of soul is usually the theme behind the desert island formula. This is one variation; the other is the call of romance heard by the youthful derelicts, who to show the favorite conflict must be widely separated in their stations of life. In this picture the heroine is the aristocrat—a member of Paris society. She is invited to take a cruise by a certain prince and in the subsequent action the boat is wrecked in a fog. The following scene shows her and a couple of rough sailors the only survivors. The end is always in sight though there is a welcome and lifelike twist at the conclusion which reveals the haughty islander refusing to marry her modern Crusoe notwithstanding the fact that she appreciates his manliness.

The incident on the island is developed in familiar style. The heroine suffers from loneliness and in a moment of extremity accepts the attentions of a derelict who wanders over from the other side of the island. The two sailors meet death—one from the quicksands, the other because he endeavored to assert his cave-man instincts. The subsequent sequence discloses the island wanderer overpowering a crew of Chinese seal poachers and forcing them to accept him as captain. "The Beach of Dreams" is just a motion picture of ordinary appeal. Those who wander into the theatre to kill an hour will doubtless find some interest in it after a fashion. The action is hampered by wordy subtitles, though Noah Beery is clever enough actor as the derelict to overcome some of the plot shortcomings. He is the ideal beach-comber to the life. Edith Storey gives a satisfactory performance as the heroine. The wise exhibitor will surround this picture with color and atmosphere and an appropriate prologue. Such a plan will certainly elevate the offering.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Beach of Dreams," an attraction, featuring the delightful Edith Storey, will be the feature at the ———— theatre on ———— of next ————. This is a picture of adventure and romance as found on a desert isle. It features the star and a well balanced cast that includes Noah Beery, than whom there is no better character actor on the screen; Joseph Swickard, Jack Curtis, W. Templar Powell, and George Fisher, in parts which call upon them to furnish clever character studies.

The heroine, tiring of society life, is invited on a yachting cruise. The boat capsizes, the only survivors being the girl and two rough sailors. Realizing that they are alone with her the latter endeavor to assert their evil attentions, but one perishes in the quicksands while the other is killed by Cleo in self-defense. A derelict from another part of the island comes to her rescue and succeeds in bringing her back to civilization. But their stations are so far removed in life that she refuses to marry him despite the fact that he has attracted her. The picture carries sufficient color and atmosphere.

PROGRAM READER

She had tired of society life and a certain adventurer invited her for a yachting cruise. Adventure came a-plenty when the boat was wrecked and she and two survivors of the crew were tossed up on a deserted island. The sailors attempted to assert their evil attentions, but the girl was resourceful enough to defend herself successfully. Then another derelict entered her life—a man who had not seen civilization for some time. Propinquity lent its charms and the call of romance was heard. Then when they had returned to Paris, she refused to marry him. Why? See "The Beach of Dreams," a picture of tropical life and adventure—a picture of color and atmosphere. At the ———— theatre next ———— with Edith Storey.

SUGGESTIONS

Don't give away this plot by any means. It is too ancient. Simply bill it as a colorful picture which carries a wealth of adventure and romance. The title is a winner and could come in for some special exploitation. Also feature the star and the cast. Most picturegoers are familiar with Noah Beery's work. So play up his name. Bill the picture as an adventurous romance. A prologue may be put over which would certainly uplift the picture if you feature some Oriental dancing, a ukelele festival, and characters similar to these found in the story against a desert isle background. Snappy catch lines based on the title would help if you incorporate them in the newspaper briefs and program reader.

"WHITE AND UNMARRIED"
(Paramount)

Fair Entertainment in Meighan's Latest

THOMAS MEIGHAN has in "White and Unmarried" a picture of average merit. As entertainment it cannot approach "The City of Silent Men." In the first place it lacks suspense and the incident has been developed in such a way that one can anticipate the subsequent scenes. There is a satirical note, however, which gives it spontaneity, and patrons will enjoy it because of its light and breezy characterization, the wealth of captivating subtitles, and the manner in which the star fits himself to the requirements of the role. The main title is decidedly attractive and is certain of drawing patronage notwithstanding Meighan's popularity.

If "The City of Silent Men" has not been so extraordinary in story interest, "White and Unmarried" would be considered in the top notch class. Coincidence is quite a factor in the arrangement of scenes and characters, which, of course, makes the offering picturey in its action. The hero is a successful burglar "who is accepted in the homes of society people—during their absence." A telegram informs him that he is the beneficiary of his rich uncle's will—to the extent of a million dollars. So he decides to give up his life of crime, journey to Europe and have a good time. The latter part of the picture is much more interesting than the earlier reels, although the romantic element is arbitrarily conceived. The hero meets the "only girl" in a cabaret and is instrumental in saving her from the persistent attentions of an admiring Apache.

The action here is enlivened with good incident which carries quite a sparkle through the hero being victimized by thieving waiters and applying his old pickpocket tricks and recovering his valuables. It is said that Meighan picked out this story, which indicates that he knows the sort of material for which he is best fitted. There is a counter romance with an American girl being intrigued by a French crook. This fellow really supplies the conflict which has for a climax a free-for-all fight, with the hero rescuing the girl from danger. The picture is rather tedious in development. And it presents the error of permitting the French and American characters to understand each other perfectly—even to up-to-date slang. The titles, however, are exceptionally good and really uplift the story. There is a bit of an effort to kid the patron and the picture by the author of the captions. Jacqueline Logan has the heroine's role and fills it acceptably. A little repression in facial expression would make her appear more natural.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Coming to the ———— theatre next ———— is "White and Unmarried," a fitting picture to "The City of Silent Men," in which Thomas Meighan is starred. It permits the likeable star to indulge in his easy captivating style of acting—a style which has won him a large following. In "White and Unmarried" Mr. Meighan gets away from his crook role, although there is a slight touch of his familiar art in the forepart of the story.

As Billy Kane, he inherits a million dollars from a sporty uncle. Equipped with this amount he gives up his burglary work, decides to reform and travel in Europe. While in France he meets the girl of his heart and is successful in winning her for a bride,. but only after experiencing various exciting and unique adventures. He is the victim of a pickpocket and also runs afoul of Apaches. But he shows his courage by emerging successful. The picture is packed with interesting incidents and is capably acted and directed.

PROGRAM READER

He gave up a life of crime when he inherited a million dollars from his rich uncle. He was on speaking terms with society—especially when society was absent from its home. That is, he was able to walk away with the family plate and jewels. But having a million he saw no use in continuing as a thief.. So he went to Europe—to France to be exact. And be found a wonderful girl. But in order to capture her for himself, he was forced to experience considerable trouble—trouble which led him into all sorts of adventure and thrills. The picture is "White and Unmarried." It comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with Thomas Meighan as the star. A fine picture—a clever picture—an amusing picture—a thrilling picture. Don't miss it.

SUGGESTIONS

You can put on a prologue for this picture quite apropos with the scenes of the play. First you can use a setting after a scene of a den in the Latin Quarter of Paris. Have about a dozen singers attired in Apache costumes—use a couple for an Apache dance. Darken your stage. And the atmosphere is complete. This is the prologue that the Criterion, New York is using. It certainly helps in putting the picture over. Play up the title in a teaser campaign. It is a winner and excites attention. Play up Meighan and tell that he has a fitting successor to "The City of Silent Men" here. Make use of the fact that the star is rapidly approaching the secure place where only a few may be found. Bill it as a romantic adventure.

CATCH LINES

He inherited a million dollars and gave up a life of crime. Follow Tom Meighan in "White and Unmarried." A picture of thrills, romance and adventure.

"A RIDIN' ROMEO"
(Fox)

Unexcelled Horsemanship in Mix's Western Farce

TOM MIX, in turning author, has given himself a picture which will rank among his best, solely because there is hardly a moment when there is not daring riding, reckless jumping off cliffs and scaling of precipitous mountain sides. It should be understood that "A Ridin' Romeo" is different from Mix's previous efforts. It is Western farce, whereas his other pictures were dramas or at least comedy-dramas. But this never for an instant becomes sensible. It is not very high class farce, and not highly original. Its titling is largely of the mechanical, slangy, punning style, with many sub-titles injected simply for the sake of a pun or a neat bit of slang. Neither does Mix register as a remarkable comedian, but despite these shortcomings, "A Ridin' Romeo" will please the star's admirers because it contains consistently rapid-fire action.

Mix seeks after gags on horseback, and gets a combined powerful thrill and a weak laugh. There is a huge free-for-all in a ranch house. Then comes a long shot of the building rocking like a boat at sea. Mix dives through the wall and there is a chase over mountains and up and down chasms that is good proof that Mix has few if any screen equals in the art of horsemanship. Another scene shows Mix rescuing a stage coach from a fake hold-up. He drives four horses at top speed with the coach turning bends on two wheels and appearing all the time to be on the verge of capsizing. There is a sequence where the star finds a deserted baby. He tries to get a laugh out of the old, hackneyed vulgarity with the infant, and he fails.

Even in the quiet moments of the picture, Mix refuses to keep still. He moves about in a grotesque trot in every scene and tries facial contortions. The picture opens in a manner like the Douglas Fairbanks feature, "The Nut." Mix is an inventive cowboy who has devised all sorts of labor-saving devices which he uses in his home. Machinery cooks his breakfast and washes his dishes. The story is all about an unwelcome suitor who gets himself into further trouble with his prospective father-in-law, and is chased by a gang over the countryside. Then an Indian and a white baby get mixed up. The star makes himself still more unpopular by rescuing a designing widow who is pursuing the father of the girl he loves. The story ends with Mix breaking out of jail, and a reconciliation follows. Tony, the horse, is prominent in the picture.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The inimitable Tom Mix is the star of "A Ridin' Romeo," which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. Mix has no competitor on the screen to-day. He is a screen daredevil who believes in furnishing his admirers with realistic thrills aplenty. An unexcelled horseman, of magnificent physical build, Mix has also nerve enough to dare the most hazardous stunts for the sake of picture realism.

"A Ridin' Romeo" is a story from his own pen. Knowing his own abilities and the kind of screen material necessary for him, Mix has turned out a Western picture, filled with just as many laughs as it is thrills. For Mix is a comedian of no small ability and you will be surprised at the genuine humor which this picture contains.

Mix plays the part of Jim Rose, a lonely cowboy who carries on his courting in the good, old wild-and-wooly-West fashion. This method of wooing does not always find favor with a prospective father-in-law who is thoroughly modern. And this is where the thrills and the fun comes. Mix gives an exhibition of horsemanship which is daring and beautiful to watch.

"A Ridin' Romeo" will be shown at the ———— theatre for ———— days beginning ————.

PROGRAM READER

Old Jim Rose, cowpuncher, was a relic of the wild-and-wooly-West. He was a hard-riding, quick-shooting cowpuncher who did his courting in a typical Western style. The trouble he got in, the mistakes he made, and the way he cleared himself and fixed things with the girl, makes an unusually interesting picture.

"A Ridin' Romeo" is the picture, and your old friend Tom Mix is the star. We will show it at the ———— theatre on ———— for ———— days. There is only one Tom Mix. He has earned for himself a reputation of being the most fearless and daring of all screen players. In "A Ridin' Romeo" you will see riding down chasms and up sheer precipices to make you gasp. And, in addition, "A Ridin' Romeo" is an exceedingly humorous picture.

SUGGESTIONS

This one can be advertised as a Western which never keeps still for a moment. It has a greater number of thrilling scenes in it than most Westerns. The big point of audience appeal is Tom Mix's name. You can tell them that he also wrote the story and that he has never, in any of his previous pictures, had an opportunity to display his ability as a horseman as in this picture. His support includes Rhea Mitchell, who, while she has no important part, is fairly well known to the fans.

CATCH LINES

A typical wild-and-wooly-West picture, with Tom Mix, one that does not have a single bandit or a single killing.

"A WISE FOOL"
(Paramount)

Good Direction Makes This Picture Very Human

THERE is no denying the fact that George Melford has made this adaptation of Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Money Master," into a high class picture—one endowed with humanities—one which convinces because the characters seem real—and one which, while obvious, manages to interest the spectator because of the touching notes of realism, pathos, sentiment and heart appeal. The present title seems out of place for such a human study of the fortitudes and frailties of everyday existence. We are unable to link it up with any scene or situation or character in the story. The plot is simplicity itself and is so charged with sentiment and pathos that bad direction would have spoiled it.

The contents might easily have been ruined by an insecure grasp of the subject matter. In fact there are many directors who would have made it maudlin with sugary sentiment or else improbable by building it with far-fetched sequences. George Melford has given it imagination, has made it palpitate with lifelike incident, with the result that it stands out like a cameo for a sample of its kind. He has used discretion all the time. His local color and atmosphere are exceptional—the nature of the plot, its quaint figures—these are seemingly understood by him. The setting for "A Wise Fool" is a little Canadian village with the protagonist a man who philosophizes and accepts things in a calm manner. He bids adieu to the villagers, goes to Europe and returns with a Spanish bride. He lives his life in a serene sort of way but after seventeen years of this serenity the wife longs for some color and adventure.

The hero is happy with his daughter, and he cannot understand the change in his wife when she accepts the advances of the village carpenter. He has the latter in his mercy but refuses to commit murder because of the stigma that would be attached to his name and the shame it would bring the girl. The wife upbraids him and leaves home. She is disillusioned too, because the other man fails to come up to expectations. Then tragedy stalks in his path. The girl refuses to obey him in matters of romance and elopes with an Englishman. Finally he auctions off his household effects—all but a canary—to square his accounts. In the end the happy finish is resorted to, but it seems to have a definite place in the story because of the wealth of misery encountered by the forlorn husband and father. James Kirkwood comes forward again with another fine character study. And giving fine assistance are Alice Hollister and Ann Forrest. The picture is marked for its deep note of pathos. It should prove good entertainment anywhere.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The attraction at the ————theatre next————is "A Wise Fool," an adaptation of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Money Master." This offering is a very human document which features an exceptional cast composed of James Kirkood, Ann Forrest, Alice Hollister, William Boyd, Alan Hale, Charles Ogle, Mabel Van Buren and many others. Mr. Parker made the adaptation himself while George Melford directed. The fact that the latter directed is sufficient reason to find excellence in the picture which tells the life of a man in a little Quebec village.

In his life tragedy stalked. He was a calm, mild-manner man but seventeen years of this monotonous existence had palled upon the life of his wife, a Spanish woman. So she left him. Then his daughter eloped. Debts piled up and he was forced to auction off his household effects. Then destiny played its part. There was a reconciliation. And he found happiness. The mere detailing of this picture cannot compensate for the many fine human touches. It is a picture filled with humanities and realities.

PROGRAM READER

When you come to the————theatre next————you will look upon a very human picture entitled, "A Wise Fool," adapted with infinite taste from Sir Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Money Master." The offering is packed with human touches and is charged with goodly sentiment, romance, thrills, pathos and heart appeal. It is a story of a man who encountered one misfortune after another—until his life seemed desolate. In fact he was a desolate figure. His wife and daughter ran away. But he had a singing canary. This little bird brought a fine contentment. What happened? Did his loved ones come back? What of him? See "A Wise Fool," a picture with an extraordinary appeal. A picture which tugs at the heart.

SUGGESTIONS

You can bill this as a very human picture of the fortitudes and frailties which come to a man. Many people encounter similar misfortunes. Perhaps there are similar cases right in your own neighborhood. So play up the fact that the picture represents a slice of life. The title is meaningless and has no part in the story. So don't capitalize upon it. Simply bill it as a very human photoplay of human experiences. Play up the author. Everyone is familiar with his name. He is the author of the celebrated 'The Rigbt of Way." And the director should come in for special mention. He directed such splendid pictures as "The Sea Wolf," "Behold My Wife," "The Round Up," and many others. Also play up Kirkwood and Miss Forrest.

The so-called "British Film Season" at the Grand Opera House, Toronto, went into its third week on Monday, May 23, with the presentation of a "double feature program," consisting of two English productions, "The Great Gay Road" and "Possession." The Anglo-Canadian Picture Plays, Limited, Montreal, under whose auspices the venture was launched, confidently expects to run British releases at the Toronto Grand, with weekly changes, throughout the summer. The arrangement met with success during the first two weeks. Pictures are shown only twice daily at prices that range from 25 to 75 cents. All seats are reserved for evening performances.

The management of the Regent theatre, Toronto's fine downtown theatre, announced on May 21 that patrons had been extended the privilege of parking their cars free of charge at a nearby parking station while they enjoyed the shows. This step was taken to relieve the congestion on Adelaide street in front of the theatre.

N. L. Ferguson has been appointed manager of the Globe theatre, Toronto, in succession to Mr. Piton. The Globe is owned by Mr. A. Cohen, who is vice-president and general manager of Regal Films, Limited.

The Superior Court of Montreal has issued a judgment against the City of Montreal for damages amounting to $1,750 for recompense to A. Lawand & Co., owners of the Laurier Palace theatre, 1681-83 St. Catherine street, East, whose moving picture theatre was damaged during a riot in December, 1918, when the constables of the Montreal Police Department were on strike. The Laurier Palace was not attacked by the mob, but it suffered considerable damage when a clash took place in front of the theatre. Mr. Lawand is now traveling in Syria.

G. Salvatonio is now the proprietor of the New Grand theatre, Montreal, since this house was sold by Jule and J. J. Allen, prior to the opening of the new Allen theatre, Montreal. George Rotsky, formerly manager of the New Grand, is in charge of the new Allen house.

INDIANAPOLIS

Loew's new $1,000,000 house here has been changed in policy from a pop vaudeville and picture theatre to an exclusive feature photoplay policy. The place had been opened a little more than two months when the change was made.

Bryant Washburn at the Circle the week of May 22 was the guest of the Indianapolis Kiwanis Club at the Hotel Severin Wednesday noon. Mrs. Washburn joined him on his tour here.

A merger of South Bend theatrical interests which means that a new theatre plan will be abandoned was announced May 20. Harry G. Sommers, lessee of the Oliver theatre, was taken into the directorate of the Palace Theatre Corporation, which has begun construction of a million dollar theatre. Somers, with Ezra Rhodes and Eustace Pledor, South Bend capitalists, had planned the erection of another house. Eugene H. Miller, John C. Ellsworth, and Samuel Parker of South Bend, Haines Egbert of Goshen, Ind., and Jacob Handelsmann of Chicago are the directors of the corporation.

Carnivals and street fairs are practically prohibited from showing in Indianapolis by an ordinance passed by the city council May 19. President G. G. Schmidt of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, and a member of the council, introduced the measure and was much interested in its passage, because the business of many neighborhood photoplay houses in Indianapolis has been curtailed by the flood of traveling outdoor attractions. The ordinance raises the license fee from $10 to $100 per day and makes it necessary for the carnivals or street fairs to take out a new one every twenty-four hours.

ST. LOUIS

Mr. A. E. Morgan, publicity representative of the Griffith studios, who directed the publicity and advertising campaign in St. Louis for "Dream Street" at the William Fox Liberty, left St. Louis early this week for New York. The Griffith feature was shown at advance prices.

Jack Abrams, formerly manager of the Pershing theatre here during the stock company season, has been appointed manager of the Del Monte theatre, latest addition to the Famous Player Missouri string in this city. The Del Monte with 3,500 seats is supposed to be the largest one-floor theatre devoted to motion pictures in America.

The Criterion theatre was closed May 1 for the summer months. It will be reopened in August.

Joseph Mogler, president of the St. Louis Motion Picture Exhibitors League, has returned from a picture conference in Washington.

CINCINNATI

A large committee of Cincinnatians, representing churches, civic organizations, club leaders, business men and women and those prominent in the social life of the community, has been appointed by the Cincinnati Fedeeration of Churches, at the request of the Russell Sage Foundation, to study the character of motion pictures shown on the screens in Cincinnati. The committee has been instructed to report its findings after the conclusion of a careful survey of the situation. It is in no way to act as a special censorship and is merely a part of the national movement having for its purpose the ultimate uplift of cinema art through the systematic study of the good and bad points found in the prevailing type of motion picture entertainment. It is understood that the first picture the committee investigated was "The Gilded Lily," which recently played here.

Six more affidavits, charging violation of the Sunday closing law, have been filed in police court, in Springfield, Ohio, against motion picture theatre proprietors. The first affidavit was filed Wednesday and marked the beginning of the fight the Clark County Ministerial Association will wage to close theatres here on Sundays.

C. S. Olinger, assistant counsel for the prosecution, said that a careful watch would be kept and affidavits filed against every picture show proprietor operating his place in violation of the law.

In order to conserve assets, the James Company, owners of a new $1,350,000 motion picture theatre in Columbus, O., was placed in the hands of a receiver. Difficulties in refinancing the project are given as the reason, while high labor costs in building are said to have caused the financial difficulties. The theatre has earned a profit in operation, it is stated.

CLEVELAND

Fred Scheuerman is no longer associated with the local Select exchange. Scheuerman was assistant manager during the reign of George Erdmann as manager. He continued in that capacity under Maurice Safier until very recently. He is not allied with any picture interests at this time.

W. J. Kimes, manager of the Goldwyn forces in Ohio, is back from the managerial meet in California. "Had a great time," says Kimes, "but Cleveland still looks good to me."

J. E. Bates has joined the Robertson-Cole sales force. Bates was with the local Famous Players exchange for several years. Lately he has been with Select. George Germaine is also hanging his hat up in the Robertson-Cole exchange once again. Germaine used to be with Robertson-Cole. Then he went to N. Y. But he's back to his first love and again proving the excellence of R.-C. pictures to the hard boiled exhibitors.

C. H. Brown, Zanesville, O., exhibitor, was in Cleveland the end of the week. He was discovered booking Metro pictures. Brown, who owns and manages two houses in Zanesville, the Liberty and Weller, says business is pretty slow these days.

KANSAS CITY

Missouri and Kansas exhibitors are planning to charter two private cars to carry them to the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' of America at Minneapolis, June 27-29. Queries are now being sent out to the exhibitors in the two states to determine how many will attend the convention. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri and the Kansas State Exhibitors' Association, both members of the national organization, have five hundred and three hundred members, respectively.

At the national convention, an executive meeting of Missouri and Kansas exhibitors will be held to arrange the date and other details for the first joint meeting of the two state organizations. The joint meeting will be held in Kansas City, Mo., probably in September. Charles T. Sears, of Brookfield, Mo., is president of the Missouri organization. M. Van Praag, 10 South Twentieth street, Kansas City, is at the head of the Kansas organization.

The 12-story Film Exchange Building at Seventeenth and Main streets, Kansas City, gained a new name as well as a new owner last week. The building, which was purchased by Sam Davidson of Fort Worth, Texas, will hereafter be known as the Davidson Building. The purchase price of the building was approximately $750,000. In the purchase, Mr. Davidson was represented by F. E. McNulty, and E. P. Pratt, from whom the building was bought, was represented by the Agee-Block Realty and Building Company. Mr. Davidson also owns the Garden theatre in Kansas City, under lease to the Marcus Loew interests.

WESTERN NEW YORK

Tom Brady has resigned as manager of the Buffalo Associated Producers' Exchange. He will take over the new Warren office in the same city.

Shea's Court Street theatre will close next week for the first time in over 16 years. It will remain closed for six weeks during which time the house will be entirely redecorated inside and out.

Charles R. Rogers, general sale manager for Robertson Cole, was in Buffalo last week on his way home from a t[our] of the exchanges. He announced that business was picking up in the West and that the company has signed up several new stars.

Thomas McDermott, special representative for "Topics of the Day," was at the Buffalo Pathe office for several days last week.

Harold B. Franklin is to bring Creatore to Shea's Hippodrome next week as visiting conductor.

A host of famous stars will be in Buffalo Saturday evening, June 4, to participate in the Theatre Managers' benefit for starving children in Ireland.

DETROIT

Eddie Crane, former Detroit manager for Associated Producers, has been appointed local manager for Associated Exhibitors.

Leslie F. Whelan, formerly local Paramount exploitation man, has been transferred to the Denver office.

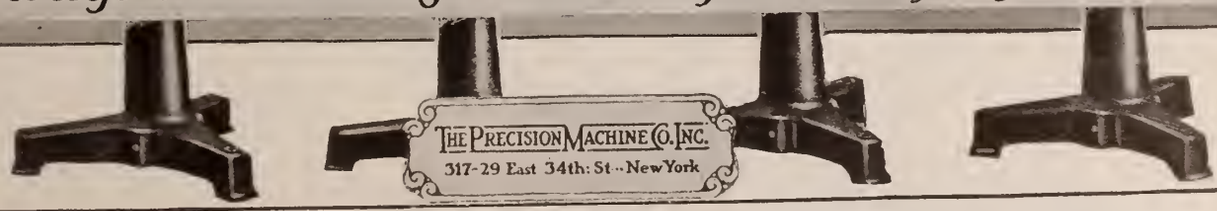
Hal Olver, formerly local exploitation man for Goldwyn, has become publicity agent for the Miles vaudeville houses.

SPARTANBURG, S. C.

Charlotte moving picture houses are preparing for a gala week early in June when Zena Keefe, movie star, will visit several theatres. Various forms of entertainment are being arranged for Miss Keefe's visit and several feature pictures in which Miss Keefe has appeared will be run during the week. Samuel Sax, general sales manager of the Select Moving Picture Corporation, is perfecting arrangements for Miss Keefe's visit to Charlotte.

Announcement has been made that the union moving picture operators' local body has settled its differences with the manager of the Pastime theatre, Spartanburg, and that the body has acquired a part interest in the theatre with W. S. Finch. Differences between the thatre manager and the operators' organization necessitated the closing of the theatre, it is said.



Announcement of the death of Charles R. Letts, of Charlotte, lessee of the New Grand theatre, Newton, N. C., caused genuine regret in Southern motion picture theatre circles.

EVERY word appearing in the public prints about emigration should furnish publicity for "THE LAND OF HOPE". But it is more than apropos, for it affords Alice Brady the finest vehicle for her art that she has ever had, and in the leading role she amply demonstrates the greatness of her talent.

The posters furnished are the finest that it is humanly possible to produce. In addition to being genuinely artistic, in the highest sense of the word, they convey a splendid impression of the subject matter embodied in the photoplay itself. In a word,—They are RITCHEY posters!

"The TEN DOLLAR RAISE"

From the Saturday Evening Post Story by Peter B. Kyne
Directed by Edward Sloman

"'The Ten Dollar Raise' is a cinema classic. It depicts the heart throbs of humanity with wonderful reality. William V. Mong stands out as one of the greatest character actors. His performance is the high light in an exemplary production. It is director Edward Sloman's screen masterpiece."—Exhibitors Herald, May 21, 1921.

"It is one of the few pictures which approaches life as it exists for the 'underdog,' and throbs and palpitates, scintilates, and charms through its full measure of humanities. A tale of a colorless wage slave who ekes out a drab existence as a bookkeeper at fifteen per week, it is the nearest approach to a combination of O. Henry and Winchell Smith which has graced the screen in many a day. The characters are life-like and the story which guides their actions will be recognized as real. For every tug at the heart there is an accompanying note of humor which gives the picture a perfect balance. Yet the dominant feature of the play is its underlying touch of pathos."—Motion Picture News, May 21, 1921.

"This is a thoroughly pleasing bit of entertainment and one which should prove worthy of booking. It contains a really popular element of appeal and in announcing it you might use the author's dedication."—Wid's, May 15, 1921.

"It is a clever character story, rich in human interest and deals with everyday life."—Moving Picture World, May 21, 1921.

"The story is sure-fire . . . should go well most anywhere, for it has real sentiment and will hit the average picture crowd straight in the heart."—Variety, May 13, 1921.

"This picture is very well cast, the characters of Wilkins and Emily being especially well chosen. It is entertaining and follows faithfully the magazine story. Audiences will enjoy the picture because it is naturally acted and it is a reflection, in many instances, of their own lives."—Exhibitors Trade Review, May 28, 1921.

TROPICAL NIGHTS—Hundreds of effects—some heard, some seen, some only felt—make up that indescribable Something called a Tropical Night. The trade wind's soft rustle among the feathery palms, the deep green glen, the monstrous insect chorus, the tinkle of a ship's bell across the water.

COLLECTORS OF CRANIUMS—Everyone is a collector in some way. Misers collect money, politicians votes, schoolboys stamps. In the Philippine Islands, certain tribes of Ifugao specialize on human heads. It's a case of heads you lose, heads they win.

THE CASTAWAY—Dawn found a half-drowned sailor sprawled face down on the beach. Years passed, but no one else came to the island. The sailor gazed upon the miles of tossing water and dreamed of home. Finally a schooner passed within hailing distance, but he made no signal—and it dropped from sight over the horizon. The tropical moon rose from the sea and shone down on a contented man.

IGUAZU THE EXQUISITE—The wanderlust led us to the heart of Brazil, and care fell away like a withered leaf as we plunged through the brambled wilderness toward the magic falls of Iguazu, where Nature speaks with primitive eloquence.

WOOLLY BITS AND MONKEY HITS—Wandering about the uplands of Peru, we seized the opportunity to acquire information concerning the live stock thereabouts. We stumbled on a sheep shearing party where everyone but the sheep was having a lovely time. A flock of fourfoots like this really needs the Andes to accommodate them.

THE RED TRAIL'S END—In Northern New Mexico live the Taos Indians, vanishing remnants of America's first city-builders. Centuries before Columbus and his tribe, the red man was erecting his co-operative apartment houses here. His neighbor had the right to build not only abutting, but also on top of his home, hence the scrambled architecture.

WATER TRAILS—Floating down the Rio Grande of Jamaica on a bamboo raft was not as exciting as we had expected. But the silence of the jungle and its luxuriant plants impressed us—and then suddenly we came upon a great fan-shaped falls. We came within an ace of taking a drop too much.

THE ISLE OF DESIRE—It was such a nice little tropic isle that we had it wrapped up and brought it home. Its coral-bordered bay, its rippling sapphire tides, its soft, snow-like sands, its spicy scents and its golden sunshine we find an ideal antidote for choking city air and dusty office walls.

MAD HATTERS—We were browsing along the China Sea, and dropped anchor off the Batan Islands, a few scraps of land left over after the Philippines were made. There we stumbled upon the Batan milliners, descendants of the original Mad Hatter.

PIPE THE PENGUIN—Pete Penguin invited us to visit his summer home near Tierra del Fuego, down where South America joins the Antarctic. He had all his relatives drawn up in military formation when we arrived, and even ordered out the Awkward Squad for us,—old-fashioned side-wheelers using wings for paddles. When they took off, we thought the end of the island was flying away.

Gentlemen:

In my opinion, the "Ride on a Runaway Train" is the best short subject I have ever seen. It is the only short subject which we ever brought back for a second presentation and on both occasions it created a sensation. I feel sure it will produce the same kind of furore wherever it is shown.

SALES BULLETIN

NUMBER SEVENTY ONE.

May 27th, 1921.

TO MANAGERS AND SALESMEN:

Gentlemen: SUBJECT: SOME PRIVATE SCANDAL!

You'll take your hat off all right when you see this one.

I don't care how you feel or what's hurting you, lad, you're going to forget it when little May McAvoy gets a grip on your heart in A PRIVATE SCANDAL.

There's only one thing doing where this picture's running. The management won't have to display any "Don't Whisper" signs. There'll not be any chattering -- folks'll be too all-fired busy pulling arms off the chairs in their excitement.

Suspense? Action? Gosh! brother, you wouldn't believe so much of it possible in the course of a purely domestic drama! It's the sort that makes you hate to have the lights turned on for fear some one will see tear tracks on your rugged countenance. We're hard-shelled, we are! We usually want anaesthetic when they start trying to operate on our lachrymal ducts, we do! But what a difference in nurses! Somehow, we forgot all about operations when May McAvoy started to cry! I'll be hanged if we weren't even helping her along.

Really though, I don't know whether it was the girl or the story that gripped me hardest. You'll have to hand the golden giraffe to Chester Franklin and Hector Turnbull. And then get a ladder to elevate yourself for the congratulatory salutations. They've injected virus from a bucking broncho and a Bengal tiger into this little play of theirs; it certainly doesn't behave like a parlor piece! Nope! Not even when the gas is low.

Lot of good effects in the direction, too. Unusual stuff! A smile, a little extra rap over the heart, an artistic appeal to sympathy -- you know what I mean. Touches that reflect Thought and Experience, those well-known forbears of Inspiration.

Yes, boys, you're certain to thank us for this one. It rings the bell like a bill collector. Better be "to home" when it comes.

Yours enthusiastically,

Woody

in "The Land of Hope"

She danced her way into America

Stormy, dreary days at sea. Weary, homesick folk bound for a new start in America, the land of promise —

Suddenly in their huddled midst flashed a gay dancer in her bright apron and kirtle, bonnet and red-tipped boots - Marya, the dancer, dancing the beloved folk dances of the homeland, daintily, irresistibly.

Cheered and happy again, these immigrants could not know that this young girl for all her merry dances - deep in her yearning heart - was wondering, almost in affright, what was in store for her when the ship would reach the "land of hope"

"I Knew It"

Says Barret McCormick
Cleveland's famous manager

"WHEN I first screened 'REPUTATION,' I knew it was a big picture and after its run at the ALLEN theatre, Cleveland, where I had the pleasure of presenting it recently, my opinion was confirmed both in its reception by the audience and the receipts. Presented under the most unfavorable circumstances—extremely hot weather and such counter-attractions as big league ball games—it showed a steady increase throughout the engagement, the last day being larger than the opening, which surely speaks well for its dramatic appeal and word-of-mouth advertising value. My congratulations to UNIVERSAL on 'REPUTATION.'"

A Message for a Few Fools

This advertisement is written for a few fools and cowards in the motion picture business—and in other businesses—who are still talking depression when conditions all around them in their own and other businesses directly contradict and refute their pessimism. 1921 is a great year for fighters—and a bad year for fools.

120,000 residences—individual homes, not tenements—are being constructed this summer in the 100 largest American cities. That means muscular labor earning wages.

2,700 new motion picture theatres are now under construction in the United States. And that means labor earning wages.

Motor demand by America's millions has put every important and reliable automobile company back at work on virtually a full-time basis. That means skilled artisans earning high wages.

"The American Contractor," a builders' trade journal, reports that the official building permits filed for the month of April, 1921, for 202 cities totalled 54,162 separate pieces of construction with a valuation of 152 million dollars. American dollars are now out of hiding and have gone back to work.

America's 1921 crop yields, according to government forecasts, will be tremendous. That also means work and wages.

The nations of the world are transferring gold in unbelievable volume to the United States. The Federal Reserve re-discount rate will be lowered again before the summer is over.

Every one of these signs and a thousand others mean: Wages, Work, Employment. Employment means profits and prosperity.

A Smashing Chance for Big Business

Here is the picture you have heard about for months. It was made in London on the actual scenes of the story with an American star and an American director. It has been the talk of the industry for months and NOW it is here.

It is the newest thing in the motion picture theatre, and the brightest and the snappiest. Nothing more delightful than the dashing Yankee in old Lunnon has ever been seen and nothing more charming than the scenes actually taken at Trafalgar Square, Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, Westminster Abbey, The Houses of Parliament, Admiralty Arch, and a score of interesting places.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

Did you see these exhibitor reports on MARY PICKFORD'S new picture "Through the Back Door" in the Motion Picture News last week?

UNITED ARTISTS

Through the Back Door—

Great. Best thing from Pickford so far. Business fair at beginning of week, but picked up and held it over for entire week, though only booked for three days. (East.)

Picture liked by all. We shall hold it over for another week. (East.)

A typical Mary Pickford picture which gave the audiences what they came for. Pleasing, entertaining and full of genuine humor. Good house all week. (Middle West.)

Still going well on second week of run. Patrons seem pleased with picture. (West.)

Dream Street—

Great. Wonderful attraction. Capacity houses at advanced admission prices. A photoplay treat. (Middle. West.)

HERE IS DRAMA FOR YOU!

A big compelling melodrama of today—a spectacular production that will prove one of the strongest box-office attractions of the season.

"Carnival" offers remarkable opportunities to the energetic showman for exploitation, presentation and musical setting. We recommend it heartily as a picture that will appeal universally and that will respond splendidly to the efforts of the wide-awake house manager.

This Divorce Problem Picture Electrified the Motion Picture World by Drawing $24,961.20

ON BROADWAY IN ONE WEEK

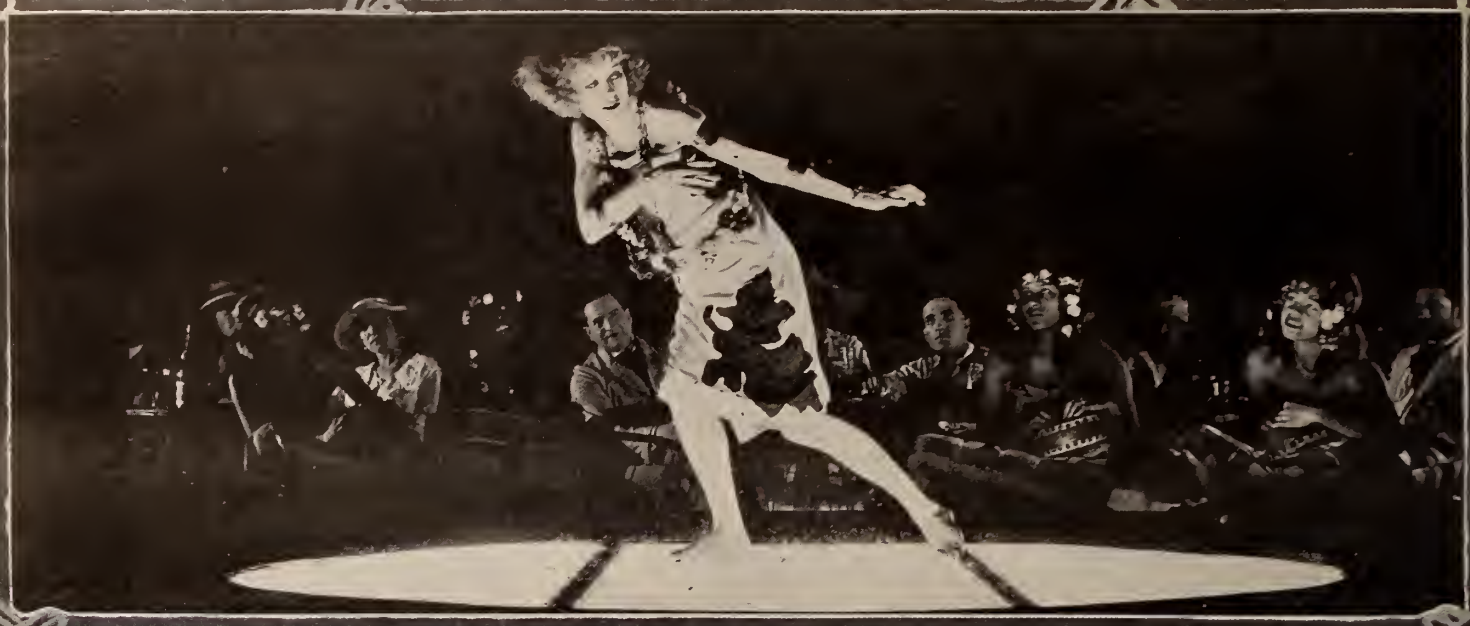
Can any other producer give you a picture that drew close to $25,000 in hot weather, in one week, in one theatre with but 1929 seats?

"The Wild Goose" piled up that box office record during the toughest week theatre managers have seen on Broadway in many years—a straight week of hot, clear outdoor weather.

If you have had losses from playing ordinary pictures, "The Wild Goose" will make them up for you. Play this timely divorce problem hit, and play it now.

"The Wild Goose" is being heavily advertised in the following great National Circulation Sunday papers:

New York American	Chicago Herald & Examiner
New York Journal	Atlanta Georgian
Boston American	Los Angeles Examiner
Boston Advertiser	San Francisco Examiner
Boston Record	Washington Times
Chicago American	Wisconsin News



This is no time of the year for you to gamble with untested, unadvertised pictures.

Play known winners, play pictures the public has heard of, play Cosmopolitan Productions, play "The Wild Goose," and to get all the big early money, play it now.

$39,079.25

IN TWO WEEKS ON BROADWAY

First Week Rivoli, $19,349.85 Second Week Rialto, $19,729.40

This was the record of "The Woman God Changed" during 14 days of perfect hot, outdoor weather that put the biggest "legitimate" theatrical and picture successes on the toboggan and sent a lot of productions to the store house.

Here are the reasons why you can surely count on this hit picture to fill your theatre right now, in the off season:

First— $39,079.25 taken in at the box office of the Rivoli and Rialto in 14 days proves this box office marvel has a strong drawing power.

Second— Three of Broadway's most important big picture houses have featured this picture, the Rivoli, the Rialto, and B. S. Moss Broadway, which is now playing it to big audiences. It has also been booked by the New York Keith, Moss and Proctor high-priced reserved seat houses.

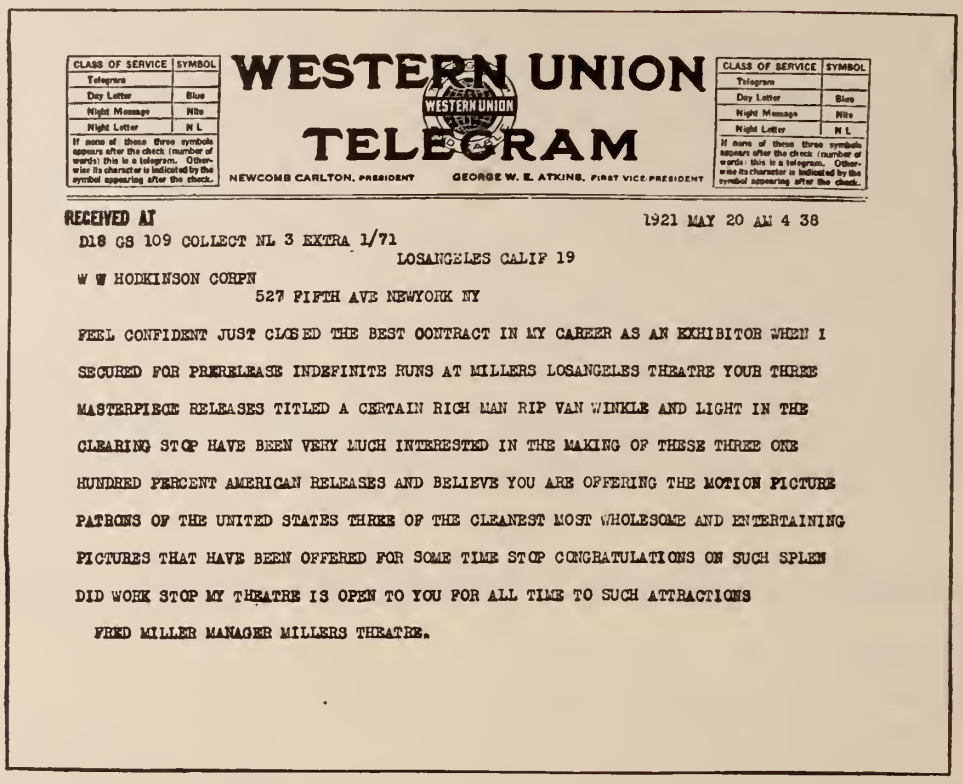
Third— New York dramatic critics never give columns of praise to a picture unless it is the kind of picture that will fill theatres anywhere, any time.

Fourth— More than a million people who have read Donn Byrne's story from which this picture was made, in Hearst's Magazine, are anxiously waiting to see it on the screen.

Fifth— The cast, composed of exceedingly popular and talented artists, Seena Owen, E. K. Lincoln, Lillian Walker, Henry Sedley, H. Cooper Cliff, Paul Nicholson, Joseph Smiley, Templer Saxe, couldn't fail to draw.

Sixth— A big nation-wide advertising campaign on "The Woman God Changed" is now in full swing in the great Sunday editions of the twelve great Hearst newspapers that blanket America. This advertising will make millions throughout the country go to see this picture.

After carefully considering all recent releases the management of the new million-dollar Granada Theatre, San Francisco, has selected "The Woman God Changed" to open this theatre.



"The Woman God Changed" was not made for "Super-critics" or for "high-brows." It was made for exhibitors' audiences that enjoy a wonderfully thrilling entertainment with a wholesome moral.

Right now is the time for you to play this sure-fire money-getter. Get the cream. Be the first in your town to show it. Postpone some "maybe" picture. Play this sure-profit hit immediately.

A HODKINSON RELEASE

OLD LACE"

Another Great Audience Picture for HODKINSON Exhibitors

MOTION PICTURE NEWS—"Lavender and Old Lace" is a picture before which the sentimentalists will fall down and adore, and one that should stir up tender feelings in the breasts of even the most materialistic and matter-of-fact persons. In other words, it will be as popular as the book. An intensely appealing romance. Just as delicate, sweet and fragrant as it was on the printed page.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD—Rich in sentiment and has good comedy types. The cast is an able one.

EX. TRADE REVIEW—Here is one of the sweetest and cleanest stories that has been filmed for some time.

None of the beauty of the story has been lost, and the whole was a beautiful piece of direction.

This picture is absolutely censorproof and should go well.

EXHIBITORS HERALD—Audiences will consider this good entertainment because it is a combination of cheeriness and pathos.

Myrtle Reed's stories have an unusually large sale and of them all "Lavender and Old Lace" is the best known.

MORNING TELEGRAPH—Quite an appealing picture has been made of Myrtle Reed's "Lavender and Old Lace" and one which will be certain to meet with the approval of the most austere censor.

Marguerite Snow as Mary Ainslie is exceptionally good.

For this type of film "Lavender and Old Lace" is all an exhibitor could wish for.

WID'S DAILY—Adaptation of favorite novel has strong heart interest and is well acted.

The heart interest throughout is quite strong.

Because of the popularity which the novel attained, the picturization of Myrtle Reed's story will undoubtedly attract attention by the mere announcement of the title.

The PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE MEDAL of HONOR

TO

[Over]

THE way to surpass the photoplays of every invader on earth is to make every American motion picture devotee realize the truth—that America does lead the world on the screen—that we are making, in these United States, photoplays which have more humor, more romance, more thrill, more reflection of real life than any photoplays subtitled in any language.

PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE'S Annual Medal of Honor has been established to testify to and proclaim this fact—to institute a serious search for the producer worthy of most signal honor—to acclaim the best screen work of Americans.

The PHOTOPLAY MAGAZINE MEDAL OF HONOR has been permanently established as an award of merit to the producer—not to the director unless he happens to be a director producer; not to an actor or author unless he is also the producer, for it is the producer who is ultimately responsible. It is he whose foresight makes him venture his money, his reputation and his position in the industry in the selection of story plus director plus cast.

The verdict will be given by the public through a nation wide ballot of the 2,500,000 intelligent and interested devotees of pictures who read Photoplay Magazine.

PRESIDENT HARDING SEES "WET GOLD"

"The film the party witnessed after dinner had been chosen by Senator Knox himself. "I saw it about a week ago at a private showing in the home of Senator Johnson," he said, "and was interested in the remarkable under-water scenes. Because of these and the adventure thrills that run through it, I chose it to divert the President's mind."

—The Philadelphia Inquirer,
June 5th, 1921.

"Wet Gold" gave the President about as enjoyable an hour of entertainment as he has ever spent in a theatre.

This tremendously exciting tale of adventure on land, on sea, and at the bottom of the ocean is the biggest hot-weather attraction of the season.

It equalled the house record of the California Theatre. Los Angeles, in spite of adverse weather conditions. Get it. and give your patrons a real treat!

Robertson-Cole Presents

SESSUE HAYAKAWA

in

"BLACK ROSES"

By E. RICHARD SCHAYER

"Black Roses" is a crook story in which the craftiness of a Japanese gardener is pitted against a couple of blackmailers. Has many dramatic incidents and holds the interest of the audience by reason of being forcefully acted and well staged.

Sessue Hayakawa, the star, has won an enviable position as an actor in the silent drama. He is ably supported in "Black Roses" by Tsuri Aoki, his wife, Myrtle Stedman and a notable cast directed by Colin Campbell. The photography is excellent. This is a production that will please your audience and increase your box-office receipts.

"WHAT'S A WIFE WORTH"

Written and Directed by William Christy Cabanne

"What's a Wife Worth" a leaf from a woman's soul reaches tremendous heights of drama and romance and withal has that underlying current of philosophy and truth that makes the productions of this prominent author-director, William Christy Cabanne, so distinctive.

Mr. Cabanne has chosen his cast with the greatest care. The two principal roles are played by that capable juvenile lead Casson Ferguson and the sweet faced and clever Ruth Renick.

Beautiful Virginia Caldwell, lovable Cora Drew, and others equally well known among the lovers of the screen drama, complete the cast. Your audience will like this photoplay.

"BEACH OF DREAMS"

By H. DE VERE STACPOOLE — Produced by HAWORTH with an all-star cast

Adapted from one of the best adventure novels of a decade, the "Beach of Dreams" is a thrilling picturization of the problems of a rich young society woman who is cast away on an island where her only companions are three ordinary sailors.

How one meets death in quicksand, why she kills the second and how she joins the third in a tremendous fight against Chinese seal poachers are some of the high lights of the "Beach of Dreams."

The all-star cast of this production includes Edith Storey, Noah Beery and others well known for their sterling performances. The photography is beautiful. This is an "Audience" picture your patrons will like.

J. N. Naulty and Gardner Hunting Present

"IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW"

Based on Balzac's Meditations on Marriage

"If Women Only Knew" is a story full of action, emotion and laughter, splendidly directed and beautifully photographed. It is an unusual production through its realistic conception of human characters who are neither heroes nor villains, in the fictional sense, but draw their attractiveness from the fact that they are types met in every day life.

"If Women Only Knew" is an American story although based on a French classic. The characters are all American and the scenes might be in any college town.

Carefully cast and directed by E. H. Griffith "If Women Only Knew" gives opportunities that seldom come to most screen actors and actresses. Every character is well taken including those played by Robert Gordon, Virginia Lee and Madeline Clare. Exhibitors will find this an excellent summer box-office attraction.

All four productions have excellent entertainment and educational values, beautiful scenes, splendid action
Wonderful photographic effects, artistic direction

8,535 Performances of "The Kid" In 12 Weeks in New York City alone

"Lightnin'," now playing at the Gaiety Theatre, New York, holds the continuous long run record for both legitimate plays and Motion Pictures played in legitimate theatres.

Here is the record of "The Kid" as compared to the three shows which have played in New York for the longest time:

Play	Weeks Played	Days Played	Performances
The Kid	12	1,707	8,535
Lightnin'	142	852	1,202
The Gold Diggers	87	522	721
Irene	81	486	673

(The number of Play Days and Performances of "The Kid" are the actual booking figures of the New York Exchange which holds 83 prints.)

"The Kid" Has Been Shown to 56,700,000 Persons in the United States in 12 Weeks

270 prints of "The Kid" have been showing for 12 weeks or 84 days.

115,400 performances with an average attendance of 500 persons at each show (which is a conservative estimate) makes a grand total of 56,700,000 persons who have seen the show.

And "The Kid" will continue showing for a year and more, until practically every one in the United States has seen it and many of them several times.

The Entire Country Pays Tribute To the Genius of Charles Chaplin

"The Kid" settles once and for all the question as to who is the greatest theatrical artist in the world. Chaplin does the finest and most delicately shaded acting you ever saw anywhere, and for every slapstick furore there is a classic, exquisite scene."—Chicago Herald and Examiner.

"'The Kid' is the only picture of its kind ever made. It takes its place with the classics of the screen. It will live when other pictures have died."—New York Morning Telegraph.

"Chaplin's work is Art; he is universal. He can make you cry or laugh as he wills. He is our greatest pantomimist."—Baltimore American.

"Charles Chaplin makes life worth living for millions. He is a consummate artist as well as the screen's most clever comedian."—San Francisco Chronicle.

"Chaplin is master of them all. He reigns supreme as the funny man of the screen—and the stage for that matter. He is a master dramatist, a subtle actor, a genius." Huntington West Va., Herald-Dispatch.

"Chaplin's 'The Kid' is a most sweeping success: It has aroused universal interest."—Boston American.

"Faith in Chaplin as King of Comedy has not been misplaced."—New York Post.

"The Kid" is one of the greatest pictures you ever had a chance to book. It's a knock-out. That's all."—Wids.

"As an artist Charles Chaplin is more consequential in extent of audience than any speaking, singing, writing, or painting artist today."—Chicago Daily News.

"Chaplin wins his countless admirers by his amazing artistic versatility."—New York Telegram.

"Chaplin is a master of drama as well as comedy. 'The Kid' stands alone—the greatest box office attraction since the commencement of pictures." — Exhibitors Herald.

"'The Kid' is a tremendous success—with drama as well as comedy. It has shattered all existing box office records."—Los Angeles Express.

"Chaplin is riproariously funny and his work is real acting."—Louisville Times.

"'The Kid' is a picture everyone will want to see."—Buffalo News.

"Six reels of joy tells but half of it. Never has anything been so mirth-provoking, and at the same time filled with touches of pathos."—Salt Lake City Tribune.

"The picture stamps Chaplin as not only the foremost of all comedians, but the best actor the screen has ever known."—Spokane (Wash.) News.

"Chaplin has hit the high spot in delightful entertainment." — Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator.

"'The Kid' is in a class alone and will live forever in cinema history."—Waco Times-Herald.

And just a few of the theatres in which "The Kid" broke both attendance and box office records.

VOL. XXIII JUNE 18, 1921 No. XXVI

Monopoly at its Worst

THE agitation, upon the part of the Actors Equity Association, against foreign made pictures is the plainest kind of bunk.

Presumably the cry is for organization propaganda —to encourage membership and dues. There is apparently no other excuse. It is fireworks, pure and simple. There isn't a fact or an iota of business sense in the entire hullaballo.

The lack of work for actors today is due to the slump in picture production, which in turn is largely due to a preceding period of over-production. The same thing is true of the legitimate stage. The same thing is true of practically every other industry in the country.

The few foreign pictures which have found a considerable way into our picture theatres have nothing to do with the present production situation at all.

Nor is there any future menace from the foreign-made pictures—unless we do the narrow, stupid thing and try to shut them out with a tariff wall.

We do not want a protective tariff on foreign pictures.

Two reasons alone seem unanswerable.

In the first place, let us not forget the large fact that the box-office supports this business and every single concern and individual engaged in it. The box-office —to wax prosperous—demands a supply of pictures from many different creative sources. There can't be too many. Restrict these sources and you'll restrict the box-office income with mathematical certainty and by many millions of dollars.

More millions will be cut from the industry's potential income if the foreign market is cut off from the American made picture. And the foreign market certainly will be lost if we make the American market impossible to the foreign picture.

The actor's weekly check depends upon the prosperity and stability of the business; so also does every producer's and distributor's and exhibitor's bank account.

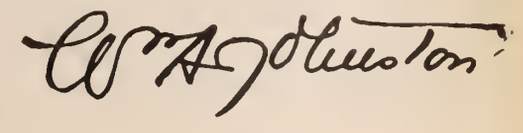
To put a tariff, or any restriction, upon a product which depends so greatly upon widely creative effort is to stifle its sale to the public, and therefore cramp its industry and its future.

Laying aside all question of art, and education and the importance to America and American institutions of sending abroad the American picture it is just downright bad business.

This tariff matter is a big commercial issue. We don't know of a bigger one; and it must be viewed only from a big standpoint.

We are, all of us, inclined to glue our eyes upon our particular and immediate interests and be blind to the large and future and common aspects of a great industry.

If we narrow the entertainment value of the motion picture, if we don't keep its creative inspiration broad and ever fresh we'll throttle the box-office; and the result is not an ordinary consideration. It is a matter of hundreds of millions of dollars annually. It is the first and foremost concern of every producer, distributor, exhibitor—and it involves the job of every actor and individual—in this business.



Uphold the box-office!

We want pictures today from Tom, Dick and Harry—from every brain in the world that holds a story big enough to tell the wide public. We want inspirations from Oshkosh and Kalamazoo; from New York and San Francisco; from North, East, South and West. We want them from Rome, Capetown, Bombay, London, Berlin, Paris, Shanghai. We want new technique, new artistry—constantly new and best. We want the world's literature, drama, art, scenery, customs, traditions, life, aspirations, progress.

We want, in short, the world's competition in production—not that of one country, or one section or one studio.

We talk about production monopoly—that it would put a noose about the neck of the motion picture. We have railed in the past about a patent monopoly—and saw it smashed of its own deadly weight. We ask constantly for the encouragement of the independent producer.

A tariff monopoly—for that's just what a prohibitive tariff would amount to—would prove the deadliest monopoly, the most certain monopoly and really the only monopoly that could possibly be saddled on the American motion picture industry.

R-C Pictures Corporation Formed to Take Over Robertson-Cole Film Activities

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Robertson-Cole Company of the formation of the R-C Pictures Corporation, with capitalization of $4,000,000, with the object of acquiring the business of Robertson-Cole Company, Division of Films, together with all interests in the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, Robertson-Cole Realty Corporation and Robertson-Cole Studios, Inc.

R. S. Cole will be president of the new corporation, with a strong board of directors, and the plans of the new organization include the strengthening of all the various departments.

R-C Pictures Corporation will begin its motion picture production activities at its Hollywood plant, considered one of the most complete and up-to-date in existence, not later than July 1. Production activities will include the making of a series of motion picture features starring Pauline Frederick and Sessue Hayakawa, and a Directors Series of super productions to be made under the direction of William Christy Cabanne, L. J. Gasnier and other directors equally known. New stars are to be added to the organization's present list, and a production schedule with a minimum of twenty-six pictures a year will be established, to be released to exhibitors through the new organization.

Lasky Names Robert Kane as Production Manager

Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production, has announced the appointment of Robert T. Kane as manager of the production department, succeeding Walter F. Wanger. Mr. Kane will begin his new duties immediately.

Mr. Lasky also made public the fact that he had appointed Al Kaufman general manager of European productions, with supervision over all production activities in England and on the Continent.

Announcement was also made by Mr. Lasky that George Fitzmaurice will be sent to the London studios in the near future to make a series of special productions. Ouida Bergere will also go to London to write scenarios for the Fitzmaurice productions and other Paramount pictures.

On the completion of "Peter Ibbetson," on which he is now engaged, George Fitzmaurice, Mr. Lasky asserted, will go to London where he will produce a series of special productions similar to the big pictures such as "On With the Dance," "Experience," and "Paying the Piper" which he has made in the last year in the Eastern studio. Most of the exteriors of these pictures will be photographed on the Continent and the interiors will be taken in Paramount's London studio. Mr. Lasky said that several American stars will be sent over to London from time to time to play leading roles in Mr. Fitzmaurice's pictures. David Powell is already in the London studio.

Mr. Lasky also said that Ouida Bergere will go to London with Mr. Fitzmaurice, her husband, and will write scenarios for his and other Paramount pictures.

Tom J. Geraghty Elected by Authors' League

Tom J. Geraghty, supervising director of Paramount's eastern studios, has been elected honorary vice-president of the Authors' League of America, along with Victor Herbert, representing composers, and James Forbes, representing dramatists. This is the first time that the motion picture has been represented on the board of honorary vice-presidents of the league.

Censorship Bill Passed by the Illinois Senate

The censorship bill, known as the Spence Bill, passed the Illinois Senate last week by thirty-six votes to one and is now up to the House for action. It is thought, however, that owing to the congested condition of the house calendar it may not come to a vote before the legislature adjourns.

The measure places the power over what films may be shown in the state in the department of registration and education and provides for an official stamp of registration for each picture approved by the department. The bill also covers the censorship of banners, posters and other advertising matter used to announce or advertise any picture.

The following fees are provided for registration and censorship: three dollars for each thousand feet of original motion picture film and one dollar for each print of the same.

Any person violating any provision of the act is held guilty of a misdemeanor and a fine of not less than fifty nor more than three hundred dollars is provided for the violation.

Section thirteen of the act prohibits any municipal corporation within the state from passing any ordinance for the purpose of regulating the display or exhibition of motion pictures and nullifies all existing local ordinances on the first day of October, 1921.

Allens Engage Francis A. Mangan for New House

Francis A. Mangan, who for the past year was production manager at Phil Gleichman's Broadway-Strand in Detroit, has resigned that position to assume similar duties at the beautiful New Allen theatre in Montreal, Canada.

Mr. Mangan distinguished himself in Detroit with the artistry of his prologues and his excellent settings. His prologues established themselves in the favor of movie and music lovers in Detroit and the Broadway Strand gained a foremost place in picture circles in Detroit.

Previous to his connection with Phil Gleichman, Managan was associated with S. L. Rothafel at the Regent and more recently at the Rio, in New York.

Czecho-Slovakian Trade Editor in New York

Mr. Julius Kohner, publisher of the Filmschau, Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, has arrived in New York. He will study theatre and producing conditions both here and in California and will also purchase pictures for his home market. Mr. Kohner foresees a very large opening for American pictures in Russia as soon as trade agreements are established between that country and the United States. There are, today, some 3,000 picture houses in Russia and more are being added right along. The Soviet government is strongly in favor of the development of the picture theatre. The theatres are operated by a commission of the government. Trains equipped with film and picture machines are being run through Siberia giving exhibitions at each railroad station. At present American pictures are being secured from Poland. Italian pictures are being obtained from Roumania and a number of German pictures are being used. Practically no production is going on in Russia, and however fast production may be developed Russia will have to rely upon the American and other foreign product for several years.

Prague has quickly developed into the new exchange centre for the Balkan States and Russia. In addition to a half dozen larger exchanges there are as many as thirty small dealers.

As an indication of the interest of the Soviet government in pictures, Mr. Kohner was invited by the government, recently, to go to Moscow. He will shortly establish an exchange there.

Production conditions in Germany are very chaotic, according to Mr. Kohner. A large number of inexperienced producers have entered the field with the result that the German market is flooded with mediocre product.

Mr. Kohner has been commissioned to buy pictures from this market. He is making his headquarters 1600 Broadway.

Governor-Elect of Georgia Opposes Censorship

Sentiments expressed by Governor-elect Thomas R. Hardwick, and Mayor Key, of Atlanta, at the regular monthly meeting of the Atlanta Film Exchange Managers' Association, on June 2, indicate that motion picture censorship in Georgia is not favorably regarded by the executives of the State, at any rate.

"Since we Georgians propose to trust you," said Governor-Elect Hardwick to the exhibitors, in asking them not to abuse the privileges now accorded them by the state, "treat us well in Georgia. We know that you can draw distinctions between that which is good, and that which is bad taste, or offensive. As long as you can, and do, that there is no need for state censorship of your productions."

Creation of "War Chest" Suggested at National Association Meeting

For Industry's Defense and Public Movements; Officers Re-elected

AT a meeting of the directors of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, held June 6th at the National Association's headquarters in New York City, William A. Brady was unanimously re-elected president of that organization. The other officers of the association were also re-elected. The outstanding feature of the meeting was the suggestion for the creation of a "War Chest," made by Chairman C. C. Pettijohn of the Committee on Humanitarian Relief Funds. This recommendation followed Mr. Pettijohn's report on the successful Hoover drive, whereby more than $2,750,000 was raised by the industry, and the campaign for funds to aid the American Committee for Relief in Ireland, in which $50,000 has already been raised by the industry.

"Much has been said about the power of the screen," said Mr. Pettijohn, "It unquestionably exists, but is an 'unharnessed Niagara.' Why can we not harness this powerful force once and for all and keep it going in the right direction?

The following suggestion and recommendations are offered for serious consideration:

"Set aside one day each year to be known as 'Motion Picture Day.' Let every producer and distributor upon this day furnish free of charge all motion picture films used by exhibitors in the United States. Let each exhibitor turn over to a central committee such per cent of his gross receipts as may be agreed fair and just. Let this central committee be composed of ten exhibitors and ten members from other branches of the trade, including producers, distributors, supply men, actors, directors, etc. Then select the twenty-first man who shall be one of the biggest citizens in American and who shall be chairman of this joint committee.

"On this day let us create a fund or a 'war chest' of two or three millions of dollars to be used for the following purposes:

"First—The legitimate defense of the industry.

"Second—This central committee may be applied to by any organization desiring the co-operation of the motion picture industry in public efforts—such as drives for the various well-known relief organizations, the care of mothers and children at child-birth, the care and comfort of crippled and maimed soldiers of the late war, etc.

"We can create in one day a tremendous force for good that will forever sicken onto shame the bigoted meddlers who are daily harassing us.

"Let the industry stand alone and on its own feet, in this great work, without co-operation from any outside source whatsoever. This will stop all drives and solicitation of funds in theatres throughout the country, and the theatre-going public, which is now tired of being solicited in theatres, will not be molested when they attend performances and will not remain away in fear of being harassed by solicitation for funds. The increase in attendance will more than offset the fund created. It will also eliminate the 'over-head' of these collections and waste involved in putting over separate drives and the industry itself will be credited with its own accomplishments."

The very able Governor of Nebraska delivers a sad message to the motion picture industry. He states the excellent reason why he vetoes the Nebraska censorship bill, after which he advises us not to depend upon Governors and legislatures hereafter to quash these recurrent measures. The thing to do is to take all thought of censorship and any inclination toward censorship out of the public mind.

Governor McKelvie is right.

The proper affiliation with public opinion and constructive public organization and a campaign of popular education such as the screen alone can fully and successfully carry on will assuredly accomplish the result. Not merely in Nebraska but in every State. And the time to begin is now—just as the dust kicked up by thirty-seven state bills has cleared away.

W. A. J.

The activities of the association during the year were reviewed by Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary, in his annual report. He characterized it as the most successful since the inception of the association in June of 1916 and commented favorably upon the fact that more active spirit of co-operation has been shown by the members than ever before, as well as a greater unity of action in all matters concerning the various branches of the industry. The membership of the association, he said, has been strengthened by the affiliation of new companies and a total of 193 companies and individuals now constitute the active membership of the association.

Mr. Elliott highly commended the trade papers for the active support they have given the association during the year, particularly for their valuable aid in arousing the industry to the menace of censorship and blue law legislation and in editorially urging a unity of action by all branches of the industry in combatting such hostile measures throughout the country.

Several important recommendations were made by Mr. Elliott. One was that a permanent committee be created to be known as the Committee of Public Relations to foster closer and more harmonious co-operation between the industry and the many social, civic and educational women's organizations in the various states.

"One of the most important phases of the association's recent activities," said Mr. Elliott, "was the gathering and collecting of official records from the various states showing the personnel of legislatures, congressional representatives, primary and election dates and other similar data. The record of each legislator on censorship and blue law measures is being carefully compiled. A questionnaire will be sent to Congressional and legislative candidates in the future seeking an expression of their views on censorship and Sunday closing so that the industry may in advance of election know any candidate's attitudes, and will be in a position to take steps accordingly. Need for this character of information is greater than ever before."

Among the most important achievements of the association referred to by Mr. Elliott were the successfully conducted Hoover drive and the adoption of the production standards to insure a clean and wholesome screen. He referred also to the tremendous growth of the non-theatrical picture business and the installation of projection machines in thousands of churches, schools, Y. M. C. A's. and other non-theatrical places of assemblage.

The Americanization work of the association as commented upon and it was announced that a report of the Americanism Committee would be filed shortly with the Joint Educational Committee of Congress.

Gabriel L. Hess, chairman of the Censorship Committee in his report, urged that no support be given by the industry to the suggestions for Federal censorship.

"The argument has been advanced," he said, "that Federal censorship would afford a relief from the handicaps imposed upon the industry by state regulation of the screen. Such a belief is absurd. National control of banking institutions, railways, insurance, food and drugs has not induced the states to abolish their own regulatory commission and boards, nor will they so long as the principal of state rights is maintained and fat jobs are provided for politicians."

In its report the Vigilance Committee declared that since the last general meeting of the National Association nearly one hundred concerns had been investigated by

Here Is a Real Business Idea

C. J. McLane, No. Carolina Exhibitor, Talks About "Welfare" Competitors and How to Fight Them

WHO said educational pictures? I mean have you ever seen a moving picture program that can be fairly called educational, granted we have some good travelogues, some nature pictures and some tours that are entertaining? A group of them that would make an evening's entertainment is not considered attractive enough to the welfare workers and school teacher exhibitors to draw out a paying audience.

What's that! They don't want a paying audience—Say, l i s t e n! The welfare workers with their cute little wagons and their dry little pictures soon come in contact with people back in the wilds, who had been coming to town to see some real movies. These folks said to Mr. or Mrs. Welfare, "Don't you think if you could get some real pictures we could have better crowds?" Welfare says, "Mebbe, we'll try it," and gets busy to the extent of taking a few Arbuckle comedies and a Doug Fairbanks or two to the "sticks" and what's the result? Why, friend, the countryside turned out to see it! The poor little welfare jitney, struggling along trying to force some slight education on the so-called benighted people, suddenly discovers that they know a heap about pictures and start giving them the real thing at a profit. A big profit—more profit than anyone had any reason to expect; no license to pay, no tax to pay, no obligations of any kind—get the money and move.

Then does Mr. and Mrs. Welfare spread the glad tidings? They do—and with what result? The school superintendent hears about the possibilities; investigates, finds that he can buy a machine for a coup'la hundred, rent pictures for ten dollars that cost a hundred at the theatre three blocks away; finds that he can have one of his school boys run the machine for fun and the school orchestra play for nothing; pay no tax, no license, no privilege of any kind and get his school packed at 10 and 20 cents. Then he proceeds to get his pictures up close to the showing date at the theatre and makes daily announcements that the school will soon show the feature now at the theatre, so why pay 15 and 30 cents when you can see it here next week for half price and besides help the school! Do they wait? I should say they do! Result? The exhibitor whose business on that picture would have shown a 20 per cent profit, does not take in a hundred at the box office. Result? He cannot pay that price for the same class of picture again.

By the simple process of repetition you can readily see that the time is near when friend exhibitor can only pay ten dollars for his pictures the same as the school competitor. Suppose they succeed. Don't you see that the man who buys theatres, equips them with the most modern and expensive machines, screens, seats, decorations, etc., is spending his money foolishly and that the screen is cheapened by every showing of a picture under unfavorable circumstances.

Now suppose you have four schools in town; they put screens in all of them, rent a picture for ten dollars and keep it two days; then with the portable machine they play a matinee at the north side school, night at the east side, matinee at the west side, and night at the south side school—four audiences average two hundred at ten cents, eighty dollars; expense twenty dollars for films, paper, juice and moving! See it? It spells the ruin of the showman exhibitor and it spells the ruin of the film distributors. It also means the fall of the producer.

I have been expecting something to happen that would bring the exhibitor and distributor close together, and now it crops up—big as life—and twice as saucy, because you know my dear friend, the school people are going to grab this glorious opportunity for good big easy change, as a golden opportunity for salary increases and improvements. I'm sorry they have wished it on us as I am sure we are going to be obliged to interfere.

Dr. Francis Holly, of the Bureau of Commercial Economics at Washington, says I am the first exhibitor in the United States to ask for the free educational pictures. You know what I am doing with them? Why, I am showing them free to school children, in my feature theatre, where they can come and sit in comfort and hear good music and be instructed to their hearts content.

Later, when I am sure of the results of this move, I'm going to tell you about it. Incidentally, my educational program will include one good comedy film.

I want every exhibitor who sleeps with one eye open to give this matter his serious consideration, and act before action is forced on him by necessity.

Goldwyn Statement for Year of 1920

GOLDWYN PICTURE CORPORATION has submitted to its stockholders a report on its operations for the year ending December 31st, 1920. Samuel Goldwyn, president of the company, states that the period was one of extensive development of the corporation's activities. The business of the Pictures Corporation for the year amounted to a total of $7,891,000.

In January, 1920, according to the statement, the corporation acquired an interest in the Ascher Brothers theatre circuit, which at that time consisted of sixteen operating theatres. Since then others have been added to the chain. The Goldwyn interest in the Bishop-Cass Theatres Co. was acquired in the spring of 1920. The interest in the Capitol theatre in New York was acquired on June 1st, 1920, and since then, reads the statement, the operations have been most satisfactory, promising a return fully justifying the investment.

From June 1st, 1920 to April 1st, 1921, Goldwyn, Ltd., of England, wrote in gross bookings 309,000.

The statement of condition as of January 1st, 1921, including only subsidiaries wholly owned, is as follows:

Abrams Outlines "Big Four" Release Plans

Says New Pickford and Fairbanks Productions Will Be "Sensations of the Year"

THAT the "Big Four" have elaborate plans in view for the coming season was revealed in a statement issued during the week by Hiram Abrams from the headquarters of the United Artists Corporation. Mr. Abrams since his return several weeks ago from the Coast has been too busy to issue any kind of formal statement on activities contemplated by the "Big Four" for the future. However, on the eve of his departure on another trip, he paused long enough to furnish the following outline:

"First of all," said Mr. Abrams, "I have seen with my own eyes something of the productions that are under way and when I predict that Mr. Fairbanks' picture, 'The Three Musketeers' and Miss Pickford's picture, 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,' which will follow it, will be the sensations of the year, you can take it from one who is not given to the making of idle promises.

"But let me discuss these things a little more in their sequence. The first of our big pictures to be released will be the Harley Knoles production, 'Carnival,' with Matheson Lang in the leading role. Here is a drama if ever there was one! The picture is marvelously produced, its Venetian atmosphere a most welcome change and an ideal offering for summer audience.

"As I announced in California, we have contracted with Rex Beach for the release of his splendid productions. The first one, 'The Iron Trail,' is now in the making. The virility and elemental qualities of the Rex Beach stories, produced as Mr. Beach will now be able to turn them out, will provide us with splendid offerings for the millions of lovers of adventure and romance.

"Mr. George Arliss is already at work on his first release for us, 'Disraeli,' I know of no production that has been awaited with as much expectation in the industry as this. On my recent trip ever so many exhibitors inquired specifically about 'Disraeli' and from what I have already seen of the production, I know that our every hope is going to be more than realized.

"And wait until you see Douglas Fairbanks' production of 'The Three Musketeers.' The picture will be in about ten reels and a riot of action, life, color and romance. The assistance of Edward Knoblock, Fred Niblo and the splendid cast that is at work, will make 'The Three Musketeers' not only the biggest Fairbanks' picture in screen history but one of the very biggest productions in the history of motion pictures.

"Shortly after the release of 'The Three Musketeers,' we will have Miss Pickford's production of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy.' Is it possible to imagine a more potent box-office attraction? Miss Pickford has cherished an ambition to make this production for a long time. At last she is in a position to take the time necessary to make the kind of picture of it that she has dreamed about. She will, of course, play a double role in the picture; the part of 'Dearest,' the mother, and of the little Lord. When you realize that both mother and son are on the screen together most of the time, you will realize something of the gigantic task that Miss Pickford has undertaken. What a picture it will be!

"Mr. Griffith has some big things under way for us, the nature of which I am not ready at the moment to discuss. I have been assured also by Mr. Chaplin that we can confidently expect his first contributions to our release list during the coming year.

"United Artists Corporation has some mighty busy days ahead of it as you will realize from the foregoing, but with 'The Three Musketeers,' 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,' 'Carnival' and 'Disraeli' all ready for us within the next few months, it certainly will be a wonderful year."

International Producing Scheme Launched

Shipman and Ultra Film Co., of Italy, Make Five Year Producing Agreement

ERNEST SHIPMAN has returned from a brief and satisfactory trip abroad. As a result of this trip, contracts have been definitely negotiated for the making of a series of international productions covering a period of five years. The contract is between the Ultra Film Co., controlling the product of Nova, Bernini, Italia and other producing units on one hand, and Ernest Shipman and his associates upon the other.

The terms of the contract specify sending to Italy of such directors, technical staff, cameramen and artists as are essential in connection with the making of each individual production.

Stories from authors having an international reputation will be contracted for as the leading vehicles. Two negatives will be made upon each subject, one to be treated in its continuity, direction and interpretation from the American standpoint with a view to the observance of the demands of the Anglo-American public, and with a deference to censor board regulations in all countries of the English-speaking world.

The foreign negative will be known as the Latin negative and the Ultra Company, with its Italian directors working side by side with our American directors, will make such departures in the telling of their story as will best please the Latin and other foreign publics throughout the rest of the world.

Dr. Francesco Stame, president and guiding spirit of the Ultra Film Co. and its affiliations, is a multi-millionaire and a man of foremost business standing in Rome. He has been applying business methods to his producing units during the past few years and has shown a considerable profit from each studio. So sure is he of the successful outcome of this undertaking that he has personally guaranteed all contracts which have been duly recorded with the government and copies certified before the British and American embassies.

All Italy is agog over this undertaking. For the past eighteen months Dr. Stame has invited the best effort of Germany, France, England and America for co-operative methods, desiring to supplement Italian art and artistic production with the full tide of dramatic possibilities and technical perfection. A result of this study has decided in favor of American methods and American artistry.

Consequently, it is estimated that probably four or five hundred film personages of prominence will be sojourning in Italy for various periods of time. Great care will be manifested in the selection of the stories, the directors, the technical staff and the artists, and Mr. Shipman's associates, who number over a score, will give him the benefit of a round-table conference on every important move.

The first company will sail in August ready to commence operations on September 1.

The studios under control of the Ultra Film Co. are all of recent structure and are most modern in every particular. Indoor tanks as large as the tank in the Hippodrome and artificial outdoor lakes large enough to sail vessels upon, are a part of the equipment. A combination of Italian, French, German and American lighting methods are being employed with a view to diversified results.

The new million lire studio of the Nova-Bernin companies are ground floor, glass structures, of tremendous area, capable of housing five to eight producing units at one time.

A Crisis in the Motion Picture Industry

W. W. Hodkinson Discusses the Vital Problems of Distribution as They Exist To-Day

THAT eventful changes in the Motion Picture Industry are taking place is now recognized by all. Each individual is asking: How will this affect me? This article is an attempt to answer that question,—an endeavor to enlighten, even though I am not always successful in satisfying, the enquirer.

The one big outstanding fact which confronts us today is this: The producer and the exhibitor are at war with each other. Irresponsible leadership on the producer's part and the inability to do more than look after his own individual problem on the part of the exhibitor are the main reasons for the lack of sympathy between the two branches at the present time.

Friction has resulted because in the majority of cases the producer holds the balance of power over the exhibitor,—and misuses it! The producer knows that he cannot leave himself at the mercy of the exhibitor for the simple reason that, naturally enough, the exhibitor's chief concern is his own interests. And so widely at variance are the interests of the exhibitors that under existing conditions anything like comprehensive action on their part cannot be maintained.

These facts are so obvious that they are already recognized, and their recognition and realization at once suggests the remedy.

Motion picture distribution must go into the hands of absolutely neutral agencies. The marketing of product must be done by concerns of unquestioned integrity, possessed of the necessary technical knowledge to insure their supplying the exhibitor and his public with the best motion pictures that it is possible to produce. And in order to do this there must be within these organizations men with a comprehensive knowledge of showmanship, capable of working hand in hand with the producers to create pictures of merit.

I use the words "unquestioned integrity" advisedly, for it must lie within the province of such organizations as these to see that a fair and equitable relationship is maintained between the exhibitor and the producer,—a relationship which will permit of the producer's making worthy pictures and receiving an adequate financial return on his investment and which will insure the exhibitor a supply of quality productions that will maintain his prestige in the community; in other words, a square deal for both parties.

This represents the solution of the greatest problem which confronts the industry today. There is no other way out of the present difficulty,—there has been no other way out at any time. The business is so new that there are few who are engaged in it who have the foresight to see the future clearly or even to appreciate the viewpoint of those others who can see it. Now, under the pressure of circumstance, all are sure to take some action.

A recent editorial in a trade journal makes a plea for the industry to get together,—for its representatives to meet and overcome their mutual distrust and suspicion,—to do really constructive things. This is rather a late cry. Furthermore, it is apt to be a futile thing, for the different factions in the industry are hardly likely to meet,—and candor compels the admission that if they do, wisdom is not apt to prevail.

The purpose of this article is to appeal to the reasoning class in the industry,—and to definitely forecast for that reasoning class the only way out.

Only by a process of elimination can we advance. The argument "fewer and better" applies not only to pictures but to men! This business of ours is too big a thing to go on as it has; it has outgrown its self-appointed custodians. New leaders must be found who are wise enough in experience to know what to do in these hours of stress; who have persistence enough to overcome the difficulties; who have honor enough to keep faith with those who trust them.—for both producer and exhibitor must trust some one in the times that lie ahead. And if the industry has not got within it men who can be trusted.—God help it!

Definitely, here is what must happen: There must be a concentration of distribution in the hands of competent and trustworthy concerns who have no connection with production or with theatres, and who will have none, unless the present, grasping "trust" tactics of the producers make big city theatre operation necessary to secure an outlet for their independent productions.

Naturally enough, such concentration will be opposed by all producers who are at present operating their own distribution systems. They must be brought to a realization that the things necessary for the advancement of this business are:

1. The production of big, worthwhile, clean, intelligent pictures that will win and hold the support of the theatre-going public.
2. The elimination of the useless expense of the duplicating exchange systems.
3. The repudiation of a system which saddles the cost of "failed" pictures upon good picture rentals.
4. The healthy competition of individual producing units striving one against the other to create the best pictures that it is possible to make.
5. The establishing of common channels of distribution efficiently, wisely and economically administered which can insure the exhibitor of a stream of quality product so necessary to the maintenance of his theatre.

The day of the neutral system of distribution with its individual producing units competing one against the other, is assuredly coming. Which means that there will be a large enough supply of quality product on the market to permit the exhibitors to withdraw their support from the film factory owners with their trust methods.

And by "film factory owners" I mean those men who through the control of their own distribution channels have been enabled to compel the exhibitors to pay huge production costs and who are now trying to use the revenue paid in by the exhibitor to build themselves large enough to put him—the exhibitor—out of business.

This is no new argument that I am advancing. Nor do I speak on a subject with which I am unfamiliar. My whole experience in the business has been in the field of neutral distribution. A recognition of the fallacies of producer-control of distribution has caused me to keep out of the production end of the business and to prepare myself for this critical hour,—an hour which finds me with adequate product, capital and organization to supply the first mechanism by which producer and exhibitor can work together.

The producers and exhibitors who first avail themselves of this opportunity will be the better ones with vision; they will be the leaders in a move which eventually the entire industry must follow,—there is no other way out.

I have said before, and I repeat again for greater emphasis, that the channel of distribution is the seat of power. It must be put in responsible hands. It must not be used by either exhibitor or producer to take advantage one of the other.

Brady Pledges Industry's Help for Flood Victims

The motion picture industry has offered its assistance in relieving the distress occasioned by the flood in Colorado. William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, has sent the following telegram to the Rocky Mountain Screen Club of Denver, whose membership comprises the leading film industry representatives of Colorado:

"Rocky Mountain Screen Club,
"Denver, Colorado.

"National Association pledges motion picture industry of United States to do its utmost towards the sufferers in the Pueblo disaster.

"William A. Brady."

Legalizes Nat'l Board of Review Decisions

Florida Legislature Adopts Bill Prohibiting All Films Not Passed by Board

FLORIDA, on June 1, passed a bill forbidding the exhibition of all pictures which have not been passed by the National Board of Review, and providing that Governor Hardee appoint three residents of Florida to serve upon the advisory committee of the board and further providing that all films used by schools, chambers of commerce and churches or films used strictly for educational and scientific purposes be exempted from this requirement. Another clause permits the exhibition of pictures which have been approved by the New York State Censorship Board.

This bill was passed by the House on Saturday, May 28, where it was introduced as a compromise between the Federation of Women's Clubs and the representatives of the Florida Exhibitors' League, by Representative Futch, who had fathered the original state censorship bill and threatened to introduce a copy of the present New York bill. The compromise came as the culmination of fifty days of bitter fighting during which sentiment was overwhelming against the industry. It passed the House on the 28th by a vote of fifty to three, and on Wednesday, June 1, passed the Senate unanimously with the hearty support and good-will of both sides.

Immediately following the final passage of the measure, Governor Hardee, Senator McWilliams, president of the Senate; and Representative F. E. Jennings, Speaker of the House were interviewed, and all three expressed the opinion that a most acceptable solution of the problem had been found which will put an end to state censorship agitation in Florida for some years to come.

The exhibitors of the state were represented by C. D. Cooley, president of the League; John T. Alsop, Jr., former president city council of Jacksonville; C. E. Daffin, Tallahassee exhibitor; Howard P. Stewart, exhibitor and mayor of Deland; Henry Titus, exhibitor and mayor of Dayton; W. L. Whitehead, manager of Republic theatre, Jacksonville, and Carl Kettler, of West Palm Beach.

These exhibitors were unanimous in summing up the situation in the following words:

"This compromise bill is a constructive substitute for state censorship based on the principle of 'selection' applied from the standpoint of 'public opinion,' as advocated by the National Board of Review.

"We believe it will accomplish a real betterment of pictures and go far to solve and cure the censorship problem for these reasons:

"1. The passage of the bill is a vote of confidence in the National Board and a national advertisement of that Board on which we largely base our fight against censorship.

"2. It stands as a legal obstacle to even the discussion of state censorship at a future date.

"3. It will eliminate the 1 per cent of pictures which are not now submitted to the National Board and which are now the prime trouble makers, since they represent the product of unscrupulous producers in the game for the money alone.

"4. It will place the exhibitor of low grade pictures on an equal plane of competition with the exhibitor who is attempting to show clean and wholesome pictures.

"5. It will, and has already done so to some extent, inspire confidence in the public and has gained the co-operation and friendship of the Federated Clubs of the state. This very fact is responsible for the defeat of a most drastic tax law which would have hit exhibitors alike and for the defeat of a Sunday closing bill.

"6. It places the burden of proof hereafter upon the opposition and permitted the industry to change from the defense to aggression.

"7. It places no cost whatsoever on exhibitor or state."

The full text of the bill, which will become law as soon as signed by the Governor, follows:

"House Bill No. 430 offered by Mr. Futch of Lake County:

"A bill to be entitled An Act to regulate the exhibition of Motion Pictures in the State of Florida, providing for the appointment of members of the National Board of Review, and providing penalties for the violation of this act.

"Section 1. That the Governor of the State of Florida be and he is hereby authorized to appoint three competent persons, from the State of Florida, to be members of the National Board of Review.

"Section 2. That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to display, exhibit or promulgate any motion picture film or films in the state of Florida that has not been approved by the National Board of Review, its appointees or successors or by the state censorship board of the State of New York.

"Section 3. This act shall not apply to any film used by schools, chambers of commerce, churches or fraternal organizations, or films for scientific or education purposes.

"Section 4. Any person or persons violating the provision of this act, either directly or indirectly, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than six months, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

"Section 5. All laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

"Section 6. This act shall take effect upon becoming a law."

Wire Briefs from the Coast

THE Oriental Pictures Corporation has been organized in Los Angeles to create an American system of exchanges in Japan, China, India and the Philippines for the distribution of American productions. Contracts have been made with Associated Producers and other important producers. E. S. Holmes is manager of the new corporation, which was organized by A. H. Woolacott, a Los Angeles stock broker.

William Desmond Productions has been organized and is filming at Bruntons. J. J. Franz is directing the first story, which is entitled "Fighting Mad." It is a modern Western version of "The Three Musketeers," by H. H. Van Loan. Desmond is the star, and Virginia Faire has the female lead. Rosemary Theby and Doris Pawn are in the cast.

It is reported that Mildred Harris will accept a vaudeville contract to be effective in December.

Webster Cullison has engaged Willard Louis, Ernest Shields, and Peggy O'Neil to support Victor Potel in the second Clever Comedy, "The Stolen Umbrella," of the Philo Grubb series.

Thomas H. Ince, Rex Ingram, Fred Niblo, T. Hayes Hunter and Jack Ford are new members of the Motion Picture Directors' Association.

W. D. Russell of Chicago is on the Coast to complete releasing negotiations with several independent organizations, including Filmart Productions, who are making five reel Westerns at Fresno, California. Russell and Russell will also have two units in Los Angeles making features with Russell Simpson and Francelia Billington.

Twelve Companies Incorporated in New York

Twelve companies incorporated in the motion picture business in New York State during the past week, showing an aggregate capitalization of $548,000. The majority of the companies incorporated with comparatively low amount of capitalization. These companies with the directors for the first year are:

Shappiro, New York; Erie Basin Amusement Co., Brooklyn, $50,000, Samuel Krauss, David Robbins, Frank Steinberg, New York; Playgoers Pictures, Inc., $1,000, Harry Wolfe, D. K. Shappiro, Estell Krengel, New York; G. and B. Amusement Co., $15,000, Samuel Bergoffen, Joseph and Harry Goldstein, Brooklyn; F. and S. Amusement Co., $15,000, Jacob Finestone, Abraham Fein, Morris Savitzky, New York; Chelsea Import and Export Co., $10,000, Edward Newman, R. W. Kerbs, New York; Minnie Horowitz, Brooklyn; Lythic Amusement Co., $200,000, Lawrence N. Martin, P. J. Dobson, W. J. Eldredge, New York; Longacre Holding Corp., $50,000, Max Richter, Giuseppe Previatli, Abel Fanchi, New York.

Fox Film to Hold Convention Week of June 27

Fox Film Corporation is preparing for its seventh annual convention, which will be held at the Hotel Commodore in New York City during the week of June 27th. All the Fox exchange managers of the United States and Canada are to attend the business conferences. William Fox, president of the corporation, will preside. Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager, and Herman Robbins, general sales manager, are to take a prominent part in the business phases of the convention.

What's Wrong with the Average Press-Book?

Also What Should Press-Book Contain? An Exhibitor Answers the Questions

WHAT I would like in a press-sheet are:

1. Real advance stories on the picture. At the present time, most press books are loaded down with stories about incidents in the director's life, how the cameraman lost his hat during a fishing trip, where the star eats her breakfast; and how an extra stubbed his toe during the filming of the picture. The kind of story I mean by an advance story is the kind you find editors in the larger towns accepting and publishing. They should be breezy, informative, and keep to the following points: the title of the picture, where it is going to play and when and who wrote the story; who produced it; who the featured players are; what type of story it is; how it was handled, and any special feature in the production. To this, might be added names of members of the supporting cast. There should be at least two or three different stories as every town has at least two and very often more newspapers and a different story should be prepared for each.

2. Additional press material, such as biographies of the stars, authors, director, and important players, names of recent pictures in which they have appeared, and any particular news item regarding any outstanding feature of the production. A number of short stories that might be used considerably in advance of the showing of the feature are also valuable.

3. Reviews of the picture. These reviews should be written after the picture has been screened and not from studio bulletins or a synopsis of the story. They should be the type of reviews usually written by newspaper critics—comments on the story, cast, various settings, how the climax of the story is reached, photography, entertainment value; and other outstanding features should be taken into consideration.

4. Single, double, and three-column scene cuts—these should always include principals and well known actors in the cast in situations showing some action. In addition, star cuts in various sizes should be included. In addition to the above for the small town exhiibtor who has not an opportunity to view the picture before playing it, I suggest that a good synopsis of the story be published.

5. Ad layouts. This should cover a campaign embracing advances, opening day, and copy during the run. Illustrations should be both half-tone and line drawing; when the latter, likenesses should be as nearly perfect as possible. Copy should be short, simple, and to the point, with plenty of good catch lines designed to excite the interest of the patron. These should be in one, two, three, four column sizes, and if possible, larger.

My criticism of the present press books being issued generally is that they are designed more with the idea of selling the picture to the exhibitor rather than the public. When the exhibitor gets as far as the press book, he has already contracted for the picture. New and novel exploitation ideas should be included in the press book as well as illustration, various advertising accessories available on a production. It is a simple matter to check the use of the press book by scanning through the columns of daily newspapers from various points in the country. How much of the press book material is actually used. This should be the answer that the proper material is not being included in the press books. Press books are an expensive proposition and should be made so that they are usable and of real benefit rather than a waste.

Harry Lindner of Chicago Dies After Operation

The death of Harry Lindner, proprietor of the Janet theatre, 617 West North Avenue, Chicago, at the Grant Hospital, following an operation for appendicitis, was a shock to the Chicago moving picture colony.

Mr. Lindner was one of the real pioneers in the city's motion picture business, was the first to install a mirror screen, and was constantly on the alert for improvements that might add to the pleasure and comfort of his army of patron friends. His radiant good fellowship made for him a legion of friends in the industry, as was attested Decoration Day at the funeral services, where the Elk Chapter was taxed beyond its capacity and several motors had to be requisitioned to carry the floral tributes. Mr. Lindner's great host of Chicago friends are united in extending their sympathy to his widow in the hour of her bereavement.

A Concrete Economy Suggestion

AN exhibitor—one of the most prominent, experienced and successful managers in this country—tells us that he has had only one usable press-book within a year or more.

Another manager of one of the West's finest theatres, tells in this issue what is wrong with the average press-book, and what it should contain.

It is written out of practical theatre experience, and its viewpoint is wide enough in scope to embrace the needs of the small house.

We recommend a careful reading of it by those who make the press-book and by those who foot the bills.

The press-book bill, for the whole producing industry, is a big one. Probably half a million dollars won't cover it.

Excluding Uncle Sam's mails and the printer there's a good-sized waste here if the waste-basket gets the press-book—as, apparently it does.

We have, at intervals, suggested that the trade papers might well carry, in its advertising pages, all the press-book matter the exhibitor really needs and can use.

—And thereby save several hundred thousand dollars in printing and postage. As a follow-up to the article in this issue may we ask for one telling just why this shouldn't be done?

W. A. JOHNSTON.

Federated Exchanges Will Double Capitalization

An important meeting of Federated Film Exchanges of America stockholders, which was later merged into a directors' meeting, was held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, starting Friday, June 3 and ending Monday of this week.

After a thorough review of the growth of the organization since its foundation in May, 1920, and the solid foundation which has been laid for the future expansion during that comparatively brief period, the stockholders gave authority to the directors to double the capitalization of the organization. The enlarged capitalization will enable Federated to take care of its growing business and to take over a number of important feature pictures, deals for which are pending.

General Manager G. H. Wiley reported to the directors that the territory now is one hundred per cent sold, and that exhibitors in every part of the United States may now obtain pictures through exchanges affiliated with Federated.

It was decided to hold the next meeting of the Federated directors at Minneapolis on June 27, 28 and 29, the same dates as those set for the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Those present at the meeting included: J. L. Friedman, president; Sam. V. Grand, treasurer, Boston; Samuel Bischoff, C. W. Dimock, Boston; Abe Warner, New York; Robert North; Harry Charnas, Cleveland; M. A. Leibenberger, Cleveland; Sam Warner, St. Louis; Al Kahn, Kansas City; M. H. Kohn, San Francisco; A. Wunderlick, Minneapolis; W. G. Underwood, Dallas; J. Eugene Pearce, New Orleans; J. M. O'Laughlin, Montreal; W. A. Greene, New York and G. H. Wiley, New York.

Endorses Editorial on Independent Producer

Jesse Goldberg Also Calls on Theatre Owner to Support the Independent Market

IN a letter addressed to William A. Johnston, editor of Motion Picture News, Jesse J. Goldberg, general-manager of Imperial Productions, Inc., writes:

"Your editorial contained in the issue of June 11th of your valued publication and headed 'Who Threatens Independence' is about the most sane comment the undersigned has read concerning the stability of independent productions.

"At the outset let one fact be established which seems to have been altogether overlooked.

"The representative trade publications are performing a service that cannot be measured in dollars and cents. This service is to a large degree altruistic and without which the motion picture industry could never have attained the heights it now occupies.

"I have often wondered what the leaders of the industry would do if all the trade publications were to suspend operations. The only medium through which producers, exhibitors, distributors, actors and directors can keep abreast of the times the most substantial medium for combating iniquitous legislation is the trade journal.

"I doubt whether any movement inaugurated for the benefit of the entire industry ever found its inception outside of the brain of the editor of some trade publication.

"And just as you support the industry so must the industry support you.

"The Independent producer is not alone. A very important factor in the motion picture, but is the backbone of the industry itself and must always remain so because in the production of motion pictures we are dealing with human factors and not inanimate commodities.

"So-called trusts may be formed to control output of a commodity that either grows or is manufactured with the help of skilled labor or ordinary labor but never where a commodity is manufactured solely with the help of artistic labor or creative effort. Therefore, producing organizations may endeavor to control distribution but never production. The Independent production will always be a source of refuge for the oppressed exhibitor and will always furnish the variety that the public demands, and that one or two producing organizations alone could never furnish.

"But of late the Independent producer rather than being encouraged has been treated more like a step-child of the industry. All we hear is, 'You haven't got a show' or 'look in.' An independent production will find no medium of production in advance and when completed is accepted on one or two basis—either leave it with a national distributor on a percentage basis, consent that it be booked only as a last resource and on terms over which the producer has no control; or to state right the production with a possibility of disposing of about 60 per cent of the country with half of that sold upon terms that would not permit of continuous operations without a treasury large enough to make four or five pictures without depending upon your income for subsequent finance.

"The answer is the theatre owners do not support the Independent Exchange and the Independent Exchange cannot support the Independent producer. It is not alone a question of first runs, it is a question of price as well for the theatre owners are more ready to pay for a production of one of the larger producing organizations the price asked than half the figure asked for a superior Independent production.

"Is it fear? Is it lack of business sagacity and foresight? Or is it that the exhibitor feels no inclination to battle for his best interests that permits of thic condition?

"Unless the independent market is supported, I predict that within one year there will be no independent feature productions of merit, and the exhibitor will be compelled to take what is handed him, with a sameness in production that will be destructive of industry's popularity, and then these controlling institutions will in turn fall of their own weight.

"The solution to my mind is the association for protective purposes of independent producers and independent exchanges in co-operation with national exhibitors' organizations.

"We are today a helter-skelter mass, upon whom the independent exchange cannot rely for steady source of supply, and to which the theatre owners cannot look for consistent co-operation, and possibly this is the reason for the lack of support from these two mediums. Might I suggest that your publication might be the medium of cementing these various parts to the end that the proper recognition and support of independent productions may be had."

Actors' Festival on Coast Proves Huge Success

THE Actors' Festival at the Los Angeles Speedway, held last Saturday for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America was a tremendous success. The function was attended by more than thirty-five thousand, with total receipts greater than one hundred thousand dollars. The event was arranged by Daniel Frohman, co-operating with all the local film studios.

The pleasure zone had twenty-three attractions with a program of nine free numbers, including five-mile auto race, between Antonio Moreno and Tod Sloane. Arbuckle, Lloyd, St. John, and Semon composed the Strollers' quartet. Fairbanks, Farnum, Rogers, Hoot Gibson, Roy Stewart, Bill Hart, Buck Jones and Harry Carey staged a rodeo under the direction of Tom Mix. Mix and Snowy Baker put on a chariot race. Baker, with twenty-five native Australians, staged a Bushman's picnic. Charlie Chaplin led a parade of youngsters made up in Chaplin costumes. Roy Stewart performed with a trick pony. Will Rogers put on a goat-roping exhibition.

In the evening a spectacle was staged entitled "The Eternal Feminine." This represented a vision of the adornment of woman and the awakening of Romance and was produced on a four-hundred-foot stage under the direction of George Hopkins, art director of the Lasky studio. All the stars on the Coast took part in the spectacle. Mary Pickford closed the show by appearing as Little Ford Fauntleroy.

Proposes Radical Blue-Law in Florida Legislature

Representative Davis, of Leon County, Florida, has put over a "hot" bill. The bill he introduced in the House would do away with everything but churches on the Sabbath.

Read 'em and see what would happen, for the bill provides that there shall be no Sunday moving pictures, Sunday baseball, Sunday racing, Sunday golf, Sunday bathing at the beaches, Sunday smoking, Sunday operation of newsstands, Sunday sale of gasoline or oil, Sunday automobile traffic, Sunday operation of freight or passenger trains, Sunday operation of restaurants, drug stores or any other place for the sale and barter of goods. In fact everything is provided for so that one could do nothing on the Sabbath but "walk" to church.

However, like the new deck, there is a joker in it, for the bill provides that it must first be submitted to the qualified electors of the State of Florida, so that makes it "a horse of another color," as they say in the classics.

Paramount District Managers Meet in New York

With S. R. Kent, general manager of the department of distribution, presiding, the annual meeting of the district managers of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. was held this week in the company's home office in New York.

Business sessions were held daily, and screenings were given of some of the Paramount pictures to be released in the fall. A banquet was given Thursday evening, June 9, at the Hotel Commodore, and the managers also made visits to the Paramount studio at Long Island City and to the Cosmopolitan studio.

the committee. The methods of fighting bogus film enterprises were outlined and some of the most striking ventures of this character were described. The activities of M. Himmel, recently arrested in Paris on information furnished by the Vigilance Committee were given special attention as the most spectacular example of fake stock promoting enterprises.

In reporting on the blue-law situation, Mr. Pettijohn, as chairman of the legislative committee, declared that "very little substantial progress has been made by the advocates of Sunday closing." He mentioned in particular the recent test case of Sunday blue-law enforcement in South Dakota, which was decided in favor of the motion picture interests by the Supreme Court.

Reports were also submitted by the Laboratory Division, the Transportation Committee, Film Theft Committee, Fire Prevention Regulations and Insurance Committee, and the Washington Bureau.

In addition to the election of Mr. Brady as president, the other officers elected are as follows:

Vice-presidents, Adolph Zukor, Samuel Goldwyn, R. H. Cochrane, Paul H. Cromelin, Will C. Smith, and E. M. Porter; treasurer, Jules E. Brulatour; assistant treasurers, Percy L. Waters and Richard A. Rowland, and executive secretary, Frederick H. Elliott..

The election immediately followed the fifth annual meeting of the National Association at which the following directors were chosen for the several divisions:

Producers' Division—William A. Brady, William Fox, Samuel Goldwyn, D. W. Griffith, Morris Kohn, Carl Laemle, Oscar A. Price, Richard A. Rowland, Joseph M. Schenck, Lewis J. Selznick, G. B. Fred Quimby Organizes His Own Producing Company

It was announced recently that Fred C. Quimby was to have charge of Pantages Screen Review and Pantages Productions, and supervise the booking of all picture product over the big circuit of the western vaudeville kind. In addition to being Mr. Pantages' personal representative in the film field, Mr. Quimby will be a producer and distributor in his own right.

The new organization, known as Fred C. Quimby, Inc., will shortly engage actively in the production of features under the supervision of one of the foremost directors from the West Coast, who is now in New York looking after preliminaries. Through arrangements already perfected these productions will be released through one of the largest distributors, it is announced.

Mr. Quimby has charge of Jack Dempsey's film activities. In addition to supervising the taking of the fight pictures, he will bring the public into intimate contact with the champion in feature and serial films.

To Test Constitutionality of New York Censorship

The American People's League, founded April 25, 1921 as an organized protest against blue laws, has planned a tax-payers' action to test the constitutionality of the New York State censorship laws. This action will be started as soon as the censorship commission has been appointed. The headquarters of the American People's League has been established at the Hotel Commodore, New York City.

Missouri Exhibs Choose Convention Delegates

Sixteen delegates and sixteen alternates from Missouri have been chosen to represent that state at the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at Minneapolis, June 27, 28 and 29. The delegation from Missouri will be a representative one, exhibitors from all corners of the state having been selected.

At least two private cars will be chartered for the trip to Minneapolis, according to A. M. Eisner, secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, an organization which is affiliated with the national body. One of the important subjects to be discussed by the Missouri exhibitors, will be the fixing of a date for a joint meeting of Kansas and Missouri exhibitors, which will be the first meeting of its kind, and which will be held in Kansas City, Mo., this fall, probably in September.

The exhibitors chosen to represent Missouri are: C. T. Sears, Brookfield; D. H. Harding, F. L. Newman and L. Goldman, Kansas City; Joseph Mogler, Fred Wehrenberg and S. Skouras, St. Louis; I. Rogers, Poplar Bluff; J. R. Pratt, Fulton; J. Truitt, Sedalia; C. H. Burkey, Kansas City; W. P. Cuff, Chilicothe; A. F. Baker, Kansas City; C. R. Wilson, Liberal; J. E. Haggard, Nevada; Ben Levi, Joplin.

The alternates: O. W. McCutcheon, Charleston; A. M. Eisner, Kansas City; N. J. Nash and L. Heyl, St. Louis; W. Flynn, Kansas City; H. E. Miller, Festus; A. C. Mercier, Perryville; H. L. Prewitt, Centralia; W. O. Reeve, St. Louis; W. Mueller, Jefferson City; A. Josephson, Kansas City; W. C. Sears, Boonville; S. E. Wilhoit, Springfield; Tom Henneberry, Kansas City; J. E. Hayes, Moberly; A. F. Norwine, Bonne Terre.

Commission to Decide on Picture Regulations

So involved has become the controversy as to what regulations should be formulated to govern the use of motion pictures in Pennsylvania in places other than theatres, that Commissioner C. B. Connelley, of the State Department of Labor and Industry, has finally decided to place the whole matter in the hands of a commission, which he named on June 3, at the capital in Harrisburg.

There are seven members of the commission, as follows: The Rev. Daniel Marsh, D. D., of Pittsburgh, representing the churches; Louis Nusbaum, of Philadelphia, representing the schools; Charles C. McMahon, of Washington, D. C., representing welfare organizations; Dana Pierce, of New York, representing Underwriters' Laboratories; L. W. Driscoll, representing manufacturers of motion picture machines; S. A. Kegley, representing manufacturers of films, and M. C. Goodspeed, of Erie, representing industrial workers.

Minneapolis to Prepare for Exhibitors' Convention

Minneapolis is "all set" to hold the biggest convention in the history of the industry, that of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. The exhibitors will convene at the West Hotel, Monday morning, June 27 and will continue in session until late Wednesday night.

Reports from parts of the country indicate that there will be at Minneapolis the largest attended convention in the annals of organized exhibitors. Government officials, U. S. Senators, Congressmen and the governors of several states have promised to attend the convention.

For the men who will be at the meetings it will be practically all business. So many problems confront the organized exhibitors that they have to a man declared their intention of foregoing pleasure in order that the convention sessions may be devoted to constructive planning and the solution of the grave problems that are now affecting the industry.

In the meantime, while the men are attending the sessions, the Minneapolis members of the M. P. T. O. A. are planning to give the exhibitors' wives an elaborate entertainment. A program has been arranged which includes several auto tours of the city and lakes in that part of the country, boat rides around the lakes and theatre parties.

Civic organizations of Minneapolis are co-operating with the exhibitors of the city to make the stay of the theatre owners in the Minnesota city a most enjoyable one, it is announced by the M. P. T. O. A. headquarters.

All requests for reservations in Minneapolis should be addressed to the M. P. T. O. A., 1482 Broadway, N. Y. Arrangements are being completed for a fare and a half for the round trip.

Connecticut Senate Turns Down Two Film Bills

The Connecticut Senate on Friday, June 3rd, rejected two bills seeking to control motion pictures in the state. One measure provided for the appointment of a censor board, which stipulated fees for the inspection of film; the other required that no motion picture could be shown in Connecticut unless it had been officially passed by the censor board of Pennsylvania or Maryland.

The Senate adopted a substitute bill, however, which provides for the supervision by the state police of all pictures shown in Connecticut. The bill empowers the police to prohibit the showing of immodest or suggestive pictures or films of a criminal nature. The measure further provides for fines up to $1,000, imprisonment up to one year and revocation of license for violations. The bill has been submitted to the House, and there is a strong feeling that it will be adopted.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 220 SO. STATE ST.

WITNESES whose names were not revealed, told daily legislative committee, investigating building graft in Chicago, that the estimated cost of the Senate theatre, one of Lubiner & Trinz houses, was boosted from five hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars to over a million dollars mostly through labor troubles, and that Mike Boyle, business agent of the electricians, and already under indictment for grating in connection with the erection of the Stratford theatre, received three thousand dollars rake off on the Senate theatre in three installments of one thousand dollars each, which was paid to him in the offices of Lubliner & Trinz. Thomas E. Maloy, of the moving picture operator's union, was named as the go between who carried some of the "graft" money to Boyle. Other motion picture theatre men, who have erected houses in Chicago recently, are to be called before the committee to reveal what they know of extortion by business agents, according to members of the daily committee.

Censors requirements for once has helped a picture, according to manager Brimmer, of Vitagraph, who inserted several scenes in "The Purple Rider," a Joe Ryan serial, at the request of the Chicago board, which has now placed its O. K. on the picture. The added scenes make the serial stronger and more interesting than it was before, according to Mr. Brimmer.

Ricorde Gradwell, of the Security Producers Corporation, was in Chicago last week and is reported to have sold the Illinois rights to several of his pictures while here. An announcement as to this transaction is expected within a few days.

V. T. Lynch, of the Tiffin theatre, and Verne Langdon, of the Hub and Avon, have taken over the Carlov theatre from Louis Zahler and will continue to operate it as a high-class motion picture house. T. H. Fricke, of the New Home theatre, will take over the management of the Carlov in addition to his old house. It is understood that Messrs. Lynch and Langdon are building up a strong chain of theatres and will in the near future secure downtown headquarters.

Robert Gumbiner is planning to leave for the West Coast in November where it is rumored he may take over the management of the Grand, the big Los Angeles motion picture theatre recently acquired by the H. L. Gumbiner Interests.

The cool weather of the last few days helped business materially in Chicago and many theatres report excellent attendance over the week end. Hopeful expressions were heard from a number of managers who believe the lack of interest in pictures recently displayed by the public is being overcome and that normal summer attendance may be expected from now on.

The Illinois Exhibitors Alliance now is located in its permanent quarters at suite 207-910 S. Michigan avenue, having moved from the temporary offices at 845 S. Wabash avenue Saturday of last week. W. D. Burford, of Aurora, also has moved his Chicago office to the Michigan avenue address.

I. D. Howard, of Winamac, Indiana, has just completed remodeling his theatre which he has made into a first-class, up-to-date moving picture house.

"The Silver Car," Earle Williams' latest feature, was given its first showing Thursday at the Vitagraph projection room and the exhibitors who were present were much pleased with the picture.

Joe Friedman, of Celebrated Players Film Corporation, who is president of Federated and holds the Illinois and Indiana Franchise for that association, has taken over the Wisconsin territory of Federated and plans to open a Milwaukee office later in the season. This is one of the biggest transactions consummated in Chicago during the later Spring and is in keeping with the successful policy of expansion which has been consistently pursued by Mr. Friedman in the conduct of his business.

H. R. Phillips and E. B. Ishmael, of Robertson-Cole's Chicago office, are going strong on "The Wonder Man" contest and manager Bob Lucas is pulling hard for his two speedy salesmen to win the tickets for the big fight party on July 2nd.

The United States Film Company is the newest production concern to enter the Chicago field and already is at work on its first productions. It has opened offices in the Chateau Theatre Building. Its first picture is to be called "Liquid Gold," the exteriors for which are being made in the Dells of Wisconsin, and the interiors will be taken at the Crane Studios, 3223 California avenue, Chicago, which has been taken over by the new concern.

J. A. Salter is rushing the Auditorium theatre at Libertyville, Ill., to completion and plans to open this fine new picture theatre on June 18. The house is a handsome up-to-date structure, and will accommodate six hundred persons. A battery of two motor driven Power's Projectors, installed under the personal supervision of Sam E. Schaffer, of S. E. Schaffer & Co., 24 East Eighth Street, Chicago, has been installed, and the equipment throughout is first class. Mr. Salter's policy in this house, as in the others which he plans to open, as fast as completed, is a clean house and clean pictures, making them family theatres in the true sense of the word.

Victor Kremer was in Chicago last week following a visit to principal cities from the West Coast East. Mr. Kremer reports conditions are good except in Seattle and Minneapolis, where business is very poor at present, and believes that the West generally will not suffer from the business depression to the same extent as territory east of the Mississippi. Mr. Kremer will visit St. Louis, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, and other cities of the Ceneral West, and then go to New York for a few days. He expects to resume production about July 1, completing his series of six Westerns, after which his program will be two big features a year.

It is reported that the Monticello theatre, at Irving and Monticello streets, has been sold to Manager Mitchell, of the Rose, who will continue to operate it as a high-grade motion picture house.

George W. Taif, assistant manager of Vitagraph's Chicago Exchange, is back in the city after a special sales trip throughout Indiana in the interests of "The Heart of Maryland." Mr. Taif reports that business is good on this feature, and that it is proving an excellent box-office attraction.

Joe Brandt was a visitor to Chicago last week, and while here conferred with the executives of the Federated Film Exchange of America in reference to some of his releases, which they are handling. Mr. Brandt is not discouraged by the present rather slow business, and feels that the industry is due for a real revival the latter part of the summer.

Jack Young, Detroit manager of Vitagraph, spent several days in Chicago recently on company business.

The charity benefit performance held last Sunday at the Colonial theatre for the American Theatrical Hospital netted eight thousand dollars for this worthy institution and to Aaron J. Jones, general chairman and treasurer, who directed the entire affair, and Ralph T. Kettering, of the Jones, Linick & Schaefer staff, who put over the splendid promotion and publicity given this affair, credit is given by the theatrical colony of Chicago for its success.

Mr. Kettering, by the way, smashed all records for capturing free space in the Chicago papers for the benefit, getting over five thousand lines of reading matter and thirty-two pictures in six daily newspapers, in addition to two editorials.

Clara Kimball Young and a number of famous stage stars volunteered their services for the program.

Linder's Latest a Sure Fire Success

THE latest Max Linder comedy, "Be My Wife," is a worthy companion piece to "Seven Years' Bad Luck," which was considered by many the best offering in which the French star ever appeared. Since Max is the jack-of-all-trades in the making of his comedies—from author, gag artist, director and star—it is easy to say that outside influences are not drawn upon to spoil his pet ideas. He is a pantomimist first, last and always, but in characterizing him as such let it be said that he has succeeded in eliminating to a large degree the foreign mannerisms which seemed out of place for American consumption. "Be My Wife" is a matrimonial farce which does not have much evidence of continuity. It is mostly a series of gags and episodes which reach richly humorous climaxes with Max hitting the bulls-eye through his pantomimic ability. The picture comes to a finish at four distinct places and then proceeds to start all over again on another tack. There are traces of some of the comedian's old-time French farces. But for the most part the incident is new. Hilarious is the scene in which the best man places a white mouse on Max's shoe and which crawls up and compels him to dance and shimmy and shake. The stunt is worked to the limit for the mouse produces a family which scatters and spreads like the w. k. measles.

The star puts over some trick panel stuff with his interiors—with the disappearing act being well emphasized. The comedy starts slowly but picks up and breezes through a winner—a comedy blessed with good titles. No announcement has been made concerning the distribution of the offering. A more extended review will appear next week.—Length 5 Reels.—Laurence Reid.

Music and The Theatre

Bethlehem, Bach and the Movies

By Charles D. Isaacson

I DON'T know whether you have ever been down to Bethlehem. I don't mean the old biblical town, but the very live city of steel and industry, and more lately of the greatest musical culture of the new world—Bethlehem of Pennsylvania, Bethlehem where Charles M. Schwab holds sway, Bethlehem where the Bach Musical Festival each year draws the finest musicians from around the country.

It is not my purpose in this writing to attempt to record the points of interest in the Bach Festival, nor of its significance in rush and bustle America as an instance of the most serious art seriously rendered by apostles of the father of modern music.

I simply want to record some of the matters concerning the motion pictures.

Out on the beautiful spreading lawn, green and rosy in the setting sun and silvery under the moonlight, I met scores of those I knew among the artists. We discussed many things, and invariably my companion would touch upon this, my motion picture activity, as one of the chiefest activities of my career. That my Motion Picture News connection should have made itself so eminently known among the distinguished international artists who of their own accord went out of their way to speak of it, was a revelation of many qualities, which I think speak for themselves. That the Association of Motion Picture-Musical Interests should so engage the careful attention of these same gentlemen and ladies, brings forth again in a determined manner the fact that these people do want to know how to associate themselves with the motion picture. My reader must understand that the artists to whom I refer were gathered from around the country; they bear the most honored names, and of all my works, including the now famous Globe concerts which they all know, my writings in the national publications, my lectures, etc.—the thing they all referred to, was the motion picture activity and the Motion Picture News.

The questions that they asked! The aid and advice they sought! The extremely important and interesting projects they had in mind for better picture music! It would have done good to the hearts of all my readers who generously follow my words here each week to have heard what I heard, to have seen what I saw.

Yet even of these interesting discoveries, is not what I would set down here.

I see in the town of Bethlehem and its success with its Festival, something of a great example for my motion picture theatre followers.

You understand that Bethlehem is a steel city; its population is made up largely of the factory workers, the storekeepers who supply their needs, and all other kinds of people who spring up around a huge industry.

Yet one man, Dr. Fred Wolle, the conductor of the Festival, by dint of his personal magnetism and the force of his sincerely believed enthusiasm of his cause, has succeeded in making all of his townspeople respond to his cultural plan. What Dr. Wolle did in a non-commercial venture, should prove an example to every theatre owner and conductor.

Dr. Wolle chose no easy road when he s up his banners of Bach, for as my musicia readers know, he is the most classical of th classical. Most people run a mile when the hear that Bach is going to be played (althoug for those who know and love him, he is a Shakespeare to the Shakespeareans). Neve theless see what has happened to Bethlehen The Bach music (the heaviest kind of chort singing, generally intended only for the cath dral) has engaged the all-year attention of thr hundred and more of the citizens who giv their time (and often their money) to joi the choir. All of these singers, backed by the families (amounting to about fifteen hundre or more) make the background of the origin audience. Their connections, their friend their acquaintances, inter-twine and link, unt practically everybody in the city is personall interested. I went to have a shave, the barbe discussed Bach as if he had been to scho with him. The bootblack joined in the cor versation. At the hotel, the clerk, the hea waiter, the bell-boy, the chambermaid, th waitresses, all were able to tell me the fa that the Mass was in B minor or C mino They were all going—to sit on the lawn. Th conductor (on the street car), the motorma the taxi-driver, the candy-store salesman, a loved and followed the Bach music.

Think of this, if you please, and pause for moment.

If one man, Dr. Wolle, has been able to a complish so much with the most classical o ideals, with a non-commercial project as hi aim, what is there to prevent the right motio picture man in a town similar to Bethlehe from accomplishing the same general end?

I can conceive of a motion picture theatr in a town the size of Bethlehem or muc smaller, where a definite program of music, fol lowing a certain policy, could be so advertise talked about, that the Musical Idea of th Theatre could become a private and communit object of interest. If I were a motion pictur man in a small town, I would not rest unt I had made my music the informal propert (so to speak) of the whole community.

This is the lesson of Bethlehem and Bac which I would leave with you.

Audience Gathers to Learn Movie-Music Technique

When last week it was announced that a special discussion of motion picture music would be given at the Kineto Projection Rooms, for the lay public, to the amazement of the backers, an overflow audience packed the place, and demanded more and more. It is surprising to realize that a large percentage of every motion picture audience is keenly alive and curious concerning the musical end of the entertainment. This brings forth the point that the director will not make a mistake if he takes his audience into his confidence and tells them in the program or in some other method, what he's trying to do, how he's doing it, what he's up against, etc. People like to be taken "back scenes."

At the Kineto affair just mentioned, Ethel Stoller was the pianist, your humble scribe delivered the talk, and Charles Urban showed some of his latest pictures. The audience was very happy, and went out, with a new comprehension of the values of picture music.

Liberty Theatre (Portland Uses Clever Idea

Where is the motion picture theatre owner wh would not like to have 10,000 prominent men an women striving to work up business for his weekl concert matinee?

This enviable situation exists for C. S. Jensen of th Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore.

"How can we make Portland realize it is wort while getting out of bed early Sunday morning t attend our noon organ concerts," Mr. Jensen aske himself one day. "How can we stir the Portland pul lic so that it will fill our house on Sunday during th first early shows and the maximum efficiency b attained," he mused.

Newspapers on the Sunday following showed a three column check made out for $500 signed by C. S. Jen sen, and countersigned by the Liberty theatre auditor but with the space for payee's name left vacant.

"Liberty theatre offers a prize of $500 to the civi organization which will select the best program of fou organ compositions to be played at the regular Sunda noon concerts," read the newspapers with conspicuou

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Sacred and Profane Love—
Only fair. Elsie Ferguson's absence from screen has not made this star a very good box office attraction. Story too heavy, and trying on the mind. Audience disappointed. (West.)

Only fair. The censors changed it so much that they made the story ridiculous and box office receipts fell off accordingly.

Sham—
A pleasing little picture for warm weather. Good comedy went over very well. (East.)

The Traveling Salesman—
A mediocre picture. Business didn't amount to much. (East.)

Proxies—
A fair picture. Business just average. (East.)

Deception—
This picture went over very good. Audiences seemed pleased and box office receipts were large. (West.)

Beau Revel—
Pretty good picture but not much of a box office magnet. We need bigger and better or best features to get people nowadays. (West.)

Gilded Lily—
Good for extended run. (West.)

Dollar a Year Man—
Not up to Fatty's standards. He can do better. (West.)

The Lost Romance—
Interesting. Splendid story well acted and well directed. Under normal conditions this picture would have filled the house, as it is, it just pulled a fair crowd. (Middle West.)

White and Unmarried—
An excellent picture which coupled with the popularity of Thomas Meighan, brought good houses during its run. (Middle West.)

The Witching Hour—
Something different, which will probably not appeal to everybody. However, a good picture, well developed.

The Idol of the North—
Dorothy Dalton's work in this reminds one of her first successes. Rather ancient plot, but well done all in all. Miss Dalton always draws well here. (Middle West.)

The Faith Healer—
The attendance did not justify the merit of the production which

A. G. Stolte's Sunday ad in the Des Moines papers for the current week's showing of "Playthings of Destiny" at the Des Moines theatre can be classed as good. An average business for the week. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Woman in His House—
Somewhat different from the ordinary problem picture, interesting and well received. Went over good for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Peck's Bad Boy—
A good picture which Jackie Coogan's popularity helped to put over very big. It delighted my patrons and was a sure-fire box office attraction. (West.)

Went over very big. (East.)

Not Guilty—
A fair picture that brought only fair returns. (East.)

Gypsy Blood—
Good picture which went over well and brought good business. (West.)

Bob Hampton of Placer—
One of the best Westerns seen here in a long time. Good box office values. (Middle West.)

Scrambled Wives—
The plot in this is somewhat poor, but Miss Clark is her old-time self, and pleases everybody. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The Nut—
Not Fairbank's best picture, but very entertaining, and drawing big crowds. (Middle West.)

Thru the Back Door—
Going big on second week's run. Very entertaining story. (West.)

Dream Street—
Second week. Not so good as first week but held up pretty fell under adverse picture conditions. (Middle West.)

METRO

The Little Fool—
Good entertainment and cast. Very satisfactory audience picture. (West.)

Without Limit—
Picture very good. Went over well with all those who saw it. Business off on account of unusually hot weather. (Middle West.)

Puppets of Fate—
Very good picture. Fine business during run. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Blazing Trail—
Good outdoor picture. Good attraction for this time of the year. Did pretty well. (Middle West.)

Wonderful production and went over very big. Vastly entertaining story, which pleased audiences. (West.)

Cheated Love—
Went over in good shape with our patrons and did good business at this house. (Middle West.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

Salvage—
Fair. Better than the average Pauline Frederick picture. Did as well as most any pictures these days. (Middle West.)

Great feature. A good little money-getter and pleases the people as well. (West.)

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

Mother O' Mine—
Strong picture. Lots of human appeal. Only fair business however. (Middle West.)

A Small Town Idol—
A sure business getter; full of fun, life and action and is a good drawing card. Best house in several weeks. (Middle West.)

This one for "Peck's Bad Boy," three columns by eleven inches, was used by the Strand theatre, Minneapolis

REALART

Don't Call Me Little Girl—
The best picture Mary Miles Minter has ever appeared in. She goes better with the public with every picture. Business up to average. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

The Heart of Maryland—
A fair picture. Not much quality from a box office standpoint. (East.)

EQUITY

Straight From Paris—
Splendid picture which appealed strongly to the host of Clara Kimball Young admirers in our audiences. Did better business than any picture for several weeks. (Middle West.)

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Among Those Present—
Picture did not give satisfaction that previous Lloyd pictures have, but business was slightly better than expected. Most patrons thought the production was too long. "Uncharted Seas" which was shown on the same program, was well liked. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

You Will Find It Everywhere—
Picture dragged and did not get across. Played to poor business. (Middle West.)

A Dangerous Pastime—
Fine picture and well liked. More than usual business. (West.)

Madonnas and Men—
Fair picture. Had average business during run. (West.)

School Children Write Reviews of "Ireland in Revolt"

By tying up with the three educational institutions in his town, the manager of the Orpheum theatre, Nashville, Tenn., put over a whirlwind campaign on "Ireland in Revolt" that netted him a tidy sum, and cost little.

A silver loving cup was offered to the pupil in either of the three schools who wrote the best review on the picture. The student body of each school, through a process of elimination, named a committee composed of the best students of composition and English to attend the picture and compete for the cup. The faculties of the schools endorsed the picture heartily.

A tie-up with the department stores was also most effective, over ten thousand heralds, and block one-sheets printed in green ink were distributed by these stores.

The loving cup occupied a prominent place in the window of a local jeweler's shop, where it was backed up by one-sheets of the picture. Before the picture opened, the classes in the various schools discussed the Irish question, and interest had reached a fever-height when the picture finally opened.

The picture was presented by the Knights of Columbus, and, unannounced, a local soloist of great popularity, sang a group of old Irish songs, as a sort of prologue, while some scenes of Ireland before the war were shown as contrast to the present state of the "distressful country."

The newspaper space and publicity given the picture through this explanation could not be bought for money.

"Spanish Galleon" which the Regent theatre, Rome, N. Y., built to exploit the showing of "Buried Treasure"

Burt Builds Spanish Galleon in Theatre Lobby

A genuine and authentic Spanish galleon was built in the lobby of the Regent theatre, Rome, N. Y., for the showing of "Treasure Island," as is illustrated by the accompanying cut. B. L. Burt, manager of the Regent, found the stunt comparatively inexpensive.

The Regent lobby had a steady run of visitors, especially those in knee breeches, during the days the fake ship was on exhibition. Stage rocks and palms were scattered about the lobby to give a touch of realism.

Reid Stages Prologue for "Gypsy Blood"

A. Gordon Reid, production manager of the Branford theatre, Newark, originated a most excellent prologue number for "Gypsy Blood" playing a recent engagement at the Branford.

The Branford's stage setting represented a woodland scene with a picturesque gypsy tent at the right stage. A small camp fire negotiated by means of wooden cross-pieces, a red electric light and a small electric fan was the only other stage props used.

As the curtain rose, a gypsy girl was seen reading the fortune of a woman in white modern dress. The gypsy's costume was colored in bright red and green. As far as possible she was dressed as Pola Negri is seen in the picture.

The opening lines were sung by the lady asking the gypsy to gaze into the future and read her fate. After business arrangements had been made the gypsy proceeded to sing to the lady about the latter's future stating that wealth and grandeur, and position were to be hers, but not love. The lady replies with a song that ridicules the gypsy's predictions. After which the lady departs leaving the gypsy to sing a rather amourous vampire song. This leads into the introduction of four other gypsies who sing a gypsy wandering song.

Several other numbers precede the finale which brings out a song about Senorita Carmencita," which closes the curtain. The sextette continue singing from back stage while the opening titles of "Gypsy Blood" are flashed on the screen.

The lyrics and music for the prologue were written by Paul Sarasen, and interpreted by Caroline Andrews, as the fortune teller; Louise Rostand, as the lady; and the following members of the Branford mixed quartette: Chichilles Adelgheim, Niura Kusnitzova, Bertha Rodgers and Leon Beir.

Mechanical Policeman Works for "Outside the Law"

When a big policeman stands in front of you and raises his arm, you stop. Anyone would stop. That's what the management of the Casino theatre, Chicago, figured when they planned exploitation for "Outside the Law."

Accordingly two life-size policemen were painted on compo board and mounted in the lobby each with the right arm moveable and attached to cords leading from an electric motor. As the motor was operated, the arms intermittently were raised up-right in the well known position affected by traffic cops.

At the bottom of each cut-out was the following admonition in bolding lettering: STOP! You are OUTSIDE THE LAW!

Jordan Makes Specialty of Lobby Displays

The accompanying photograph shows the lobby decoration of the Orpheum theatre, St. Joseph, during the recent exhibition of "The City of Silent Men." It exemplifies the ideas of Manager G. E. Jordan, who has employed a resident artist to produce each week elaborate lobby displays and settings for his theatres.

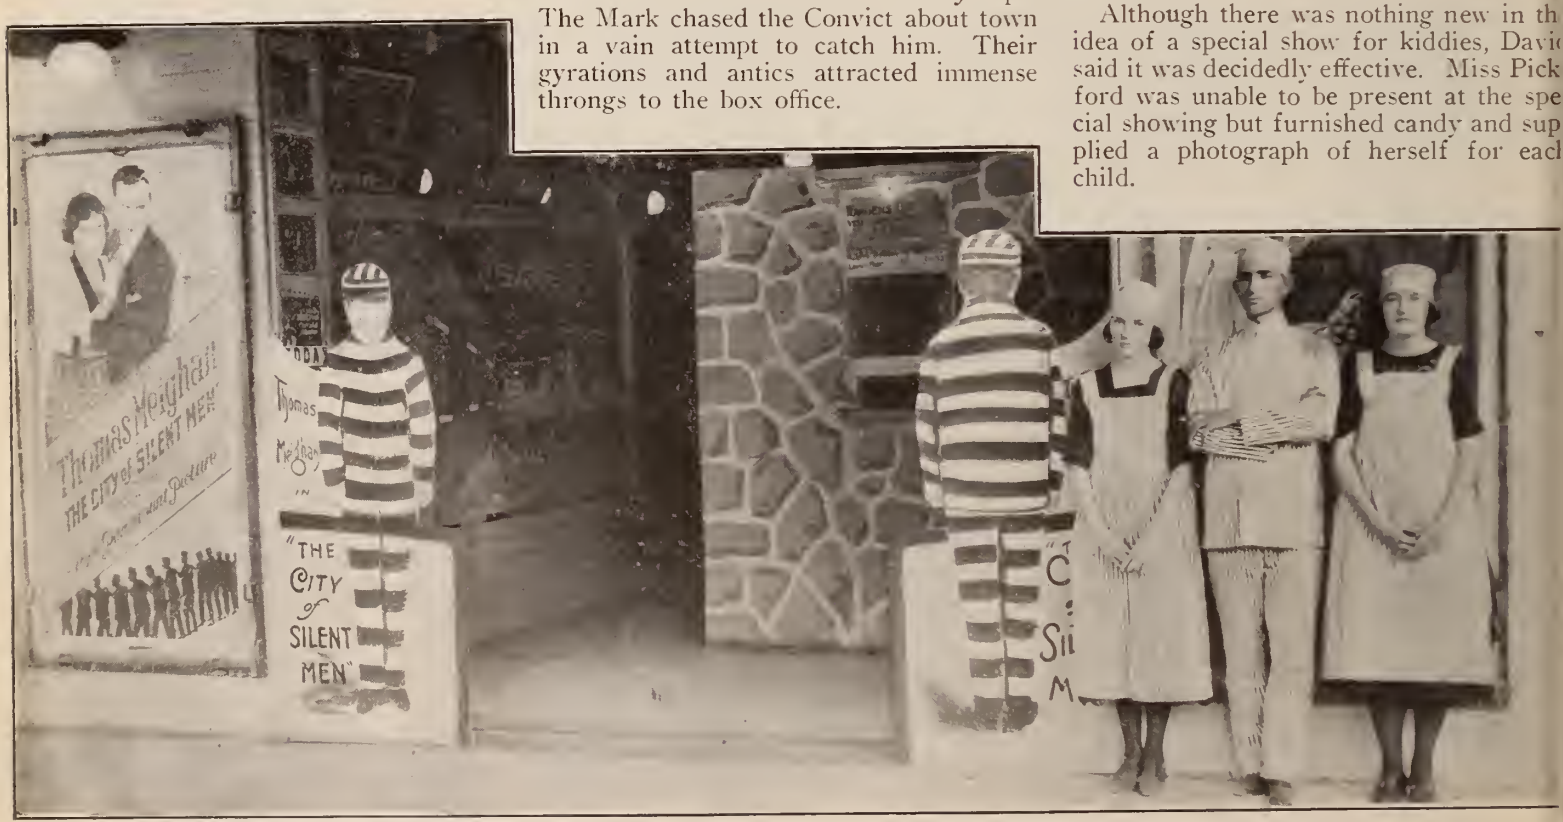
The same artists designed two costumes. One for a "Mark of Zorro" and another to typify Buster Keaton in "Convict 13," which was shown at the same time as the Fairbanks' feature. Two men were attired in the original costumes and set loose in the streets of St. Joseph. The Mark chased the Convict about town in a vain attempt to catch him. Their gyrations and antics attracted immense throngs to the box office.



David Gives Special Matinee for Mary's New Picture

In the face of an unprecedented rain storm, nine hundred orphans crowded through the front door of the Mission theatre in Los Angeles last Saturday morning to see "Through the Back Door" at a special show arranged for their benefit by the house manager, Harry David and the Los Angeles Times, the biggest daily newspaper in the Southwest. This entertainment for the kiddies was a part of Manager David's publicity campaign for "Through the Back Door" and "Home Talent." In conveying the youngsters to the theatre some of the wealthiest families of the city contributed their cars, while members of the most influential women's clubs co-operated in finding orphanages.

For a week prior to the showing, the Los Angeles Times carried on a publicity campaign calling attention to the fact that the paper was treating the orphans of the city to a view of Mary Pickford in the feature attraction at the Mission theatre. The last three days of the Times campaign was featured by half-pages devoted to reading matter and photographic layouts, and the Sunday following the show nearly a full page was given over to the stunt, lauding its success and the pleasure with which the kiddies received Miss Pickford's film.

In addition to fifty automobiles, ranging from roadsters to limousines, two of the biggest sight-seeing buses in the world each with a seating capacity of seventy two, were used to convey the orphans from their respective homes to the theatre and back.

Although there was nothing new in the idea of a special show for kiddies, David said it was decidedly effective. Miss Pickford was unable to be present at the special showing but furnished candy and supplied a photograph of herself for each child.

Exploitation for "The City of Silent Men" during the showing of this picture at the Lyric theatre, San Angelo, Texas

How Whitefield Put Over "The Kid"

A newcomer into the contributing editor class, which is what we like to term the exhibitors who write explaining their exploitation stunts is R. P. Whitfield, manager of the Lyric and Liberty theatres, San Angelo, Texas, who relates how he put over "The Kid."

Mr. Whitfield literally monopolized a half-dozen issues of the San Angelo Standard with publicity for the picture and Jackie Coogan and secured a number of effective window displays, one of which is reproduced herewith in his successful efforts to interest every show-going person in San Angelo. Mr. Whitfield writes that he did more business in three days than he usually does in a full week.

Here is a window display which R. P. Whitfield, manager of the Lyric theatre, San Angelo, Texas, obtained for his showing of "The Kid"

McKeesport's Citizens Attend Advance Showing of "Passion"

The Mayor, other public officials, educators and many of the most prominent residents of McKeesport, Pa., "sat up" when they received invitations from the Victor theatre management, requesting their attendance at an advance private showing of "Passion," at 10 o'clock on a Saturday morning. The invitations, which were accompanied by cards good for the admittance of the bearer and a friend, stated that "this courtesy is being extended to you and other leading citizens of McKeesport, representing the thinking class of our city," and had the effect of packing the house.

After entering the theatre they were given two sheets of paper containing the opinions of persons of national fame concerning the picture, and with a space for their own expressions. These were used in advertising matter with signal success.

The theatre manager printed the invitation to the Mayor in its newspaper ads, thereby notifying the entire reading public that "Passion" was booked.

"Wet Gold" Plays Premiere

California Theatre, Los Angeles, Inaugurates Thorough Exploitation Campaign on New Release

As exploitation for "Wet Gold," playing recently at the California theatre, Los Angeles, Roy Miller, publicity director for the theatre and John W. Rankin, Goldwyn's West Coast exploitation man put over a stunt which advertised the picture throughout the city.

Two men wearing diving suits and guarding a chest filled with the "Wet Gold" bills, the chest being bound with heavy chains, were sent through the streets of Los Angeles in an auto truck for four days preceding the first showing.

In addition to the usual billboards and window displays, the theatre took forty-inch advertisements in the Saturday and Sunday issues of the Los Angeles newspapers, and the Express ran a buried word contest in its want advertisement columns, burying separately the words in the sentence, "California Theatre presents latest sub-sea picture 'Wet Gold' for entire week May twenty-second." Although the contest ran for only two days, more than 1,000 answers were received, forty-seven of which were correct.

I. P. Wilkerson, production manager of the California theatre, staged an unusually attractive prologue for "Wet Gold," although it had no connection whatever with the photoplay. Mr. Wilkerson decided, in this instance, to stage a prologue which should be in complete contrast to the picture. The opening of the plush curtains disclosed a cabaret setting entitled "At Churchill's," a typical cabaret scene in which a girl's orchestra, with players dressed in black velvet jackets and long striped trousers, furnished jazz musical selections and the accompaniment for a Spanish dancer. Guests at four tables on the stage listened and applauded—as did the theatreful of people. The prologue added a note of diversity to the two-hour show and proved just as effective as have other prologues staged by Mr. Wilkerson which reflected the atmosphere of the feature picture.

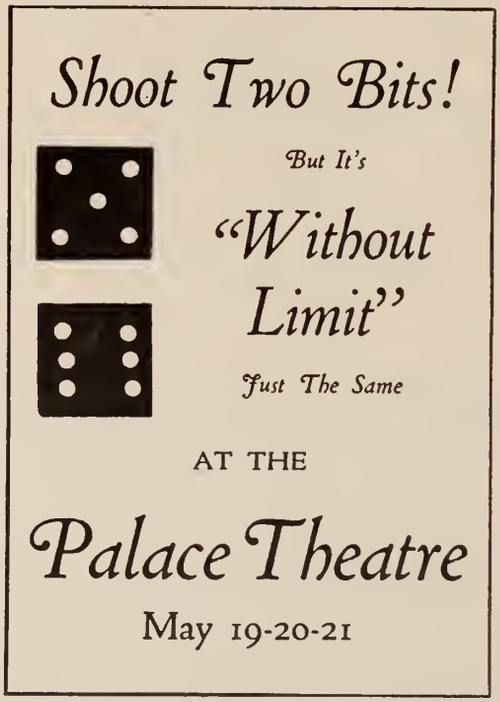
Civil War Vets on Brooklyn Strand Bill

Five Civil War veterans of Grant Post of Brooklyn, brought the Mark Strand theatre audiences to their feet when they appeared in color guard formation at the finale of Managing Director Edward L. Hyman's patriotic overture for Decoration Day.

The Mark Strand Symphony Orchestra played Hosmer's "Southern Rhapsody," and three or four bars from "Dixie" as the curtain revealed the five soldiers of "'61."

The presentation of the bent old heroes emphasized the spirit of the occasion, making a splendid tie-up with Decoration Day. J. P. Hill, commander of the G. A. R. Post appeared in the patriotic tableau which was extremely simple but a forceful piece of stage art. It told the story of Decoration Day as a dozen "ginger-bread" ideas might have failed to bring it out.



The very fact that the aged men were actual G. A. R. heroes and from Brooklyn, also added an impressive touch to the overture number that could not have been obtained in any other way.

Here are the five Civil War "Vets" who appeared on the Brooklyn Mark Strand bill last week as a special Decoration Day feature

Schade Uses Herald Novelty for "Without Limit"

Playing cards were userd to good effect in exploiting "Without Limit" by George Schade, manager of Schade's theatre, Sandusky, O.

A reproduction of one side of a card herald used by Fred S. Meyer, managing director of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, to exploit "Without Limit." The reverse side of the card was much the same

Mr. Schade used playing cards on the back of which was printed "We're playing 'Without Limit' at the Schade, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. And the police have promised to raid the house," as heralds.

The cards got a lot of attention and the unusual advertising copy excited interest in the production.

Carney Capitalizes on Human Vanity

Manager Carney, of Fox's theatre, New Britain, Conn., capitalized on human vanity for an advance display in his lobby for "Forbidden Fruit." In the lobby is a mirror somewhat larger than a six-sheet board. For a week preceding the run of the picture, Mr. Carney with the co-operation of A. S. Nathan, Paramount exploiteer, ran cut-outs from three-sheets and one-sheets pasted on the surface of the mirror. The lettering was painted. The women who used to go to the mirror openly to powder the noses and the men who took a covert glance at themselves, noticed the obstruction in their familiar primping place. Mr. Carney who knows both sexes in New Britain said the mirror was nearly 100 per cent effective among the patrons leaving the theatre.

Merchants Help Exhibitor Put Over Newspaper Spread

Casper, Wyo., has only 14,000 people, according to latest census figures at hand, but it is a fairly safe bet that every adult in the town knew all about "Passion," as the result of the advance advertising the management of the Lyric theatre gave it.

With the aid of the merchants of the town, 38 of whom paid for space, the Lyric was able to buy a two-page smash in the Casper Daily Courier, using a total of 204 inches of white space for the "Passion" message. It was one of the biggest newspaper ads the town ever saw in connection with a picture, and its effect was apparent at the box office.

Aside from the fact that the exhibitor turned that day's edition into a "Passion" special which was circulated in a territory rich in rich people who could afford to pay an increased price for an extraordinary picture, the story of the big feature's booking was told personally to every merchant and clerk in the town by the advertising solicitors. They had to tell it as part of their canvass. This amounted to personal solicitation for a picture seldom possible, even in a small town.

"Suds" Gets Washing Machine Aid Once Again

During the week of May 15, the Princess theatre at Dubuque made its first attempt at exploiting a picture. "Suds" was scheduled. Manager Billos sought and obtained the co-operation of the Apple-Higley Electric Co. and three days before the picture was shown, the electric company had arranged a "Suds" window. A large size model electric washer was placed in the window and filled with soapy water. The current was attached and foamy suds was made. The washer was kept in continuous motion and the rise and fall of the suds formed the center of attraction. Attractive pictures of Miss Pickford and displays from the picture "Suds" were grouped about the washer together with posters advertising the date of the showing of the picture. Another poster directed the people to the Princess theatre, where a second model was placed in the lobby.

In the advertisements in the local newspapers Manager Billos called the attention of the public to the displays and invited them to see a demonstration of the washer in the Princess lobby. The result was that "Suds" went over big. More than that it convinced the management of the wisdow of exploitation.

Gives Short Subject Equal Billing with Feature

James Fogarty, manager of the Rosemary theatre, Ocean Park, Cal., believes as much in his short subjects as he does in his features and exploits them together. During the run of "O'Malley of the Mounted," the marquee of the theatre was decorated also for Earl Hurd's "Bobby Bumps" cartoons. He employed a local draughtsman of talent to draw large posters of the Bobby, his girl, and his ever-accompanying dog. These were cut-out and erected over the maquee with a large wash drawing of Hart. Fogarty believes that short subjects can be exploited at a moderate cost and if used properly will prove a drawing card.

Indians Capture Newark, N.J.

Branford Theatre Exploitation for "Bob Hampton of Placer" Collects Columns of Free Newspaper Space

THE Branford theatre, Newark, N. J., the week of May 14, and the local papers carried front page articles on account of the personal appearances of the Blackfeet Indians with the picture.

D. J. Shepherd, the managing director and M. J. Cullen, the live wire publicity director, arranged many novel stunts and the papers just ate it up.

On Sunday, the tribe was taken to the Velodrome where 20,000 fans were attending the bicycle races, and they received a wonderful reception when they made their appearance on the track. A circle of the track was then made and Chief Two-Guns White Calf, presented Frank L. Kramer, the American champion for twenty years, with a mammoth bouquet and then started the biggest match race of the day.

Monday they were taken to the city hall where Mayor Gillen gave them the key to the city and welcomed them in behalf of Newark.

Tuesday, when the new city commissioner took oath they were the honored guests and were the first to congratulate the new office holders. The papers all took pictures and the Indians were the most conspicuous when they were reproduced.

Wednesday a visit to several of the public schools and an automobile tour of the city. Thursday all the leading department stores were visited, and cards telling the public that they were appearing at the Branford theatre were passed out. In the evening they were the guests of the Big Fight Club where a crowd of 10,000 were present.

Friday a flying trip to Passaic, Paterson, and Ridgewood was made and visited the high schools and met the mayors and other prominent public officials. They were taken to the ball park where they had the honor of throwing out the first ball before 20,000 fans.

Every noon hour a walk through the principal downtown streets caused no end of comment, and they blocked traffic no matter where they appeared.

Fish Uses Grocer's Bags to Advertise Picture

The good old reliable grocer's bag stunt that for putting publicity for a picture where it can do the most good, right into the kitchen was used with the usual success by Arthur L. Fish, manager of the Pastime theatre, Akron, O., in publicising "Passion."

The Pastime is a neighborhood house and by furnishing the printed bags to all the grocers in the section Mr. Fish was able to reach nearly every home in the radius from which he had a chance of selling a ticket.

Schwalm Gets Big Chief for "Bob Hampton" Campaign

John Schwalm, manager of the Rialto theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, wasn't able to get one of the bands of Blackfeet Indians appearing in connection with the showing of "Bob Hampton of Placer," but was able to obtain the services of some real Indians for his engagement at the Rialto.

It happened that Chief Big Bear and his squaw were in the vicinity of Hamilton on a lecture tour, and Mr. Schwalm was able to engage them. Being "close relations" of the Blackfoot tribe and thoroughly familiar with all the country in which the scenes of the picture are laid, they made an excellent substitute for the "big time" tribe. Mr. Schwalm credits them with no small part of the tremendous success which marked the showing of "Bob Hampton of Placer" during its three-day run at the Rialto.

Criterion Presenting Fine Prologue for "White and Unmarried"

Hugo Reisenfeld, managing director of the Criterion theatre is presenting a prologue for "White and Unmarried," now current at the Criterion under the title of "Al'Apache." The number takes its inspiration from scenes in the Meighan picture and was staged by Josiah Zuro, formerly concert master of the Manhattan Opera Company and assistant conductor of the Century Opera Company, who is now in charge of the Reisenfeld presentations.

The curtain goes up and reveals a group of French "roughnecks," men and women, at tables in a little restaurant. A bob-haired little midinette, Sylvette de la Mar, is singing a popular topical song written by Jaquenol, a song that is the delight of Paris and is now winning favor at the Criterion. Of course, the young woman, being French as well as taking a French role, dances while she sings. The chorus joins in through a large part of the song and through most of the dancing part. There is considerable stage business during the first song and then Paul Oscard and May Kitchen Cory start an Apache dance. In costumes and manner the two are surprisingly realistic. Their dancing is even better. And as they finish with the dance little Miss de la Mar gathers her friends, the chorus, about her and sings another of the late Paris hits. "Cach ton Piano." This is a satire on the present piano and musical instrument tax in France.

The whole thing is bright and snappy and apparently is appreciated by the audiences.

Advertising Lesson for Small City Showman

Above is shown a line cut of an ad on "The Idol of the North," five columns by thirteen inches and sponsored by G. R. Stewart, manager of the America theatre, Casper, Wyoming.

Reproduction of newspaper displays is usually confined to other pages in this section under the caption of "With First Run Theatres," but an exception is made in this case because Mr. Stewart has proven once again that the small town manager can frame artistic and ticket selling ads even if he hasn't all the facilities that a big city newspaper affords.

Almost in the same mail with Mr. Stewart's display on "The Idol of the North" came five letters complaining about the poor exploitation aid the producers were furnishing. One exhibitor states that the mats or cuts he gets look like "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup ads." He should study the America ad and write Mr. Stewart forthwith for a lesson in framing displays which don't resembles Mrs. Winslow's famous remedy advertising.

Mr. Stewart might have left the black border off to advantage, but aside from this, the display measures up with the stuff some of our high priced advertising experts turn out. Anyway this ad sold tickets or we don't know anything about advertising.

Hauber Organizes Circus Parade as Serial Publicity

Manager O. C. Hauber of the Hauber theatre, Camden, Ark., does not believe in neglecting his serial attractions as is shown by the cut illustrating the exploitation put over for the first episode of "King of the Circus."

A negro in a "lion's suit" provided the main attraction, a big chicken coop being utilized for a cage. A clown contributed the comedy as the outfit covered the town giving a circus atmosphere.

The stunt attracted big crowds to the opening episode of the serial and Mr. Hauber is well satisfied with the results of his efforts.

Kansas Editor Turns Poet

Novel Way of Exploiting "Something to Think About" Originates in Western City

A DISEASE akin to "Midsummer Madness," must have hit the advertising manager of the Wellington (Kansas) Daily News, who composed a series of quatrains for a two-page newspaper co-operative lay-out for "Something To Think About." John P. Goring, the Paramount exploiteer for the Kansas City district, used the same verses for similar lay-outs in no less than fourteen papers in his district. The lay-out consisted of a large cut made from the stills of the picture and the rest of the space was taken by barbers, funiture dealers, druggists, automobile agents, insurance houses and the like. Goring's stunt resulted in about 28 pages of newspaper advertising that didn't cost the theatres a dime.

A specimen of the verses are:

For a barber shop:
"Whiskers grow and hair gets long,
They'll tangle in the sugar tong,
You'll look the part of some old scout,
Unless my shop you think about."

For a clothing shop:
"Ten years we've been in this old town,
A suit you get for ten bones down,
The rest you pay, just sprinkled out,
For ten long weeks, Hey! think about."

This was used by the photographers:
"No wrinkles, freckles, spots or frowns,
On faces here can e'er be found,
It's something you should think about,
The way we make your looks stand out."

The florists used this for "Mothers' Day":
"Mother's ways, so dear and kind,
Always rush into my mind,
We love those ways with all our power,
So let's beget for her a flower.
Mothers' Day, Sunday, May 8."

The lay-out accommodated about fifteen verses in a similar vein. They were arranged typographically so that you could see what the display was driving at. Goring, in reporting on the effect of these fourteen lay-outs said:

"The display covered two pages with a long banner reading 'Something To Think About' zig-zagging through the display. This caught the eye. There was plenty of white space on the pages so the verses stood out.

Los Angeles Has "Treasure Hunt" with Usual Results

For the showing of "Buried Treasure" at Grauman's Rialto theatre, Los Angeles, Sid Grauman, managing director, arranged a prologue in which the principals were dressed the nondescript half-Spanish, half-pirate, half-Caribbean costume of the story. The Western Costume Company tied up with the theatre and due credit was given, minimizing the expenses of the presentation.

J. L. Johnston, Paramount exploiter out of Los Angeles, arranged a treasure hunt which resulted in reams of free newspaper publicity. New angles were played up every day for ten days preceding the actual hunt. The Los Angeles Examiner offices displayed cards calling attention to the contest. The approximate location of the buried treasure was printed on a pirate's map and run in the papers.

The treasure consisted of trinkets, several gold pieces, paper currency and an autographed picture of Marion Davies all wrapped in a bright red scarf and enclosed in a chest. To throw the adventurers off the track four dummy treasurers were buried. The youngsters who were attracted by the hunt were supposed to gather at noon. A contingent arrived at sunrise, found the treasure and made off with it before the judges arrived. Another treasure was buried and the formal digging took place at the appointed time.

High School Runs Pictures

Students at Puente, Cal., Operate Theatre on Showmanship Principles

FROM Frank M. Welch, president of the student body of the Puente (Cal.) High School, comes a letter of unusual interest since it relates the experience of the school as a whole in the exhibiting field. The story is best told in the original form as it came to us:

In our high school we are pioneering in an untried field of school activity—that is, commercially presenting motion pictures to the public.

As the community in which we operated does not have a motion picture house within a radius of six miles, and since we needed the financial returns that this enterprise has given us, we were led to give it a trial during the 1919-1920 term. As a result we have the patronage of the entire community, and have been able to finance all student body and athletic activities, which includes the purchase of a new second motion picture machine, equipping both machines with Argus Mazda lights, and also the addition of an Argus crystal-bead screen.

All of our pictures have been previewed, and only the best are accepted. In conjunction with the pictures we have been able to present stunts and prologues, in which our students appear. Of these our latest success is known as the "Kiddies' Fashion Show," the costumes being furnished by a local dry goods store.

As we presented it only one night we were able to obtain the kiddies, who were all under the second grade in grammar school, to appear without any financial outlay on our part. In presenting it a reviewing stand was built, which was draped with an American flag, and in charge of a young American General. A V-type runway was constructed out from each end of the footlights over the first two rows of seats. As it was made of heavy material it required little bracing. It was lighted with 2,000 watts of indirect light, coming from behind the greenery adorning the runway.

After all the kiddies had promenaded individually on the runway a little dance was given by two of them, followed by "London Bridge." As the two sides pulled for the victory a quick curtain was given. The stunt was very effective as an advertising medium, since it advertised from an angle that would not otherwise have been possible.

We are enclosing clippings from the local paper, which may prove of interest. If you think that any further details in our new field would prove valuable to your readers we will be glad to furnish you with the same.

Respectfully submitted,

FRANK WELCH,
President Student Body, P. U. H. S.

Freckled Face Idea for "Dinty" Used Again

The "freckled faced kid" idea for putting over "Dinty" has been used with success by the New Valentine theatre of Defiance, O. The New Valentine manager and W. F. Kimberly, a local advertising man in Defiance, worked out the idea together. They ran a series of three reading notices, set like straight newspaper stories, and written in juvenile terms. Every freckled-face boy and girl in town was invited to be "Dinty's" guest free on the first night of the run. The readers, which told how valuable Wesley Barry's freckles have been to him in winning fame and fortune, ran three days prior to the opening.

In order to get the grown-ups, the management invited them to be judges, through the medium of applause, in the freckle-face test. On the first night of the run the big house was packed, 134 freckled kids were "down front" and, when the judging came off the house went into an uproar. The kids were taken up on the stage, introduced and permitted to do any stunts they knew. The house applauded heartily, everybody had a good time and three boys were given cash prizes.

Robson Borrows Dummies to Exploit Pictures

An exploitation for "Why Change Your Wife?" when this picture played the Princess theatre, Donora, Pa., Paramount exploiter William N. Robson hooked up with a local department store for the use of some window dummies. These figures were gowned to resemble the characters of the picture and a credit card given. It was novel exploitation and created much comment.

Managing Director Joseph Plunkett's prologue number for "Scrap Iron" playing last week at the New York Mark Strand theatre

Novel "Scrap Iron" Prologue

Joseph Plunkett, New York Mark Strand Manager Stages Atmospheric Number for Ray's New Feature

WHEN Managing Director Joseph Plunkett began preparations for his prologue to Charles Ray's production of "Scrap Iron," he had a competitive number of suggestions offered him by the various scenes in the picture, from which he selected the one which, in his estimation as a showman, he thought would be most appreciated by his audience, and which he thought would be a most fitting introduction to his feature film. His choice was made from a standpoint of adaptability, economy and effect, to say the least of general practicality. The desired result of the foregoing presentation led Mr. Plunkett to proclaim that he considered it his best exhibition of prologue production.

The background of the scene here represented is that of a Pennsylvania manufacturing town—a specially constructed flat set against a clear sky drop, the smoke stacks which supposedly emit volumes of smoke from the blast furnaces being accentuated, as are the window panes in the factory walls. A trolley track is plainly visible in the fore.

Upon the opening the Strand Male Quartette is revealed costumed as laboring men and carrying dinner pails. The lights on this occasion are: Red on the right, showing the tensity of the glow from the furnaces; blue on the left, denoting the fall of dusk, and a red border. The lights from the furnaces rise and fall, and the smoke stacks are in full operation. After the completion of the quartette's first number, the red lights on the right are diffused to a dim purple, the red border is eliminated, the blue sky is intensified and faint baby spots are played on the singers' faces. An automobile is then seen making its way across the trolley track in the distance and finally passes out of sight completely. The scene is then closed with the quartette's rendition of "Sally in Our Alley," as the lights gradually lessen on the finishing notes.

Everyone was inclined to agree with Director Plunkett that his prologue is everything he claimed it to be.

Willitt Gets Results with Animated Window Display

An animated window display—with a real, live Spanish senorita telling the story of "The Passion Flower" in dumb show—was the successful exploitation that Steve Willitt, of the Liberty theatre, Astoria, Ore., used recently.

It was at once so inexpensive and so effective that it is worth passing on to other exhibitors. The same feat could be performed in practically any community at a cost low enough to bring it within any exhibitor's reach.

Talented Child Pianist Plays Father's Famous Composition

The value of "names" in attracting patrons to the motion picture theatre has been excellently exemplified at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre in the placing of Marie Dvorak, daughter of the famous musician and composer of "Humoresque," on the bill at the Strand, in a piano recital that included "Humoresque."

Dvorak's talented daughter not only strengthened the Brooklyn Mark Strand by appearing in concert there in so far as the theatre's reputation is concerned with musical leaders of that city, but she gained much advertising in the music and other columns of the newspapers.

Los Angeles Theatre Pulls Novelty Exploitation

One of the most novel exploitation stunts ever pulled in the history of Los Angeles was that put over in connection with the premiere showing of "The Dwelling Place of Light" at the Alhambra theatre.

A powerful searchlight furnished by the Sunlight Arc Corp., was mounted on a huge truck, with another truck bearing a generator in the rear. Prominent members of the Los Angeles recruiting office of the Marine Corps stood beside the light and gave a blaze of color to the ballyhoo at the same time attracting much attention with their brilliant hued uniforms.

The trucks proceeded through the downtown streets that night and as the searchlight was flashed about the business district, hundreds of people stopped to look and wonder what it was all about. The parade finally wound up at the theatre entrance, attracting a huge throng there.

The affair was engineered by Hewlings Mumper, general manager for Benjamin B. Hampton; Harry Hammond Beall, Hampton exploitation chief, and Douglas Jarmuth, managing director of the Alhambra theatre. The next day's business showed a 25 per cent increase over the day before.

Willitt Gets Out Special Newspaper for "The Kid"

While the publishing of house organs the size of newspapers, the cost of which is defrayed by outside advertising carried in the columns, is not a novelty by motion picture houses, the scheme employed by Steve Willitt, manager of the Liberty theatre in Astoria, Ore., in getting out a special newspaper to exploit "The Kid" is a valuable contribution to the exhibiting craft because it points a sure way of making advertising space in such a publication attractive to local merchants.

Willitt included a test in the advertising columns. Letters were omitted from various words in the advertisements and after being discovered the letters had to be assembled to spell out the name of one of the firms advertising in the sheet. The first correct answer received was awarded with a small cash prize and numerous other prizes consisting of free tickets to "Passion" which preceded "The Kid" at the Liberty were offered.

Distribution was secured through the medium of newsboys.

Maurer's Campaign for "Peck's Bad Boy"

Manager Maurer, of the Strand, Louisville, Ky., took hot weather, Jackie Coogan's "Peck's Bad Boy" and about fifty gallons of ice cream, added a liberal amount of newspaper advertising, mixed well and served at a special Saturday matinee—the last day of his run—to one of the biggest parties of juvenile guests he ever entertained.

Maurer started his ice cream party a week in advance, by tieing-up with Harry Cuscaden, an ice cream manufacturer. The latter had half sheets printed in red and black advertising Jackie Coogan ice cream cones, illustrated by a scene from the picture, and announcing they would be given away, filled with Cuscaden ice cream, at the Strand. There he distributed to about 200 customers and, in addition, arranged displays for several soda fountains, using "Peck's Bad Boy" posters and stills. Cuscaden donated all this, in addition to the ice cream, about fifty gallons.

Maurer, as his share, used big newspaper space inviting the kids of the city to the party, and in addition stood back of a "title contest" in the Louisville Herald, a line drawing of a scene from the picture showing Jackie and his dog being used as the subject. Readers were invited to send in their ideas of what Jackie was saying to "Tar Baby."

Psychology figured in the Strand campaign, Maurer's publicity man, Joe Goldberg, putting a "blind" ad in the Louisville Herald announcing Jackie Coogan Ice Cream Cones. Cuscaden, the ice cream man, saw it and began an investigation, assuming a competitor was introducing them. When he followed the trail to its end he found Goldberg, and it was then the ice cream barrage was arranged.

Rothafel Prologue with Lines and Business

Stage Number for "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" As Presented by the New York Capitol

THE prologue and epilogue to "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," written by Katherine Hilliker and presented by S. L. Rothafel in connection with the New York Capitol theatre screening of the expressionistic photoplay, were so remarkably effective that they have been used by practically every exhibitor who has shown the picture. The introductory and conclusive episodes are of such an unusual nature that they are given herewith in full:

"I believe you know that I am not given to imagining things—I deal in fact and ignore fancies—and yet I cannot express to you in words, the intense distaste that grew on me the nearer I drew to my goal. There was something positively malignant and unnatural in the density of the twisted creepers and shrubbery. That I continued to force my way through the dark, green foliage was due entirely to my pride and not to any liking of my adventure. As I struggled on in the tangled thicket suddenly the green wall in front of me parted easily to my touch and I plunged breathless, confused and shivering with a nameless dread, out of that unhealthy green welter onto a gravelled path which wound away toward the house. Facing me on a marble seat green with mold sat a young man who appeared in no wise surprised at my advent, but more as if he had been expecting me. He was tall and slender, with haunted eyes set in a sad and sensitive face. As I went toward him, he arose and greeted me simply. Being somewhat of a recluse, he said, it was rarely visitors came his way, but they were none the less welcome. He seemed like a man sleepwalking in a horrid nightmare, and his need to talk was so apparent that despite the warning of danger that prickled my skin I sat down beside him on the ancient seat. "Did you ever hear of 'The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari?" he asked me abruptly. As I shook my head and started to reply, he laid an admonitory hand on my arm and looked toward the house. Along the pathway came a maiden moving as if in a dream——"

EPILOGUE.

(Same scene as in prologue. Fire has banked down to glowing embers. On the table the great candles are low in their sockets. A blue haze of cigar smoke rests lightly on the atmosphere. As the scene is disclosed, Cranford rises to his feet, stretches his arms high above his head, then turns quickly to Janes as the latter, who has been comfortably sprawled out in his chair presumably throughout the narrative, struggles up alertly into a sitting posture. Janes' whole attitude expresses intense questioning, but before he can speak, Cranford raises an emphatic finger.)

Cranford.—

"And he did! Francis Purnay is today a prosperous jeweler in Edenwald, happily married, with a couple of healthy, normal children. And the strangest thing about his recovery is the lapse of memory that accompanies it. He is like a man suddenly awakened from a bad dream and unable to remember any detail of its horror. The name 'Dr. Caligari,' today means no more to him than Smith or Jones. He has completely forgotten his halucination!"

McClain Does Big Things for "The Devil"

In a town of 1,600 population and a theatre seating 239, Manager McClain, of Barry, Ill., has recently put over an exploitation campaign for "The Devil" that should make many a big city exhibitor green with envy.

Besides billing nine small towns adjacent to his village in the orthodox manner with heralds and posters, Mr. McClain arranged a nifty three-sheet cut-out window display in the best corner store location and had a 200-candle power light burning over the likeness of George Arliss for a week previous to the showing of the picture. A cut accompanying illustrates how Mr. McClain decorated for the "The Devil" showing.

Something New at Atmospheric Prologue

A prologue idea that ought to be copied by every exhibitor specializing in stage numbers has been evolved by the Strand theatre, Milwaukee, for its recent showing of "Scrambled Wives."

In the center of the stage stood a huge candy box, tied with two gorgeous yellow satin bows. A pretty little toe dancer, Ruth Zinn, portraying "Cupid," executed a toe dance across the stage, shooting with her Cupid's bow and arrow at the audience, and as the dance came to a finish, she untied the yellow bows, and the box was thrown open by two usherettes, who stood in attendance on each side of the stage.

Inside the box in lace paper wrappers and tied with pretty silk ribbons were little cotton squares, representing candy. In the center of the huge box, as if by magic, appeared two heads, one, that of a lady, a charming Victorian lady in a beautiful gray wig, the other a Knight, in similar headdress. The song was "Maytime" and won enviable applause from the audience each night. During the course of the song, the little toe dancer, acting in the role of Cupid, danced back and forth, aiming her darts at the two singers in the candy box and at people in the audience.

A tie-up with Tillema's Candy shop, located several blocks east of the Strand theatre, was artistic in its simpleness. In the background stood a placard on which was written a poem about lessons in love, etc., and on each side of the placard stood two cardboard Cupids. The window space was filled with boxes of candy, a kind especially prepared by the Tillema shop for the window display. The candy which was wrapped in pretty tissue paper, was another cause for interest. On the wrappers was written the name of the picture, that of the star and the name of the theatre at which the picture was being shown.

Here and there little cardboard Cupids stood "on guard" over the candy boxes, each adorned with shell-rimmed glasses and the "schoolmarm's" stick.

Wendt Prepares for Hot Weather Days

Harold F. Wendt, publicity director for the Rivoli theatre, Toledo, Ohio, is already set in his plans for hot weather business. In a recent letter to the News, Mr. Wendt writes:

"On top of our outside box office there reposes a large electric fan. This is inclosed in a box. Let anyone try and pass our house without getting a whiff of cool air. It makes him think it is a cool place —which it is. Just a bit of psychology. A flag or roll of confetti will attract the eye.

Under the marquee hangs a sign reading: "The coolest theatre in Toledo. Temperature outside——Temperature inside——" The blanks are filled in and the contrast sells more tickets than one would believe possible. You can't depend on your show alone during the hot months and if you try it you may be sorry.

"Another stunt to try is that of passing ice water during intermissions. We have 3,000 seats. So it's a pretty big job."

Harwell Gets Attention with "Outside the Law" Stunts

One of the theatre employes garbed as a convict, a local artist and an obliging police force that was willing to be good fellows and help put over a publicity stunt, was all that Manager W. D. Harwell, of the Empress theatre, Wichita Falls, Texas, needed to let everybody in town know that "Outside the Law" was playing at the Empress.

Mr. Harwell sent his convict out to parade as a ballyhoo. He was followed by the local artist, who proving along with the theatre employe a good actor also, began to "poke fun" at the ballyhoo man. A stage altercation that soon developed into a fake fight. Then came the police wagon and down to the police court followed a big crowd anxious to get more details and still not wise that it was all a part of a publicity plant. By the time the judge had made (?) Manager Harwell come across with a century in greenbacks, not stage money, as security for the appearance of the fist fighters the next day, the newspaper men had arrived and not smelling a rat or if they did seeing a good story just the same, proceeded to write front page stories for their respective sheets. The fight was the talk of the town and in consequence everybody knew the reason thereof.

Mr. Harwell writes that he played "Outside the Law" four days, although all former runs had been limited to three, and that business was great.

Mr. Harwell also pulled some advance exploitation for the picture by having a boy and girl dressed in convict uniforms and bearing signs that read "He (She) is outside the law" attend a masquerade ball held about two weeks before the picture opened. They also visited hotels, drug stores, etc., about the city.

Cullison Working For Clean Farce Comedy

Webster Cullison, producing Clever Comedies, and now filming the series of thirty-five Ellis Parker Butler stories of "Philo Grubb, Correspondence School Deteckative," declares that he is literally "gambling with the market" in his effort to give the exhibitor the type of clean, wholesome farce comedies that he claims are so difficult to secure.

"The exhibitor, especially during the recent movement toward cleaner pictures, claims that so many of the two-reel comedies are an insult to the intelligence of his audiences," says Mr. Cullison. "He has been demanding short comedy subjects built around clean, substantial plots, and with characters portrayed by competent players. At the same time he wants stories that contain no situations or even suggestions that would give offense to the most fastidious theatre-goer.

"I have taken all these things into serious consideration in organizing Clever Comedies, which is my first production unit. I am doing my utmost to secure the perfect combination of real stories, star casts and fine productions, and believe the exhibitor will heartily receive and welcome my efforts."

100 Percent Attendance at Federated Meeting

Practically every one of the twenty-two franchise-holders of the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., together with the executive officers of that organization of independent exchangemen, is in Chicago for the general meeting which began on June 3. Matters of vital importance in the development of the fast-growing group are scheduled for the meeting, detailed announcement of which will be made at its conclusion.

Alma Francis Making Coast Trip

Alma Francis, popular actress, who temporarily forsook the stage to engage in the commercial end of the film industry, has arrived in Hollywood, California. Miss Francis' trip to the coast from New York is in behalf of the San Gabriel Producing Company. She carried plans for film productions, and was also to look over feature pictures with a view to purchasing same for foreign markets. Miss Francis recently made an affiliation with a distributing organization which will involve, also some of the highest salaried experts of the industry, whose connections will be announced as soon as their present contracts expire.

The Principles of State Right Production

H. E. BELFORD, sales manager of Pinnacle Productions, has definite and to-the-point ideas on the economics of state right production. He believes that when the independent exchanges of the country are able to work on a solid basis, the state right game will receive the greatest impetus of its history. The building of this "solid foundation" depends ultimately upon the producer. He must build pictures at a price which will allow the independent exchange an opportunity to supply their exhibitors with a moderate priced product. He must systematize and economize in the making of his picture with the same care as the manufacturer of merchandise.

Mr. Belford does not advocate pictures that look "cheap." He in no ways discourages the production of specials which are truly specials. But he does condemn the waste of money by careless producers and their endeavor to make up for their carelessness at the expense of the exchangeman. Let the program companies, if they wish, spend recklessly—they have a wider distribution whereby they can equalize the balance sheet. But the independent must realize and apply the sound economic principles which govern all industry.

The Pinnacle sales manager also believes that the exchanges are in need of series instead of single pictures. By making a series of pictures the producer can save money and the exchangeman is assured of a steady supply of consistent good quality films.

Mr. Belford is in New York on business for Pinnacle productions, which is making the Neal Hart Westerns in series of eight.

Sarg's Almanac Takes Hold

One Reel Novelty Series Sweeping Country, States Geo. Meeker

GEORGE R. MEEKER reports that Harold Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome in Buffalo, while in New York last Friday, paid a visit to Tony Sarg's studio and viewed the three subjects so far produced by Mr. Sarg and Herbert M. Dawley. He was most enthusiastic in his opinion of these screen novelties, and has booked them as a feature for the Hippodrome for the next 52 weeks.

Hugo Reisenfeld, manager of the Criterion, Rivoli, and Rialto, will write special music scores for each issue of the Almanac, and believes that this musical accompaniment will be of great help to the small exhibitor.

Mr. Meeker reports further that Floyd St. John, who represents the Tony Sarg Almanac in San Francisco, after exhibiting the first two subjects at a special showing secured 200 contracts in his territory.

Ascher Bros., of Chicago, have purchased the state rights for Illinois for these series. Nathan Ascher, of this firm, made a special trip to New York to secure exclusive control of Mr. Sarg's unusual screen production. The first Chicago showing will be given at Ascher Bros.' new Roosevelt theatre.

The New Jersey State Dental Association at their recent convention in Atlantic City last week, at the Steel Pier, made a special request for the "Tooth Carpenter." It was shown to them, and met with a great reception. As an exploitation stunt, the Criterion theatre, New York, mailed 5,600 special cards to all dentists in Greater New York, advising that "Aloysius Stonehenge, D. D. S., is demonstrating his earliest methods of painless dentistry at that theatre. P. S. Laughing gas administered without charge to all who attend these clinics."

Herbert M. Dawley, who is associated with Mr. Sarg, is completing the third issue of the Almanac, which will be finished this week. Mr. Dawley states that this one-reeler will contain some new developments in motion picture mechanics.

Tony Sarg will have the unusual distinction of having his name featured in electric lights for a solid year in front of the Criterion theatre, New York, which incidentally is to be the permanent home of Tony Sarg's Almanac.

Forward Film Salesman on Tour

Jesse Weil left New York City last week as the first of the advance guard of film experts who will tour the United States in behalf of the productions handled by the Forward Film Distributors, Inc.

Jackie Coogan Showu in Screen Snapshots

Jackie Coogan, "The Kid," and no less a personage than the Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, are features of issue number three of Federated Screen Snapshots, which was completed this week by Jack Cohn for release through Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc.

As the very last hilarious stunt of a hilarious vacation-time in New York, Jackie staged a special stunt for Screen Snapshots, when just before leaving for his home in California, he ran a giant locomotive out of Grand Central Station himself, with Mr. Depew to wish him "God-speed" upon his journey.

"Cave Girl" Showing for Gov. Miller Postponed

Owing to an accident to the print of "The Cave Girl," which has been purchased by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., the showing of the screen version of Guy Bolton and George Middleton's successful comedy drama to Governor Miller of New York, which was scheduled to take place at the executive mansion in Albany Sunday night, had to be postponed.

The announcement of the postponement was given to the press by Ward Smith, secretary to the Governor. The showing, however, will take place in the near future. Arrangements for the Governor to see "The Cave Girl" were perfected by Charles H. Duel, Jr., who organized Inspiration Pictures, Inc. for the purpose of starring Richard Barthelmess in his own productions, and which will be released by the First National.

Henry King to Direct Barthelmess Picture

Richard Barthelmess' first picture for Inspiration Pictures Inc., to be released through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is to be directed by Henry King, among the foremost directors in the industry, it is announced.

The vehicle, "Tol'ble David," written by Joseph Hergesheimer, is to be filmed in the mountains of West Virginia, the locale of the story.

Creations Films, Inc., Elect Officers

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of Creation Films, Inc., held in Chicago last week, B. Herbert Milligan was elected president and treasurer. K. Hoddy Milligan is vice president and E. Eastman secretary. Production will start July 1st at the old Kalem studios at Cliffside, N. J.

New York Premiere for "Our Navy in Action"

The United States Navy film, "Our Navy in Action," was given its initial public presentation at the Harris theatre, New York City, on last Sunday night under the auspices of the A. M. P. A. S. H. Harris contributed the theatre for the occasion. S. L. Rothafel, of the Capitol theatre, arranged the presentation. Besides the Navy film, which is a two-reeler, the program also included the Capitol's mixed quartette, ballet numbers by Oumansy and Gambarelli, and a bill of pre-release films supplied by Educational Films. The music was rendered by the band of the battleship Pennsylvania and the Navy Hawaiian Orchestra.

Paul Lazarus, president of the A. M. P. A., was on hand to greet the naval officers' present. Rear-Admiral Huse, Commandant of the Third Naval District, made a brief address after being introduced by J. W. O'Mahoney, advertising-manager for Educational Films.

"Our Navy in Action" presents in an intimate way the handling of America's battleships in battle practice. The film includes some striking "shots" taken from the air. Commander G. M. Lowery, of the Bureau of Navigation, was instrumental in the producing of the Navy's film, which was made at the direction of the Secretary of the Navy for naval publicity purposes.

Harry Levey to Make Letter Mailing Film

Harry Levey, of the Harry Levey Service Corporation, announces that he will begin immediately filming a short lesson on How to Prepare and Mail a Letter. Postmaster General Hays, it is said, has concluded that a large percentage of people using the United States mails are deficient in their knowledge of the safe and sane way to address, stamp and seal an envelope of a letter.

These pictures will be distributed through the exchanges and sub-exchanges of the National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc., with the co-operation of the Post Office Department.

"Was Darwin Right?" Is Kineto Review

"Was Darwin Right?" the first Kineto Review in the Second Series being released by the Kineto Company of America through the National Exchanges, Inc., is released this week. The other twelve in the series will follow at the rate of one a week.

"Was Darwin Right?" is, as the title implies, a picture of the many representatives of monkey-land, thirty-seven types in all.

Animals Make Good Actors

Chas. Urban Promises Realistic Scenes in Forthcoming Series

CHARLES URBAN in discussing this week the forthcoming release by the Kineto Company of America, Inc. of the series entitled "Modern Truth From Old Fables," told why he considered them so exceptional.

"It is not at all generally realized," Mr. Urban said, "what remarkable actors animals can be. Students who know the animal world are perfectly familiar with this, but naturally the general public does not know it. When we distribute 'Modern Truth From Old Fables' everybody will know it however.

"In the animal world one finds actors and athletes and gossips and bullies and weaklings and all the types that one finds in the human family. So we have intellect—'brains' as the common saying has it—and some are stupid. There is every variety the same as there is among men.

"These qualities, properly handled, can be made extraordinarily interesting. There are not many men in the world who know enough about animals and about motion picture photography at the same time to utilize them. Probably the best man who has these combined talents and knowledge is Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Society, and it is Dr. Ditmars who is filming our series, 'Modern Truths From Old Fables.'

"Twenty of the choicest Fables from the great collection of La Fontaine are in the series and all the actors in the Fables are animals. That is the point I wish to emphasize; all the actors are animals.

"We had the choice of two alternatives; we could film these Fables as we are doing or we could employ animated cartoons. The latter is the method we would have had to adopt if we had not been so fortunate as to find a man like Dr. Ditmars, who knew enough about animals to direct them as actors and who understood motion picture photography perfectly. Between the two there is no comparison for results; filming the animals themselves is incomparably finer than usuing animated drawings."

"Madonnas and Men" Is Aided by Exploitation

Chatburn Enterprises, of Los Angeles, who devised some novel stunts for the exploitation of the Jans Pictures Inc., "Madonnas and Men," report that they benefited greatly during the indefinite run of the picture at the Garrick. Although general business conditions were at their worst, it is reported that on May 30th the Garrick did business twice as great as any Sunday of the season.

Second Salient Picture Is Under Way

Announcement is made by J. Joseph Sameth, president of Forward Film Distributors, Inc., of the second production to be made by Salient Films, Inc. This will be temporarily named "The Call of the Open."

"Supreme Passion" Has Feminine Appeal

The success made by Robert W. Priest's production, "The Supreme Passion," at its premier showing for one week at the Euclid Avenue Opera House, Cleveland, Ohio, has created great interest in it on the part of state rights buyers who have not yet secured it for their territory. During the past week Mr. Priest has run the picture several times for state rights men. They not only speak in approbation of it, but they also express appreciation of its many exploitation angles, particularly the appeal that can be made to women. In this respect, "The Supreme Passion" is exceptionally strong, as its story has interwoven in it a dramatic argument of a proposition that is very close to the consciousness of every woman—that she should be loved for beauty of mind rather than for her physical charms. The result of handling this photoplay on these lines resulted in a record attendance in Cleveland, it is reported.

Kineto Subjects Run in Four B'way Houses

Four of Charles Urban's Kineto Reviews are occupying prominent places on the programs of four of the major Broadway theatres this week.

At the Criterion "Combatting the Elements" is in its second week and will probably remain for several more weeks. At the Capitol Theatre is another reel Mr. Urban literally "edited to order." Mr. Rothafel expressed a desire for a scenic of Venice to denote the atmosphere called up by some of the music from the "Tales of Hoffman." So Mr. Urban set his editorial staff to work and from his immense film library evolved exactly what Mr. Rothafel wanted. The title of the reel is "Venice" and it will remain permanently as a Kineto Review.

The Rialto is showing "Village Life In Switzerland," one of the loveliest of travel reels. This Kineto Review was photographed especially for Mr. Urban by H. and M. R. Hartmann, of Berne, Switzerland. The Rivoli is showing a Movie Chat.

New "Leather Stocking" Series Announced

Adolphe N. DuMahaut and Edwar L. Klein, of New York, announce the completion and early release of two productions based on the "Leather Stocking Tales," by J. Fenimore Cooper. Features now ready are "The Deerslayer" and "The Last of the Mohicans," both of which are in seven reels. Announcement of the plan for distribution will be announced shortly.

New Comedy Producers

The Krackerjack Komedies, Inc., has been organized under the laws of the State of New York, with a capitalization of $100,000. It is the intention of this company to produce one two-reel comedy a month. Brownie Pierce is to be featured. Frederick A. Blumberg is president and James A. Montalbano vice

Hatton Western Ready for C. B. C. Release

A new C. Edward Hatton thriller—a two-reel Western picture—has been completed this week by C. Edward Hatton, and sent to the New York offices of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. After special editing there it will be released by that company on the Star Ranch Western program of two-reel Western thrillers which it is distributing to the State Rights field. The picture is titled "Tangled Trails."

Foreign Agency for All Kineto Subjects

The Etablissements Georges Petit, 37 Rue de Trevise, Paris, has contracted for the agency for Charles Urban's Movie Charts and the Kineto Reviews for France and Belgium and for the Kineto Reviews in Switzerland.

M. Petit has agencies at Lyon, Marseilles, Bordeaux, Lille, Nancy, Toulouse, Strasbourg, Brussels and Geneva.

Associated Photo-Plays Producing on Coast

Victor B. Fisher, general manager of Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., reports that his company has two producing units busy on the West Coast. "The Ghost City," featuring Helen Holmes, has just been completed and work has started on other productions. Cliff Smith, who is producing a series of eight pictures for Associated Photo-Plays, has started on his second feature under the working title of "Hoofs and Horns." Spencer Productions is already at work on the next feature picture starring Mary Anderson.

Spirited Bidding for "New Minister"

From the office of Franklyn E. Backer, president of the Horizon Pictures, Inc., comes word that the state rights buyers throughout the country are manifesting interest in the screen version of Will T. Bingham's stage success. "The New Minister," since the recent announcement that this rural comedy would be released on the independent market.

Cissy Fitzgerald Comedies Sold for N. Y.

Producers Security reports the sale of Cissy Fitzgerald Comedies for New York City and Northern New Jersey to the Candler Pictures, Inc., of New York City.

Allene Ray Franchises to be Sold

BERT LUBIN, president the Western Pictures Corporation, now producing the first of a series of six new Allene Ray feature semi-westerns, announces that these pictures are not to be sold singly as in the case of "Honeymoon Ranch" and "West of the Rio Grande," but that franchises will be allotted for the entire series at one time.

New Tarzan Serial on Market

WELCOME and important news for the state right market comes in the announcement this week that a new Tarzan Serial, based on one of the most popular of Edgar Rice Burroughs' famous series of Tarzan novels, and starring Elmo Lincoln, the original Tarzan of the screen, will be distributed via the independent exchangeman.

"The Adventures of Tarzan" is to be produced in fifteen chapters by the Great Western Producing Company for Numa Pictures Corporation under a special arrangement with the latter named organization, the moving spirits of which are the three Weiss brothers, Adolph, Louis and Max. For the purposes of exploiting and marketing this latest serial, an organization known as The Adventures of Tarzan Serial Sales Corporation has been formed, with offices in New York City.

The various executives responsible for the latest Tarzan chapter play have all been prominently identified with important projects in the motion picture industry for many years. The production of "The Adventures of Tarzan" is in the hands of the Great Western Producing Company, sponsored by Julius Stern and Oscar and Louis Jacobs. This organization, which owns one of the largest and most modern studios in Hollywood, California, has been responsible for the production of several successful serial films, notable among which have been "The Flaming Disk," "Elmo The Mighty" and "Elmo The Fearless," all of which have served as starring vehicles for Elmo Lincoln. The Great Western Producing Company has actively been associated with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company for many years, furnishing that organization with various successful productions both of feature and serial length. Particularly in the serial field have they established a reputation for one hundred percent productions.

Adolph, Louis and Max Weiss, executives of Numa Pictures Corporation, with whom special arrangements have been entered into for the filming of "The Adventures of Tarzan," have been responsible recently for the sensationally successful Goldwyn production "The Revenge of Tarzan." The Weiss brothers are well and favorably known in the field of motion pictures having sponsored such popular productions as "The Open Door" for Robinson-Cole, "The Unfair Sex" and other feature length specials.

Added importance is loaned to the announcement of this latest Tarzan serial due to the fact that Elmo Lincoln has been secured to play the title role. Lincoln is famous for his portrayal of the Edgar Rice Burroughs' character in "Tarzan of the Apes," the first of the Burroughs novels to be picturized. He has become exceedingly popular during the past few years with millions of serial fans, due to his numerous appearances in various successful episode plays for Universal.

The opening gun in the sales campaign for this latest Tarzan serial was fired this week in the consummation of a deal whereby the Australasian Films, Ltd., acquired this production for an extensive block of foreign territory. The disposition of this territory was arranged for by Louis Weiss and Oscar Jacobs, and Millarde Johnson and E. R. Gourdeau, representing Australasian Films, Ltd. It is understood that the price involved breaks all records for a contract of this nature.

Canyon Series on Big Circuits

Franklyn Farnum Seen in Big Houses in New York

THE Franklyn Farnum series of five reel features, which were recently released in the New York territory, are enjoying phenomenal success. Not only has the entire series been booked to play over the Marcus Loew Circuit, but they are also scheduled to appear on the sheets of the William Fox Circuit. In addition to playing these two big first run circuits, the pictures will be seen on the M & S Circuit of houses and also in every theatre comprising the Consolidated Circuit.

These pictures which were made by Colonel Wm. N. Selig have proven themselves to be offerings which have found favor with every class of audiences.

At Loew's New York Theatre on Broadway these productions were given a flattering reception, which was duplicated at the other Loew houses in the other parts of the City. At the William Fox houses, many of which are located in exclusive residential sections, Franklyn Farnum proved that his popularity is increasing with each picture in which he makes an appearance. The M & S Circuit, which controls the biggest of the East Side houses, reported that the Canyon features were among the most satisfying pictures that had ever been played in their theatres, and the Consolidated Circuit which is composed of several theatres on the West Side announce that the Franklyn Farnum productions are numbered among the best business getters.

The Merit Film Exchange are handling these pictures in the New York territory. The exchanges which control the franchises in other sections of the country report that the biggest and best of the houses in their territories are playing these pictures. In many instances exchanges have found it necessary to double the amount of prints in order to take care of their bookings.

The De Luxe Film Company of Philadelphia has been very successful in putting the Farnum pictures over in Southern New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania, while the Columbia Film Service of Pittsburgh also reports that in spite of bad conditions, business has been maintained at a high level by the Franklyn Farnum offerings.

The Doll-Van Exchange of Indianapolis and Chicago have found these pictures very valuable pieces of property, for their reports show that these Farnum features are being played in the majority of the best houses in Illinois and Indiana.

The Greater Productions of Des Moines and the Walter A. Baier Film Company of Milwaukee, as well as the Success Photoplays of Kansas City, have intensively worked over their territory and as a result there are but few houses of consequence which are not to be found on the booking sheets of these exchanges. The same conditions hold forth in Cleveland where the Masterpiece Pictures Corporation controls the franchise.

The Franklyn Farnum pictures are six in number. "The Galloping Devil," "The Struggle," "The Fighting Stranger," "Hunger of the Blood," "The Last Chance," and "The Raiders" compose this sextette of film dramas.

Hallroom Comedy Delivered to Federated

"A Chili Romance," fifth of the Federated Hallroom Boys Comedies, featuring Sid Smith, was reviewed this week by the Federated Board of Review, and turned over to Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., for release to their exchanges.

Affiliated Makes Progress

C. C. Burr Wins Results in Plan for Nation-Wide Distribution

DESPITE the handicap of certain contractual clauses in connection with the advertising and publicity for a series of productions which constitute a not unimportant part in their forthcoming program of independent releases, coupled with the inclemency of the season, it is reported that the most encouraging and substantial results have already been achieved by Affiliated Distributors, Inc., with their project for nation-wide distribution through the medium of allied representative exchanges.

In the course of a discussion of the aims and policies of the new organization, Affiliated's president, C. C. Burr, is reported to have said that there is to be found in each of his scheduled productions, justifiable reason for the institution of a most persistent and ambitious campaign having for its object the completion of a perfect system of nation-wide distribution for the representative product to be released under Affiliated's banner.

The first two productions are a picturization of Edgar Selwyn's "Lonely Heart," featuring Kay Laurell, directed by John O'Brien from the script of Anthony Paul Kelly and Edward Hemmer's "Sunshine Harbor," featuring Margaret Beecher.

This beginning is further strengthened by the first of the series of Johnny Hines feature productions, "Burn 'em up Barnes," of which Raymond L. Schrock is the author. It is described as a high-powered automobile story of a "sure fire" sort, featuring Johnny and directed by George A. Beranger, for over six years a member of the Griffith staff. Assisting, is a cast including Edmund Breese, J. Barney Sherry, Betty Carpenter, Julia Swain Gordon, Matthew Betts, Harry Fraser and other equally talented screen favorites.

Forward Two Reel Series

12 Subjects for State Righters Star Claire Whitney and Keane

J. JOSEPH SAMETH, president of Forward Film Distributors, Inc., announces this week that his company will release a series of twelve two-reel feature pictures starring Claire Whitney and Robert Emmett Keane. Hal Benedict will produce this series of featurettes, and has just closed negotiations with Forward Film. They will be released at the rate of one a month.

Mr. Benedict has in the past directed a great many pictures for Essanay, Mutual, and many other concerns. Claire Whitney, in addition to her picture work, has appeared in vaudeville. It is reported that she recently turned down a contract for the Keith, U. B. C., and Orpheum Circuits.

"I will give to the public," said Miss Whitney, "the best that is in me. I am confident that I will be received as well in this series as I have been in the past. Mr. Keane has also had vaudeville experience." "I want the fans to like my work," he states, "the same as the patrons of the vaudeville houses have done in the past. Working with Miss Whitney, I am sure that I will be able to instill in the minds of the public that the length of a picture does not matter so much as the quality of the production. The people, it is true, have been accustomed to features of five reels or more, but we will prove in this series that short features will be equally as welcome."

A gambling scene from the Universal production, "The Beautiful Gambler," starring Carmel Meyers

Four Neva Gerber productions (Arrow Film) to the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation of Davenport, Ia.

Four James Oliver Curwood pictures (Arrow Film) tc the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation, of Davenport, Ia.

"Hearts of the Range" (Forward Film Distributors Inc.) to the Superior Screen Service, of Chicago, for Northern Illinois.

"Hearts of the Range" to Peacock Productions, of Kan sas City, Mo., for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

Feature Field Is Growing

Federated Sees Place for Independent Pictures in Big Houses

THE field for independent features is growing rapidly day by day, according to a statement issued by the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc. The fact that independent productions are being booked for Broadway houses, and for the larger circuits, is given as evidence that a new era for independent producers and exchanges has arrived.

As an organization of independent exchanges, Federated has been in the forefront of the new movement, the statement declares. Of the products released through the twenty-two Federated exchanges, the Federated Screen Snapshots, for example, have been shown at the Rialto and other Broadway theatres, and at some of the biggest theatres throughout the country.

"Dangerous Toys," the latest Federated feature release, has also met with unusually good booking in the circuits and larger houses. It is either playing or booked for the Fox, Loew, and Poli Circuits, three of the largest and most prominent in the East, and will be shown later at the biggest theatres in the South and West.

Ray B. Smallwood May Produce Independently

Director Ray C. Smallwood has lost no time since his arrival in New York from California two weeks ago. He now occupies offices in the big city. It is rumored about the trade that he will shortly produce for himself.

Mr. Smallwood has just terminated his contract with Metro where he directed Nazimova productions. He is a graduate of the motion picture college, as he served his time in every phase of the work from artistic photography, through the laboratory, a writer and finally a director of special productions.

Cecil B. De Mille, director general of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has left Los Angeles for New York City where he will spend three days in conference with the executives of the company on matters of production and will then hasten back to the Lasky studio to prepare for his next photoplay.

Ki pling Release Brings Unusual Response

The Pathe headquarters reports an unusual response from exhibitors as a result of its announcement that Rudyard Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy" will be released July 3rd. Showmen have also expressed their appreciation that the picture is to be made available for the summer months and not be withheld until the fall, declares the Pathe statement.

Pathe also states definitely that the picture will not be handed over to any legitimate theatre for an extended run in New York as this procedure would be against the policy of the organization.

At Work on Fourth Jimmy Callahan

Jimmy Callahan and his comedy company with Florence Dixon and Lottie Kendall are at work on the fourth Jimmy Callahan comedy at Atlantic City. The exteriors will all be completed this week and next week Mr. Callahan will begin work on the interiors in his new studio, which is being rushed to completion.

Robert W. Priest, president of The Film Market, Inc., now has in hand Mr. Callahan's second and third comedies, "Props" and "The Stowaway," Tom Bret having completed the editing and titling.

Territory for "Jimmy's Last Night," Callahan's first production, is being rapidly sold.

Allan Dwan Film Set for June 12 Issue

Allan Dwan's latest personally directed production, "A Broken Doll," which is scheduled for release on June 12 by Associated Producers, Inc., is an amusing comedy-drama with thrills, humor, and pathos. Adapted from Wilbur Hall's famous Saturing Evening Post story, "Johnny Cucabod," it is described to be an admirable screen subject.

Associated Opens Drive

Al Lichtman Reports That Entire Sales Force Is on Toes for Event

THE big Associated Producers, Inc., sales drive, announced by General Manager Al Lichtman for the week of June 12, is now on. Every exchange is on edge, and every salesman is striving to put the drive over the top, according to home office reports. Early indications point to success, and the outlook is that several of the exchanges, at least, will smash their own records for bookings. Aside from exchange rivalry there exists a friendly feeling of contest between the individual salesmen in each territory, and some highly gratifying results are looked forward to by Mr. Lichtman and his associates.

"There is no doubt we are going over the top in this drive," said General Manager Lichtman. "In the first place the spirit of co-operation in every 'A. P.' employee is all that it should be. Thus pepped up, they are going into the contest backed up by flawless productions and an organization with plans second to none."

The array of pictures to be sold during this sales drive is as follows: J. Parker Read's "I Am Guilty," starring Louise Glaum; Mack Sennett's "Home Talent," to be released May 22; Thomas H. Ince's powerful drama, "Mother o' Mine," to be released June 6; Allan Dwan's appealing comedy-drama, "A Broken Doll," to be released June 12; Maurice Tourner's big production, "Foolish Matrons," released June 19; J. L. Frothingham's "The Ten-Dollar Raise," released June 26; and Mack Sennett's two-reel gems of comedy, "Made in the Kitchen" and "She Sighed by the Seaside."

Arliss Filming "Disraeli"

Magnificent Pratt Estate in Long Island Being Used as Background

PRODUCTION work on "Disraeli," in which George Arliss is being starred, is progressing satisfactorily according to a report from the United Artists' headquarters. The filming of Arliss's famous stage production was started two weeks ago with Henry Kolker in charge of the direction. The magnificent estate of George D. Pratt at Glen Cove, L. I., is being used in the making of "Disraeli." Much of the action in the story takes place in the sumptuous residence of the Duke of Glastenbury, and the palatial home and extensive grounds of Mr. Pratt serve admirably as a background for the screen version of the play.

The selection of the Pratt estate as the "location" for the filming of "Disraeli" is credited to Charles O. Seessel, art director for Distinctive Productions, Inc., the producers of the George Arliss pictures. According to the United Artists' statement, the use of this estate for filming purposes has been repeatedly denied to producers heretofore, but the privilege was accorded to the Arliss company through the solicitation of the Society for the Relief of Devastated France.

The role of "Lady Clarissa," the daughter of the Duke, is being played by Louise Huff. Mrs. Arliss is appearing in the part of Lady Beaconsfield in the film production. Others in the cast include Reginald Denny, Margaret Dale, Henry Carvil, Grace Griswold, E. J. Radcliff, Frank Losee, Noel Tearle, Fred J. Nichols, and St. Claire Bayfield.

"Disraeli" is scheduled to be released by United Artists in the fall.

Alice Duer Miller to Write for Moore

Mrs. Alice Duer Miller, author of "The Charm School," "Ladies Must Live," "Are Women People," etc., who was recently signed by Goldwyn as one of its writers for the motion picture, is now at the Culver City studios writing an original scenario, the idea for which has been approved by the Goldwyn editorial department and the screen rights purchased. The title of the scenario is "The Man With Two Mothers," and it is being prepared for the use of Tom Moore, who is now engaged upon an original screen story by Rupert Hughes, "From the Ground Up." It will be an early Tom Moore vehicle.

The story is a comedy-drama into which Tom Moore's genial personality, his nonchalant humor and his skill as a screen actor will fit perfectly, in the opinion of Goldwyn's editorial staff.

"Road to London" Release a Big Success

THE pre-release of the Bryant Washburn production, "The Road to London," at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, definitely established the picture as one due to find great popularity, states Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Washburn made personal appearances during the week and record-breaking crowds were attracted to the theatre. The advertising and the exploitation were excellent. Mr. Moray, Associated Branch Sales Manager at Indianapolis, gave the manager of the theatre splendid support and co-operation in putting over the picture.

At the conclusion of the first day's business Mr. Moray received a letter from the manager of the theatre and it confirmed the belief that "The Road to London" will prove to be a fine audience picture.

Synchronized Music Co. Making Rapid Strides

The Synchronized Scenario Music Company, with headquarters in Chicago, is making rapid strides toward securing the support of theatre-owners throughout the country. Twenty-five distributing offices have been established in as many key cities, and are now supplying many of the leading theatres and chains in their respective territories with synchronized music scores for their picture programs. This service was inaugurated with all releases from May 2 of the present day. The synchronized music scores are available for all standard releases of the leading producers and distributors.

Among the important theatres and chains which recently contracted for this synchronized music score services are:

The Ward and Glynn houses; the Poli houses; the Sol Brill chain; the Fiber and Shea chain; Hi Gainsborough houses; the Rintzler circuit; Springer's Broadway theatres; Crandell's Savoy theatre, in Washington, D. C.; Leo Rome's houses in Baltimore, Md., as well as Durkee and Noltee houses in the same city; Klein and Bennethum houses in Philadelphia; Hunt's chain, and Harring and Blumenthal's chain in New York City.

New York's local distributor, known as Music Score Service Corporation, reports that it is now ready to supply the Eastern exhibitors of its territory with specially prepared scores for each of the standard photoplays produced by the larger producing firms.

Vogel in New Offices

When William M. Vogel returns from Europe in early June, he will find his enterprises housed in their new offices on the third floor of 130 West 46th Street. Owing to his increased activities as he now handles for the foreign markets amongst others, the Million Dollar First National Charles Chaplin comedies, the W. W. Hodkinson productions and the C. L. Chester comedies and scenics, etc., the increased space thus acquired in the Leavitt Building is a necessity.

Two Reel Comedy Featured by Exhibitor

A Southern exhibitor, according to reports received from the Educational Film Exchange of that territory will hereafter feature a two-reel comedy instead of a five-reel picture. A couple of single-reel subjects are run together with the Educational comedy. This exhibitor recently reduced his shows to one each week and decided to run a four-reel show featuring a comedy.

Kane Closes Foreign Deal

Inter-Globe Export to Distribute Ass'd Exhibitors' Product Abroad

THE Inter-Globe Export Corporation, recently organized by Sidney Garrett, has signed contracts with the Associated Exhibitors, Inc., for the distribution of Associated product in all parts of the world with the exception of the United States and Canada. Immediately upon the consummation of the deal Mr. Garrett began to put into execution plans which he has had under way for some time.

Through the Inter-Globe Export Corporation "The Rider of the King Log," the big Associated special now being released; Bryant Washburn in "The Road to London"; the Harold Lloyd comedies; and the whole schedule for the fall will be available to the world, it is announced.

"Many splendid offers have been made to the Inter-Globe Export Corporation and have been put aside in favor of the Associated Exhibitors," Mr. Garrett, the president of the new organization said in discussing the deal. "I have been associated with Mr. Arthur S. Kane, chairman of the board of directors of Associated, in connection with the foreign sale of many productions in which he has been interested. We have known each other for several years, and it is with the greatest pleasure that I am at the head of an organization that will handle the foreign business of Associated. We look forward to a great mutual success."

In his new organization Mr. Garrett will have alliances with some of the leading organizations of Europe and South America. His world-wide connections gives assurance of an excellent foreign market for the productions of the Associated Exhibitors.

Current Paramount Issues

"Appearances" and "White and Unmarried" to be Released June 12

"WHITE AND UNMARRIED," Thomas Meighan's latest starring vehicle for Paramount, and "Appearances," Donald Crisp's picture from the London Paramount studios, are scheduled for release June 12.

In "White and Unmarried" Mr. Meighan is said to have the best money picture of all his recent productions. It is taken from John D. Swain's short story, "Billy Kane, White and Unmarried," and Tom Forman, the director has assembled an apt cast to support the star. Jacqueline Logan a former Follies dancer, Grace Darmond, Walter Long, Lloyd Whitlock, Fred Vroom, Marion Skinner, Georgie Stone, and Jack Herbert are in the cast.

The story deals with a crook who suddenly inherits a fortune and promptly emigrates to Paris to spend part of it. The tricks he learned in the New York underworld are more than a match for the Apaches of Montmartre. The picture is said to have thrills, humor, and sumptuous interior settings.

"Appearances" was screened in England, having been written for the Paramount British studios by Edward Knoblock. David Powell enacts the leading role, supported by Mary Glynne and Longhorne Burton, one of the most famous character actors of the English stage. It is an intimate story of a young married couple who try to wear a false mask of prosperity. One day the bluff is called and the couple, much sadder, but also much wiser, turn over a new leaf.

Australia Public Flock to First Nat'l Films

First National releases have begun an invasion of Australia, and, according to reports from the headquarters of that organization, the Australian public have responded in unusual numbers filling the houses where the First National attractions have been introduced. The man principally responsible for the introduction of the First National pictures into Australia is Harry Musgrove, a prominent distributor of the Antipodes. After a three week's preliminary advertising campaign, Mr. Musgrove opened in Melbourne and Sydney with the initial First National program. That was over a month ago, and they are still standing in line, reports declare.

Des Moines Exchange Ships by Post

Edgar B. Haines, manager of the Universal Film Exchange of Des Moines, has made a big hit in his territory by putting into operation a plan whereby films both going out and incoming are shipped by parcel post instead of express. This is a saving that goes to the exhibitor. The saving has saved anywhere from 50 to 100 per cent. and the deliveries have been to the door instead. They have been every bit as fast.

Larry Semon's Injury Not Serious

It was reported last week that Larry Semon, Vitagraph's star comedian, was confined to a Los Angeles hospital and it was feared by some that this impetuous funmaker might have been confined for a period of several weeks. Word was received from the Coast early this week, however, that it will be a matter of only a couple of days before Semon is out of the hospital and back on the set.

Hugh Wiley to Write for Marshall Neilan

According to word received from the Marshall Neilan headquarters on the Coast, Hugh Wiley, whose stories have frequently been published in the Saturday Evening Post, has become affiliated with the Neilan organization and will supply screen stories for filming by that company. This announcement follows closely news of the engagements by Neilan of George Ade and Donn Byrne.

Sales Books for Cosmopolitan Productions

Cosmopolitan Productions has issued two-color sales books on "The Wild Goose" and "The Woman God Changed" for distribution to Paramount salesmen. These books contain pertinent facts about the two productions, stills of the crucial scenes, and information of value to the exhibitors.

Press Representatives Meet Mary Minter

Representatives of the trade papers, magazines and newspapers had an opportunity to meet and renew acquaintance with Mary Miles Minter at a luncheon at the Biltmore, given in her honor by Realart on Thursday of last week, the star being in New York en route to Europe. The affair was informal, Miss Minter holding an impromptu reception before luncheon, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby and her sister, Miss Margaret Shelby, who are to accompany her.

Even the well-known speeches were taboo, tho' S. Jay Kaufman insisted upon Miss Minter responding to an adroit lead. Mary graciously acquiesced. Then followed a general, good-natured "passing of the buck" from S. J. K. to Dannenberg, from him to Arthur James and thence to Wm. A. Johnston. Fate finally fastened onto Bide Dudley, who told of the days when he used to escort a very blonde little girl to Palisades Park and recalled her saying on one occasion, "P'ease, Misther Dudley, det me 'at Teddy-bear." For Mary was a wee tot of four at that time. Other guests recalled pleasant incidents of the past in connection with Miss Minter's early days on the stage and her subsequent rise to stardom.

Among those gathered to wish Miss Minter "bon voyage" were Gertrude Chase of the Morning Telegraph; S. Jay Kaufman and Marion Spitzer of the New York Globe; Bide Dudley of the New York Evening World; Wm. A. Johnston and Lillian Gale of the Motion Picture News; Mabel McElliott of the Illustrated News; Joseph Dannenberg of Wid's; Arthur James of the Moving Picture World; Miss Squires and Ethel Sands of Picture Play; Charles Jones of Filmplay Magazine; Miss Peterson of Film Stories; Miss Dorothy Herzog of Movie Weekly; Mr. Leighe of The Exhibitors Herald; L. F. Guimond, Tesse Michaels, C. Alfred Karpen and Marcelle Wallenstein of Realart.

Dustin Farnum Signed As Star by Fox

DUSTIN FARNUM has been added to the list of Fox stars for the coming season. Announcement to this effect has just been made by the Fox Film headquarters in New York. The Fox announcement also states that "a program of high-class productions is now being arranged which will launch him in a way to establish him among the most prominent star offerings of the Fox output."

Some of Dustin Farnum's previous pictures have been released by the Fox organization, notable among which are "The Scarlet Pimpernel," "The Spy," "Durand of the Bad Lands," and "North of 53."

Warren Names Sales Managers

Resident Managers in Twenty Cities Are Announced

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the F. B. Warren Corporation of its nation-wide chain of sales offices, or exchanges, and the men selected to represent this important new motion picture distributing company in its relations with the nation's exhibitors.

Resident managers have been chosen for twenty offices. Fourteen of these representatives went on duty June 6, with the remaining six beginning June 13. Exhibitors will recognize in the roster of appointments many men who have been associated with Mr. Warren in motion pictures since his entry into the industry seven years ago.

The Warren Corporation branches and their managers are as follows: Atlanta, John C. Shannon; Boston, Alexander Weissman; Buffalo, Thomas W. Brady; Chicago, Sidney J. Goldman, Vice. Pres.; Cincinnati, Irving Hanower; Cleveland, C. E. (Doc.) Holah; Dallas, Doak Roberts; Denver, Irving P. Arnold; Detroit, J. J. Milstein; Kansas City, Benjamin Blotcky; Los Angeles, William H. Jenner, Vice. Pres.; Minneapolis, Harry Graham; New Orleans, selected; to be announced; New York, Max S. Nathan; Oklahoma City, selected; to be announced; Philadelphia, Edgar Moss, Vice Pres.; Pittsburgh, William Warner; San Francisco, William A. Crank; Seattle, Louis Amacher; Spokane, selected; to be announced; St. Louis, C. D. Hill; Washington, Rudolph Berger.

The New Orleans, Oklahoma City and Spokane offices, whose managers are not announced by name, will be opened September 1, three days before the production is released nationally by the new organization. It is the intention of the organization to have thirty exchanges in operation at the end of its first year, besides a Dominion-wide series of exchanges in Canada.

During the first week the managers of the Warren organization will complete the organization of their branch staffs, which will go on duty in August, and complete the company's negotiations for exchange leases in the branch cities.

"The powerful organization we have built, as represented by our managerial man-power, has what I consider the strongest asset in the motion picture industry," said Mr. Warren in making his first announcement. "Not one of the men who will represent our organization in the field has ever had his standing and reliability questioned by the exhibitors with whom he has dealt. Most of our managers have been in their present territories for years. They do not sell a theatre owner today and then vanish from their territories week after next. They are permanently established factors in their territories. They have customer confidence, and the few new men entering the organization have that same element, which they will further increase with us. I do not believe there is another group of managers in this industry who feel so close to the inside of our organization as our men feel. Our group feel that they are part owners of the company, as, in point of fact, they are, for every manager, besides his salary, has a percentage on the gross business done in the territory by the company. I take pride in the fact that they are the best paid managers in the motion picture industry. They are coming to the exhibitors of the country within two weeks with the evenest system of price schedules that has been devised since motion pictures became an industry instead of an adventure."

An interesting point of the Warren announcement is that for the first time in the history of a big distributing organization three important field managers have been elected vice presidents of the new company—Sidney J. Goldman, of Chicago; William H. Jenner, of Los Angeles and Edgar Moss, of Philadelphia.

The Home Office staff of the F. B. Warren Corporation comprises: F. B. Warren, president; D. S. Perrin, vice pres. in charge of sales; J. G. Rohlfs, assistant treasurer; P. J. Richrath, secretary and purchasing agent; Benj. C. Bubb, art manager; Celia Cashman, contract manager.

The Home Office staff of the company began to move into and ocupy the new quarters on the sixteenth floor of the State Theatre Building, 1540 Broadway, on June 6.

A New Series for Educational

Two-Reel Features to Be Produced by Selig and Rork

EDUCATIONAL FILMS announces that it will release during the new year a series of "Diamond G. Specials," to be produced by Selig and Rork. The announcement further states that, although these subjects will be of a two-reel length, they will have "all the heart appeal and action of a five-reeler." Two of the series have already been completed, and, according to the Educational statement, each tells the story strikingly and with the fastest action, there being no suggestion of lagging or footage. These specials will be based on well-known works of such famous authors as James Oliver Curwood, Gilbert Parker, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Winston Churchill, and other well-known authors.

"The Northern Trail," from Curwood's story, "The Wilderness Mail," and "The Policeman and the Baby," by Clarence L. Cullon, are the two pictures which have been finished. Those who have seen them have been impressed by the difference in subject and general character. The lighter trend of the latter play, in which the policeman fails to recognize his own infant child and attempts to care for it as an "abandoned baby," is in striking contrast to the deep tragedy of "The Northern Trail." The thrilling dog race, in which the valiant husband struggles with his team of mail-carrying dogs in an effort to win the $1,000 that would bring health and strength to his crippled child; only to be beaten out by the man who covets his wife; the flight of the winner with the wife and mother; then the chase and the battle of two men alone in the wide stretches of snow, over the frozen body of the wife—all these are said to be pictured here in a way that will make the heart throb as but few long features are able to do.

Exceptionally fine work has been done in this play by Lewis Stone, Ehel Grey Terry, and Wallace Beery, it is stated. Miss Terry was especially engaged to play in the all-star cast of this picture, which was made under the direction of Bertram Bracken.

In "The Policeman and the Baby," which also was directed by Mr. Bracken, the cast includes William Desmond, Wallace Beery, and Elinor Fair.

Mr. William A. Johnston, editor and publisher of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, viewed these two dramas, and had this to say about them:

"I like your two-reel dramas tremendously. They contain every element of the five-reel feature with modern and capable direction, and the same sets as used in five or six reel features; therefore, they are a new kind of motion picture. They have a new dramatic tensity because of the fact that what is ordinarily done in five reels or more, you have condensed into two reels.

"I think the big point about them is that they are a new type of motion picture, and I know they are going to be a tremendous success."

Besides those writers already mentioned, the authors from whose works the stories for the series will be taken include Hallie Erminie Rives, Randall Parish, Gen. Charles King, Marie Enquest, Edward Rose, Henry Pettit, Joseph Arthur, and Harold McGrath.

"I do not see how these two-reelers can fail to create a sensation," said E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, "since they are based on splendid stories and are crammed with action from begining to end. There is never a moment of lagging, so that the interest is held from the first flash.

"I agree heartily with Mr. Rork, who said in a letter the other day that 'there is more real action and story in these two-reelers than in most five-reelers produced. If they do not create a sensation, I am all wrong.' But I am sure he is not wrong."

Ohio Has First Nat'l Week

83 First National Releases Shown During Week; Dailies Aid in Drive

MORE than six hundred motion picture theatres in the southern half of Ohio and those along the Kentucky side of the Ohio River staged a "First National Week" beginning May 15th, exhibiting 83 First National attractions during that period. The undertaking created considerable comment and the success which attended it has resulted in a determination to continue the custom.

The week was launched with full page advertisements in Cincinnati and Dayton newspapers and half-pages in the Columbus dailies. The advertisements carried the names of all the attractions booked for the week and the city or town, theatre and date the feature was to be played.

Directly above this was a box in which appeared the advertisements of three of the largest houses; in the Cincinnati advertisements these were the Strand, Walnut and Palace. Flanking these and at the top of the page were statements concerning the meaning of the week, the purpose for which Associated First National Pictures, Inc., was formed, the names of the stars enrolled under its banner, and other illuminating information. The First National trade marks were in the upper corners.

"The Kid," Charles Chaplin's latest release, was the most in demand, 20 exhibitors booking it during the week. Others which followed in popularity were: "Passion," 17 theatres; "Nineteen and Phyllis," 16; "Unseen Forces," 15; "Mama's Affair," "The Jack-Knife Man," 'The Scoffer," and "Love, Honor and Behave," 14 each, "Old Dad," 13; and "Not Guilty," 11.

R. H. Haines, manager of the Cincinnati exchange, supervised the writing and placing of the advertisements and won considerable commendation for the manner in which everything was conducted.

The event was "played up" in the Cincinnati Post, Elmer E. Dressman, photoplay editor, featuring it with a five-column head. The Dayton Journal and Columbus Citizen also contributed space liberally.

Big House to Open with Cosmopolitan Release

J. A. Partington, manager of a chain of motion picture theatres in San Francisco, has booked "The Woman God Changed," the latest Cosmopolitan Production to be released by Paramount for the opening of the Granada theatre in San Francisco. The Granada theatre, which will open on or about August 1, is considered to be the largest and most luxurious motion picture house on the Pacific Coast.

Predicts Business Revival

R-C's General-Manager Tells of Recent Trip Across the Continent

BACK from his trip across the continent in the interest of Robertson-Cole, Charles R. Rogers, general-manager of distribution for that company, has returned to his desk at 723 Seventh avenue and buckled down to the work of arranging a new selling policy, details of which will be announced later.

After interviewing scores of prominent exhibitors in all parts of the country, inspecting the Robertson-Cole studies in Hollywood and conferring with his lieutenants in the selling division, Mr. Rogers is convinced that the coming fall and winter hold great prosperity not only for Robertson-Cole but for the film business in general. Mr. Rogers is convinced, from what he has learned at first hand, that the industry is on the high road to a big revival.

"Everywhere I went on my trip to the coast," Mr. Rogers said, "there was unmistakable evidence of improvement in conditions. This, mark you, is not confined to the film industry but to business in general. As a result I have nothing but the keenest optimism. Now is the time for hard and constructive work for the business revival will be upon us almost before we know it.

"It was my first visit to the Robertson-Cole studios, which are absolutely the biggest and best on the West Coast. We have everything there which is necessary to the production of high grade subjects.

"My talks with exhibitors who keep constantly in touch with the public's taste enabled me to determine just the sort of productions they want and we shall proceed with all possible speed to give it to them."

Mr. Roger's trip was arranged chiefly for the purpose of "Getting acquainted" as he expressed it. He stopped at Chicago on his way to the Coast and there met the special representatives and branch managers of the Middle West district, conferring with them as to future work. In Los Angeles he assembled the West Coast representatives and branch heads and discussed plans for the business drive now under way.

Mr. Rogers also stopped off at Omaha, Minneapolis and eastern offices on the return trip and met R-C representatives. The talks gave him much valuable information and enabled him to get thoroughly acquainted with the men under his command.

Sales Competition Starts

Universal to Provide Awards of $7,000, Divided into Six Purses

IN a letter addressed to the exchange managers of Universal Film, General Manager H. M. Berman announces that a sales and economy competition is about to be launched by Universal. The awards include seven thousand dollars, divided into six purses. To establish the competition on an equitable basis the exchanges have been divided into five groups. Each exchange in each group will compete with the other exchanges in that group. The exchange showing the greatest increase in business will be awarded the prize for that group. In his letter to each exchange-manager, Mr. Berman describes the purpose and duration of the competition as follows:

"The contest will be based on the amount of increase in cash sales only which you show during the period June 12th to September 3rd, 1921, over the corresponding period last year—June 6th to August 28th, 1920."

It is further announced that a national prize of one thousand dollars is offered for which all the Universal exchanges will compete without regard to their grouping. This national prize will be awarded to the exchange that shows the smallest percentage of cost to transact its business.

The announcement from the Universal headquarters states that in the event of a tie all contestants so tied will receive equal prizes.

The letter from General Manager Berman makes it clear that the award when won is to be divided among all the employees of the winning exchange on the basis of the salary each employee receives.

Strong Supporting Cast for Marion Davies

Cosmopolitan Productions announces a strong supporting cast for Marion Davies' new starring vehicle, "The Young Diana," by Marie Corelli. In support of Miss Davies are Forrest Stanley, Maclyn Arbuckle, Pedro de Cordoba, and Gipsy O'Brien. The picture is being directed by Albert Capellani.

The settings, being built by the Famous Cosmopolitan Productions scenic staff under the direction of Joseph Urban, will exceed in magnificence anything hitherto shown on the screen, it is said.

Interest in Dempsey Serial Increases

The speedy response of the picture screens of this country to whatever is "in the air" in the way of absorbing coming events, has a fresh illustration in connection with the Dempsey-Carpentier championship fight set for July 2nd. Pathe Exchange reports that since publication of arrangements for that great sporting event the demand for prints of the Dempsey serial, "Daredevil Jack"—always active since the picture was first released—has practically exhausted the supply. Branch exchanges in all parts of the country unite in reports of packed houses and increasing interest wherever the Dempsey picture is shown.

In addition to this Pathe reports that their interesting one-reeler, "A Day With Jack Dempsey," has already scored a record exceeding their expectations.

Director Hopper Starts Tom Moore Film

Director E. Mason Hopper began his tenth picture for Goldwyn with the going into production of "From the Ground Up," Rupert Hughes' original scenario for the use of Tom Moore.

Mr. Hopper did his first work for Goldwyn with the Booth Tarkington series of two-reel comedies of boy life, "The Adventures and Emotions of Edgar Pomeroy." He directed four of the series, "Edgar and the Teacher's Pet," "Edgar's Hamlet," "Edgar's Jonah Day," and "Edgar Camps Out." Goldwyn then assigned him to direct the filming of Mary Roberts Rinehart's novel, "The Empire Builders," a story of life at a boys' prep school, which was called "It's a Great Life" on the screen. Mr. Hopper was next assigned to direct Tom Moore in the film version of Rupert Hughes' "Hold Your Horses," based upon his story of "Canavan."

A Program Defying Censorship

THAT the fight against censorship is a fight for a great moral principle, the right of free expression in the art of the motion picture as it exists in the art of the drama, and is not dictated by a fear of great losses on current releases is the opinion of John E. Storey, Sales Manager of Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Storey believes the important producers have been doing their own censoring based on common sense for some time.

"Many a weak story in the past has been padded with thrills and some of the thrills may not have been of the nicest character," said Mr. Storey. "But that is in the dim past insofar as it concerns big organizations. Recent releases will stand intense investigation and it will require the bluest of the blue to find a blemish.

"We are most certainly not in favor of censorship, yet with our present releases we are not seriously concerned. The censor won't have much chance to exercise his occupation on Associated pictures.

"Look at our present releases. The stories upon which they are based are strong ones, powerful in their appeal to the good traits latent in every human being, yet they are by no means 'educational'—nobody cares to be told what's wrong. They are realistic, taken from life and showing life as it is. The public has shown a strong and ever increasing tendency to demand realism in pictures, it refuses to be guyed along through impossible or far-fetched situations as some producers seem to think it wishes.

"Of course, much depends on the actors and the sets. But, however you may 'dope' up a picture with rich settings it will turn out a flivver unless you have a good, strong story and actors who know enough of acting not to 'act.'

"Take for instance 'The Devil'—no need to say much about this picture. The fact that the exhibitors are making money with it—big money—speaks for itself. The original play, the author of which is Molnar Ferenoz, the Hungarian playwright, had a tremendous success wherever it was shown and the clergy of all denominations had but praise for the subject. In our picturization we used George Arliss, of nation-wide fame. Arliss is a real actor who loves his art and who would never consent to have it prostituted by appearing in a picture of crude sex appeal. Not a single objection has been raised against the picture wherever it has been shown.

"Harold Lloyd's comedies are based on sound and keen humor and the reason for the universal success they are having everywhere is undoubtedly the fact that they are clean, absolutely free of sex stuff. It's again the old theme—it's the story on which the comedies are based. 'Among Those Present' and 'Now or Never' fill the houses.

"'The Road to London' is based on the story of David Skaats Foster. The picture was produced in England amid beautiful English surroundings. Byrant Washburn plays the lead—the young Yankee who scores a victory over the conservatism of English aristocracy and who wins 'the beautiful maiden.' The picture is full of dramatic moments and bubbling with good, healthy sound humor.

"Let the censor go ahead. He may keep an eye on pictures but we are beating him to it. We do our own censoring.

"Holman Day, another author of 'best sellers,' wrote a story of the great woods way up North, in the lumber camps of Maine—a story of might against right as some of us mortals would like to see it—till love brings a happy ending.

"We showed the picture at a pre-release showing at the Aeolian Hall under the auspices of the Maine Society of New York. Several former Governors of the State were present as well as other high officials. The present Governor of Maine had specially come down to New York to view the picture, the exteriors of which had been 'shot' in his State. They all praised the picture.

"Exhibitors are making big money on this picture in spite of the fact that not a single bare leg or shoulder is displayed in it. Nevertheless, the public is spellbound from the first scene till to the last, and we have received reports to the effect that many a patron viewed the picture several times."

Memorial Day Tribute Shown in Pathe News

America's tribute to her dead heroes on Memorial Day is dramatically depicted in the feature of Pathe News No. 44. Scenes showing the solemn celebration of the day were selected from all over the country. The services in the national cemetery at Arlington, where President Harding delivered a memorable address, were "covered" from land and air. A wonderful view of the beautiful Arlington Amphitheatre was taken from an aeroplane.

Increased Demand for Carpentier Picture

Charles B. Rogers, chief of the Robertson-Cole distribution department, reports that due to the increased demand for "The Wonder Man," featuring George Carpentier, several branch-managers have wired for extra prints. The interest in the coming fistic battle is said to be responsible for the increased demand.

W. R. Hearst Has Leased Astoria, L. I., Studio

GEORGE B. VAN CLEVE, vice-president and general manager of William Randolph Hearst's film interests, announces that he has leased for Mr. Hearst the large studio in Astoria, Long Island, formerly used by Messmore Kendall. Mr. Van Cleve has bought from Mr. Kendall his entire studio equipment. The Astoria plant is one of the largest and best equipped studios in the city.

Two new pictures will be put in production immediately. "Find the Woman," by Arthur Somers Roche, will be made under the direction of Tom Terriss. In the cast will be Seena Owen, Eileen Huban, and Ethel Duray.

The second picture which will soon go into production at the new studio is "The Beauty Shop," the famous musical comedy written by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf. Raymond Hitchcock will be the featured player in this picture, according to the Cosmopolitan announcement.

No Change in Title of "Three Musketeers"

Persistent rumor to the effect that Douglas Fairbanks intends to change the name of his film version of "The Three Musketeers" to "The Three Guardsmen" were denied by the star.

"There will be no occasion for Dumas to turn over in his grave, as has been indicated might happen when my new picture is released," said Fairbanks, "for I haven't the slightest intention of trying to improve upon that famous author's title."

Presidential Party Sees Alice Joyce Picture

During the recent voyage of the presidential yacht, Mayflower, from Washington to New York, the Alice Joyce production, "The Scarab Ring," was projected aboard the vessel for the presidential party which included, besides the President, Mrs. Harding, the Secretary of the Navy, the Secretary of the Interior and other notables. The President is reported to have been highly interested in the outcome of the story as the picture has a surprise ending.

Orpheum Circuit Will Run "Aesop" Cartoons

With "The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg," the first release of Pathe's "Aesop's Fables Modernized," scheduled for June 19th, bookings for the series cover virtually the whole country, it is announced. As announced by Pathe Exchange, distributors for Fables Pictures, Inc., producers, the important list of houses in the Orpheum Circuit have contracted to show "Aesop's Fables, Modernized," which means that every community of consequence west of Indianapolis and from New Orleans and St. Louis to Portland, Oregon, will profit by this screen revival of Aesopian wit, wisdom and humor. Bookings throughout the Keith Circuit, announced a week ago, and by other theatres, will cover the Middle West, the Southern, Eastern and New England States. The animated cartoon series is the work of Paul Terry.

George Larkin Engaged in Universal Series

Universal has engaged George Larkin and Josephine Hill to appear in a series of Northwest Mounted Police series, which are being written for them at Universal City. Larkin will take the place of Hoot Gibson on the Western drama schedule, which calls for a two-reel Western action drama each week.

The entire series will be directed by Edward Kull. Two other players have been engaged for the series. They are Al Smith and Barney Furey.

First Nat'l Week Huge Success in Cleveland

"First National Week" is reported to have been a huge success in Cleveland, for, evincing a remarkable example of co-operation, thirty-two of its exhibitors combined to put it over and won ready response on the part of the public. The theatres united in running full page advertisements in all the Cleveland newspapers, which formed the "big gun" of the campaign. These advertisements were headed with the Associated First National trade mark in the upper left hand corner, with a streamer line across the top of the page in large letters, reading: "First National Week, May 15 to 20."

Among the theatres taking part in the campaign were big downtown houses and others in practically every portion of the city. There were the Strand and Metropolitan, two of Cleveland's largest first run houses; the Knickerbocker, one of the oldest and best established of the theatres, the Heights Theatre, recently opened in Cleveland's finest residential district, and the Arion, the "Y," Crown, Parkview, Quincy, Superior, Nemo, Savoy, Five Points, Jewel, Yale, Dennison Square, Uno, Southern, Shaw-Hayden, Fountain, Haltnorth, Amphion, Virginia, Gordon Square Corlett Main and Dean.

Two Vitagraph Films Near Completion

Vitagraph reports that two of its coming releases have entered the final stages of production. They are "The Secret of the Hills," starring Antonio Moreno, and "Where Men Are Men," in which William Duncan and Edith Johnson in the leading roles.

The final scenes for "The Secret of the Hills" are being taken at La Jolla, one of California's famous winter colonies. The picture is based on a novel of the same title by William Garrett. Lillian Hall plays opposite Mr. Moreno.

"Where Men Are Men" is said to present one of the most realistic fistic battles seen on the screen. Duncan and Tom Wilson, who plays the part of the "heavy," are the principals in the encounter. According to the Vitagraph, both men were badly battered as a result of the exchanges with their bare fists. One of Wilson's ribs was found to have been fractured by Duncan's blows, states Vitagraph. Wilson was at one time Bob Fitzsimmons's sparring partner.

E na Murphy and John Walker to Co-Star

William Fox announces his intention to co-star Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker. These young people were recently sent to California to be featured together in pictures; but they have made such a success, it is said, in their first production—"Live Wires"—just completed, that Mr. Fox has decided to co-star them. Miss Murphy and Mr. Walker have started work on their second picture at the Fox studio in Hollywood. The title of the new production has not as yet been announced.

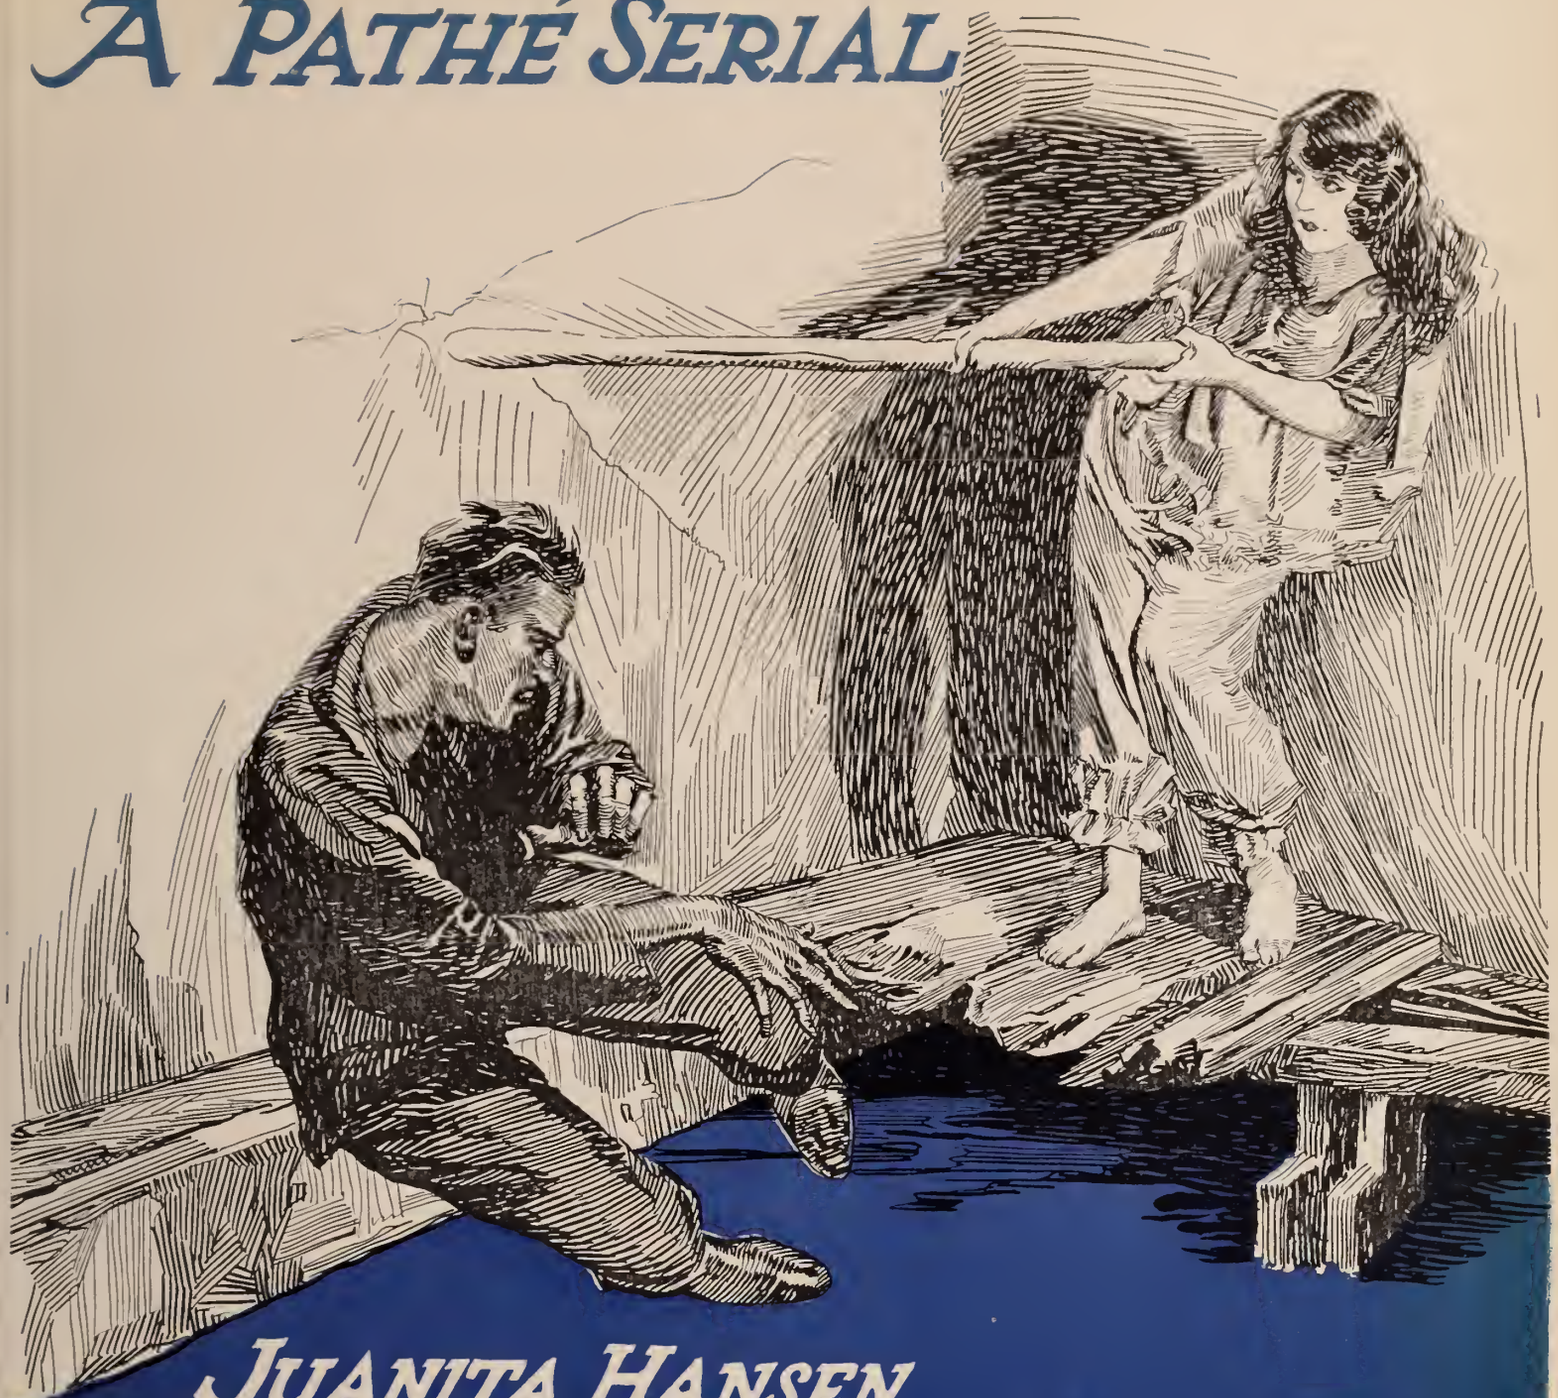
Authors of DeMille's New Film Announced

The mystery which has surrounded the identity of the scenario writers who have created Cecil B. DeMille's current Paramount picture suggested by Leonard Merrick's story "The Laurels and the Lady" has been solved. The screen play is the joint product of Beulah Marie Dix and Bada Cowan, according to an announcement just made by Cecil B. DeMille.

Both writers are veterans of the scenario field. Miss Dix is also a novelist of note. Miss Cowan achieved distinction as a stage playwright before turning to the silent drama. She is the author of several original stories for the screen and collaborated with Olga Printzlau on the scenarization of Cecil B. DeMille's highly successful production "Why Change Your Wife?"

The new Cecil B. DeMille production will follow "The Affairs of Anatol" on the screen. Dorothy Dalton, Mildred Harris, Conrad Nagel, Theodore Kosloff and John Davidson form the quintet of principals with a supporting company of equal brilliance, it is stated.

"Sunshine Harbor" to Be Edited by Ryskind



Morrie Ryskind, author of the recently published collection of verse, entitled "Unaccustomed As I Am," and the former Director of Magazine Publicity for Famous Players, has been engaged by C. C. Burr, president of Affiliated Distributers, Inc., to edit and title the first Edward Hemmer Production, "Sunshine Harbor," featuring Margaret Beecher, which is sceduled for autumn release.

Huge Castle Built for New Pickford Picture

In filming "Little Lord Fauntleroy," Mary Pickford has built a large castle measuring two hundred and twenty-six feet long by one hundred and twenty-five feet wide. The interior represents the ground floor of Dorincourt Castle, the ancestral home of the crotchety old Earl of Dorincourt, who is a conspicuous character in the story.

"Little Lord Fauntleroy" will be released by United Artists this coming fall.

THE PROBLEM OF MEN, WOMEN, AND CHILDREN

No feature appeals to every person, but the appeal of a serial is universal

IN the heart of every woman lives romance; in the heart of every child is hero-worship; in the heart of every man is love of adventure.

In the hearts of all is the desire to be lifted out of the hum drum of every day life and to forgetfully journey into a land of romance and thrill.

Thus a Pathe Serial is a most important part of your program, for it is made for all and loved by all. It gives contrast and makes every heart beat faster.

As the serial story of the great magazines is the circulation-builder on which their success rests, so is the Pathe Serial the patronage-builder and audience-holder on which your theatre must rest.

Begin NOW with "The Yellow Arm" and give to your audience the romance and adventure, the thrill and action which they love.

Miss duPont, who is to be a new Universal star

New Star Announced by Universal Film Co.

A STATEMENT from the Universal Film headquarters announces that Miss du Pont, who appears in an important role in Von Stroheim's production, "Foolish Wives," has been selected to star in next year's Special Attractions to be released by Universal. The news of Miss du Pont's selection follows closely upon the announcement of Hoot Gibson and Marie Prevost as new stars for the coming year's Special Attractions.

According to the Universal statement, Miss du Pont has had nine months' film experience, all of which has been acquired in the making of Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives." It is stated that her work in this picture is responsible for her selection to play stellar roles, "Remarkable beauty" and "wonderful dramatic ability" are claimed for the new star by the Universal officials.

Issues a Broadside on "The Wild Goose"

Cosmopolitan Productions has issued a broadside on "The Wild Goose," which has been sent to every exhibitor in the United States. The broadside shows the exhibitors how the Hearst interests have all co-operated to advertise "The Wild Goose."

On the first page is printed the box-office take of the pre-release run at the Rialto theatre, New York, of "The Wild Goose." On the inside pages are reproductions of the advertisements published in the New York American and New York Evening Journal of "The Wild Goose" during its pre-release showing in New York. The last page contains additional proof of the co-operation of the Hearst newspapers throughout the country with the exhibitors.

High-Class Hodkinson Product

Exhibitor Can Rely Upon Steady Supply of Big Pictures

OVER a very long period of years W. W. Hodkinson, head of the Corporation which bears his name, has been building step by step to the position which he occupies today. Matters have worked around now to a stage where the biggest problem confronting the independent theatre owner who is desirous of maintaining his independence is one which an organization such as the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation can solve. For the proprietor of a picture house, there is but one big question today. And that is: Pictures.

And now more than ever the question of obtaining a steady and reliable supply of quality product is the foremost question of the day. For it has reached a point where the exhibitor in order to definitely and firmly establish his independence must cast loose from his present affiliations in order to preserve his business integrity.

It is an established fact that production today has been cut fifty per cent. and that the biggest companies in the field are feeling the pinch of the economic readjustment which is going to place the motion picture industry on the proper plane. The supply of pictures in the vast majority of cases has been greatly curtailed. Therefore, news from the Hodkinson Office to the effect that they are firmly entrenched with a supply of quality product should prove welcome news to the exhibitors.

"The Man of the Forest," a Zane Grey picture, produced by Benj. B. Hampton, with a typical Hampton cast in which are included Claire Adams, Robert McKim and Carl Gantvoort.

"Keeping Up With Lizzie," the first of Irving Bacheller's fascinating stories to reach the silver-sheet.

"A Certain Rich Man," a picturization of William Allen White's American novel with an all-star cast. Benj. B. Hampton, the producer, says of this picture that it represents his greatest work thus far.

"Rip Van Winkle," a Ward Lascelle Production with Thomas Jefferson seen in the role which his father, Joe Jefferson, created before him.

"Lavender and Old Lace." It is estimated that over thirty million people have read this book,—and it is safe to assert that it has won a prominent place in every reader's heart,—for it's one of the tenderest romances ever conceived. In the cast are included Senna Owen and Louis Bennison, well-known to all. Lloyd Ingraham directed it.

"The Foreigner," this is a picturization of Ralph Connor's novel with a cast in which are included Wilton Lackaye, one of the veteran players of the stage,—Gaston Glass of "Humoresque" fame,—Robert T. Haines, Bigelow Cooper, Bradley Barker, Kate Price and Gladys Coburn.

"The Journey's End," (made under the working title of "Ave Maria"), Hugo Ballin's third independent production for Hodkinson release. Wyndham Standing, who has been seen in support of all the foremost feminine artistes of the day,—Mabel Ballin, featured played of "East Lynne," "Pagan Love" and many other successful pictures,—and George Bancroft, a newcomer to the screen, are the feature players.

"The Face of the World," an Irvin V. Willat Production made from Johan Bojer's novel. Included in the cast are Barbara Bedford, last seen in Maurice Tourneur's Production, "The Last of the Mohicans," and Edward Hearn who appears opposite Enid Bennett in "Keeping Up With Lizzie."

"A Broadway Bride." This production marks Irene Castle's return to the screen.

"The Light in the Clearing," this will be the second of Irving Bacheller's stories to be picturized. It is now under course of construction on the West Coast under the direction of T. Hayes Hunter, the man who made "Earthbound."

"The Mysterious Rider," a Zane Grey-Benj. B. Hampton-Hodkinson Picture. This will contain all the elements which made "The U. P. Trail," "Riders of the Dawn," "Desert Gold," and "The Man of the Forest" such splendid productions.

"Handle With Care," produced by Al and Ray Rockett, from a story by Charles Belmont Davis. The Rockett Brothers are specializing in high-class comedy dramas and the first two which they produced for Hodkinson release, "The Truant Husband" and "Keeping Up With Lizzie" are both memorable pictures.

"The time is coming," states Hodkinson, "when the Hodkinson exhibitor in any community will be the standard by which all other exhibitors are measured, simply because Hodkinson pictures are big and fine and clean and altogether worthy. That the exhibitors of America are realizing the truth of this fact more and more every day is best evidenced by the type of letters which continue to pour into the Home Office. Tom Moore, head of the Moore Theatre Corporation of Washington, a representative showman, has just written the following letter to Mr. Hodkinson:

"Mr. William W. Hodkinson, President,
W. W. Hodkinson Corporation,
527 Fifth Ave.,
New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Hodkinson:

The writer takes pleasure in congratulating you on your policy to secure better class product and hopes for your good success. There is no question but that good progress in any line of business is only possible by increasing quality. Adding to this the prestige, stability and better profits emanating from better product, it is good business logic to go forward with progress.

We are screening some of the pictures you mentioned in the list sent out and will offer dates whenever possible.

Wishing you a big season, I am

Very truly yours,
Moore Theatre Corporation,
(Signed) Tom Moore,
President."

Another letter recently received from Howard J. Smith, President and General Manager of the Buffalo Palace Corporation which operates the Palace Theatre in Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Smith's letter reads:

"W. W. Hodkinson Corporation,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

In the present state of public feeling it is very difficult to pick pictures which on the one hand will not offend the aroused feeling against sex and crime displays, and on the other hand will have enough 'kick' to get over at the box office.

As a result of considerable experience, operating a first-run theatre in a city of half a million, I have decided that the Hodkinson pictures in general come nearer to hitting the happy combination of decency and strength than any other service and as a result I have played and am to play practically all of your pictures.

Trusting that you will be as successful as you deserve to be, I am

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Howard J. Smith."

Los Angeles Greets Beban

Unusual Reception for Robertson-Cole Star; Speaks at the Kinema

GEORGE BEBAN has returned to Los Angeles. On his arrival he received one of the greatest greetings ever accorded an actor in that city, and has now settled down to the serious work of production. The Beban reception began with the welcome of the star to Los Angeles, and ended with the showing of "One Man in a Million" at the Kinema theatre, with Mr. Beban appearing in his sketch, "The Sign of the Rose," in addition to the production.

Credit for the Beban welcome goes to several men, all of whom had a hand in the arrangement of the details, which were many. One week before Mr. Beban's arrival his personal representative, J. Victor Wilson, reached Los Angeles and then preparations began to take form. Dr. Wilson, recalled for his work as publicity director of the Strand theatre, New York, conferred with Sol Lesser, of the Gore Brothers-Ramish-Lesser organization. Mr. Lesser summoned his own publicity purveyors, Richard Spier, Harry D. Wilson, and William Newberry, and together they arranged the entire campaign.

Huge banners, measuring ten feet deep by sixty feet long, were stretched across several of the most important city streets. These bore messages of welcome to the returning star. The local newspapers opened wide their columns to Mr. Beban, and greeted him with photographs of himself and Mrs. Beban and columns of stories. Mayor Snyder and Fire Chief Scott also took a leading part in the welcoming ceremonies, and Chief Scott had full charge of the arrangements for the huge parade, at the head of which he and Mr. Beban rode together in an automobile.

Mr. Beban's personal appearance at the Kinema theatre in connection with "One Man in a Million" registered a decided hit, it is declared. At the end of the picture Mr. Beban delivered a brief address on the urgent necessity of clean motion pictures. The audiences showed by their applause that they agreed with him.

Pathe Serial Due June 19th

"The Yellow Arm" Stars Juanita Hansen; Warner Oland in Cast

THE release date for "The House of Alarms," the first episode of the new Pathe serial, "The Yellow Arm," has been announced by Pathe Exchange, Inc., as June 19th. Juanita Hansen is starred in the new chapter play, and Warner Oland and Marguerite Courtot are prominent members of the cast.

"The Yellow Arm" was produced at the George B. Seitz studio. Bertram Millhauser directed the episode play, which was written by James Shelley Hamilton. In addition to Juanita Hansen, Warner Oland, and Marguerite Courtot, the cast includes William Bailey, a leading man of both stage and screen; Thomas Keith; Stephen Carr, brother of Tommy Carr, who scored in "Velvet Fingers;" Charles Raveda, and others.

"The new serial should not be confused with the old-fashioned plays of the Chinese underworld with opium den backgrounds or other featurees of such a nature," declares Pathe, "as it is a story of China and offers a new novelty for the screen in that respect. The Seitz Company was unable to journey to China for the filming, but through tireless research work the settings which were built for the production are remarkable in their faithfulness to the locale and atmosphere desired. Action and mystery are the keynote of the production, and it is not permitted to lag for a moment."

"The Yellow Arm" tells the story of a Chinese plot to avenge the abduction and marriage of a Chinese princess to an American. Joel Bain, whose father married the princess during one of his sea voyages to China, is pursued to his estate at Roaring Oaks by three Chinamen, intent on wreaking vengeance on his own person or his children. The story relates the adventures that result in the eluding of the Yellow Arm of the avengers.

Educational Pictures Forge Ahead in West

Omaha, Neb., has four first run theatres. They are the Rialto, Strand, Sun and Moon. During the week beginning May 29, every one of these theatres played Educational releases. This followed a week in which Educational had 75 per cent. representation in the first run houses of the city.

In the week of May 29 the Rialto played two Kinogram releases and a two-reel Christie Comedy, "Let Me Explain." The Strand ran "Zero Love," a one-reel Gayety comedy, all week. A single-reel Chester Outing, "Lost, a Yodel," was shown all week at the Sun. "Falling Waters," a Bruce scenic, ran all week at the Moon.

Goldwyn Favorites Remain

Leading Players Have Fine Roles in Early Fifth Season Releases

THE leading players in Goldwyn's roster of screen actors will each be seen in several powerful roles in the first group of Goldwyn fifth-year releases. The actors and actresses in question, with one exception, have been seen in previous Goldwyn productions, and have acquitted themselves so creditably that they have been given roles in the productions for autumn release, which will show them in a still more favorable light to their legions of admirers.

Lon Chaney, who since his success as the Frog in "The Miracle Man," has occupied a unique place among the country's screen players, and who was seen as Blizzard, the legless king of San Francisco's underworld in Goldwyn's picturization of Gouverneur Morris' novel, "The Penalty," will be seen in three powerful roles in as many pictures scheduled for fall release.

Richard Dix, the young leading man whom Goldwyn has signed up for two years with its repertory company, will be seen in four of Goldwyn's fall releases. Mr. Dix was recently seen on the speaking stage in New York with Walker Whiteside in "The Little Brother." The first picture in which he appeared for Goldwyn is among the corporation's big super-features for the fall.

House Peters, one of the screen's most prominent actors, will be seen in leading roles in two forthcoming Goldwyn productions.

Helene Chadwick, who for several seasons has been a featured Goldwyn player, will be seen in three of Goldwyn's fall productions. In her new roles, Miss Chadwick, says Goldwyn, will enormously increase her artistic standing and her personal following. She will be seen in two superspecials.

Leatrice Joy is another Goldwyn leading woman who will be seen to greater advantage than ever before in the autumn releases. She plays the leads in two special productions.

Miss Joy has appeared in the feminine lead in two of the Goldwyn's fourth-year releases—in Gouverneur Morris' first story written directly for the screen, "A Tale of Two Worlds,' and in the picturized version of Graham Moffatt's Scotch comedy, "Bunty Pulls the Strings."

New York Tribune Lauds "Woman God Changed"

The New York Tribune printed in its Sunday dramatic section of May 29 an appreciation of the achievement of the players and the director in the production of "The Woman God Changed," a Cosmopolitan Production which enjoyed unusual success at its prerelease showing at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York.

The Tribune writes: "Telling a story backward as 'The Woman God Changed' does, places heavy responsibility upon the players. They must, above everything else, portray their roles with fullest power, being denied much of the strength which a story carries through surprise situations. It is a dangerous method of telling a story—one that is more often responsible for the failure than the success of a production, but it is handled so ably by Mr. Vignola in 'The Woman God Changed' as to spell conviction."

"Maid of the West" to Star Eileen Percy

Fox Films announces that Eileen Percy's next screen vehicle will be "Maid of the West," written by W. E. Spencer. The story is described to combine a charming love story with fast action. Philo McCullough will be the director.

New Pathe Subject for Release June 19

PATHE EXCHANGES, INC., announces a number of short subjects scheduled for release in the near future.

On June 19, "The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg," the first of the animated cartoons of the "Aesop's Fables Modernized" series, will be released. The new Pathe serial, "The Yellow Arm," is also included among the releases of current date. The first episode has been titled "The House of Alarm." On June 19 also "The Toll of the Desert," the fifteenth episode of the new Ruth Roland serial, "The Avenging Arrow," will be released. "Dropped From the Cloud" is the title of episode eight of the latest Seitz serial, "The Sky Ranger," which has been given the same release date.

"Own Your Home" is the title of the forthcoming Hal Roach comedy, featuring "Snub" Pollard. This and the Pathe Review No. 108, showing the largest relief map in the world, which illustrates how the U. S. Marines are immortalizing the scenes of the action in the Chateau Thierry district, will also be released during the same week.

John Barrymore Not to Star in "Justice"

Following the annuouncement that Myron Selznick had bought the John Galsworthy drama "Justice," for picture production, the report became current that John Barrymore would appear as William Falder in the screen version of the play. This is the part in which he starred during the run of the piece on Broadway. Mr. Selznick, however, denies that Mr. Barrymore is to be the star of the Selznick Picture production. He says:

"In fairness to Mr. Barrymore, as well as to the stars under our management, I want to deny emphatically that there have been any negotiations on either side for the engagement of Mr. Barrymore for this role. Falder will be played by one of the stars now under contract with this company, which one I am not at present to state."

Picking Stars for New Pickford Picture

Joseph Dowling, of "Miracle Man" fame, is to play the part of Faversham, the solicitor, in Mary Pickford's celluloid interpretation of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which the United Artists will release this fall.

The only other member of the cast who has been announced so far is Claude Gillingwater, who recently appeared in "Three Wise Fools." Gillingwater takes the part of the Earl of Dorincourt. This marks his debut in films.

A scene from Realart's "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," starring Mary Miles Minter

Minter Vehicle Released

Light Comedy Adapted by Barbara Kent from Geo. Scarborough's Play

THE latest Mary Miles Minter picture to be released by Realart was adapted by Barbara Kent from the play "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" by George Scarborough. It is a light comedy-drama. The story concerns the escapades of a little Western miss, Judith Baldwin (Mary Miles Minter), the daughter of a wealthy ranch owner (Willard Lewis), who is persuaded by the Governor of Arizona (aided and abetted by Judith) to become the Washington Senatorial representative of that state.

Everyone seems tickled to death about going to the Capitol except Tod Musgrave (Monte Blue) who is secretly in love with boss's daughter.

Arrived in Washington, Judith proceeds to put a crimp in the hearts of the male part of the populace and in less time than it took to pass the Eighteenth Amendment, she becomes engaged to Congressman Hamill (Guy Oliver) and Robert W. Courtney (Wm. Boyd), the Beau Brummel of them all. Dad doesn't let the grass grow under his feet either, and before you know it he's married to a charming widow (Mabel Van Buren). Just about this time, Tod finds "business" requires his presence in Washington, and when Old Girl Scandal begins to wag her tongue about his beloved Judith, he polishes up his old "gat" and goes a-gunning.

From then on action steps on the gas! And when Tod at last puts on the brakes, he and Judith have outdistanced them all to the satisfaction of both.

Joseph Henabery, assisted by Richard Johnston, directed "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" and the photography was in charge of Faxon Dean. Henabery also directed Miss Minter's previous picture, "Don't Call Me Little Girl" as well as Roscoe Arbuckle successes "Brewster's Millions," "The Life of the Party," and 'The Traveling Salesman."

J. M. Stahl to Film Own Theme in Picture

A theme which he has been saving for several years, with the intention of using it when he had his own production unit, will form the basis of the next John M. Stahl production, to follow "Retribution," which is to be released through First National. The story and continuity are now being written by Bess Meredyth.

N. Y. Capitol Orchestra Holds Entertainment

One of the most imposing lists of entertainers ever assembled at a single performance has been mustered to celebrate at the annual entertainment and ball given by the Capitol Theatre Grand Orchestra in the Grand Ball Room of the Hotel Astor on Saturday, June 11th.

Under the direction of Leon Errol, Master of Ceremonies, more than twenty artists representative of musical, theatrical and movie circles will appear in the entertainment. In the Composers' number, such prominent musicians as Victor Herbert, Rudolph Friml, Sylvio Hein, Raymond Hubbell and Sigmund Romberg will participate. Among the artists and entertainers are listed Percy Grainger, Sascha Jacobsen, Tessa Kosta, James Barton, Dorothy Dickson, Gus Edwards, Carl Hyson, Marion Bent, Pat Rooney, Vincent Lopez and His Kings of Harmony, Vivian Martin, Bee Palmer, Eleanor Painter, Charles Purcell and John Charles Thomas.

Original "Cappy Ricks" Plays Title Role

Charles Abbe, who is playing the name part in Paramount's picturization of Peter B. Kyne's well known "Cappy Ricks" stories, was the original "Cappy Ricks" in the stage production two seasons ago. John Sainpolis has been cast to play the part of "Skinner" the efficiency expert in "Cappy Ricks.

The dock scenes for "Cappy Ricks," Peter B. Kyne's story, adapted for motion pictures by Paramount, have been filmed on the historical state pier in South Boston where ex-President Woodrow Wilson landed on his return from France after his first trip to Europe.

Title MacLean Film "Passing Thru"

"Passing Thru" will be retained as the release title of Douglass MacLean's latest Thomas H. Ince feature for Paramount distribution, according to a decision made this week. The picture was filmed under the same title. It is an original story by Agnes Christine Johnston, adapted to the screen by Joseph Franklin Poland. William A. Seiter directed with Bert Cann at the camera. Madge Bellamy is seen in the leading feminine role..

Betty Compson has finished "At the End of the World."

Ethel Clayton is beginning "Her Own Money," by Mark Swan. The continuity is by Elmer Rice and Joseph Henabery is directing. The cast includes Warren Baxter, Mae Busch, Charles French, Jean Acker, Clarence Burton, and William Boyd.

Roscoe Arbuckle is making the final scenes for the subject temporarily titled, "Should a Man Marry?" The cast includes four feminine leads—Mary Thurman, Harriet Hammond, Maude Wayne, and Gertrude Short. Lucien Littlefield is also a principal.

Plans are being made at the Hollywood studios for production by companies previously working at the Long Island studio.

CHRISTIE

Director William Beaudine has finished "Oh, Buddy!" with Neal Burns, Vera Steadman, Helen Darling, Ogden Crane, Eugenie Ford, and others. The story deals with an ex-service man's tough time getting a job.

Director Frederick Sullivan is starting on "Assault and Flattery," with Teddy Sampson and Henry Murdock.

UNIVERSAL

Lucien Hubbard has written "Partners" for the next vehicle for Harry Carey, under the direction of Robert Thornby.

Reeves Eason will direct Edith Roberts in "Storm Tossed," a lighthouse story.

Rollin Sturgeon has completed the exterior scenes for a New England Coast story, "The Harbor Road," at Balboa, Cal. He is making interiors now at the studio.

A scene from "The Sage Brush Musketeers," to be released by Pathe

Lee Kohlmar, Universal director, goes East this week to accompany Carl Laemmle to Germany.

Edith Roberts is suffering from a sprained ankle.

Eileen Sedgwick has returned after an illness of six weeks, for the making of the serial, "The Terror Trail."

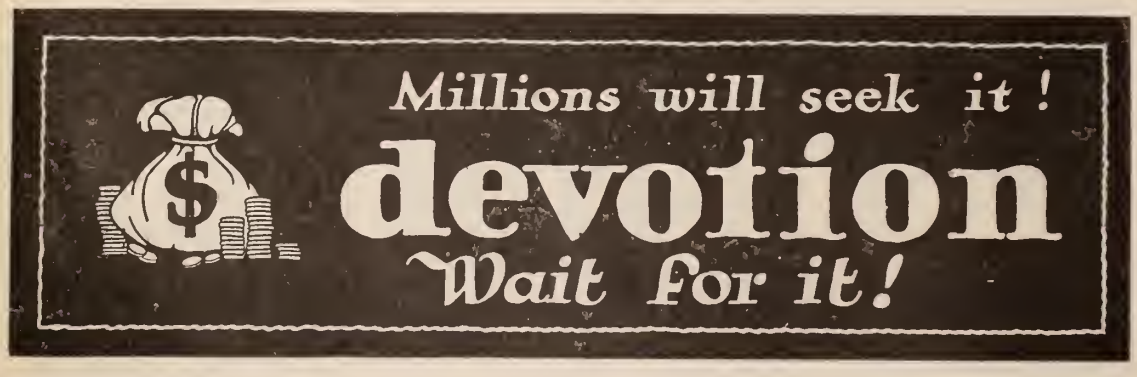
Subjects now being edited include "Christine of the Young Heart," starring Gladys Walton under the direction of Lee Kohlmar; "The Monkey Schoolmaster," a Joe Martin picture, under the direction of Harry Burns; "The Black Cap," starring Carmel Myers, under the direction of Jack Conway; "Robinson's Trousseau," starring Lee Moran, under the direction of Jack Nelson, and "The White Horseman," an Art Accord serial, under the direction of Albert Russell.

Production has started on "The Butterfly," starring Marie Provost, under the direction of King Baggot.

In production are "Fanny Herself," directed by Tod Browning; "The Mascot of the Three Stars," starring Hoot Gibson, and directed by Jack Ford; "The Sharkmaster," starring Frank Mayo, under the direction of Fred Granville, and "The Conflict," starring Priscilla Dean, under the direction of Stuart Paton.

REALART

The cast supporting Wanda Hawley in "Her Face Value," by Percy Heath, includes E. Roy Brankes, Lincoln Blumber, Dick Rosson, Winifred Bryson, and Donald MacDonald.



Harvey O'Higgins is writing his first screen play, "The Wallflower" for Mary Miles Minter's next vehicle upon her return from the East. The continuity is by Percy Heath.

A story by Sonia Levine has been purchased for Bebe Daniels. Elmer Harris is writing the continuity.

Director Maurice Campbell has completed "One Wild Week," starring Bebe Daniels. It is an original story by Frances Harmer.

Walter Hiers is on his way to the Coast after personal appearances in fifty Southern theatres in connection with "Oh! Lady, Lady.".

METRO

Three new subjects have been started recently. Veiller is directing Viola Dana in a tenement life story by Frank R. Adams. Gaston Glass and DeWitt Jennings are in the cast. Maxwell Karger is beginning to film "Junk," by Kenneth Harris," starring Bert Lytell. The supporting cast includes Virginia Valli, Victory Bateman, Leigh Wyant, and Joe Harrington. Director Dallas Fitzgerald is beginning "The Infamous Miss Ravelle," starring Alice Lake. The principal supporting cast includes Cullen Landis, Jackie Saunders and four children, Stanley Gaethals, aged four; Geraldine Dondon, aged six; Frances Carpenter, aged nine, and Mae Garaci, aged ten.

The George D. Baker production starring Gareth Hughes has been titled "The Garments of Truth." Ethel Granden will play the feminine lead. Production begins next week.

GOLDWYN

Alice Duer Miller is writing "The Man With Two Mothers," with continuity by Julius Josephson, for Tom Moore, who is now working in "From the Ground Up," under the direction of Mason Hooper.

Johnny Jones has completed his personal appearance tour, and has returned to the studio, giving reason to believe that another Edgar series will be produced.

Director Frank Lloyd and company are filming "The Man from Lost River" at Huntington Lake. Both exteriors and interiors are being filmed.

Rupert Hughes will introduce a new method showing the lapse of time in "From the Ground Up."

An exploitation stunt in connection with the showing of "Made in Heaven," which provided for a couple to be married by wireless when they were up in a balloon, resulted disastrously on last Sunday, when the balloon exploded. The wedding was postponed. There were no serious injuries.

HAL ROACH

Eddie Boland and his leading woman, Jean Hope, have announced their marriage, which took place on May 28.

Comedies recently finished include "Late Lodgers," featuring Harry (Snub) Pollard, and "A Zero Hero," featuring Gaylord Lloyd.

Jean Havez has been added to the Roach scenario staff, and will write exclusively for Harold Lloyd, collaborating with Sam Taylor.

The Eddie Boland company has finished two comedies which have been definitely titled, "The Chink" and "The China Shop."

ABOUT PLAYERS

MARY MILES MINTER scores as a charming hostess, and has the happy faculty of winning friends by personal contact, as easily, of not more so, than by her captivating and artistic screen work.

Miss Minter is, although she claims rapid strides towards maturity, more or less of the little girl we first remember when "The Littlest Rebel" was a crowning joy to the producer of the legitimate drama, in which Miss Minter made a lasting impression. Having spent several years, thereafter, in earning a reputation as a star of screen productions, Miss Minter does not relish being thought of as "a little girl." That may have been the reason for her latest picture, one to be released under the title of "Don't Call Me Little Girl." It followed another, appropriately named, "Her Winning Ways."

En route for Europe, accompanied by her mother and sister, Mary Miles Minter speeded around New York a few days to conclude the necessary errands of a business and personal nature always preceding one's departure for Europe. But interrupting her busy days and theatre going evenings, Miss Minter entertained representatives of the press, including those who receive assignments from managing editors of newspapers, trade papers and "fan" magazines, at a most delightful luncheon at the Hotel Biltmore. She responded most graciously, to a call for "speech," but declined the same way, stating that she had nothing more to say than how happy she was to be in the midst of those whose names had become as familiar to her, as was hers to the motion picture universe.

For the second time George Arliss will appear in the title role, and as the star of a motion picture. This time, the play made famous by his artistic work, will be "Disraeli." And Lady Beaconsfield, wife of his lordship, will be played by Mrs. Arliss. In fact if casts and direction have anything to do with the making of a successful picture, the forthcoming George Arliss in "Disreali" may be looked upon as an "event." Margaret Dale, whose first appearance on the screen was in The Cosmopolitan production, directed by Robert G. Vignola, "The World and His Wife," is one of the impressive cast of superior artists, and the followers of Louise Huff will again have an opportunity of seeing the diminutive ingenue in a fitting role. Then there is Reginald Denny, E. J. Radcliff, Frank Losee, Henry Carvil, Grace Griswold, Noel Tearle and Fred Nichols in the supporting element. It is safe to state that each and every one of the foregoing players have their individual followers. The combination of such talent, under the direction of Henry Kolker, and photographed by Harry A. Fischbeck, would be most effective in an advance trailer. Mr. Fischbeck is the camera expert who was selected to photograph Mr. Arliss when he made his first screen appearance in "The Devil." Mr. Arliss, thereafter, made the flattering statement regarding Mr. Fischbeck that one of the first things he would insist upon, when considering further screen work, was the services of Harry Fischbeck, the camera man whom had proven his ability upon first trial.

No temperament prevails insofar as musicians are concerned during the filming of "Bing-Bang-Boom" David Butler's new production. No siree! This star uses "canned" music on his sets and is delighted with the result.

Mr. Butler has a large victrola which is set on rubber wheels and is moved about from set to set. When the camera is ready to click, all the property man has to do is find out whether it is a slow or fast scene and act accordingly. The records do the rest.

According to the star, "canned" music is the only thing. It saves time, worry, and expense. If one is displeased with the selection being played just turn over the record and another replaces it immediately and besides, the same sweet and mellow sounds pour forth from within whether it be early morning or late at night.

A clean shut-out was registered by the Marion Davies Baseball Team, over a team representing the home office of the Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation, at Forest Grove, above Bear Mountain, ending with a score of seven to nothing. The Marion Davies contingent is composed of employes of the International Film Service Company Studios, where Cosmopolitan Productions, starring Miss Davies, are made. The game was the feature of an outing given by the Famous Players home office, the teams and spectators having traveled to the grove on a steamboat. The brightest hero of them all was Rovet, pitcher of the Marion Davies team who allowed only one hit and struck out fifteen men.

Denison Clift, acclaimed in London, England, upon his presentation of his two productions, "The Diamond Necklace," "Demos"

Mlle. Narcita, famous Spanish beauty, and formerly the star of the Patrio Company of Madrid, and of the Royal Cinema Corporation Ltd. of Montreal, Canada, has come to this country from her native Spain to study conditions in America with a view, ultimately, to establishing a studio here.

She is said to represent a group of French and Spanish capitalists, of whom Louis Nalpas, the famous French director, who has been called the "French Griffith," and who has a large studio at Nice, France, is said to be the leading spirit.

Mlle. Narcita, who four or five years ago had an international reputation as the featured artist in some of the most elaborate pictures, which had then been presented, upon the burning of the Royal Cinema studios in Canada in 1917, returned to her home in Spain, and since that time has been in semi-retirement.

Among the most notable pictures, which she made for the Royal Cinema Corporation, Ltd., some of which are still being shown here in the independent field are: "A Night of Temptation," by Victoria Cross; "Too Late"; "The Crystal Cup"; "The Peacock"; "The Ruined Heart," and "When Men Promise." The Patria Company starred her in a number of pictures eight- to ten-reels in length, which were manufactured principally for the South American market.

Mlle. Narcita, who will have the stellar role this fall in an important historical production, part of which will probably be made in France and part in this country, under the direction of Louis Nalpas, may possibly accept an engagement during her sojourn here in order to familiarize herself with the latest methods in American screen technique.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

WILLIAM NIGH, author-director, according to recent announcement, will direct Wesley Barry, the famous boy star in a screen version of "School Days," which he has written for Warner Brothers in collaboration with Walter DeLeon.

Work on the production is already under way, and little Wesley, who first achieved stellar fame in the title role of "Dinty," is still under contract to Marshall Neilan, but has been loaned to Warner Brothers, under special arrangement, for this picture.

The screen version of "School Days," taken from the famous Gus Edwards company of juvenile players, will, of necessity, contain many new and added scenes and situations, having been cut to an act suitable for vaudeville since its early presentation as a play. However, as Mr. Nigh has written as well as directed several successful screen stories, including "Why Girls Leave Home," it is safe to look to him to build the production up to standard. It was for this reason that Mr. Nigh was selected by Warner Brothers to produce "School Days," originally chosen by Mr. Neilan as a vehicle for his boy star, Wesley Barry, and which he, himself, intended to direct because the stage play did not furnish sufficient material for a big screen special, such as it is intended "School Days" shall be.

Last week this column was responsible for a glaring error, and let us say the printer, for a less let us say, the printer, for a less was regarding Rosemary Theby having been selected to play opposite William Desmond, which part of the statement was correct. The mistake was the statement that the production would be under the direction of Charles Giblyn. For this mis-statement indulgence is requested, with due apologies. Mr. Giblyn is directing William Russell, in a production for Fox. As yet, the director for the Desmond production is not known to this department.

"Music Without Synchronization is Noise!"

Another mistake (the one "wished on the printer") was the working title given the Eugene O'Brien production, under the direction of George Archainbaud. It should have read "Clay Dollars" instead of "Clay ———."

Robert G. Vignola, director of Cosmopolitan productions, is reported to be playing a wicked game of golf, gaining skill by the day, while on his more than earned vacation. Since Mr. Vignola's last journey east from the west coast studios, to commence work for International, he has made a commendable list of pictures, with a striking peculiarity, in each some one player of previous semi-prominence, has been conceded to do the best work of his or her career.

To begin with "The World and His Wife," Mr. Vignola's first production for Cosmopolitan. All of the leading players were at their best. Especially was the work of Alma Rubens and Gaston Glass a vast improvement over anything they had ever done. In the next picture, "The Passionate Pilgrim," noticeable ability on the part of Matt Moore brought him into unprecedented glory. Frankie Mann did the best work of her screen career, as did also, Rubye DeRemer.

Followed "Straight is the Way," in which Mr. Moore made more rapid strides, and in which George Parsons, heretofore known only to the legitimate stage, scored a worth-while performance. In this, also, Gladys Leslie was widely acclaimed, although conceded as a competent player before being selected as the leading ingenue for Mr. Vignola's special. Then came "The Woman God Changed," which was responsible for Seena Owen's name in electric lights two weeks in New York, one each at The Rivoli and Rialto. This picture elevated Miss Owen as truly eligible for stardom. While already a screen favorite, E. K. Lincoln was particularly good in the role assigned him. In the next Cosmopolitan picture for release via Paramount-Artcraft, will be seen Marion Davies in "Enchantment." It is expected the star will surpass all previous efforts therein, and it has become a habit to look for newly found or brought into notice, ability in Vignola productions.

The author today occupies a position of considerable importance in motion picture circles—in comparison, that is, with his position of a few years ago. Gouverneur Morris reached this conclusion after watching a showing at the Goldwyn studios of "Ace of Hearts," one of his new photoplays written directly for the screen which, incidentally, was filmed almost exactly as written under the direction of Wallace Worsley. To illustrate the changed conditions, Mr. Morris related his experience in selling for the first time the screen rights to one of his stories.

"I was told, after selling it," said he, "to think no more about it, and that I would be surprised at the picture it would make.

"I was!

"The night of its preview I arrived late, so that I missed seeing the title and cast of the picture that was being shown. I wondered if I had missed mine or if it would be run later.

"At the end of the picture I stepped to the box office and inquired: 'When will Mr. Morris' film be shown?'

"'We just finished running it,' was the answer!"

When Frank Lloyd was shooting scenes in a Los Angeles Theatre for the stage episodes of "The Grim Comedian," Rita Weiman's original photoplay for Goldwyn, he didn't know just how great was his indebtedness to the theatre manager. He found out later when he went to thank him for the use of the theatre. Mr. Lloyd expressed the hope that he had not inconvenienced him in any way.

"Not at all—not at all," was the cheerful reply. "My company rehearsed very conveniently in a barn down the street."

Mr. Lloyd is wondering how he will ever discharge his obligation.

10 Plan Book Reviews in this issue

Harry Carey's Universal picture is "The Wallop." Here is a scene from it

Activities at Goldwyn Culver City Studio

TOM MOORE, having completed "Beating the Game," the Charles Kenyon original photoplay, has just started work at the Goldwyn Culver City studios, under the direction of E. Mason Hopper, on "From the Ground Up," the story and continuity for which were both prepared by Rupert Hughes. Helene Chadwick again appears in the leading feminine role with Mr. Moore. In the supporting cast are Darrell Foss, De Witt C. Jennings and Hardee Kirkland.

Director Frank Lloyd and the company, filming Katherine Newlin Burt's first story devised originally for the screen, "The Man From Lost River," are on location at Huntington Lake in northern California. House Peters and Fritzi Brunette have the leading roles. The continuity was prepared by Arthur F. Statter and Lambert Hillyer.

Director Reginald Barker will this week take scenes for Leroy Scott's "Poverty of Riches" in the Llewellyn Iron Works in Los Angeles. Richard Dix and Leatrice Joy have the leading roles.

Will Rogers is writing the titles for his most recent picture, the film version of Edward E. Kidder's comedy, "A Poor Relation," photography on which was completed last week.

Channing Pollock on Films—and Kings

One would have been looked upon with suspicion, ten years ago, if one had ventured to intimate that some day Kaiser Wilhelm would be chaperoning a buck-saw in Holland, or that Hapsburgs would be playing hide-and-seek in Switzerland. And yet, to-day, nothing would be more commonplace than to have a king or a queen apply at some studio as an extra, offering to throw in the crown and sceptre as a bonus for the job.

Moreover, the chances are that he could not qualify!

Apropos of his play being adapted for the screen by Realart, Channing Pollock, the noted American playwright, lapsed into reminiscence.

"Chronologically," he mused, "There are three kinds of plays: those behind their time, which are the failures; those abreast of their time, which are the successes, and those ahead of their time, which are likely to be the good plays.

"Good or bad, it took ten years and a world war to justify 'Such a Little Queen.'

"Produced to-day as a photoplay, the piece might be mistaken for a satire on current events. A decade ago, the fly in the amber of gratifying and unanimously enthusiastic review was rank skepticism.

"'Mr. Pollock takes pains to assure us' said Life, 'that kings in exile have been compelled to live like commoners, but he does not quite make us believe it.'

"'According to this comedy,' said another periodical, 'thrones are tippy things, and monarchs—in the plural—are likely to be jolted off them.'"

Incredible! Then kings and queens were wont to be looked upon as things that were here to stay, year after year, like Niagara Falls, or the Pyramids, or—or—William Jennings Bryan.

Jack Crosby and Harry Sanger in Business

Until the pictures in which Jack Crosby has played prominent roles, such as "Black is White," "The Stealers," "Proxics," etc., are out of print, his following may not realize that he is no longer among those prominent in representative casts. But before then, producers, directors, players and all concerned will be surprised to know that Jack has become a business man, and combined his knowledge of supplying the right players for the right part, with Harry Sanger. The industry needs no introduction to Mr. Sanger. He has long been favorably known as a representative of those who go to make up the personnel of producing units and casts. During the past few months Mr. Sanger has been inactive in the motion picture field, but has re-entered and expects to make up for lost time. With Jack Crosby and Harry Sanger as the executives of an enterprise devoted to the needs of the profession and producing units, their possibilities have a liberal bid. The new offices, situated completely away from the beaten path for the purpose of making theirs an exclusive service for particular clients, is located at No. 3 West 47th street.

View Future of Motion Picture Industry with Optimism

Baltimore Men Add Another Big House to Chain

That he and his associates view the future of the motion picture industry with the greatest optimism is the statement of J. Louis Rome, general manager of the State Theatres Co., of Baltimore, which has just added the Apollo theatre at an approximate cost of $200,000 to its chain.

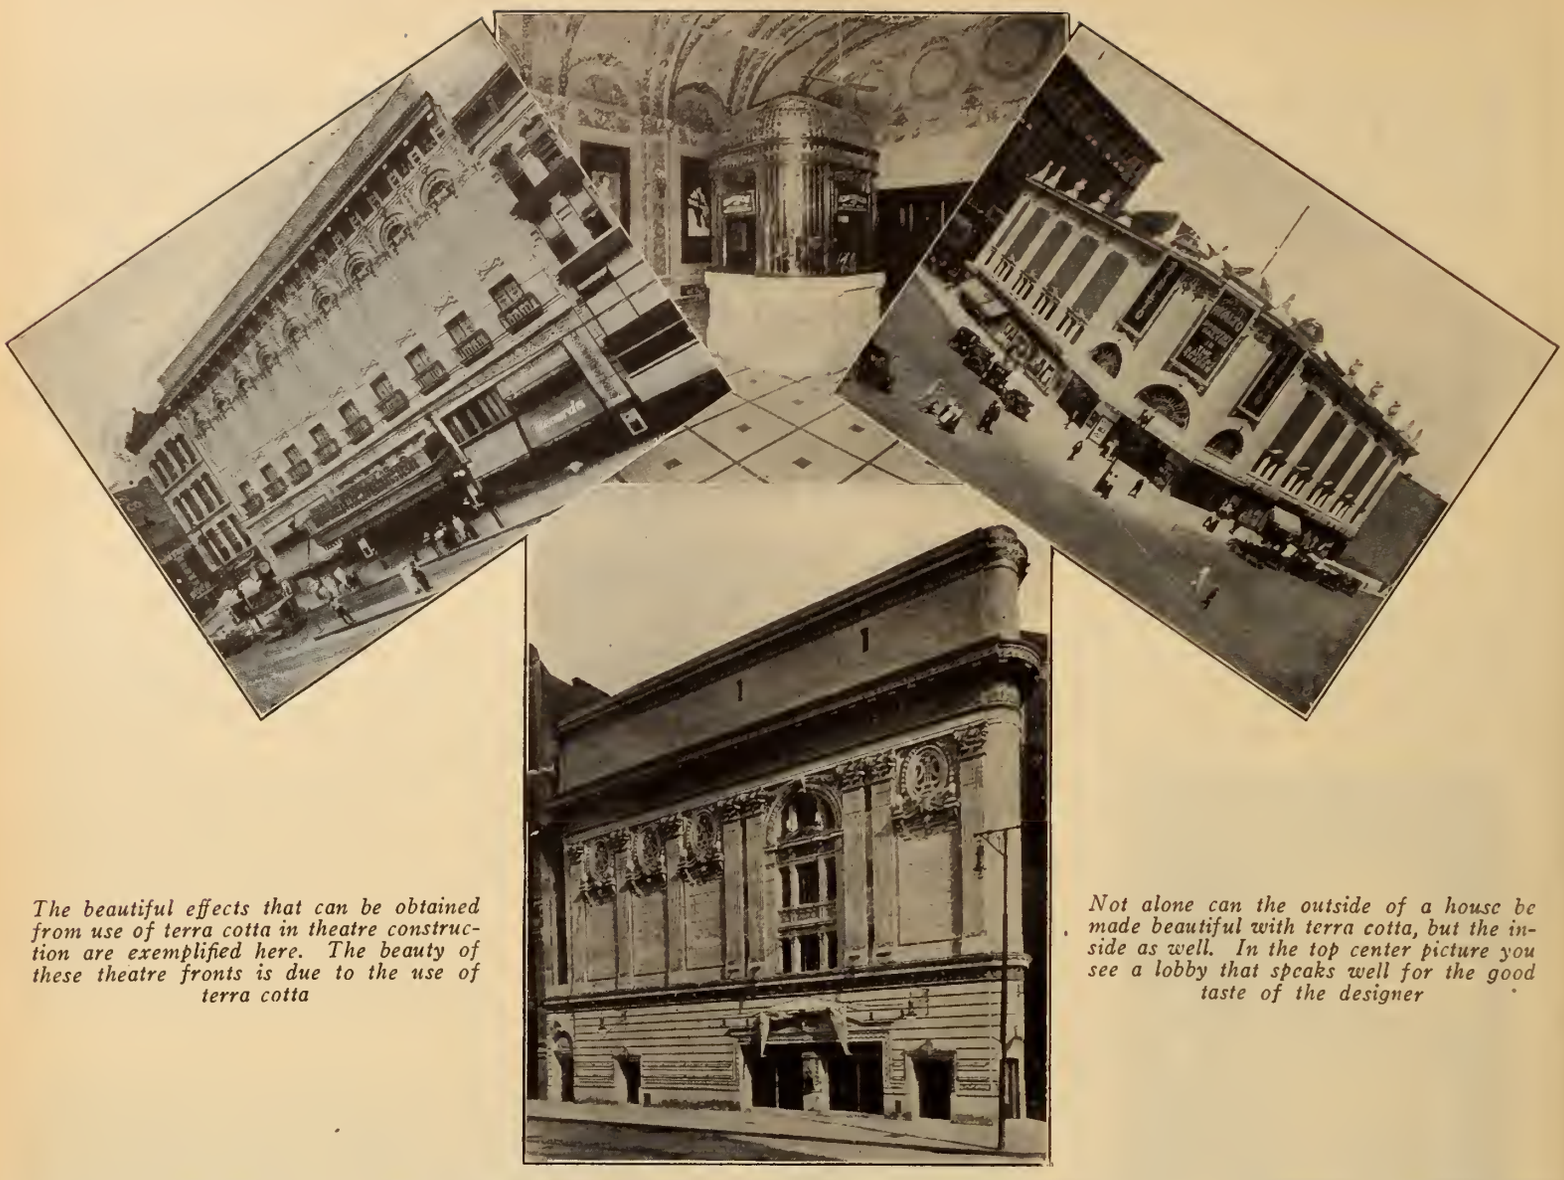
J. Louis Rome

The total capital investment of the company in its several theatres is now put by Mr. Rome at $1,500,000, which, however, is said by him not to represent their market value at present. Included in the company's properties are the new Capitol, the Rialto, which is to be enlarged, the Broadway and the Poplar.

A brand new place, equipped with a Power's projector, American Seating Co. seats, Westinghouse rectifier, Speedco arc controls and a Minusa fibre screen, the Apollo is to be put on a popular basis similar to the Capitol's and the company's other houses.

"We will adhere to a daily change instead of a three-times-a-week program," said Mr. Rome. "Prices will be 11-cent matinees and 22-cent evening performances, in keeping with our other admittance charges.

Mr. Rome is of the opinion that since none of the exchanges has displayed a tendency to reduce prices of shows the time has not come for the exhibitor to cut his prices. "Our afternoon performances are twice as largely attended than formerly, and our night shows have fallen off slightly," he declared. "This condition very probably is due to unemployment and as such should be regarded as temporary. The people are more careful than ever in selecting shows they desire to patronize, and they want life reproduced as nearly as possible. Problems of real life have a stronger appeal than mythical make-ups and the public likes to place itself in the star's position."



Improvements to be made at the Apollo include the installation of a Moller organ and exterior decorations. There will be a re-arrangement of the indirect lighting so better results may be obtained with the coverings, and an Apollo sign in stationary 3-foot letters is nearing completion, having been furnished by the Baltimore Electric Sign Co.

Projection changes to be made are new attachments for speed controls, a lowering of the screen and a cutting down of the size of the picture to make it much brighter.

Other officers of the State Theatres Co. are Morris Klein, president; Samuel Back, vice-president; William Hofmeister, treasurer; Samuel H. Rome, secretary; Samuel H. Rome also is house manager at the Apollo.—COOPER.

Capitol Theatre in St. Louis Opens

The Capitol theatre, St. Louis, was opened the last week in April with Robertson-Cole's "Good Women," by C. Gardner Sullivan, directed by Gasnier, to crowds that filled all seats at virtually every filming during the seven days.

The Capitol theatre is owned by Skouras Brothers, and is one of several strictly modern and beautifully appointed playhouses owned and operated by these showmen.

It is described as the finest downtown theatre in St. Louis, equipped to the last degree to minister to the comfort and delight of its patrons. The photograph shown here is the first taken of the Capitol since its completion.

New Catalog Is a Valuable Text Book

Burke and James, Inc., who handle the Universal Motion Picture Camera, have sent out a new catalog that in reality is a valuable text book. It is filled with practical information of value to the owner of any motion picture camera. In presenting this new catalog, Burke and James announce the book as a "catalog, plus—', The latest improvements on the Universal Camera are explained.

New House for Ardmore, Pa.

The Main Line Amusement Co., recently incorporated with capital of $400,000, have purchased a property on Lancaster avenue, east of Ardmore avenue, in Ardmore, Pa., for the site of a motion picture theatre. The contract for the building has been let to Stuckert & Co., who are to erect a building to seat 2,000. So far the plans include a facade of Green River stone, four stores on the hundred-foot front of the ground floor, and offices on the second floor. A new movie in this neighborhood should draw considerable patronage, as there is little competition for a first-class house, and most of the main line residents have found it necessary to go into the city to get their motion picture tastes satisfied.

Charles Powell, of Ardmore, is president of the Amusement Co. F. A. Cabeen, of Haverford, is vice-president. M. E. Herman, of Philadelphia, is secretary, and W. J. LaPorte, of Ardmore, treasurer.—FRANKEL.

South Carolina Ready to Open

M. C. Diamond has completed his new moving picture theatre at Barnwell, S. C., and will offer "Kismet" as his first feature picture. The theatre has a seating capacity of more than 700 and every modern convenience has been added to the theatre's equipment. Under the same roof with the theatre is a 26-room hotel. The building is located on Main street, the location being ideal for a movie house—KEENEY.

Change Name

Ford Brothers, of Lincolnton, N. C., have leased the New Grand theatre at Newton, N. C., and have assumed possession of the property. Their first move was to change the name of the theatre to Ford's Grand. L. H. Faires, of Lincolnton, has been appointed manager of the theatre, and Alex Ford will also assist in the supervision of the property. The new lessees announce that they will make an improvement in the quality of pictures shown at their theatre.—KEENEY.

Tinting Film Plays with Nature's Colors Is No Easy Matter

Inventor of Colorcraft Pictures Explains His Work

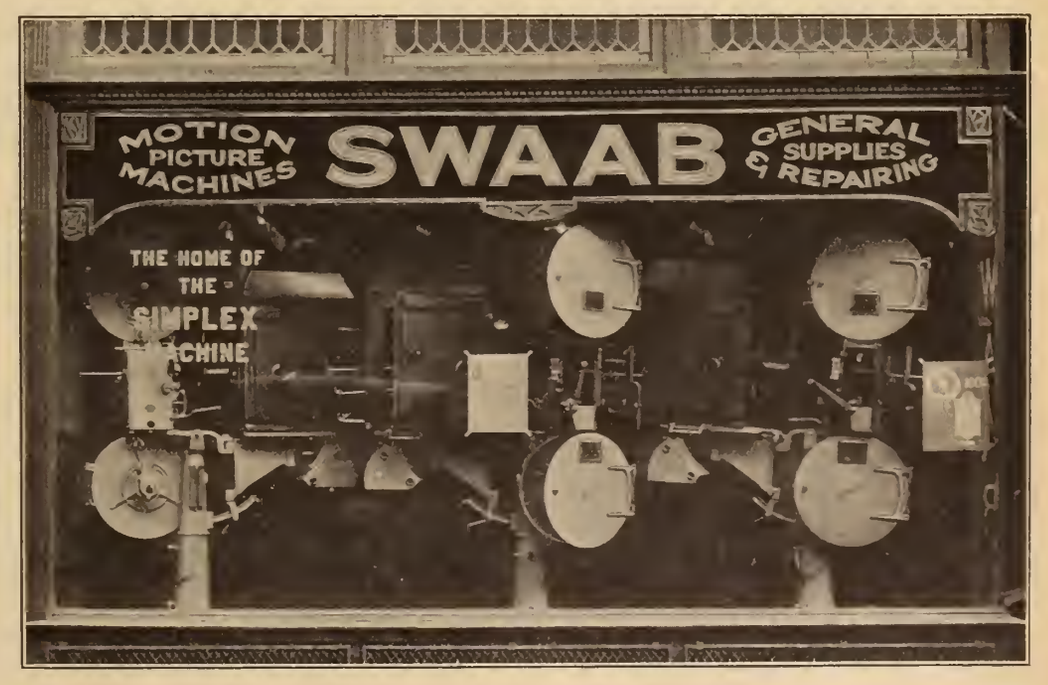
Nearly eevry man who is interested in motion pictures is interested in color in motion pictures. From their inception the far-sighted producer has known of the tremendous asset which nature held and has tried to reproduce her colors on the screen. At first he was forced to tint and tone scenes by hand to relieve the monotony of black and white pictures. Later the color was produced on the screen by projecting the picture through rapidly moving red and green screens, and recently it has been possible to actually get the color in the film itself. Each method, however, has had its drawbacks and no one has so far claimed perfection. "Colorcraft" is the newest corporation to produce colored pictures. The owners and inventors of this method promise that all the other faults which have marred the perfection of the colored films shall be eliminated in Colorcraft pictures.

Following are some of the reasons for their claim: Colorcraft photographs colors as they actually exist and reproduces them on the curtain without any complications or additions to the present equipment. A Colorcraft subject can be added to any black and white reel, replacing any scene or any part of the play. It is not necessary for the producer to sacrifice any fast action, close-ups or combinations of colors when using this process, as everything is photographed the same as it is set before the camera. Colorcraft not only reproduces nature or artificial settings, but prints can be manufactured with the same accuracy as black and white prints and the life of the film is greater than the average black and white film.

W. H. Peck, inventor of the new method, says: "Colorcraft film can be assembled in any reel and projected in any theatre without the operator knowing that it is going to be projected until he sees the picture on the curtain. The light is the same, and it is not necessary to make a single change to assist the color projection. The older method has an additional disadvantage which a great many people call prismatic, technically known as fringe, which makes it impossible to take any fast action when same is close to the camera and which instantly eliminates such a method for dramatic production or any close-ups where there is movement. By the Colorcraft method we can take just as fast action as is taken in black and white, with absolutely no fringe. The color blending is exactly the same under fast action as it is when photographing still objects.

"Optical principles used in the Colorcraft laboratory are patented in principle, but the kind of glass and actual calculations of these optics are kept secret. As the optics for color photography have never been successfully mastered by others we found it not only necessary to design our own color optics, but to train men to properly make same, as no one could be found to do this work with proper skill. Our printing methods are radically different from others, and in this way it is possible to register our color values in the film so accurately that there is no blurring or overlapping of colors in the finished product. Our printing methods are purely mechanical, and it does not require extra skilled help. The dyeing method, which selectively picks up the proper dyes to reproduce nature's colors, is purely mechanical and automatic and requires no special handling. For this reason we can turn out duplicate prints without any appreciable variation. Our dyes are fixed in the film in proper position, just as permanent as a dye figure in silk or other cloth. Our colors have been selected for their stability, so there will be no fading or reduction of brightness due to light.

"To get a commercially perfect process it is necessary to handle each part of the work in keeping with optical and chemical laws and with methods and processes that are so simplified that each step fits in with every other, and can be duplicated indefinitely. This is the reason Colorcraft has come forward with a workable process in advance of any other and is now opening up wide gates of opportunity to every one in any way connected with the film industry."



New Connecticut Theatre Open Sept. 15

MERIDEN, Conn., June 4.—Arland W. Johnson, of 469 Fifth ave., the architect who planned the new Community theatre, which is being erected in the rear of Esidore Derecktor's West Main street property, just west of Grove street, was in town yesterday, looking over the site and giving instructions to Frank Young, superintendent of construction for the Sutherland company, who has established his office on the ground, and will be here until the theatre is finished.

Mr. Johnson said the theatre, when finished, will be one of the finest in the state of Connecticut. The theatre proper will be located in the rear of the Derecktor buildings, with an entrance through the present store at 99 West Main street, just opposite the head of Butler street.

Mr. Johnson said the contract for the erection of the new theatre has been let to the William M. Sutherland Building and Contracting Co., of St. Louis, and the contract for the excavation has been sublet by that company to the L. Suzio Construction Co. The work is going forward with great despatch, and Mr. Johnson said that while it had been planned to open the theatre about October 1, it now looks, from the progress being made, as if it could be opened by the middle of September.—AGARD.

Doll covering house 'phone in the Liberty Theatre, Portland, Ore.

A close-up of the French Doll

French Dolls Hide Old House Telephones

Manager Paul E. Noble, of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., has devised a most novel and beautiful way of changing the house phones into a delightful feature of the house instead of a grim necessity as before. A charming French lady of court hides each phone that was in public view.

The dolls came direct from France and represent the finest work in that type of reproduction. The little canopy of yellow taffeta which conceals two weel lights is lined with a glowing rose satin. The full overskirt of the mannikin is of the same taffeta, while the shirred drop skirt is of rose. The finest real lace has been used at the neck and sleeves as well as the bottom of the dress. Imitation pearls edge the drapes.

The little figure represents an expenditure of $75. The house phone on the other side of the mezzanine floor as well as in the checking room is graced with similar French dolls.—Allen.

Building Activity Will Mark Summer Season

The National theatre at Stephensville, Texas, has been acquired by Edgar Adams of the Gem. The Gem is to be closed permanently.

Messrs. A. B. Carpenter and Warren Frost last week leased the Royal theatre at Hamilton, Texas, to J. E. Hickey, formerly of Gatesville, Texas.

Rott and Rowley, of Dallas, Texas, have leased the Lindsey theatre at Luttock, Texas, for a period of three years, and have taken charge.

H. L. Perkins, of Bartlett, Texas, has purchased the Arien theatre at Bastrop, Texas, and is remodelling and renovating, both the interior and exterior.

J. W. Owens, of Shamrock, Okla., has commenced the erection of a new theatre at Slick, Okla., which will be managed by J. W. Snow, of Crescent, Okla. The theatre will be strictly modern and will seat 600.

Before a court room packed with citizens, at Del Rio, Texas, last week, the managers of the Princess and Texas theatres were tried separately on charge of operating picture shows on Sunday.

C. E. Tomme opened a new picture show at Ringgold, Texas, last week to big pleased business.

Manager Maggard, of the Rex theatre, at Newata, Okla., has purchased the Liberty theatre at that place, and will operate both theatres.

E. O. Kirkland has opened an agency in Oklahoma City to be known as the Blizzard Sales Agency. From that office he will move all business for both Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Scottsbluff, Nebraska, is to have a new theatre that will cost $150,000.

G. H. Slothewer, of Carthage, Me., will erect a new $35,000 theatre at that place in the near future.

W. H. Rich has purchased the Gem theatre at Hankinson, N. Dak.

V. V. Hansen has purchased the Princess theatre at Adrian, Minn., from E. R. Kilpatrick.

The Plaza theatre at Morristown, Minn., is now under the management of E. W. and E. E. Minske.

A new theatre will be built at Aurora, Minn., by Frank Zimmerman, of the Rex theatre, the Columbia theatre at Columbus, Me., has been purchased by a stock company of Columbia men for $70,000.

Ascher Bros. are erecting a new theatre at Manitowac, Wisconsin, which will cost over $500,000 when completed.—William Noble.

Sell to Proctor Circuit

The New York store of the United Theatre Equipment Corporation announce that they are re-equipping the entire Proctor circuits with new Snaplite lenses. The UTE optical expert, Mr. R. A. Jennings, has been making demonstrations in various Proctor houses for several weeks; he has so fully convinced the officers of the Proctor circuit that these new lenses will bring out depth and detail in their screenings, that they are discarding all of the present equipment for the Snaplite lens.

During the war, many new principles were evolved in the manufacture of educational optical goods for the Government, and these are included in the Snaplite lens which accounts for the wonderful clearness that this lens imparts to pictures projected through them.

The Kansas City branch of the UTE has been "projectionizing" in their territory to the extent of

Well Satisfied

Marr & Colton, organ manufacturers of Warsaw, N. Y., are very proud of a new folder they have compiled. It contains letters from a few of their exhibitor-customers. After reading the letters there is little wonder that this firm feels proud. Juding from the tone of the exhibitors using Marr & Colton organs, they must be giving exceptionally good service. Satisfied customers are the best advertisements a firm can have and Marr & Colton evidently have plenty such customers.

Odds and Ends

The Blackmore has purchased and is rebuilding the old Harrison Opera House at Harrison, Ark., and will reopen for business in the near future. The New Liberty Theatre, on East Main Street, Oklahoma City, was opened for business last Saturday. The new theatre seats about 300, and is strictly modern and up-to-date in every particular.

R. T. McGibben has started rebuilding the Capital theatre, at Newport, Ark., which was destroyed by fire recently, and will reopen at an early date.

It's just BUSINESS SENSE

PLAIN business sense told the owners of the Sun Theatre that an attractive theatre front is a business asset, attracting crowds and profits.

Today they have the just pride that comes with knowing that their theatre is the handsomest one in the neighborhood. In this building the architect has used Terra Cotta—and used it with knowledge and imagination.

Look for a moment at the illustration above. You know at a glance that the Sun Theatre is prosperous. The clean, handsome exterior extends a cordial invitation to the public to go inside. It's the kind of theatre people like to patronize.

"We have had many complimentary things said about our Sun Theatre front," write the World Realty Co., owners of the Sun Theatre, "and we feel that we owe much to the architect and to Terra Cotta for the fine designs and workmanship."

Owners and exhibitors are realizing more each day the real advertising value of an attractive theatre front. And because it is made in any form and color—because it is unlimited in its variety and design, durable and easy to keep clean and bright—Terra Cotta is recognized today as the ideal facing material for moving picture theatres.

Write today for our brochure, "The Theatre," which shows illustrations of theatres, large and small, all over the country. "Terra Cotta Defined" will give you the story of the material. Either or both will be sent free on request by National Terra Cotta Society, 1 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Kaplan Opens Brooklyn Supply House

The exhibitors of Brooklyn, N. Y., are now receiving the benefits of a brand new supply house which has recently been opened by Sam Kaplan, a well-known figure in motion picture circles in New York.

Sam Kaplan

Mr. Kaplan's many years of experience in the equipment end of the industry makes him an especially capable man to conduct and maintain a supply house.

As president of the New York Projectionists Union, Local No. 306, he has made a great many friends and is well liked in the exhibitors' circles in and around New York.

Mr. Kaplan is handling Simplex Projectors and parts exclusively and also all other well-known lines of equipment. It can be truly said that the exhibitors can purchase from this new supply house, any form of theatre equipment desired.

All the representatives motor generator sets, compensarcs and other projection room accessories are also part of the equipment always maintained on hand.

A special feature about this new supply house, is its completely equipped up-to-date repair department. All repairing will be conducted under the personal supervision of Mr. Kaplan and satisfaction to the exhibitors is the policy determined upon, on account of the fact that all of his employes will be required to have had former experience in the Simplex factory.

The home office of this new progressive organization is located at 357 Vermont street, Brooklyn, while the main office which houses the repair department and supply house is located at 124 West 45th street, New York.

Mr. Kaplan says in part, "that the policy of our organization is Perfect Satisfaction to All and that after having carefully selected our personnel, we feel assured of the fact that the above mentioned policy will be followed out to the Nth power."

Portland Supply Dealer Gets Them All

Under the personal supervision of Matthew Aparton, of the General Supply & Repair Co., Portland, Ore., two Powers Cameragraphs and one Westinghouse Generator Set were installed in the Astoria theatre, Astoria, Ore., May 14. The new equipment was one of the main features on the opening date of the Astoria theatre, a seven hundred and fifty capacity house under the management of Messrs. Kildall and Harrison of the Astoria Theatre Co.

The new theatre is not basing its plans on pictures alone, but has a daily vaudeville program to include with the cinema entertainment.

This installation makes the third Astoria house to equip with Powers within the new year, and makes the coast city one hundred per cent Powers.

Theatre Nearly Ready

Work is progressing rapidly on the Rialto theatre, Spokane, for Hillyard that will cost nearly $50,000 when complete. The theatre will seat 600 persons and the stage will be 11 by 37 feet. The construction will be of cement, brick, steel and will be fireproof. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy in sixty days. The Rialto Amusement Co. has taken a 10-year lease on the structure.

Wonderful Results from the Ken-o-lite Lens

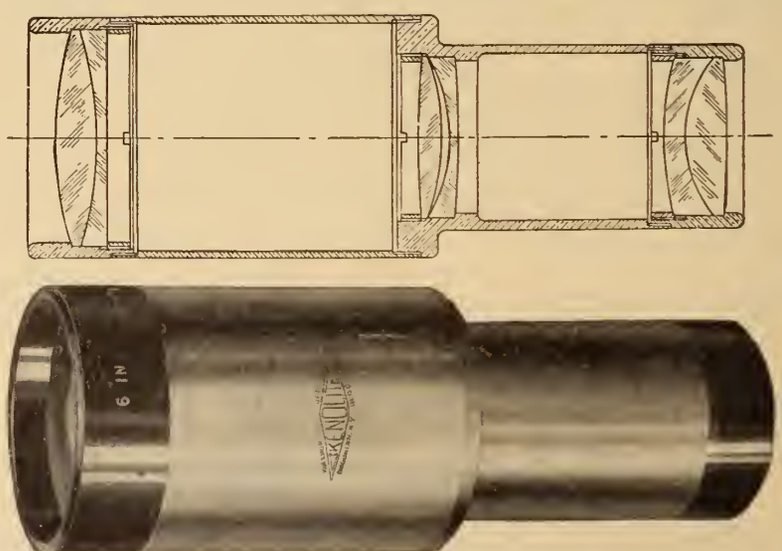
The Independent Movie Supply Co. a few months ago contracted to distribute a new three-combination lens known as the Ken-o-lite lens. For the past few months they have been putting out the lenses on a ten-day trial, with excellent results.

The policy of a ten-day trial was decided upon because of the confidence William Rabell, of the Independent Movie Supply Co., has that the lens will do what is claimed for it.

The three-combination lens is one that has three sets of lenses in the tube, whereas the ordinary lens has only two. This extra set of lenses catches all the light immediately after it passes through the film, eliminating all possibility of lost rays.

When the Ken-o-lite was first manufactured an extensive and exhaustive test was made by Prof. Weinrich, of Columbia University, New York, as in comparison with the usual two-combination lens. The results shown by this test were exceptional. An average of 32.8 per cent increase in illumination on the screen and a picture 28 per cent more clearly defined, were the results reported by Prof. Weinrich. The illumination at the middle of the screen was increased 12.5 per cent, half way out of center, 32.5 per cent, and at the corners 63 per cent, giving an average increase of 32.8 per cent.

In all the Broadway houses in New York and wherever the Ken-o-lite has been installed this tremendous increase in illumination was at once evident. The ten-day trial offer of the Independent Movie Supply Co. on this article has resulted in many hundreds of Ken-o-lites being placed, it is said.



Similarity of Names Proves Embarrassing

Declaring that the similarity of his name with that of Harry Lucas, youthful clerk for Gude & Co., contractors, who is alleged to have skipped Saturday with the company's pay roll, has caused him much embarrassment, Harry K. Lucas, general manager of the Lucas Theatre Supply Co., of 158 Marietta street, Atlanta, Ga., wishes to state that he had never heard of the other Lucas, previous to the story in the papers.

"I thought I was the exclusive owner of the name 'Harry Lucas,' said Mr. Lucas, 'until notice appeared in the papers of the alleged embezzlement. I hope you will make it plain for me that the Harry Lucas under arrest is not the Harry Lucas, of 15 Elmwood drive, and that I have never before heard of the young clerk."

To Erect Strand Theatre at Halifax

The Strand Theatre Company, Limited, Halifax, N. S., has decided to erect a large fireproof moving picture theatre on Barrington Street, with a frontage of 80 feet and a seating capacity of 2,000. The structure will embody several floors of offices for dentists and other professional men. J. M. Franklin is the president and managing director of the company and Herbert Brewster is the architect.

New Machine Is an Innovation in Projection Apparatus

Announcement of New Projector Made by U.T.E. Corporation

The United Theatre Equipment Corporation, Mr. H. T. Edwards, president, announces to the trade that the new U. T. E.-Proctor Automatic Projector will be ready for distribution by its thirteen branch stores and through other distributors and dealers on and after July 1.

This projector contains many new and exclusive patented features.

"It is interesting to note," explains the U. T. E. Company, "that this is the only projector which was at its inception designed for motor drive, its construction and design embodying the essentials necessary for securing perfect speed control. In other words, the application of the motor was not an after thought, but the motor, the transmission, and the speed control are built-in the projector, forming part of it.

"The absence of belts and other similar transmissions makes the U. T. E.-Proctor Projector operate quietly with a remarkable degree of speed control. In addition thereto, a finger control of the speed is provided by which those screen effects secured by instant film speed variation so desired by exhibitors and directors can be obtained. A further fact which is of great interest to the industry is that the U. T. E.-Proctor Automatic Projector has been under development for more than twelve years and that it has been manufactured and has been in theatre service for over five years, and now the United Theatre Equipment Corp. has put it on a quantity production basis.

"The U. T. E.-Proctor Automatic Projector well deserves the application of the word "automatic," because it is provided with means to automatically stop the mechanism and shut off the light in case of necessity. The take-up is absolutely automatiic and constant in its action irrespective of the diameter of the reel hub upon which the film is taken up, and irrespective of the diameter of the reel. In other words, the take-up will exert the same tension on the lower film sprocket irrespective of the size of the reel hub, the diameter of the reel, the length of the film, or the speed of the film, and that prevents the tearing of the film on the lower sprocket with consequent losing of the lower loop. The projector automatically synchronizes the shutter with the framing device and intermittent movement when it is necessary to frame the picture, thus obviating the necessity of a hand adjustment for the shutter.

"An arc controller can be provided as part of the lamp house for automatically feeding and maintaining the arc at absolute constant value without any attention of the projectionist. An electric speed indicating and recording device can be furnished, the generator for which is also built-in as part of the mechanism when so ordered. Last, but not least, the lubrication in the U. T. E.-Proctor Automatic Projector is practically automatic. There are provided grease cups for the more important bearings which automatically take care of the lubrication, and the intermittent movement is entirely enclosed in lubricating compound, and where individual bearings require lubrication, copper tubes readily accessible to the projectionist are provided.

"Since the first of the year, orders have been filled for the U. T. E.-Proctor Automatic Projector to be shipped outside of the present U. T. E. territory."

A detailed description of this latest projector will be given in a subsequent issue.

Novel Scheme for Publicity in Choosing Name

Port Huron, Mich., June 13.—Contracts have been let for the construction of a new 2,000 seat theatre to be built here by Herbert L. Weil, who a few months ago sold out his entire interests in the Family, Majestic, Regent and American theatres. Mr. Weil has successfully conducted motion picture theatres in this city for several years and will now give to Port Huron one of the finest theatres in the state of Michigan.

Organization of the new theatre company has been effected, the officers and directors being as follows: President, John W. Fead; vice-president, Burt D. Gady; general manager, Herbert L. Weil; Senator John W. Smith, Charles L. Kendrick, J. P. Gates and James J. Haynes. All of the above gentlemen are prominently and actively identified with the social and business welfare of Port Huron.

The new theatre is being constructed in the heart of Port Huron's business section and is so designed that it will be a monument to the stockholders who are building the same. It will have every modern convenience and it is the aim of the management to provide the maximum of comfort for his patrons. This will embrace a modern system of ventilating and the most comfortable seats obtainable. In fact, nothing will be left undone to make the theatre one of the most artistic in the Thumb of Michigan and it will have a stage which will be adequate to house the biggest of road attractions.

Before entering the theatre "game," Herb Weil served many years in the newspaper business in Michigan, during which time he filled every capacity, from "devil" to managing editor. He claims that his newspaper training has been his greatest asset in the correct management of his theatres and regards newspaper work as vital to the successful operation of playhouse, an "Affinity" so to speak.

A rather novel plan has been determined upon to choose a name for the new theatre, in that it will be selected by the public which will patronize it. A contest is now being conducted in the daily newspapers and cash prizes are being offered for the best suggestion made. In this manner, Mr. Weil is capitalizing upon the name to secure publicity in the Yokom Building, this city, and will remain on the ground until his new theatre is in operation which, if the elements so decree, will be somewhere around Thanksgiving.

Form New Corporation

Thompson, Merrill & Neeb announce the completion of the formation of a corporation, who will have offices and factories at 75 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minn. The purpose of the corporation, as announced, will be to manufacture the Neebpura Automatic Hygienic Deodorant System, the first types of which have appeared on the market exclusively for the use of theatres where installed to fumigate, cleanse or sterilize as well as perfume the air, and is operated independent or in connection with ventilating systems, the most recent notable installation being in the Tivoli theatre, Chicago. Messrs. Finkelstein & Ruben, owners of one of the largest theatre circuits west of Chicago, have already signed contracts for the installation of spray systems in their theatres.

Exhibitors and those interested in the motion picture business will be interested in the personnel of the new corporation, consisting of what might be termed almost exclusively men formerly interested in the theatrical interests.

S. R. Thompson, President and General Manager, a pioneer in the motion picture industry, dates his activities in the game back to the early days when the Twin Cities had but one motion picture theatre.

Dr. Arthur B. Neeb, Vice-President, will devote his time to the manufacturing and research departments of this corporation as Superintendent of Manufacture and Director of Research, for which capacity he is well qualified by his past experiences.

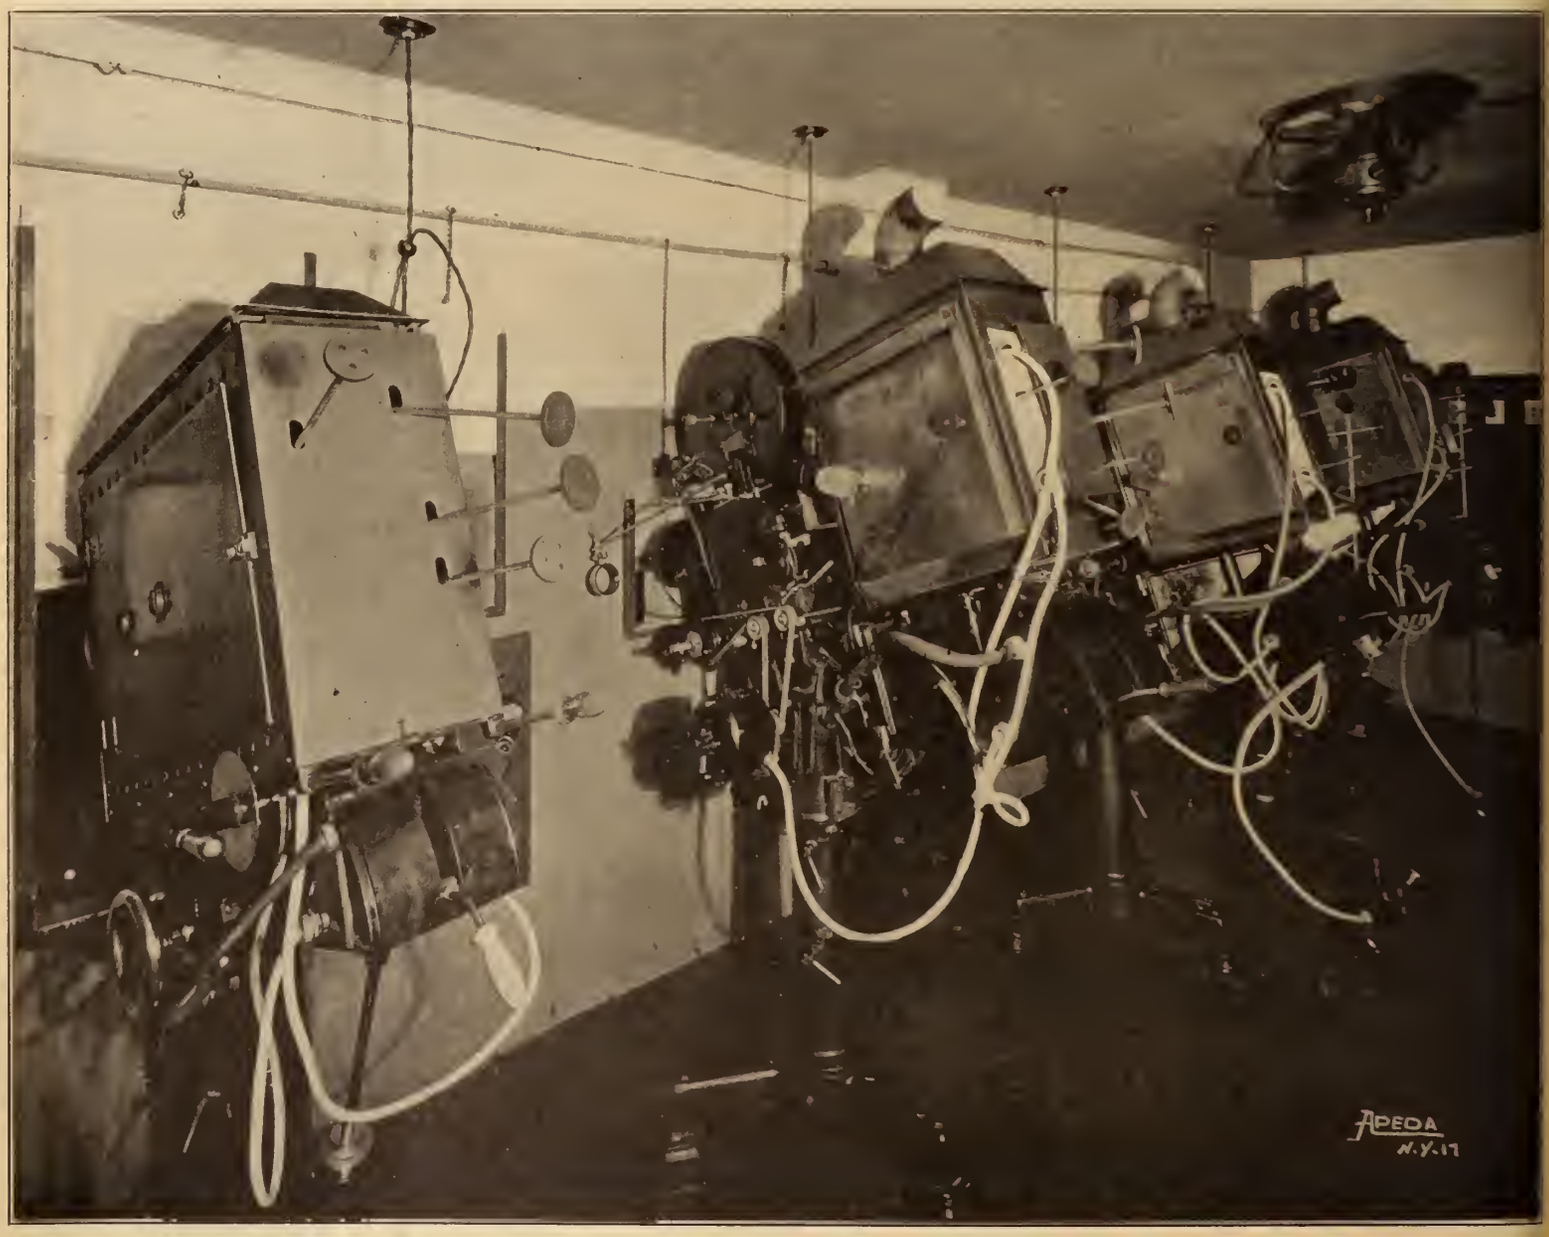
Equipment Operating — Projection — Questions Answered

B. F. Keith's Fordham Theatre Opens with $12,150 Projection Room

Model for Vaudeville House Picture Equipment



THERE was a time, not so long ago, when if one chanced to attend a vaudeville performance, as a means of spending a pleasant evening, that the motion pictures shown in the theatre, were employed as "fillers in" or still worse, as "chasers" to make room for many impatient patrons clamoring for admission at the box office.

This condition did not only prevail during the infancy of motion pictures, when productions were crude and uninteresting, but they actually continued almost up to the present day.

The motion picture in the vaudeville house was unfortunately considered second-rate entertainment, and was forced to remain in an inconspicuous position on the program.

But now, there comes a marked change in the policy of the leading vaudeville theatres and the motion pictures are allowed to play a conspicuous part in the performance. In fact, they are in many cases, made the leading attractions, and command choice positions.

In keeping with this new policy, the vaudeville houses throughout the country are gradually realizing the necessity of acquiring efficient projection equipment with which to present their feature pictures. The ever increasing quality of the present day productions demand that they be properly projected, if they are to be presented effectively, and the new B. F. Keith Fordham Theatre, which opened its doors to the public in New York, last April 14th, is a splendid example of the present nation-wide campaign to improve the quality of projection in vaudeville theatres.

The New Fordham is primarily a vaudeville theatre, but nevertheless, it has reason to boast of its $12,150 Simplex equipped projection room. The theatre itself is one of the most beautiful of the entire Keith circuit, representing the latest and highest improvements and innovations in modern theatre building.

Its projection room is decidedly unique and interesting and was designed and equipped by B. F. Porter, the Greater New York Distributor of the Simplex Projector. It is divided into three rooms, one of which houses the rheostats, the next the main projection room, and the third, the rewind room. The walls are painted gray, while the ceiling is white and the floors are a battleship gray. This makes an ideal combination, keeping, as it does, the reflective properties of the walls, ceiling and floors at a sufficient minimum so as not to dazzle the eyes of the projectionist, and thus hinder him from properly viewing his screen, but still providing ample light in the projection room itself.

Leading up to the booth is a special passageway with actual stairs, instead of the usual iron ladder.

In each of the three rooms is installed a large exhaust fan, assuring the projectionists of continual, efficient ventilation.

Three of the latest Simplex, Type "S" motor-driven projectors with special carbon jaws, arc periscopes, enabling the projectionist to throw a perfect image of the arc on the ceiling, walls, floors or any other desired point, and special pedestal adjustment screws, special half-size lenses and arc controls are part of the equipment. A special Simplex spot light and a Kliegl spot light are also important projection room accessories here.

Five Robin-controlled panels, with three Robin speed indicators attached to each of the projectors, enable the management of the house to perfectly synchronize the picture with the orchestra and organ.

In the rheostat room are five multiple-unit rheostats equipped with a remote control system, while a special dead-face switchboard designed by J. E. Robin, with a plugging system which makes it possible to throw over to any rheostat in case of an emergency by merely plugging in another cut-out, are other features of the projection room. By means of a six station Robin's single telegraph system, the projectionist is instantly acquainted with any message which the house or stage managers might have occasion to send, and he is not compelled to leave the side of the machine to answer a 'phone, as a glance at the dial on the face of the Robin instrument tells instantly and exactly just what is wanted from headquarters.

Two special Martin motor generators, each with a capacity of 225 amperes, furnish the current supply of the booth, and are so arranged that they can be alternated and used separately, or, if desired, used together.

Two main feed lines run into the theatre from the street. These two lines are fed from two separate services, and in this way a temporary disablement of either service will not necessitate the shutting down of the motion picture part of the performances.

The screens used in the Fordham are two special white International screens, one setting in No. 1, and the other in No. 3 positions respectively on the stage. Each screen has a special set designed for it, and the throw from the projection booth is 135 feet and 138 feet respectively. The angle of projection is 21.32 degrees, 19.36 degrees respectively.

There are no conduits or wires exposed in the booth, and it can be safely said that with the equipment as described, the Fordham booth can well take its place as the leader in vaudeville house projection equipment.

Going Strong

The Cincinnati Branch of United Theatre Equipment Corporation has completed the equipment of a first class modern motion picture theatre for Mr. M. D. Pettibone in Ludlow, Kentucky. The equipment covered everything, including the seats, projectors, and Hallberg motor generator, arc controller, and speed indicator.

Another installation also made through this United Theatre Equipment Corporation, Cincinnati branch, is one for a new and magnificent theatre in Aurora, Ind., owned by Dr. Charles Mablin. Mr. Mablin's motion picture theatre is one of the finest in Indiana. It is completely equipped with the latest model projectors, Hallberg motor generator, as well as comfortable chairs, and the decorations are tasteful and beautiful. This theatre was designed and constructed with a view to giving the patrons every comfort which money could obtain, and the ladies' lounging room off the lobby is one of the much appreciated features of this theatre.

It is interesting to note how the smaller theatres are taking advantage of the modern devices which can now be obtained to improve the projection, and to increase the comfort of the patrons.

Open New Texas Theatre

Manager John C. Lamenettin opened his new Queen theatre at Breckenridge, Texas last week to pleased capacity business—The Capital is housed in a two-story white structure, especially designed to give the patrons of Breckendridge a luxurious place of amusement.

The seating capacity is 527, including the balcony. A modern stage is a feature and road shows will be one of the occasional attractions. But the principal attractions will be high-class feature films.

The operating booth is equipped with a Motiograph, connecting the projector with a Gardiner screen.

An Explanation of the Principle of the One and a Half to One Shutter

Well Known Projector Designer and Manufacturer Makes It Clear

By ROBERT J. EMORY, President, Baird Motion Picture Machine Co., Newark, N. J.

The 1½ to 1 shutter is so called because it makes one and one-half revolutions of the shutter to each picture as compared to one revolution of the shutter to each picture. When the 1½ to 1 principle is employed a two blade shutter is used, the blades being of equal width. This gives the effect on the screen of a three blade shutter (1½ x 2 = 3), which means that for each picture the light ray is cut three times by equal blades which running at this increased speed, of course, entirely eliminates all flicker though the picture is being run at normal speed.

This principle can be very easily demonstrated by revolving any wheel with spokes in it; turn it slowly and the object on the other side of it will be blurred because the eye retains the vision of the spokes; turn it sufficiently fast and the object is clear, the wheel is being revolved faster than the eye can make a picture of the spokes. The same effect takes place on the screen by running the shutter faster than the eye can retain it, yet run the picture at normal speed.

When using the 1½ to 1 shutter it is customary to have a much faster intermittent movement than is employed in the one to one shutter. By this I mean the proportion between star and cam is such as to move the picture in a very short space of time, thereby giving a longer time of rest for each picture on the screen which is coming nearer to the ideal condition.

There is an optical effect produced on the screen not usually taken into consideration when discussing mathematically the relative merits of the 1½ to 1 movement, and that is by entirely eliminating flicker a clearer picture with more depth and better definition is produced because the veil caused by a slight flicker has been removed. While this slight flicker might not be noticed as a flicker while the picture is on the screen, especially if the picture is of dark or interior scenery, it can plainly be seen if the projecting machine be run and the light projected on a clear screen.

Owing to the fact that a more rapid intermittent movement is used in connection with the 1½ to 1 shutter, about the same amount of light mathematically reaches the screen as with the one to one shutter, depending of course upon what shutter is used on the one to one, but optically the same amount of light produces a brighter screen because the flicker veil has been removed.

Lighting on Outside Locations a Most Important Factor

Louis B. Mayer Productions Have Two Portable Outfits

Lighting on outside locations is one of the most important factors in good photography and in the recent overhauling of the Louis B. headlines. "No expense is entailed by clubs entering the contest and the only requirement is that the programs be submitted to the theatre management at least two weeks before the Sunday on which they will be played.

"The Liberty theatre has devised this method of determining just what type of music the city of Portland actually wants. It also hopes that through interest in the contest Portlanders will become better acquainted with the skill and musical genius of Henri Keates, Liberty master organist."

Such was the information disseminated to the 285,000 inhabitants of the city—by means of newspaper space that comes without charge and cannot be purchased. The information went out in the form of news stories and was accompanied by cuts of the $500 check, of the Liberty organ and of Mr. Keates and the organist. For by inviting every civic organization of Portland the contest had become a civic proposition and was entitled to news space.

Twenty civic organizations have entered the Liberty theatre contest, many of them in quest of the $500, and many of them from the purely altruistic reason of which to demonstrate that Portland's musical taste is more classical or more jazzy than theatre men believe. The names of the contestants demonsrate the extent of the undertaking: Press Club, Women's Ad Club, Oregon Civic League, Portland Police Beneficiary Society, Portland Drama League, American Legion, Elks, Canadian Veterans' Association Disabled Veterans, Society of Oregon Composers, Musicians Club, Spanish War Veterans and Community Service.

Membership of these organizations aggregate approximately 10,000 men and women. They represent the best class of people usually seen in the first class motion picture houses. Each of these 10,000 has an active interest in at least one Sunday concert when their organization is sponsoring a program. Each person will tell and bring his friends to that concert. Therefore each person becomes an advertising medium for the Liberty concerts and for Mr. Keates, Liberty master organist. Publicity in news columns is continuing throughout the entire contest, which will not end until July, because each organization has the same right as others to make demands on city editors. Committees from the organizations are handling their own publicity, so that theatre press agents are not wearing out their welcome in getting write-ups. Last, but not least, Mr. Keates is getting acquainted with the musical tastes of this particular community, is "becoming acquainted with the skill and musical genius of Mr. Keates, the Liberty master organist."

The $500 music contest is bringing to attention unusual talent which it would have been difficult for the theatre to discover by other methods. When the Women's Ad Club took over the program they put on their own octette, a chorus of women's trained voices. So fine was the octette that the theatre employed them as an extra feature for the entire week.

When the Community Service took over the program they chose May 8, Mothers' Day. Whistler's famous painting, "My Mother," was reproduced in tableau form during the singing of Kipling's "Mother o' Mine," by George Hotchkiss Street, a local baritone whose services could not have been purchased at any price by the theatre management. The fact that Mr. Street was to sing for the Community Service attracted in itself great attention. Community Service girls spent the week preceding Mothers' Day in making red carnations. The regular Liberty Sunday ads then carried the assertion that to every person bringing to the concert either their own or some one else's mother, a carnation would be presented. Aged women in charitable institutions of the city were invited as special guests by Community Service girls and brought to the theatre to substitute for their mothers, many of whom were dead and many of whom were not able to attend. A huge bunch of carnations was presented by the Community Service to the oldest mother present.

This cooperation of the Community Service is typical of the attitude being taken by each entrant into the contest. The contest represents an opportunity for each club to give self expression and to obtain advertising for itself at minimum effort and practically no expense. The only paid advertising done by the theatre is that the Sunday ads in printing the noon concert programs tell by which organization the musical selections were made.—LIBERTY THEATRE, PORTLAND, ORE.

New Film Music

A new set of concert orchestral compositions by J. S. Zamecnik is in preparation. Zamecnik's concert numbers show him at his best in the realm of pure musical composition. In his Loose Leaf Collection of Photoplay Music, his talent for the dramatic is given a free rein. These agitatos, furiosos, dramatic tensions and hurries are all veritable musical compositions, not fragments pieced together. As a composer of music for the better class of films, Mr. J. S. Zamecnik stands high. In addition to the large number of compositions issued under his own name there are many others under a half dozen or more noms de plume. But with Zamecnik instead of "a place for everything and everything in its place," it is "a time for everything and everything in its time." Wherever you may wander the tuneful melody of this composer greets your ear.

Mr. Zamecnik is a native of Ohio. He received his musical education in this State and under Anton Dvorak at the Prague Conservatory in Czecho-Slovakia. He was a member of the Pittsburgh Symphony orchestra under Victor Herbert. He later became a theatre orchestra leader. In the latter capacity he soon learned to apply his thorough knowledge of music to the needs of the dramatic stage.

In the orchestral field and within the limits which he has set for himself, Zamecnik is a master. His music is never too difficult nor too easy. It contains an immense wealth of tone color, from the most delicate blending of reed, flute and string to the nobility of the full power of the orchestra. A Zamecnik orchestration is built up, so to speak. In small combinations there is no suspicion of missing parts. With each additional instrument there is a perceptible increase in the richness of counter-melody and obligato. The music for each instrument is always suited to the character of that instrument. There is a virile individuality stamped on all his work.

Mr. Zamecnik's publishers are the Sam Fox Publishing Company of New York and Cleveland.

Matilda Locus to Play at the Capitol

The real artists of national reputation continue to follow the early predictions made concerning their ultimate appearance in the picture theatres. First came Percy Grainger, then Sascha Jacobsen, and after several others, announcement is made of the appearance of little Mathilde Locus, the thirteen year old pianist who was the sensation of the year as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra.

Lighting On Location

question of lighting has harred the use of many of these locations, hut with the portahle set as now availahle for the companies working in the Mayer studio, they can he utilized to the full.

The portahle generator set is huilt on a trailer. It has mounted on it a 30 k. w. four pole 110 volt compound wound Westinghouse generator with a normal rating of 300 amps., but which will do 100 per cent overload or 600 amps. fine. It is direct connected very short coupled int oa two hearing set with a 60 h. p. three-phase 220 volt 60 cycle motor. Between the motor generator is a pulley to which can he belted a 5 h. p. single phase 220 volt motor.

With the combinations of connections availahle it is possible to operate on single phase 220 volt, single phase 2200 volt, three-phase 220 volt, or three-phase 2200 volt line. In case the machine goes down or in cose of accident there are two 30 k. w. and one 37½ k. w. transformers. The high side (2200 volt) and low side of the transformers lead into transposition boxes wherein any desired hook-up may he obtained without soldering or tapeing.

This arrangement also makes it possible to use A. C. or D. C. equipment on locations. It also gives the advantage of starring the high side and deltaing the low side of our transformers when on the end of long lines with low voltage. Or it is possible to kick out one transformer for lighting or other effects without interferring with the D. C. capacity.

On single phase lines the small 5 h. p. motor is belted up to bring the larger set up to the necessary speed where it will operate on one phase with the small motor to compensate for slip.

The tower folds down across the top, protruding only five inches ahove the side guards. When raised it clears the wires 24 feet 6 inches from the ground. The cross arm is on a king holt, and will turn to face the pole at any angle it might he setting. The total weight of the power wagon when ready for location work is eight tons.

The Complete Plan Book

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

"Three Good Pals"

(Wm. Fox Sunshine Comedy—Two Reels)

THIS opens with a view of a three-story frame house. The door opens and out tumbles—a duck. At first the impression is that the duck is of mammoth size, for there is no background with which to form a perspective. But when the ducks—there are three of them—begin to waddle about, the spectator realizes that they are real and that the house is in miniature. The ducks last about half-a-reel. It appears that all three have been drinking too heavily. Now a duck naturally waddles somewhat like a drunken man, and as they amble along a miniature fence to a miniature home, opening their mouths (in the picture) to call each other (in the titles) "Al" and "George," it is novel and good comedy. "George" goes home. There is another duck in a miniature bed with a miniature rolling pin at her side. A number of little ducks are in a miniature cradle. The fight is shown by silhouettes. "George" comes out on his ear. "Oh, Al!" he cries, "she let me out."

This novelty naturally cannot last long. A cute youngster is introduced, and the latter part of the picture is acted entirely by children. A monkey and the duck (who is still searching for "Al") help out. There are appealing types among the children, but because of their crude acting they cannot register good comedy. The picture ends with a dog race, a youngster riding each dog. This is well made and mildly exciting.

This comedy is well worth booking for the novel duck sequence. Ducks are really more funny than one would think, especially when the sub-titles can make them talk like drunks.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"The Runaway Train"

(One Reel Novelty from the Famous Howe Program. Released by Educational)

LYMAN H. LOWE'S famous film novelty "The Runaway Train" a picture that became as well known over the circuit of the Howe shows as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and which has recently played a return engagement at the New York Capitol theatre, is now to be released to the picture houses, where no doubt it will prove the same sensation that it always has been where ever shown.

The reel is a rare combination of a thriller and a comedy. It gets its thrills from the fact that the spectator in viewing the picture virtually takes a ride on a fast moving train that plunges down steep grades and swings around short curves in a most realistic way. The comedy element is injected by clever although simple camera work in which the tipping of the machine while the operator was grinding produces topsy-turvey results.

The fact that the Howe companies played the number over and over again on each year's bill and that it proved the greatest drawing card on a show that was in a class by itself is sufficient proof of its audience appeal. As a short subject it is sure fire whether or not the audience has ever seen it previously.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"Man vs. Woman"

(Christie Comedy — Educational — Two Reels)

THIS Christie is based upon the tried and true cave-man formula with Neal Burns as the sponsor of the ancient tactics and Dorothy Devore as the woman lugged home by the hair. There is a week-end party and Neal is represented as unduly timid. His girl friends tell him that he is pursuing the wrong policy—that he might better adopt the ancient and ultra modern idea of "get 'em young, treat 'em rough and tell 'em nothing." So he bedecks himself in whiskers, etc. A wedding ceremony is at hand and he is kidnaped at the last minute by some well meaning friends. They put him into a convict's suit and in making his escape he runs into a party of real prison pals. The mistaken identity angle, coupled with the grand chase enliven what is otherwise a rather dull picture.—LAURENCE REID.

"Edgar the Detective"

("Edgar" Comedy-Tarkington-Goldwyn —Two Reels)

THE spark of humor is not so vital in this Edgar comedy featuring Johnny Jones. While Booth Tarkington has kept his boyish figures in character, the substance of the plot is mostly devoid of incident. The comedy takes a long time arriving anywhere and the spectator may be excused in finding the high lights in the atmosphere. A rural home and farm detail invite the most attention. The Jones youngster and his pal are vacationing in the country and become amateur detectives. They follow a stoic Swede about—a farm-hand incidentally, mistrusting that he is up to murder. But he is only an innocent would-be benedict. A few points are put over, but for the most part the effort is exceedingly mild.—LAURENCE REID.

"Take Your Time"

(Vanity Comedy-Educational)

In the absence of a good story the actors in this comedy resort to the oldtime habit of emphasizing the action. The result shows the usual rushing and tearing about, with no let-up until the reel is finished.

The idea of putting plenty of "pep" into a farce comedy is all right, but "pep" alone is not the only angle in developing a farce. And so it is that "Take Your Time" loses many of its points for the reason that the tempo seldom varies.

Earle Rodney, who plays the leading male role, is a very capable player in his line of work, but he is given at times to stressing his points to such a degree that they are entirely lost in the scrimmage. And the same faults apply to Irene Dalton, the feminine lead. However, this may be the result of bad direction.

The story tells the tale of a young married couple who are about to leave on a trip, but so great is their hurry to be on time that things become confused to the extent that their baby is left behind.

After many trips from the dock to the house, in which everything and everybody becomes jumbled and the story runs wild, the baby is recovered and the trip about to commence, when the excited couple learn that the boat does not sail for a few days.—FRANK LEONARD.

"She Sighed by the Seaside"

(Two-Reel Mack Sennett Comedy Released by Associated Producers)

THIS slapstick with most of the well-known Sennett crowd having parts but starring Ben Turpin is an ingenious and interesting concoction of bathing beach stunts, none particularly new but all given enough of a new twist to make a very commendable short reel offering, suitable for almost any house.

There is less vulgarity and more real comedy in this than some of the recent Sennett productions. In fact it will be a fastidious audience that doesn't find amusement in the antics of the handsome B. T. and his supporting cast. Like most slapstick pictures the story is noticeable by its absence.—J. S. DICKERSON.

"Officer Cupid"

(Two-Reel Mack Sennett Comedy, With Joe Moore—Released by Famous Players-Lasky)

"OFFICER CUPID" doesn't earn many laughs. In fact when we saw it there wasn't a gigggle from one of some five thousand people, which is an indication that as a comedy something is wrong. The trouble seems to be that it is neither slap sticks or refined comedy. A usual "trying to marry the girl" story is told, but there are no complications in the plot development and no "hokum" gags of any originality.

Joe Moore is a policeman with a horse that does a few tricks. He hires a friend to play burglar so he can be a hero but a real burglar shows up. The picture ends abruptly with no point being registered worth calling a climax. —J. S. DICKERSON.

"TOO MUCH SPEED"
(Paramount)

Wallace Reid Has Another Entertaining Auto Story Here

WALLACE REID'S racing stories are coming out on schedule. "Two Much Speed" is based upon the same formula as "The Roaring Road," "Excuse My Dust," and "What's Your Hurry?" since all of them have been written by the same author, Byron Morgan. The spectator who has paid attention to these plots and characters will remember that they are all alike. One sees the youthful racing driver, who nonchalantly takes to the road or romance; the stern magnate who is either the employer of the aforementioned young scapegrace or the manufacturer of a rival car, and his daughter who is entered in the matrimonial stakes.

There is only a slight variation to this pattern here. Every scene is worked out accordingly, although it must be said that the director has provided some rattling good incident, which furnishes thrills and laughter—the thrills being taken care of by the star and the humor by the incomparable Theodore Roberts. This actor is an excellent foil. He knows just when to score his points and when to use repression. There is no better character player on screen and stage. The picture is always interesting because there is something doing most every minute. One anticipates a rich climax and it arrives bringing with it a fine flavor of suspense.

The racing youth promised to give up the road and the wheel because it brought consent from the magnate to marry his daughter. But the girl puts one over on her father by buying his racing car and placing the hero in the race. The old man attends and wishes that he had an entry, partly because of his sporting blood which continues to pulsate, and partly to win the account of a rich buyer. He is surprised to find Wally at the wheel—surprised, angry and happy by turn. But when the hero forges to the front in a thrilling race and gives up his seat to his mechanician so that the latter may square accounts for being unfairly beaten in a previous race, the act is so magnaminous that the magnate is charitable in his attitude. The far-famed hero willingly gives up more notoriety and success to help his friend. And when he returns to the grandstand he puts over the deal with the South American buyer.

THE CAST

Dusty Rhoades	Wallace Reid
Virginia MacMurran	Agnes Ayres
Pat MacMurran	Theodore Roberts
Tyler Hellis	Jack Richardson
Jimmy Rodman	Lucien Littlefield
"Howdy" Zeeker	Guy Oliver
Billy Dawson	Henry Johnson
Hawks	Jack Herbert

By Byron Morgan.
Directed by Frank Urson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The popular Paramount star, Wallace Reid, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Two Much Speed," from the pen of Byron Morgan, whose previous stories of automobiles and race-tracks were made into clever attractions by the star. The dashing Reid has the role of a speed demon, full of pep and as nervy as they make 'em. He is seen as Dusty Rhoades, a racing driver who gives up the game to win old Pat MacMurran's consent to marry his daughter, Virginia.

Father and prospective son-in-law quarrel, however, and Dusty determines to enter the forthcoming race. He secretly buys one of Pat's racing cars, which has been idle for two years, and enters the race, to the amazement of the father, who is powerless to prevent him. Dusty wins the race and wins a big contract for old Pat, as well as a bride. The picture is crammed with adventure and thrills and is charmingly told. In the cast are the beautiful Agnes Ayres and the capable Theodore Roberts, who again gives one of his clever portrayals.

PROGRAM READER

"Too Much Speed" is coming. One of the cleverest pictures of the season. Wallace Reid is the star of this offering—which is a fitting sequel to "What's Your Hurry?" and "Excuse My Dust," and "The Roaring Road," all written by the same author. It is a thrilling photoplay—a photoplay which carries a generous assortment of amusing moments as well—moments well taken care of by the incomparable Theodore Roberts. It is a story which will rouse the enthusiasm of every auto devotee and every one who loves excitement. Agnes Ayres is the leading woman. Come to the ———— theatre next ———— and see the popular Wallace Reid in "Too Much Speed." A picture with a punch.

SUGGESTIONS

Tell them that this is a fitting sequel to "Excuse My Dust," "The Roaring Road," and "What's Your Hurry?" Tell them that the picture is written by Byron Morgan, the same author responsible for the others mentioned above. Tell them that the picture is an auto story—a racing story—a story of romance and adventure. Tell them that it is crammed with thrills and adventure and excitement. Play up Reid and tell that he is one of the most popular actors on the screen. Link up with garages and auto shops. If you can get hold of some good short subjects featuring auto races it would help out your program. Advertise the picture as a sensation. Play it up big.

CATCH LINES

He entered the race against the old man's wishes. And won. Did he win the girl? See Wallace Reid in "Too Much Speed."

See "Too Much Speed," a picture starring Wallace Reid. A popular star, a racing story. Let's go.

"A VOICE IN THE DARK"
(Goldwyn)

This Is Not Good Screen Material

THE very title of this picture emphasizes its shortcomings as a medium for the screen. Adapted from a fairly successful play which held the audience tightly in its grasp because of strictly stage "business," the fact that the human voice is missing brings out its failure to get over the action and suspense. The two principal characters in this unique mystery melodrama are a blind old man and a deaf old woman whose testimony at the investigation of the crime bring light out of darkness. Upon a darkened stage with the voices penetrating the auditorium the effect may well be imagined. Upon the screen this must necessarily be told through the captions. Consequently the punch is missing.

It was a play which depended entirely upon tricks of voice and gesture. Imagine the absence of these in the adaptation. And while the climax came in the original at the finish it is exposed in the silent version long before the conclusion is reached. The deaf woman testified what she had seen; the blind man what he had heard and the investigation reached the height of suspense. Upon the screen this scene loses its force entirely. Yet there are millions who never saw the stage version and they will probably find moments of interest in the photoplay. Certainly it has the element of novelty in its characterization, although its general outline of plot is more or less familiar.

When the deaf woman's sharp voice is silenced and the blind man is unable to tell what he overheard the shortcomings may well be appreciated. Captions are woefully inadequate to do justice to it. A doctor connected with a sanatorium is murdered by a discarded sweetheart. Guilt seems to rest upon the sister of the victim's latest fiancee. The deaf woman tells what she has seen which substantiates the evidence against the suspected woman. But the blind man furnishes testimony which lifts the suspicion and places it upon the guilty parties.

The picture furnishes proof that every stage success is not adaptable for the screen. The players fit their parts adequately although they are limited in expression. Too much of the action is detailed through the subtitles—a course which is fatal for mystery melodrama. There are some good individual scenes which the director has put over in a capable manner. But he fails to show the inspiration characteristic of him because there is nothing to make it a moving drama. The cast includes Irene Rich, Alec Francis, Alan Hale, Ora Carew, Alice Hollister, Gertrude Norman and others.—Length, 5 Reels.—Laurence Reid.

By Ralph E. Dyar.
Directed by Frank Lloyd.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A unique mystery melodrama is "A Voice in the Dark," which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— as the chief attraction. This is a Goldwyn production, adapted from the successful Broadway play which mystified theatregoers a season ago. It comes to the screen sponsored by Frank Lloyd with a cast that includes Ramsey Wallace, Irene Rich, Alec Francis, Ora Carew, William Scott, Alice Hollister, James Neill and others equally prominent.

The play has to do with the murder of a young doctor associated with a sanatorium. There are two witnesses to the crime—one a deaf woman who sees the parties in an argument, with the subsequent fall of the victim—the other, a blind man who overheard the evidence when those connected with the crime were stationed beneath his window. It is his accusations which clear up the mystery. His keen sense of hearing enables him to identify the real criminal. The picture is charged with clever action and suspense and is balanced with an appealing romance. It is also well acted and directed.

PROGRAM READER

There were two patients in the sanatorium—one, a woman who could see, but was unable to hear—the other, a man who could hear, but whose sight was destroyed. A crime was committed. The woman saw evidences of the struggle, but she failed to catch the angry words or hear the report of the gun. The man did not see the crime, but he overheard conversation which eventually brought the criminal to justice. Upon this premise is founded a clever mystery photoplay—something original and unique. The title of this picture is "A Voice in the Dark," and it comes to the ———— theatre next ———— as a Goldwyn-Frank Lloyd production with an eminent cast. The picture is rich in its suspense and startling situations. Don't miss it.

SUGGESTIONS

This being an adaptation of a successful Broadway play, it would be a good angle to exploit it along this plan. Make out that the picture carries the same quota of action and suspense that the original play afforded. Bring forth that as a play it held New York in its grasp for a whole season. Bring out that it is away from the beaten track. You might state that two witnesses are involved with the murder—one a deaf woman, the other a man who is blind. This is unusual. Play up its mystery element. Don't give it away. The title is a good one and should come in for some exploitation. Mention the players. from the successful play. At the ———— theatre next ————

"THE FIGHTING LOVER"
(Universal)

Frank Mayo Stars in Fair Mystery Picture

UNIVERSAL has taken Frank Mayo away from the frozen North and has placed him in a society setting. The star, who is an able exponent of the big outdoors, puts aside his leggings, boots, woolens and furs, and adorns himself with evening clothes and summer lightweights so that he may give expression to one of Ben Ames Williams' mystery stories. The picture is rather confusing in its development, the continuity of scenes being arranged in a more or less haphazard manner. The introductory sequences are based upon a romantic element which has to do with a wager that a certain young man will fall in love with one of three girls in a stipulated time. The house party is arranged, the girls are chosen from an enthusiastic crowd, and the stage is set for the climax.

At this point the love interest becomes secondary to the mystery element which concerns a murder and the theft of a huge diamond. It is the purpose of the director to keep the spectator guessing by suspecting first one girl, then the other, with the butler and other guests coming in for a little suspicion. A guest has followed the heroine out of doors and when he returns is murdered by a gang of thieves. There is a mysterious line of action which presents various servants and guests walking in and out of doors and up and down a staircase. Meanwhile the favored girl seems to fall under the suspicion of the man who loves her at every occasion, though he is firm in his belief that she is innocent.

The picture develops this contrary angle for two reels and loses some of its sting because there is nothing substantial offered after the crime. The thieves come back for some unexplained purpose and the ultimate climax presents a fight between them and the hero—which indicates the title. A Mayo picture would be incomplete without a battle royal. The action does not strain credulity in a majority of scenes. When it comes out in the open one can appreciate, however, that the mystery has been provided by the employment of unexplained pedestrianism—a sure-fire trick and always effective. The heroine chases the shadows hovering over her, the real accomplice is caught and the romantic interest is renewed for the final clutch. The butler tells the story and uncovers some of the mysterious scenes, but there is much that is left to the imagination. The offering is fair entertainment—of the average program variety. Mayo lends vigor to the role and his support includes the pretty Jacqueline Logan, who has, in this case, overcome an eagerness to emote like a tragedienne.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A society melodrama with the mystery element dominant—a mystery balanced with a satirical vein of romance—that is "The Fighting Lover," adapted to the screen from Ben Ames Williams' story. The picture appears at the ———— theatre the latter half of ———— week with Frank Mayo as the star. Patrons are certain of good entertainment here, not only because the star provides a full hour of interesting incident, but because the author has concocted a story which is filled with happy surprises and clever twists.

The tale deals with a wager entered into by two young men, one of whom is to furnish three girls, the other to fall in love with one of them within thirty days or forfeit the bet. The girls are advertised for but the hero falls in love with the most charming of the group. The party journeys for a week-end at the hero's estate at which place one of the guests is mysteriously murdered, while a valuable diamond is stolen. Suspicion falls upon the girls and the servants. The mystery is cleared up in a most surprising fashion.

PROGRAM READER

He placed a wager with his friend that the latter would fall in love with one of three girls chosen or forfeit the bet. The girls were assembled, but he found himself falling in love with the most charming member of the group. This gave his friend only two to select from. They all journeyed up to a country home for a week-end party. And much mystery developed. A murder followed. Also the theft of a valuable diamond. Was the pretty heroine guilty? Was one of the girls an accomplice to the crime? What of the servants? Did the hero lose faith in the girls? See "The Fighting Lover" and enjoy one of the best romances—one of the finest mystery pictures of the season. Frank Mayo is the star. Enough said. Watch for the date.

SUGGESTIONS

This picture Frank Mayo has gotten away from the frozen North and you might start off by telling that he is placed in a modern society setting here—though he is, himself, in all his vigorousness. Bring out the value of the author's name—an author who has contributed a score of clever stories to the screen. Play up the cast which includes Jacqueline Logan, one of the newcomers to the screen and a very talented and charming girl. Bill the picture as a mystery romance which carries a full line of teeming action and clever suspense. Play it up in teaser questions asking your patrons if they can solve the mystery through the pointers which you give them.

"HOME STUFF"
(Metro)

Even Hokum Cannot Make This a Good One

IT is a cause for wonderment how this story ever appealed to its sponsors, considering its spineless plot, its antiquated hokum, its array of colorless characters and the lack of any shading or variety in its scenes. Perhaps it was chosen to permit Viola Dana to flash some versatility, since she has interpreted most every imaginable heroine except the tank-town trouper who gives up the footlights for the farm. At best it only carries merit as a two-reel slapstick, and it should have been treated as such.

The director, realizing its frothiness, has applied the hokum paintbrush early in the action. He opens with a burlesque scene of a small troupe trying to put over "Way Down East" before some country yokels. He burlesques it so much that the spectator is forced to accept it lightly throughout. The stage properties cannot behave, the confetti snow is tossed about in foolish fashion, and when the ghost fails to walk the star of the troupe calmly retires from the stage scene. Her place is taken by a stage-struck girl, who turns out to be the very daughter of the stern farmer who gave shelter to the queen of the "mellers." The latter takes to the road, climbs aboard a hay-wagon, heavily loaded with the alfalfa, surprises the youthful driver, causing his team to run away, and is taken into the home as a forlorn waif. There she is content and happy—what with the chores to do and helping the hands about the farm—and making love to the boy.

The picture sags throughout its footage, especially during the middle. Rural hokum is supplied, but this fails to get over because it has been done so much better in regulation two-reel comedies. When the feature is nearly over, the runaway daughter returns home repentant and finds forgiveness. No more trouping for her. Of course the real actress's identity is established. She has effected a reconciliation between the hard-hearted farmer and his erring daughter by threatening to elope with the son. So she leaves and becomes a Broadway sensation, though this is never explained and must be accepted as arbitrary. The subsequent scene shows her accepting the attentions of the youth who has written a play for her.

The titles are a cross between Broadway patter and rural wheezes. Many are too sophisticated as uttered by the pretty thespian. And it is certain that the yokel would not understand her. The picture is so weak that the actors never have a chance to display any character ability. A faint human note is its one redeeming feature.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— is Viola Dana in her newest picture entitled "Home Stuff," written by Frank Dazey and Agnes Johnston. The star is said to live up to her reputation already earned for brilliant impersonation in her portrayal of Madge Joy, leading lady of a cheap road show. The attraction comes to a standstill in a little town for want of funds. Chance puts in her way both the refuge of a cozy farm, where she comes to live as one of the family, and the love of a young farmer.

Then fate enters by bringing into the peaceful household Madge's past in the form of old stage associates and especially of Susan Deep, a stage-struck girl who had left the very home Madge was adopted into, and later returns penitent. The complications and thrills and humorous scenes are abundant throughout the picture which carries plenty of charm, freshness and appeal. Miss Dana is supported by a competent cast that includes Tom Gallery, Josephine Crowell, Priscilla Bonner and others. Albert J. Kelley directed.

PROGRAM READER

Viola Dana is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— in a delightful play of home life entitled, "Home Stuff." It is the story of what happens to a little actress stranded in an out-of-the-way American village. It is a love story of unusual charm—one possessing a refreshing romance. The actress suddenly decides to let the flashy footlights alone, and turn to the farm. But something turns up to disturb the even tenor of her way. What is it? See the piquant star, Viola Dana, in one of the most appealing pictures of the season. The offering flashes some real humor, some genuine rustic touches and interests throughout its many scenes. In the supporting cast are Tom Gallery and Josephine Crowell.

SUGGESTIONS

The title is a good angle to exploit here, not only through a circular campaign, but in applying it to anything connected with the home. Tie-ups with merchants on household stuff; with real estate men in home-building projects and partial payment schemes for selling houses—these would be effective in putting it over. Of course, play up the star's past pictures and tell them that she has a still different role here—one which flashes a new style of talent. Teaser paragraphs would help a great deal too. The fact that the title features the home can be brought home to your patrons in various ways. Atmosphere for your lobby could be made over after a representation of an old-fashioned home.

CATCH LINES

She was stranded in a little town and turned to the nearest farmhouse for shelter. What happened? See Viola Dana in "Home Stuff."

"LESSONS IN LOVE"
(First National)

Only a Vehicle for the Star

ONCE again Constance Talmadge is presented in an adaptation of a stage play that at best is only a vehicle. It probably will meet with the approval of the star's personal admirers, who are satisfied with anything she does so long as it provides a flapper role, an opportunity for wearing nice clothes and shows her in nine tenths of the scenes looking pert and full of pep, but for the fan who doesn't worship at a stellar shrine and who likes a little action and incident in his photoplay fare, "Lessons in Love" is apt to be called dull and tiresome and possibly silly.

The fault to be found with the production lies entirely in the slender farce comedy story that so far as plot is concerned is just another of those match making concoctions where one of the pair in the proposed hitch-up pretents to be some one else until the other falls in love, and which in development furnishes no pleasing incident as it ambles along to its perfectly obvious finish.

It takes a lot of titles to explain the scenes, and many others are used, probably lines from the play, in an effort to furnish some laughs. Two or three of these score, but most of them fall rather flat.

Along toward the end they pull some half-hearted melodrama in the shape of a rescue of the heroine from a burning building. The supporting cast is good, being fine types and excellent players. The settings are first class, some being lavish and most tasteful. The exteriors were taken in Florida.

George Fawcett and Flora Finch try hard to squeeze some laughs out of their respective roles, but don't have much luck, which is an indication of what kind of material has been provided. Constance is her own animated good looking self. The hero is Kenneth Harlan and James Harrison plays the juvenile role. All the parts are orthodox stage comedy conceptions and no one is provided with any real opportunity for either drama or comedy. The photography is extra good, with very satisfactory camera work and lightings.—Length. 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

Adapted from the stage play "The Man from Toronto." Directed by Chet Withey. Presented by Joseph Schenck.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Everybody's picture favorite Constance Talmadge in her latest starring vehicle "Lessons in Love" will be the feature photoplay attraction at the ———— theatre for a ———— days showing beginning.

Miss Talmadge's latest production is a peppy farce comedy presenting the star in a light and pleasing role that of a flapper who chosses to be woed as a servant girl rather than as the blue blooded member of society, even though short on ready cash and long on mortgages for the family home. In support of the star is a flawless cast of well-known players that includes Flora Finch, George Fawcett, Kenneth Harlan and Jimmy Harrison. The picture was taken in Florida last winter and contains beautiful tropical scenic shots. The feature was directed by Chet Withey and is an adaptation of the stage comedy. "The Man From Toronto." It is screened in five reels.

PROGRAM READER

Pretty Constance Talmadge in her latest vehicle "Lessons in Love" will be the feature at the ———— for a ———days showing beginning ————. "Lessons in Love" is a typical vehicle for "Connie" a light comedy telling the story of a flapper who was wooed as a servant girl, but who had all sorts of trouble keeping her identity concealed until her western lover popped the question. The picture is an adaptation of the Broadway stage play "The Man from Toronto" and provides the star with a role of the sort that picture fans insist she shall have. The production is a First National attraction directed by Chet Withey. It has been lavishly produced with a splendid supporting cast that includes such well-known players as George Fawcett, Flora Finch, Kenneth Harlan and others. The exterior scenes were taken in Florida, showing some exceptional tropical shots.

SUGGESTIONS

The usual method of exploiting a Constance Talmadge picture is to be followed with "Lessons in Love," catchy newspaper ads devoted mostly to the star and the role she plays. It will be well also to give Flora Finch and George Fawcett some of the billing. Both have friends among the fans. Prologues should be musical with Southern melodies in a tropical setting. The New York Mark Strand theatre is using a ladies' quartette. For lobby display link up with the title with apt quotations as the "lessons" in love. Use stills of the star and which give the supporting cast some prominence.

CATCH LINES

Her guardian and the family attorney delivered an ultimatum. They said: "Either you must get a husband or a job." Connie agreed of two evils the husband was the lesser as the two old codgers started out as match makers. They did a bum job of it but finally Connie took matters in her own hands and—well of course the result was a wedding.

What would you do with a girl who when you told her that she had overdrawn at her bank answered that she would get another one?

When you informed her that the poor old estate was mortgaged beyond the hope of another plaster, countered by saying that she hadn't ever mortgaged it? Well that's Connie in this flapper story of two match-makers who didn't know how to match.

"MOTHER O' MINE"
(Thos. H. Ince-Associated Producers)

Sure Fire Audience Appeal in Spite of Formula Plot

FUNDAMENTALLY this is the same old story of the innocent young man convicted of murder and sentenced to die at dawn, with the last minute ride of the heroine to save him; but it has been so well produced and acted with so many unusual twists in plot development that as a whole it is sure fire audience stuff that ought to go over in any type of house. The last reel or so is undiluted melodrama building to a smashing climax that merits praise for director, scenarioist and camera man. Few pictures have been able to show as much action and gripping screen drama for a finish, and certainly no one has been able to deliver more from time worn materials than has Director Fred Niblo and continuity writer C. Gardner Sullivan. The picture is a fine example of what can be done with an ordinary story.

An exceptional cast has been secured for each principal part and no player has failed unless it be Lloyd Hughes, who plays the leading male role. Joseph Kilgour, Betty Blythe and Betty Ross Clark are especially deserving of praise.

The general production is exceptional even for an Ince picture. Some of the best "girl show" scenes ever staged are contained in the early reels and the whole production is lavish and correct in every detail.

As for the plot, it might be labeled unreal and theatrical, for it does stretch probabilities considerably. No sane man would let himself be railroaded to the electric chair to shield his mother's name of so small a stain. Also a successful defense in the trial would have been certain considering the loop holes in the prosecution's evidence. However all inconsistencies in story will be forgotten in the fine dramatic tempo of the last reel and all that will be remembered will be the splendid production, fine acting and masterly direction. The picture is a sure fire bet.—Length. 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Robert Sheldon ..... Lloyd Hughes
Dolly Wilson ..... Betty Ross Clark
Fan Baxter ..... Betty Blythe
Willard Thatcher ..... Joseph Kilgour
Mrs. Sheldon ..... Claire McDowell
District Attorney ..... Andrew Robson
Henry Godfrey ..... Andrew Arbuckle

Adapted by C. Gardner Sullivan from the story, "The Octopus," by Charles Belmont Davis. Directed by Fred Niblo. Supervised by Thomas H. Ince. Photographed by Henry Sharp.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Charles Belmont Davis's story "The Octopus" has been adapted to the photoplay under the title of "Mother O' Mine" and will be the principal feature picture at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' engagement beginning ————.

The production is from the Thomas H. Ince studios from a scenario by C. Gardner Sullivan and was directed by Fred Niblo under Mr. Ince's personal supervision. In the cast are such well known players as Lloyd Hughes, Joseph Kilgour, Betty Ross Clark and Betty Blythe.

The story told concerns the efforts of a mother to save her son falsely accused of murder. The plot has been developed with a wealth of original incident and many thrills and dramatic situations have been evolved. The production is released by Associated Producers and is in seven reels. It ranks as one of the biggest super-features of the season.

PROGRAM READER

"Mother O' Mine," an adaptation of Charles Belmont Davis's famous story, "The Octopus," by C. Gardner Sullivan and directed by Fred Niblo under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince is the feature picture at the ———— theatre for a ———— days' showing beginning ————.

"Mother O' Mine" is an all star picture with such well known players as Betty Blythe, Lloyd Hughes, Joseph Kilgour and Betty Ross Clark in principal roles. It has been elaborately produced and tells an interesting and strongly dramatic story of the young man who is unjustly accused of a crime, but who is saved by his mother and sweetheart. It has been produced with all the wealth of detail and realism for which the Thomas H. Ince studios are famous and ranks as one of the really big pictures of the year. The production is in seven reels, with a smashing melodramatic climax and a pretty romance.

SUGGESTIONS

The exploitation possibilities in this production are evenly balanced in the title, the fame of the original story and its author, the Ince production reputation, the unusual size of the feature from a production standpoint and the excellent cast. We would say little about the actual plot, but stress the various dramatic sequences and especially those scenes showing the roof garden scenes. It is a very good feature for the use of stills, as there is a big variety of action and plenty of interesting incident suggested. Lobby display possibilities are to be found in the electric chair scenes and in the "girl" show sequence. For a prologue the theme of mother love is best suited unless you care to stress the roof show stuff.

CATCH LINES

One of the greatest of Thomas H. Ince's all star productions, enacted by a flawless cast. A dramatic story with a thrill in its climax that will bring the most sophisticated from their seats.

Who is it that never will believe a boy is guilty no matter what the evidence? Mother. And it is a little mother in "Mother O' Mine" who snatches victory from defeat when the clumsy law fails to see that justice was done in the strange case of Robert Sheldon.

"ONE A MINUTE"
(Ince-Paramount)

Amusing Hokum Puts This One Over

THIS picture, taken in its raw state, analyzed and dissected, does not offer a great deal of entertainment. It is a picture, or rather a story, which needs plenty of dressing in the shape of incident. The director must have appreciated its frailties since he has kept it moving with interesting hokum—hokum which is well timed and placed so that the laughs come where they should, near the finish of a scene. "One a Minute" will be dismissed by many as frothy and unworthy of consideration. It may not be burdened with plot complications, but it is as refreshing as a cool breeze. In fact it is an excellent hot weather attraction. The theme is founded upon Barnum's ancient wheeze—that there is one born every minute.

It does not take much time in getting started. The opening sequence presents MacLean aboard an observation car, the train taking him to his home-town. A mild flirtation develops which carries a laugh when the hero in biding goodby to the girl forgets that the station is his own. So he jumps off the train and the hokum follows. A graduate of a law school, he has come home to manage his father's run-down drug store. Across the street a syndicate is opening an up-to-date store—a syndicate headed by the father of the girl of the train. The hero realizes that he is up against it unless he can put over some hokum. So he mixes up four ingredients and produces a patent medicine advertised to cure every ailment. The dope is bitter in taste which is the hero's fancy that bad medicine is more effective. He does a rushing business and when the syndicate fails in buying the formula, the girl's father has him arrested for violation of the pure food and drug act.

The subsequent trial is exaggerated hokum and while it is implausible nevertheless it packs a good laugh. The court-room is crowded, the judge wears a sour expression, the jury seems to be enjoying the case and the hero is defending himself. The big moment comes when the judge is striken and is given one of the druggist's powders. It works a miraculous cure and he asks for a dismissal of the case. The picture shows its hokum in the rapid recovery of the patients, the buying of the formula and the campaigning of the hero for the mayoralty. There is a surprise in the ingredients. Four of them contain Fuller's earth, pepsin, ginger and charcoal—the fifth is faith. The hero had played upon the idea of the fifth for success. Of course, the offering is padded and entirely obvious, but it spells a light and amusing hour. MacLean is first rate in his scenes except for an emphasis of expression.—Length, 5 Reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Jimmy Knight ..... Douglas MacLean
Miriam Rogers ..... Marian DeBeck
Jingo Pitts ..... Victor Potel
Grandma Knight ..... Frances Raymond
Silas P. Rogers ..... Andrew Robson
Martin Duffey ..... Graham Pettie

By Fred Jackson.
Scenario by Joseph F. Poland.
Directed by Jack Nelson.
Photographed by Bert Cann.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

When Barnum made the famous statement "There's a fool born every minute," he uttered one of the quaintest epigrams of all time. The famous showman, whose success was due to his uncanny understanding of human psychology, spoke what is true today. In his latest starring vehicle, "One a Minute," which will he the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. Douglas MacLean has taken advantage of public gullibility as the theme for one of the most delightful and sparkling comedies of his career.

Jimmy Knight, the role assumed by the star, returns to his home town to run an old-fashioned drug store bequeathed to him by his father. Threatened with extinction by an up-to-date rival, Jimmy manufactures a panacea for all ills, supposedly discovered hy his father. The drug contains four ingredients and the rival concern analyzes it and has Jimmy prosecuted for violation of the food and drug act. Then follows incident after incident with Jimmy coming forth successful. The picture offers quaint comedy. In the cast are Marian DeBeck, Andrew Robson and Victor Potel.

PROGRAM READER

Are there sixty fools horn every hour? Barnum said so. Barnum was right. In "One a Minute" Douglas MacLean demonstrates that there are fools and more fools and they are born every minute. He was in love and in need of coin, and furthermore he wanted to show the girl that he had a big streak of courage in his make-up, so he set out to get the coin and the girl. Educated to be a lawyer, he sure did know how to make a great patent medicine. He put four—five ingredients into a formula and produced a panacea to cure all ills. Four ingredients were composed of tonics—the fifth of ————. But come to the ———— theatre next ————and see the quaintest comedy of the season.

SUGGESTIONS

You can make your copy breezy and snappy here much after the fashion of the theme. Put out stickers and advertise, advertise, advertise. Bill the comedy as a panacea for all mental ills.. Prescribe it as a laugh tonic for every man, woman and child. Play up Barnum's famous phrase. Ask if Barnum was right and follow up by advising your patrons to see MacLean in "One a Minute." Bill it as the happy tale of a quack who made a million because he made life easy to swallow. Tell that every person loves to he fooled. Tell that the power of faith is the strongest force in the world. Play it up as MacLean's best picture to date.

CATCH LINES

A bracing compound of love, finance, and business—a tonic guaranteed to make you laugh. Step up lively, folks. See Douglas MacLean in "One a Minute."

"A MESSAGE FROM MARS"
(Metro)

Lytell Acts Splendidly in Dull Morality Picture

BERT LYTELL has been given the difficult task of putting across a morality play. This screen adaption of a once popular stage play does not make a picture that moves swiftly enough to command audience attention. It drags along with lukewarm drama and lukewarm comedy and it has an ending as sweet as the final tableaux in a school-children's Santa Claus play, hut it does give Bert Lytell a chance to act. And act he does, playing the part of an egotistical, selfish Britisher with exquisite skill and the most delicate finesse.

It is wise to keep a player of such ability out of conventional movie hero roles where he could do nothing hut pose handsomely and wave his fists. The role of "Horace Parker," however, is not a character part. He is "the most selfish man on earth"; he is an egotist, he is super-blasè; he is an ass. Lytell makes him a most consummate snob, and yet sympathetic, for there is good heneath all his faults. It is the planting of this character in the earlier part of the picture that is the production's chief asset. Then comes the messenger from Mars—a truly martial individual with a scaley suit of armor. His mission is to show Parker how selfish and inhuman he is. Invisible they walk into homes and listen to others tell their opinions of the egotist. Parker hears the girl he loves an his aunt call him a snob. He listens to the learned men who have been flattering his knowledge of science to gain his patronage, speaks of him as a joke. The Martian transforms him into a tramp and brings him into homes of poverty, where he sees the sufferings of those he might have helped, hut did not. Finally the lesson is driven home to him, and he awakes once more in his study with the transparent guest departed. He hastens to the home of the poor and there is a typical movie climax in which he rescues a sick woman from a hurning building. He takes the homeless into his mansion, feeds and clothes them. His fiancee sees his change of character and returns to him. In the end he is buying toys and candy for a crowd of children.

As a morality picture, and such it is supposed to he, it is not convincing. The action takes place on Christmas Eve in London, and the story is a variation of Dickens' "Scrooge" story, without any of the Dickens' touches. If they can appreciate Lytell's acting, they may be satisfied. Numerous double exposure scenes are well done. Some comedy subtitles do not mix with the serious theme of the picture. Raye Dean is an exceptionally appealing leading lady.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

THE CAST

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Local theatregoers will be glad to learn that the popular screen favorite, Bert Lytell, will soon be seen in his latest picture, "A Message From Mars," at the ———— theatre. This picture opens for a ——— day run on ————.

Bert Lytell is a screen favorite who has done much to elevate the art. He is more than a "type"; he is an accomplished and gifted actor, who has studied the art of pantomine until each screen performance is an example of the most perfect finesse. Few stars would dare to accept the variety of roles which have heen his in the past six months. In "A Message From Mars" he plays the part of a selfish, egotistical, British nobleman. Selfishness and conceit are his creed, and his acting here is among the best of his career.

"A Message From Mars" is adapted from a former stage success by Richard Ganthoney, and was adapted for the screen by Arthur Zellner and Arthur Maude. The direction was in the hands of Maxwell Karger. In the cast are Raye Dean, a new and exceedingly beautiful leading lady, Gordon Ash, Maud Milton, Alphonz Ethier, Leonard Mudie, Mary Louise Beaton, Frank Currier and George Spink.

PROGRAM READER

Do you consider it possible for any woman to love the most selfish man in the world? Horace Parker, a wealthy Britisher, played by Bert Lytell in "A Message From Mars," which will he the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ————, earned this unwelcome reputation for himself. Conceit oozed out of him, selfishness enshrouded him, arrogance was in every word and every gesture. Bert Lytell, one of the most popular of all screen players, acts this difficult part with exceeding skill. The performance is one of the best ever given hy this accomplished young actor.

"A Message From Mars" is a screen adaption of a well-known stage play by the same name, which was written by Richard Ganthoney. It was adapted to the screen by Arthur Zellner and Arthur Maude. In the cast are Raye Dean, Gordon Ash and Maud Milton.

CATCH LINES

A picture starring the most versatile and accomplished actors of the screen in a story of a man who lived the doctrine of selfishness.

An intensely human tale of a man who lived for himself alone, hut who finally found his joy in giving to others.

"WESTERN HEARTS"
(Associated Photo-Plays-State Rights)

Some Good Incident in Ordinary Western

IT is a very ordinary western that is offered in "Western Hearts," sponsored by Cliff Smith, an experienced man in subjects of this character. He knows his West and can put over a picture always rich in scenic investiture. But he has faltered here because he has fashioned a story which has seen service for many, many years. In fact it is very old, very orthodox and obvious. Except for the scenic backgrounds and some good samples of incident which are exploited through lifelike touches, "Western Hearts" does not have much to offer in the shape of interesting entertainment.

It is the ancient formula of the Eastern girl who, vacationing on a ranch, develops a love affair with the rugged foreman. There must needs be the villain who employs a jealous girl to intercept the letters after the heroine has returned to the East. Close-ups are offered of the disillusioned lovers suffering the pangs of disappointment. Unable to entertain the scenes of environment which brought romance to him, the cowboy leaves the ranch. The girl comes back the next summer, because her father has bought the place, and the villain is promoted to foreman. His dastardly work goes on apace. His next scheme is to rustle bis employer's cattle. Tbis is the beginning of the incident which carries the interesting feature. Smith has taken his shots on a genuine ranch, dotted with a large head of cattle and rich in atmospheric touches. The villain has married the jealous girl, though the heroine believes her to be the wife of the departed cowboy. The latter turns up again as a deputy marshal employed to hunt down the rustlers.

There are a number of scenes between the romancers, who continue to register sadness when a word or two of explanation would clarify matters. Tbe punch scene comes when the marshal discovers the rustlers in their retreat. He is caugbt and a merry fight follows. Meanwhile the riderless horse returns to the ranch and the alarm is given. The cowboys follow in pursuit and capture the villains after a healthy fight. With the complications straightened out, the girl realizes that the marshal is the same, constant lover of old. The acting is not of the best, the players seeming to interpret their parts in a strained fashion. Smith has picked some regular cowboys for the extras, and his leading man, Art Straton, is apparently a cow-puncher, judging from his personality. The picture should get over with state-righters. Certainly it carries genuine atmosphere and some good ridin' and shootin'.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The chief attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— is "Western Hearts," a picture which according to its title is based upon life and experience in the boundless West—the 'West of the plains,' cattle and cowboys. Patrons of the ———— theatre are assured of clever entertainment because of the fact that it is a Cliff Smith attraction. Mr. Smith has had long and varied experience as an author and director of western features. He is a product of the West himself, having been a former rancher and cowboy.

It is said that "Western Hearts" is one of his finest stories—a story of a disillusioned couple, the man from the West, the girl from the effete East. Jealous interlopers bring disillusionment and the cowboy leaves the ranch, while the girl remains to give expression to her sorrow. The cow country, the plains—these are excellently brought forth here. In time the lovers are reunited and the interlopers are punished—all according to typical romantic style. The picture is marked for its scenery and clever acting.

PROGRAM READER

She came from the East and fell in love with the burly cowboy. He returned her affection. Their moments were wonderful—too wonderful to last. A time came when they were separated and the letters between them were intercepted by jealous interlopers. The girl returned to the West but found her cowboy gone. She was disillusioned. Then one day he returned and things he said helped to bear out her suspicions that he was not trustworthy. Did he regain her affection? See "Western Hearts," a picture of crisp action and suspense of the cow country—a picture of the plains of the ranches, of the glorious West. At the ———— theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

Perhaps you can make good copy from the title of this picture. If Cliff Smith means anything to your patrons by all means play up his name. He is a well known director of Western features, having been associated with some of our best Western stars for many years. You might exploit a story telling that he was a former rancher and cowboy himself. Play up the picture as an exciting romance and adventure of life upon the cattle plains. Make your copy so that it smacks of vigor and virility. Play it up as a he-man, smashing, clashing, picture of cowboys and life upon the plains. Play up the cast. Surely Josie Sedgwick is known to your steady patrons. A cowboy quartette would help in a prologue.

CATCH LINES

She fell in love with a handsome cowboy. But when she failed to hear from him she became disillusioned. See "Western Hearts."

A picture of the cattle country—a picture of ranches and short-horns, of cowboys and rustlers. See "Western Hearts."

"THE MOTHER HEART"
(Fox)

Little Originality in Mechanical Shirley Mason Picture

THERE is not much that is original in "The Mother Heart," in story, direction or incident. It is drama of the heavy and artificial variety, dealing with poverty stricken families, deaths from broken hearts and long imprisonments for stealing groceries, which contains some opportunities for the star, Shirley Mason, to exercise her charm and dainty personality. It can be classed as average entertainment, but it has neither the fascination nor delicate romance of some of Fox's first Shirley Mason productions.

The story is one of those which creaks mechanically as it moves along. It opens with an unfortunate family on the verge of starvation. Father is jobless, the bahy is hungry and there is nothing in the cupboard. Shirley Mason plays of one of the elder daughters. The man steals a dollar's worth of food, for which offense he goes to jail for an impossibly long time. Mother dies of a broken heart and the two girls and the baby are sent to an institution. One is adopted by a society woman and the star is sent to work as housekeeper on a farm. Here she runs into a grouchy old man who objects to her diminutive size and the hahy. How she wins her way into his heart forms the best part of this picture. It gives Edwin Booth Tilton an opportunity to get in some fine comedy as the irrascible old man. In fact, he wins more interest in his scenes with the bahy than the star. Raymond McKee is the leading man, and he makes the boohish country lad so boobish that there is little sympathy for him. The romantic scenes are few and far between, which seems a pity, since this couple have in the past, demonstrated that they can create quite a little charm in their romancing. The story works up to a climax which involves the second sister more than the star, who finally comes to know that the man she is working for is responsible for her father's imprisonment. She threatens to leave, but is dissuaded and the employer seems to have no difficulty in having the father's sentence commuted. The villain, who has been pursuing the second sister, proves to be a crook and meets with his just punishment. The ending leaves everybody happy. The action bears evidence of having been changed in the cutting process. For instance, the grouchy old man, in order to keep the girl with him, evidently plans to hold the baby as a hostage, but nothing develops from the incident.

"Tbe Mother Heart" will get over with those who are satisfied with a conventional "sob" story, not overburdened with logical development, and who find the dainty and petite star's personality to their liking.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Mother Heart," starring dainty Shirley Mason, will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ————, for a ————day run. The story is one of universal appeal, being based on the love of a young girl for a baby sister. It is a picture which admirably suits Miss Mason, who, in addition to being one of the youngest stars of the screen, is exceedingly petit and dainty. She has no equal as an interpreter of winsome young girl parts on the screen, for she has a distinctive personality and unusual charm of manner.

"The Mother Heart" is a story of a goung girl who with her two parents fights poverty. Her father is accused of stealing and circumstantial evidence sends him to jail. The mother's heart is broken and she dies, leaving her three children to face the world alone.

The young heroine is adopted by a stern and wealthy old man, who has asked the institution for a "big husky girl" to do the housework at his farm. When he sees a mere shadow of a girl, weighing less than one hundred pounds, he orders her off of the premises. But she can cook—and cook she does to the utmost of her ability. And a good dinner can soften many a man's heart.

"The Mother Heart" was written and directed by Howard M. Mitchell, who has directed many previous Shirley Mason pictures. Raymond McKee plays the leading male role in this delightful little romance, and a remarkable bit of character acting is done by Edwin Booth Tilson.

PROGRAM READER

How far can a dinner go in softening a man's heart? Old George Stuart was figidty, gouty, and grouchy, but the dainty little girl who prepared such a luscious meal for him found the opening wedge into his heart. The dainty little star is Shirley Mason and the picture is entitled "The Mother Heart," which will be the feature attraction at this theatre on ————.

"The Mother Heart" is a typical Shirley Mason picture, with the star as winsome and attractive as ever. Since elevated to stardom several months ago, Miss Mason has continually enlarged her circle of admirers. She is a star of whom one never grows tired of seeing, for there is a freshness and a piquancy in her acting which is ever a delight. In this picture she is supported by a capable cast, including Raymond McKee, Edwin Booth Tilton, Cecil Van Uaker, William Buckley, and Peggy Eleanor.

CATCH LINES

A story of a young girl who won her way into the heart of the grouchiest, goutiest, crankiest millionaire alive. Shirley Mason is the star—as dainty as ever. See "The Mother Heart" at the ———— theatre on ————.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

DETROIT

Joe Elshefsky, has purchased the Luna theatre. He at one time operated the East End.

The Broadway Strand theatre has reduced its prices for the summer to 25 and 30 cents in the afternoon and 20, 35 and 50 cents at night. The Orpheum theatre has discontinued vaudeville and is now offering a program of two features, a comedy and news weekly with all seats at 20 cents afternoon and night. The Colonial closes as a vaudeville house next Sunday night and will play pictures.

William Fox was a Detroit visitor last week.

Cracksmen opened the safe of the Dawn theatre Thursday morning and escaped with $180.

TAMPA, FLA

The Consolidated Amusement Co., of Tampa, Fla., now controls all of the six downtown theatres for the houses of the Strand Amusement Co. and the S. A. Lynch Enterprises have been consolidated.

C. D. Cooley, the general manager of the Strand Amusement Co., who operated the three largest downtown theatres, the Victory, Strand and Bonita, is now at the head of all of the theatres. The Alcazar, Grand and Prince were the theatres turned in by the Lynch Enterprises, and under the new arrangement the Alcazar will be closed for the summer.

The Casino theatre of Ybor City, Fla., is being remodeled and will open about July 1st. Mr. Ashford, who has been assisting Mr. Walton in the operation of his three Ybor City houses, will be in charge of the Casino when it opens.

Texas Jack Sullivan has been at work on a five reel production called The Greatest Game, in Tampa, Fla., for the past three months. It was made within twenty miles of the City, and all of the developing and printing was done in the Juanita Studio here.

New Port Richey, Fla., is the latest town to "bust" into the movie game. Mr. Snell, who owns the Opera House there, is equipping it for motion pictures, and another firm is at work building an Airdome.

CONNECTICUT

Henry P. Menges, for a number of years manager of the Hyperion theatre at New Haven, (Ct), is acting as manager of Poli's Palace theatre at Hartford, Ct., during the absence of Manager Fred Valles, who is on an extended vacation trip through England, France and Italy.

Lucius L. Raymond, manager of the Colonel theatre at Pittsfield, Mass., and Miss Ethel Sunderman of that city were recently married by Rev. Franklin J. Kennedy at Pittsfield.

John DeHaven formerly identified with the theatrical business in various parts of the country, and for a time with the Herbert Opera Company of Chicago, is associated this season with the Ingersol Engineering Construction Corporation, which is operating the newly opened Pleasure Beach at Bridgeport, Ct.

INDIANAPOLIS

An opening for a new movie house in Valparaiso, Ind., has been provided by announcement that the Federal Board for Vocational Education is sending 500 disabled war veterans to Valparaiso University. Until a new theatre is put up on College hill near the campus pictures are being screened in the Lightcap building, formerly occupied by a restaurant.

W. H. Hufford, Henry Read and J. S. Boonshot are directors of the newly incorporated Petersburg Amusement Company which will operate photoplay houses at Petersburg, Ind.

"Deception" stayed over at Loew's State for its second seven day run this week. The newspapers discussed the film's German origin as vigorously as they did that of "Passion" which was at the Circle a few weeks ago.

KANSAS CITY MO.

Miss Emma Viets of Topeka, Kan., has been selected by Governor Allen as a special motion-picture inspector for the state of Kansas. Miss Viets will have direct charge of watching the "pirate" pictures sent into Kansas by exhibitors and producers who either neglect to have the pictures censored or who fail to remove the section of films ordered cut out by the state censor board.

Julius Brenheim, manager of the short subjects department of the Kansas City Universal branch, left last week for Universal City, Calif., where he will occupy the post of assistant director with the same company. A farewell dinner was given Saturday night in his honor by the sales force of the Kansas City branch.

A few additions have been made to the Pathe News force in Kansas City during the past few weeks. R. C. Abbey has resigned as manager of Associated Exhibitors and accepted a position as short subject salesman for Pathe, while Richard Case has been appointed Associated Exhibitors sales manager in the Pathe office. Sam Stoll, former assistant manager with Fox, and salesman for Federated, is now a salesman for Associated Exhibitors.

H. L. Craig, former Universal sales manager in Kansas City, and recently manager of Universal's St. John, Canada, branch, is back in Kansas City "to stay," he says.

N. J. Flynn, president of the Richards & Flynn Film Company, Kansas City, returned to Kansas City last week from Minneapolis, Minn., where he has been on a business trip.

WESTERN NEW YORK

Tom Brady has resigned as manager of the Buffalo A. P. office. He will take over the new Warren exchange in this city.

J. G. Fater, formerly with Hodkinson in Washington and Charlotte, N. C., has been appointed manager of the Buffalo Hodkinson office. Marion Gueth, who has been in charge of the office, will continue her duties.

William West has resigned as manager of the Circle theatre, one of the General theatres' corporation chain of houses in Buffalo.

Frank S. Hopkins is now special representative with Universal. Frank has been at Saranac Lake for over a year for his health. He will soon be renewing acquaintance with western New York exhibitors.

J. J. Rotchford, assistant general manager for Select spent a few days in Buffalo last week. He is making a tour of exchanges.

M. Slotkin who is building the new Lafayette Square theatre in Buffalo and who has been identified with the Olympic and Lyric for many years is seriously ill in the hospital.

Pop Petroski has sold the Venus theatre in Buffalo. J. Pferd has closed the Pastime theatre in the same city for the summer.

Harry Dixon, manager of the Star theatre on William Street, Buffalo, has returned from a motor trip to New York City.

C. G. Gates has bought the Lyric theatre in the town of Holly, N. Y.

The big benefit staged by the Buffalo Theatre Managers' Association for the starving children of Ireland was a huge success. The all-star performance was put on in Elmwood Music hall, Saturday evening, June 4.

Harold B. Franklin brought Creatore to Buffalo this week as visiting conductor at Shea's Hippodrome. The stunt was a big hit. Creatore conducted the big symphony orchestra in "The Poet and the Peasant," and "The Dance of the Hours."

Bill Callahan of the Regent, Rochester, has signed up the Pathe "Aesop's Fables Modernized," for exclusive first run in his town.

The Exhibitors Supply and Sign Company has opened a store at 217 Franklin Street, Buffalo, selling posters, papers, slides, etc.

Clayton M. Sheehan, district manager for Fox, will attend the annual convention of the company in New York the week of June 22 when it is expected a new Buffalo manager will be appointed.

CANADA

A. L. Schaer, of Montreal, formerly of the Majestic theatre, has taken over the Rex theatre. Harry Heller has succeeded Schaer as manager of the Majestic.

Rev. C. W. Gordon, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, who is otherwise known as "Ralph Connor," the novelist, was the recipient of unusual honors, during the week of May 30. One distinction came in the presentation of his story, "The Sky Pilot," as a feature picture at the Allen theatre, Winnipeg, before packed houses. Rev. Mr. Gordon made several personal appearances at the Allen theatre, Winnipeg, and was enthusiastically greeted. "The Sky Pilot" was produced in the Manitoba Capital.

The New Grand theatre, Montreal, has booked "Mickey" for the week of June 26, this being the fourth engagement of this feature for the theatre. The Province theatre, Winnipeg, played "Mickey" for the third time during the week of May 30.

An indication of the limit to which an unchecked moral reformer will aim is seen in the demand of Rev. J. G. Shearer, of Toronto, prominent as a social service worker, made in an address at Brockville, Ontario, on May 29 when he urged that the Canadian Government should own and control all moving pictures. Dr. Shearer declared that 90 per cent of all pictures exhibited in Canada were controlled by a small group of multi-millionaires in New York whose sole interest in the pictures was to make money.

Dr. Shearer announced that conferences had been arranged with the various moving picture censor boards for the Canadian Provinces by the Social Service Council with a view to securing a common set of standards.

Incidentally, the reformer told of a recent session of the Quebec Board of Censors which he had attended. He expressed delight over the manner in which the Quebec censors made extensive deletions in the films which were being examined.

J. L. Hunter, general manager of Associated Producers, Limited, with headquarters in Toronto, has announced that new offices of the company are being opened at Calgary, Alberta, Vancouver, B. C., and St. John, N. D., so that six branches will shortly be in operation in Canada.

Announcement is made that Mr. Piton is still the manager of the Globe theatre, Toronto, which is owned by Harry Cohen, of Regal Films, Limited. It was recently reported that Mr. Piton had been replaced after having been in charge of the house for several years.

CLEVELAND

Elyria, O., is facing a ministerial movement to have picture houses closed on Sundays. One of the most effective impediments in the way of the reformers is the refusal of Prosecuting Attorney Webber to interfere unless citizens who object to Sunday movies swear to affidavits and cause arrests, in which case his office will act. Unless such procedure is followed, Mr. Webber has informed the ministers, he believes it is not up to his office to move against the Sunday showing of pictures.

David Davidson, erstwhile manager of the local Pioneer office, is back in Cleveland after a prolonged visit to California, and is in charge of the city sales for the Fox Film Corporation. A. C. Hoague, former assistant manager for Robertson-Cole, is also on the Fox sales force, covering the northern part of Ohio.

Fox film exchange got into the band wagon this week, and is now with all the other film exchanges in the new Film Building, Payne avenue at East 21st street. Now they're all at the Film Building with the exception of Paramount and the Standard Film Service, both of which are putting up their own office buildings in the vicinity of the Film Building.

BALTIMORE

In numerous instance Baltimore motion picure receipts have picked up again. However, some of the theatres still feel the decrease in attendance and the managements are blaming the drop on the opening of summer resorts. A revival, already noticed in the very elite houses, is anticipated in the near future.

The Independent Film and Supply Company, of which George C. Easter is vice-president and general manager, has taken over the production of Screenart Film Company for this territory.

G. Kingston Howard, president of the Motion Picture Operators' Local 181, has been elected financial secretary and treasurer of the Baltimore Federation of Labor.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grauling, recently married, will leave soon for a trip to Yellowstone Park. Mr. Grauling is projectionist at the Goodtime theatre and trustee of Motion Picture Operators' Local 181.

His Time Had Come

FOR years, bitterness eating out his heart, he had waited. For years he had nursed a blind and relentless hate.

And now——

"You killed my boy! And you'll never see your own kid again!"

That's the start. And what follows is the titanic tale of a big man's fight with conscience, and of a big heart so bruised by misery that it could at last feel for even an enemy.

A tale so big and overwhelming that it moved the Exhibitors' Trade Review to say:

"A picture of absorbing interest, surcharged with infinite pathos, intensely human, with swift action that never falters, and gripping emotional situations. Well worth the attention of every exhibitor."

A Great Year For Fighters; A Bad Year For Fools

The shrewdest exhibitor minds of this country are looking 'way beyond a period of summer depression, which is possibly just a little heavier than usual in certain sections of the country. These shrewder minds of the industry have the courage to believe that the season of 1921-1922 will be a great year for fighters—and a bad year for fools.

You do not find the abler, stronger exhibitors of this industry growing nervous and resorting to the makeshift remedy of reducing admission prices to attract patronage.

In the first place, except in certain large cities, if you put your prices down you are not going to be able to put them back.

In the second place, beginning in September and October, all lines of business in the United States will be booming. Over the summer wages in all lines are being stabilized. The country is already vigorously responding to commercial readjustments. Prices are settling down. Banking conditions are becoming normal. The great Federal Reserve banking system saved the country from a panic almost talked into existence by fools.

Labor is back on the job. The working muscles of America are again behind the job. It will be a fall and winter season of full working time or double shifts. All of this again means big patronage and profits for motion picture theatres. You cannot have those profits if you reduce your admissions.

Did you read "A Message for a Few Fools" which we published in the trade journals last week?

Side Step the Summer Let Down with this Big Money-Getting Heavily Advertised Divorce Problem Feature

When a feature makes box office records in the winter—the picture industry sits up and takes some notice. But when "The Wild Goose" opened on the hottest day New York has had this season and ran through a straight week of summer weather to a box office total of $24,961.20, the picture experts were absolutely flabbergasted.

Here is why "The Wild Goose" is a box office marvel—

First— It is a Cosmopolitan Production and one of the best super-features that ever carried the Cosmopolitan Production trademark.

Second— It is a timely picture—every one is looking for the answer to the divorce question. The newspapers are full of divorce news and divorce editorials. It is one of America's greatest problems. And this picture strikes at the very heart of it.

Thira— It is a story in a million from the pen of that gifted novelist, Gouverneur Morris, and a million readers of Hearst's Magazine have read it and are waiting to see it on the screen.

Fourth— It was directed by that internationally famous director, Albert Capellani, who is one of the four greatest directors in the motion picture industry.

Fifth— It ran up a box office record of $24,961.20 at the Rialto, New York, during a week of uninterrupted summer weather—a week when a lot of successful long-run shows "turned up their toes" and closed.

Sixth— "The Wild Goose" is being advertised with big space advertising in Hearst newspapers—the leading newspapers of the following cities:

Boston	Chicago	Los Angeles	San Francisco
Atlanta	Milwaukee	Washington	New York

The Sunday editions of the Hearst newspapers blanket America.

"The Wild Goose" has been booked by all New York Keith, Proctor and Moss high-priced reserved seat vaudeville and picture houses.

Right Now This Picture Will Attract Crowds Away from Outdoor Sports and Into Your Theatre

You have the keenest competition to contend with now—baseball, bathing, boating and every other outdoor sport.

Summer weather always has, and always will, hit box office receipts, but there is one way to beat the weather—to get the money in spite of season—that is to play hit pictures—hits so sure-fire that they will draw audiences irrespective of anything.

"The Woman God Changed" is that kind of a picture, and here's the absolute proof—in 14 days on Broadway—seven days in the Rivoli, seven in the Rialto. This amazing box office take was during two weeks of uninterrupted hot outdoor weather while a lot of "legitimate" stage successes were giving up the ghost and taking to the store house.

$39,079.25

Now In Its Fourth Week on Broadway and Going Bigger Every Day

The B. S. Moss' Broadway, New York, ran this great money-getting picture last week. It drew so much money to the box office that it has been held over for a second week. No picture has ever been played two weeks at Moss' Broadway before.

This record money-making feature has been booked by all New York Keith, Proctor and Moss high-priced reserved seat vaudeville and picture houses.

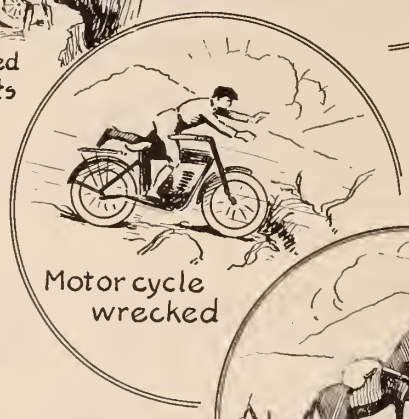
how we brought PUEBLO to your Screen



Aeroplane forced to land

Motor car stopped by wash-outs

Motor cycle wrecked

Pack-horse - success at last

EXACTLY one week after the terrible disaster at Pueblo, INTERNATIONAL flashed on the screens of the country pictures of this great catastrophe for your patrons to gape at.

How did we do it? Because, as always, we had a man on the job—and because, as always, the man made good.

Taking the pictures was easy—getting them to the laboratory was the hard job.

They started East first by aeroplane—but the aeroplane was forced down. Nothing daunted, INTERNATIONAL'S man jumped into a motor-car—only to be stopped by washouts. Stumped for a moment, he commandeered a motor-cycle and then struck a real stump and—wrecked the machine. What then? A pack-horse—and success at last.

We don't say this is a world's record in showing pictures of a great catastrophe. We simply give you the story to show you the lengths to which INTERNATIONAL goes in putting its news on your screen. We think that you'll agree with us that a NEWS SERVICE that regularly triumphs over every difficulty and turns up smiling at the end is the best one to serve you and your expectant patrons.

"A PRIVATE SCANDAL"

May McAvoy—Star

May McAvoy!

Just one small body and one great spirit—but together they have endowed her with the power to move multitudes as they have seldom been moved before.

Youth and beauty as fresh as the morning—

That radiant sweetness that belongs to girlhood—

Poise that bears her triumphant through every dramatic moment—

A wistful whimsy that twines about your heart forever—

And a power of interpretation that is life itself.

But above all, her's is the ability to translate human emotions upon the screen.

Her's is the kind of acting that turns a shadow on celluloid into flesh and blood before your eyes—thrilling, vibrant, real!

Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

A WEALTHY American family—a pretty wife who required much attention—a husband more interested in his race horses than his home—a baby girl. Add to these a "fine imitation of a family friend" with a fateful influence over the wife; little Jeanne, the loyal-hearted family ward; and Jerry, her hot-tempered lover!

This picture will hold you fascinated, tense with emotion, thrilled, oblivious to your surroundings, while genuine tears rush boldly, unashamed, down your cheeks

A Story With Every Appeal

"A PRIVATE SCANDAL" is from the pen of that gifted writer for the screen, Hector Turnbull. It is simply and powerfully told, and admirably adapted by Eve Unsell.

It carries the appeal of superb human drama—of youth and love—of life's inevitable struggle—of gripping suspense.

Here is a great audience picture, a box-office security, available to owners of the Realart Star Franchise at their contract price.

It's All Ready For You

A story that reveals the heart of an American home;

A flawless star in a dramatic portrayal of a gallant-hearted immigrant girl.

"A PRIVATE SCANDAL"

Direction that causes you to forget you are gazing upon a screen, so faithfully and powerfully does it depict human forces and human characters—the work of Chester Franklin;

A continuity that sweeps you along, knitting the people of the story with your life forever;

A cast of players almost uncannily adapted to the characters of the picture.

Gripping drama!

Dear Mr. Henry:--

I want to take this opportunity of expressing my satisfaction at the phenomenal business being done this week by Mary Pickford in "THROUGH THE BACK DOOR".

I personally recommended the picture to the public over my own signature, something that I very rarely do. I told my patrons that I consider it Mary Pickford's best pioture, and they believed me and came to see it. Then they went out and sent their friends. I haven't heard a single criticism among them. I believe that when I said it was her best, I was expressing the opinion of my patrons, for I have heard many of them say the same thing.

This week we have had the hottest weather of the year, but I am glad to say that our business, in spite of the intense heat, has far exceeded my expectations, and I am sure had the weather conditions been normal, we would have broken our house record.

Very sincerely yours,

Sam Harding

A BEN WILSON
SERIAL PRODUCTION

From WIDS:

"'The Blue Fox' is a swift moving serial cram-full of action and incident. The direction is good and the photography well done and even excellent in parts.

"Ann Little is the star and she steps her paces in a bright, active, and plucky manner. 'The Blue Fox' allows her plenty of scope for all kind of action * * *.

"The first episode is struck in the heart of Alaska. IN THE FIRST HUNDRED FEET OF FILM THE ACTION IS ALREADY WELL UNDER WAY AND ITS APPEAL GRIPPING. The snow fields are effectively photographed, and the attention held throughout * * * At the end of the first episode, a well staged and ably directed fight holds one almost breathless.

"If you go in for serials and your audiences enjoy rough stuff and fierce fights, they will not be disappointed if you run this on your screen * * *. 'The Blue Fox' is the last word in modern melodramatic athletic thrillers."

From Moving Picture World:

"There is enough action and thrills in 'The Blue Fox' serial to satisfy serial fans. * * *.

"The photography is unusually good, and the sets adequate. The picture is well produced throughout. The fifth and sixth episodes of this serial are as good and with as snappy action as the earlier two. In fact the sixth episode which takes place largely on a sailing vessel during a storm at sea is particularly well done."

To the Advertising Manager—

THRIFT IN ADVERTISING

¶ Have you ever stopped to find the reason why the NEWS last year carried 607 more pages of advertising than any other paper?

Some of it was placed by the larger advertisers, who, after careful tests, decided to put most or more of their advertising in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Some of it was exclusive advertising.

Some of it was accessory advertising of which the NEWS carries the largest amount, and for the very good reason that the accessory advertiser can check his advertising returns.

We predict that this supremacy in advertising pages will be doubled this year. Because the " News " has more than double the advertising value of any other publication, as every test proves.

That's thrift in advertising.—To make your advertising effective in the most effective medium.

"One of the Best Dramatic Productions"

Read what the Exhibitors' Herald has to say of the play that made a tremendous hit at the Tivoli, Chicago.

"One of the best dramatic productions of recent date. The story is exceptionally well worked out and holds interest from the opening scene. A study of courage but in no sense a preachment. Excellently received at the Tivoli theatre, Chicago, and became the subject of much favorable discussion. The play should give satisfaction in every quarter. A powerful drama forcefully communicated. Dramatic points firmly recorded by capable players effectively directed. One of the best available dramatic attractions. Sam De Grasse gives a sterling performance and Naomi Childers wins new prestige. Brilliantly staged and directed. Great entertainment value."

A FIRST NATIONAL ATTRACTION

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXIV JUNE 25, 1921 No. 1

The Broadway Ballyhoo

JUST what does the Broadway run amount to? We mean, of course, the Broadway run of a picture in a legitimate theatre at advanced top prices.

What does it mean to the producer? To the exhibitor?

The exhibitor takes the stand that the exceptionally good picture—no better however than the public has a right to demand today from the picture theatre—is withheld by the producer from his regular patrons until the cream has been thoroughly worked off in legitimate theatres in the big centres.

The producer claims that he can make more money in this way; that furthermore such an advertising introduction is necessary in order to make the exhibitor pay a worthy rental price.

We are thoroughly in sympathy with the producers' problems today. He needs as big an income as the picture deserves to pay.

But we can't agree with him that the Broadway showing is good advertising.

We have taken this stand with several producers only to be met with the reply: "Well, you don't know the show business."

Maybe not; but we do understand the business of advertising and merchandizing pretty well; and it only takes half an eye to see that the fourth manufacturing industry in this country is subject to sound advertising and merchandising rules and not merely to traditions of the show business—and to mere vanity.

Sometime ago a high class picture was given a Broadway showing. The loss taken was about seventy-five thousand dollars.

Was this good advertising?

Seventy-five thousand dollars spent in the daily newspapers of say twenty key centers would have given this picture a powerful bid for first runs and introduced it to some five millions of people.

Is the advertising value of a Broadway run, even a successful one, comparable to this—or to a campaign at half, or one-third the expense?

We are inclined to believe that when this business gets down to real, forceful advertising and merchanizing—to the sort of skill and resources put back of big distribution and selling campaigns on clothing, paints, shoes, flour, etc.—that Broadway runs will go into the discard.

The Child and Censorship

WE publish in this issue a very important letter from E. R. Rogers, manager of the Signal Amusement Company of Tennessee.

It is important because it deals intelligently with the subject of children and the motion picture theatre; and this matter is of supreme importance because it goes to the root of the censorship and Blue Sunday agitation, and because it will always concern, in a large way, the status of the picture and the picture theatre.

We cannot make all pictures for children only; but we can and must take care of children in the motion picture theatre.

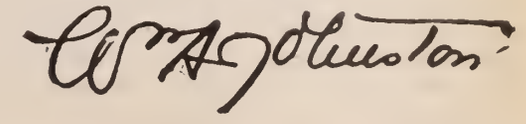
We advise that every exhibitor read and thoroughly consider this letter.

Here are a few of its high points:

Mr. Rogers has started special shows for children.

They are successful—in themselves.

They are building up a new and valuable good will for the theatre.



They are enlisting "The enthusiastic cooperation of ministers, educators and parents."

They have brought the picture theatre into active cooperation with the public schools and churches, with musical education.

All this is of the utmost importance.

We make without hesitation this sweeping statement: The motion picture will never be free from censorship or any other form of public persecution and criticism, and the motion picture theatre will never acquire its solid and rightful place in the community, until the problem of the child and the picture theatre has been successfully solved.

The Tivoli Theatre has done this.

First National Sifts "Control" Charge; Walker's Reply

THE following statement was issued last week by First National:

"In a letter to J. D. Williams, manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., Senator James J. Walker, national counsel for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has acknowledged that his statement that Adolph Zukor controlled 'five out of eight of First National's Board of Directors,' had no foundation except in hearsay, a fact which was not made clear in the printed accounts of the incident.

"Senator Walker made the allegation at the luncheon given at the Hotel Astor, June 1st, upon his return from a tour of the country in the interests of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. It was published in the trade press and immediately brought forth a complete and explicit denial from Associated First National Pictures, in print, as well as by direct letter to Senator Walker.

"Associated First National, in its correspondence with the M. P. T. O. counsel, requested either specific proof of his charges and their foundation or an acknowledgement that such proof was an impossibility, and a retraction of the statement.

"Senator Walker's letter amounts to such an acknowledgement, when he admits that hearsay constituted the sole basis for the assertion of Zukor control in Associated First National's directorate.

"The letter in full is as follows:

June 14th, 1921.

My Dear Sir:

I have two letters from you, both dated June 3rd, which I have not answered heretofore only because of the multiplicity of official and professional obligations I found awaiting my return from the West.

While it was my early impression that one of your letters was dictated more for the purpose of publication and to become a selfserving declaration, I am inclined to dismiss that thought because up to the moment I have not heard of its publication.

During my visit to California last month, a man of recognized integrity with experience and standing in the motion picture industry, made the statement to me that five directors of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., were to some extent controlled by Adolph Zukor, and further, that evidence of this would be forthcoming in the near future. In passing this statement on, among other things, to the motion picture theatre owners at the Hotel Astor on June 1st, I did so with the explicit declaration that it was entirely hearsay so far as I knew (and so it was understood by all those present), but, however, of sufficient importance to the protection and welfare of the independent theatre owners to warrant investigation. With that always in mind, I knew that if upon investigation this statement proved to be unfounded, it would redound to the credit of First National, establish their independence and silence all further rumors to that effect, as well as relieve whatever doubt might exist in the independent exhibitor's mind. If on the contrary, facts should be produced substantiating the rumor, no injustice whatever would have been done the men concerned.

Notwithstanding how supersensitive we may be, I believe that an investigation would be more beneficial than a retraction without investigation.

I note in your other letter of the same date, what appeals to me as an absolute justification of my apprehension in the premises, because you say "in reference to the carefully contemplated monopoly I am thoroughly in accord with your personal and official opinion, that no steps are too drastic and no extremes too great to stop its progress and throttle it for all time." Evidently, you have sources of information which convinces you of a "carefully contemplated monopoly" in the motion picture industry and nothing can be "too extreme to combat."

The fact that the motion picture beach is strewn with exhibitor wrecks—due to certain piratical practices in the industry plus the tendency of the average exhibitor to ignore danger signals until too late—moves me to take time by the forelock even as against my preference to be conservative.

Again in the same letter (in the one in which you do not demand a retraction) you say "the industry at large is entitled to independence as the only means for its endurance if nothing more, and none of us who regard its future as something greater than its past can afford to rest idly in the present while the menace of monopoly exists."

Well said—it may be a means of gratification to you to know that we are determined not to rest idly, but I am also inclined to believe from your statement that there are some details in the effort for trustification with which we are not familiar and which, I respectfully submit, it is not only your duty but it may be to your interest to uncover.

Nowhere in my speech to which you refer, nor at any other time, have I ever stated that First National has several theatres in the City of Denver.

Very truly yours,

(signed) James J. Walker.

Congress Views Battle on Tariff for Raw Film Stock

House Committee Recommends Fifteen Per Cent Duty on Imports of Foreign-Made Raw Film

(Special Washington Correspondence)

CAPITOL HILL is once more viewing a struggle fraught with great importance to the motion picture industry. This time the tariff, football of American politics, takes on a significance to film men. And the results of the battle that for the first time bring the words "protection" and "free trade" to the ears of picture folks are destined to have an effect on every branch of the industry, producers, distributors and exhibitors.

On one side of the trench line is found the Eastman Kodak Company and other American manufacturers of raw stock, alarmed by the steadily growing strength of foreign invaders, and asking Congress for a protective tariff of at least thirty per cent ad valorem.

Lined up in opposition are the independent film laboratories, who see in foreign made raw stock an opportunity to produce a competitive market here. The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, while its members may be said to be almost vitally interested in the outcome of the struggle, has thus far maintained a stand-off attitude on the raw stock question, the Producers' and Distributors' Division going on record for neutrality and the Executive Committee expressing a desire to see a competitive market.

Hearings on the subject have been held before the Ways and Means Committee of the House since the middle of February. Last week it was learned that the Committee would recommend a fifteen per cent duty on foreign stock. Most observers consider this decision as scoring first blood for the free trade advocates; but the latter declare they are going to battle on in the Senate hearings for complete freedom from duty. American manufacturers asked for a thirty per cent duty; and the opposition for no duty; so it might be better to label the struggle to date a "draw."

The usually dry-as-dust reprint of the hearings of the Ways and Means Committee take on a live interest when we read the sections devoted to the raw stock matter. Letting the personal appearances and briefs presented to the Committee to tell the story, we come first to a statement filed by George Eastman, president of the Eastman Kodak Company.

After outlining the commercial initiative and enterprise of his company in developing the manufacture of film to a point where America leads the world, Mr. Eastman takes up the tariff question. The Payne-Aldrich act of 1909 imposed a duty of twenty-five per cent. The Underwood-Simmons tariff placed it on the free list. This latter action, declares Mr. Eastman, had it not been for the coming of the war, would have resulted in flooding the market with foreign-made stock produced by labor cheaper than American, and offering a competition which he asserts the American manufacturer of stock could not meet.

Post-war labor conditions, combined with the exchange situation, make the condition even more critical now, the Eastman brief continues. This is responsible for the request that the duty be increased even over the high-protective Payne-Aldrich act from twenty-five per cent to thirty per cent.

Germany Gets Italy's Trade

Figures given are interesting. We read, "The selling price of Eastman Kodak Co. positive motion picture film is about two and a half cents per linear foot. In parts of Europe the price of foreign film is now about one and a half cents per foot. . . . Since the war Germany has captured the market in Italy, where, before the war, the Kodak Company had an extensive business. It has done this by reason of the fact that it can greatly undersell us. . . . Practically every foreign country that manufactures film has an import duty, while the United States has none. . . . Any of these foreign countries can import its film into the United States, pay a duty upon it of thirty per cent, sell it at ten to fifteen per cent below the prices at which prevail here, and still make a larger profit than it makes by selling the same film in European countries. In other words, the imposition of a tariff of thirty per cent would not be a prohibitive tariff, and probably would not curtail the importation of film into the United States."

Mr. Eastman also brings up the point that, without a duty, it would pay an American manufacturer of film to make his raw stock abroad under cheaper labor conditions and import it here.

Brulatour Is Heckled

Picture men who remember hearings of the past three and four years before the Ways and Means Committee were not surprised to find Congressman Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, ready to bristle the Eastman fur on the slightest excuse. Congressman Rainey has for several years had to listen to the repeated declaration that "Any tax you place on the big fellows in the industry is passed right on down the line to the small exhibitors. So don't tax us, please! We little fellows are the ones who will suffer."

So when Jules E. Brulatour, sales agent for the Eastman Kodak Company, appeared Mr. Rainey sharpened up. Mr. Brulatour declared that he was present as an individual and not as a representative of the Eastman organization. "I am a distributor of motion picture film," he declared. "I am here to ask you gentlemen for a tariff amounting to at least thirty per cent. This tariff will help all American manufacturers beside the Kodak Company, and at present there are four, the Bay State of Boston, the Eagle Rock of New Jersey, the Powers' Company of Rochester, and the Ansco Company of Binghamton."

Congressman Rainey sparred around a bit, first over the question of whether there were any other American manufacturers of film, then to the point of how their output compared with that of Eastman. After a series of questions, he declared:

"The Eastman Company does not appeal to me as a company which needs any protection against anybody in the world. Every time we try to tax the Eastman Company they get away from us and hand it right on down to the little fellows. They get out from under every time."

"It is only fair that they should," replied Mr. Brulatour. "They are an American company, they employ an enormous amount of labor, they pay an enormous income tax, they do everything that American citizens are called upon to do. Last year they paid a five-million-dollar

Photoplay's Medal of Honor Novel Project

THE announcement by Photoplay Magazine of its intention to award a Medal of Honor annually for the best production of the year, as carred in last week's issue of Motion Picture News in a strikingly attractive insert, has been acclaimed by the industry far and near as tending to give country-wide impetus to the movement for production of films of the highest merit.

As stated in his insert, James R. Quirk, publisher and editor of Photoplay, sincerely believes that signal honor, in the form of the Medal proposed as an award, will tend to turn the efforts of producers into channels which must further prove America is making photoplays far and above the best screen works of any country.

A nation-wide ballot of two and a half millions of readers of Photoplay will be taken, and a verdict as to the most meritorious production so arrived at.

Thirteen Incorporations in New York State

Thirteen companies identified with the motion picture industry were incorporated in New York state the past week, with a total capitalization of $325,500. They were: The Mac Lar Co., Inc., $5,000, James McMahon, Margaret McMahon, E. J. Lauro, New York; Giglio Amusement Company, $100,000, Clemento Giglio, Julian DiBucci, Rafaelle Ferrindino, New York; The Associated Manufacturers of Safety Standard Films and Projectors, $500, W. L. McFarland, Charles P. Ramee, F. J. Cohen, New York city.

Censor Appointment Raises Issue in Maryland

With exhibitors lined up on one side for recognition and advocates of strict censorship on another, Maryland is witnessing a battle over the appointment by Governor Albert C. Ritchie of the person who will serve on the State Censorship Board during the Governor's remaining two years in office.

The fight develops about the vacancy caused by the expiration of Charles F. Macklin's term. The Exhibitors' League, of which Eugene B. McCurdy is president and William F. Stumps, Jr., secretary, is pushing to the front Charles A. Hicks as its candidate. Hicks is owner of the Hampden Motion Picture theatre and is said to be well qualified to represent the motion picture men.

Opposing the Exhibitors' League is the Citizens' League for Better Motion Pictures. The citizens' organization, in its clamor for recognition, has passed a number of resolutions and forwarded them to the Governor. It claims a right in the naming of the new censor and wants a candidate meeting with its O. K. to go to the censorship board to give it all his time. A lengthy list of "high-type" persons has been sent by it to the Governor.

Can't Sell Sunday Tickets So He Asks Donations

J. C. ROBERTSON, manager of the A-Muse-U theatre at Hope, Ind., has the blue law cranks licked through a novel stunt. The Theatre was opened one Sunday evening but the ministers of the three churches, backed by their congregations forced it to close on threat of application of the Indiana Sunday closing law which provides a fine and imprisonment for any one operating an amusement on Sunday when admission is charged. The following Sabbath Robertson put a sign across the front of his theatre reading, "Please donate as we are selling no tickets."

Persons who wanted to see movies on Sunday donated liberally, while the reformers sat by with their hands crossed helplessly. The church folks have carried the fight to the town board.

Exhibitors' Chicago Branch Elects New Officers

An unusually large attendance marked the meeting of the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance, Chicago Branch, held at the Vitagraph Projection Room on June 10 to elect officers, the commission form of government, which has been in operation for over two years, having been abolished by the members of the branch at a previous meeting.

The wage scale of the operators also was discussed and a committee appointed to take up the matter with the men.

A strong appeal to attend the national convention of The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at Minneapolis on June 27th, 28th, and 29th was made by W. D. Burford, secretary of the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance.

The officers elected include: John Silha, president; H. Goldson, L. Siegel, J. B. Dibelka and George Bromley, vice-presidents; Julius Lamb, corresponding and recording secretary; Adolph Powell, financial secretary; H. Kahn, treasurer; Max Cooper, sergeant at arms. Members of the executive committee are as follows: Louis H. Frank, E. J. Haley, Joseph Hopp, J. Kallal, S. Selig, J. Cohen, R. Isrial and Paul Sittner.

Business Off Normal in Coast Theatres

Wire reports from the coast advise that patronage at Los Angeles theatres are from thirty to forty percent off normal with the depression still growing.

Business fell off slightly some two weeks ago, with last week as stated above. The lack of patronage extends to every house in the city and has affected every picture no matter how much of a box office attraction it was considered to be.

Undoubtedly however warm weather is having considerable to do with conditions, although the lack of employment among thousands of people who have been connected with the production of films is a big factor.

Canadian Exhibitors Start Organization Movement

A formal move has been made in Canada for the establishment of an exhibitors' organization, in which the managers of legitimate houses will also be eligible for membership, to seek remedy for existing conditions and, eventually, to bring about changes that will permit the reduction of admission prices at all theatres.

The step has been taken at Montreal, Quebec, where the Montreal Theatrical Managers' Protective Association has been organized. The avowed objects of the body are to create a better feeling among the different managers, to encourage co-operative measures and to present a united front to the theatrical employes' unions whose dictates have reached the limit, it is declared. The "grievances" against the labor unions are that the musicians, stage hands, electricians, operators and others have made exorbitant wage demands and have required vexatious and absurd working conditions.

Announcement has been made that the ultimate and chief aim of the new organization is to organize to reduce admission prices and not to raise them.

Officers have been elected as follows: President, Howard W. Conover, manager of the Imperial theatre, one of the large down-town theatres in which moving pictures are presented exclusively; vice-president, A. B. Wright, of the Princess, a vaudeville and moving picture house; secretary-treasurer, Fred Howarth, His Majesty's theatre.

Theatres represented at the organization meeting included practically all of the leading theatres in the Canadian Metropolis, such as the Capitol, Imperial, Allen, St. Denis, Loew's, Papineau, Strand, Regent, Princess, Gayety, Orpheum and His Majesty's.

N. Y. Press Club President Addresses A.M.P.A.

Percy Howard, president of the New York Press Club and editor in chief of the American Press Association, was the speaker at the A. M. P. A. dinner at the Cafe Boulevard, June 9. Mr. Howard delivered a plea for greater cooperation between newspaper publishers and motion picture producers, admitting that the publishers were equally at fault in the failure to establish relations mutually advantageous.

The A. M. P. A. adopted a resolution of thanks to Samuel Rothafel and H. Dowd of the Capitol theatre for their work in arranging the special presentation of the A. M. P. A. at the Harris theatre, June 5. Tentative plans were initiated for a big function for the A. M. P. A. in connection with the inauguration of new officers in the fall which will mark the fifth anniversary of the association's existence.

A Letter That Is Worth A Page of Space

SINCE children entertainments are now being experimented with by exhibitors and encouraged by trade publications, and inasmuch as we have established these special performances at our Tivoli theatre here with an attendance of between 1,600 and 2,000, I thought perhaps you would be interested in what has been accomplished in Chattanooga.

Censorship agitations and "Blue Sunday" propaganda, although allayed now, have done much in the past months to decrease the patronage of children. The growing tendency on the part of mothers to assume that the photoplay is not conducive to good morals, which took the form of almost a demand for children shows, coupled with the loss in patronage prompted us to delve into the possibilities of special performances designed to interest children between the ages of three to fifteen. After careful planning the children matinees on Saturday mornings were instituted, and have proved a success from the very start. Through them we are establishing a new kind of good will for the Tivoli. Those who have been more or less antagonistic toward theatre activities are now getting a new vision—learning that the theatre has become a potential factor for the promotion of art, music and literature in the community. The enthusiastic co-operation of ministers, educators and parents is indicative of this.

As much care and precision is exercised in the handling of these special shows as is given the regular performances. Officials and theatre attaches have at no time minimized the importance of conducting the matinees in the very best way possible. We believe that this has had much to do with the success of the venture.

In arranging the programs, the play hour feature is the first considered. Through the interest of local educators, the services of teachers trained in chorus work have been secured to lead the children in nursery and patriotic songs. So great has the interest of the school authorities become that the pictures exhibited are used as the topic of discussion in English classes on Monday mornings. The next period is given over to talks from ministers and educators who entertain with appropriate stories and sermonettes. The feature pictures are always carefully chosen and only such photoplays as the young people are capable of understanding shown.

The arrangement and rendition of musical programs is given particular attention, making the entertainment value of the play hour complete.

So great has been the attendance that an extra box office has been installed in the Tivoli lobby, and the use of four cashiers made necessary. Employees of the theatre from ushers to operators donate their time and enthusiastically assist in making the children safe and comfortable.

With two thousand children talking the photoplay in as many homes and with as many parents interested in our matinees, we believe we are building for the future, and enlisting staunch supporters of the cause of the industry. These gatherings are not only having a far-reaching effect upon the amusement public but are also having a tremendous influence upon those directly interested in the amusement business.

Very truly yours,

E. R. ROGERS.
Manager of Theatres,
SIGNAL AMUSEMENT CO.,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Wisconsin Refuses to Repeal Blue Laws

The Wisconsin senate by a vote of 21 to 9 refused to pass the Czerwinski bill providing for the repeal of the state blue laws on June 11th.

Senator Henry Roethe, in objecting to the passage of the measure, presented 340 petitions from all over the state and a list of objecting churches. After a page carried the huge pile of petitions and letters to the clerk's desk the measure was defeated. No immediate change is expected because the blue laws have been a dead letter for a number of years. The senate's refusal to repeal them probably indicates that they do not dare risk political criticism.

Jury Trial Expensive, So Sunday Shows Continue

Otto J. Motry is manager of the Lyric theatre at Tiffin, Ohio. His job is to furnish motion picture entertainment for the people of Tiffin. The ministers of Tiffin have tried to interfere with his job of furnishing entertainment on Sunday. They had him arrested once for operating contrary to law. Manager Motry's motion picture house was closed. He demanded a jury trial. The jury disagreed and the case was dismissed. Soon after that, Motry was again arrested on a similar charge. Again he demanded a jury trial. Again the jury disagreed. And now the county commissioner refuses to O. K. any bills submitted to him by the county prosecutor, dealing with the Sunday motion picture show. Reason is that jury trials are expensive, and the county commission doesn't want to put up any more money for an unlimited succession of jury trials that are bound to result in a series of disagreements.

So, Manager Motry is once again running Sunday shows. The law says it is unlawful to show motion pictures on Sunday, which contains a story. So the program at the Lyric theatre on Sunday is made up of news reels, scenics and educationals and cartoons. Manager Motry reports that with this program he had as much business on Sunday as he has had on any other average Sunday.

All Would Be Well Were This Line Reversed

Charles E. Moyer, publicity manager of United Artists, submits the following telegram addressed to President Hiram Abrams of United Artists by Bennie Zeidman of Los Angeles, Cal.:

"A manager here who owns a theatre two blocks below the Mission theatre today started court action to keep the long lines waiting to see Mary Pickford in 'Through the Back Door' from blocking his entrance. This is our second week."

Kipling's Picture to Open at Capitol on June 19th

"WITHOUT Benefit of Clergy," the screen adaptation of Rudyard Kipling's famous story, will be given its premiere at the Capitol theatre, New York City, Sunday, June 19. Announcement to this effect has just been made by the Pathe home-office. It is also stated that Samuel Rothafel will give special attention to the musical setting of "Without Benefit of Clergy," and will introduce the picture with the presentation of a beautiful and appropriate prologue.

The picture was made by Robert Brunton on the West Coast for release by Pathe. James Young directed the production. Randolph Lewis, who went abroad to aid Mr. Kipling in the screen adaptation of his story, was "on location" during the filming of the picture and assisted in the incorporation into the picture of Mr. Kipling's ideas and suggestions.

Virginia Faire plays the part of the Hindu heroine, Ameera. Thomas Holding appears in the role of the British engineer, and Nigel de Broulier has a strong native part.

Has Sheet to Standardize Production Estimating

Evidence of another step to establish the work of film production on a strict business basis is seen in the "Producers' Estimate Sheet," being issued to independent producers and directors by the Tilford Cinema Studios of New York. The estimate sheet probably represents the most successful effort yet made to standardize estimating for production in a comprehensive and systematic budget manner. The sheet shows in the first column the main production departments connected with the making of a picture. In the second column, as sub-divisions of the departments mentioned in the first, are presented the persons and expense items normally involved in the production of a motion picture. In a third column, and in horizontal lines with the sub-divisions of the second column, are squares within which may be recorded in itemized fashion the "estimated" and "actual" costs entailed.

Vitagraph Branch Manager in Kansas City Resigns

F. F. Nine, branch manager of the Kansas City, Mo., office of Vitagraph, has resigned his position, effective June 11. Mr. Nine has served as branch manager for three years and six months and has been connected with the Kansas City office of Vitagraph for six years. He was previously branch manager of the old Eclectic Feature Film Co. at the Kansas City office.

Look for Renewal of R.-C. Production Shortly

A wire from the Coast advises that Robertson-Cole has sent out requests for stories for Pauline Frederick and Sessue Hayakawa, indicating that a renewal of production will be started shortly.

$100,000 Alterations in Cincinnati Lyric

Improvements approximating $100,000 are to be made in the Lyric theatre, Cincinnati, during the latter part of August, by McMahan and Jackson, the lessees, who also are interested in the ownership of the property.

Plans for the changes, which will give a total seating capacity of 2,000, are now being completed. The additional seats will be obtained through the elimination of the boxes and cutting off of part of the stage. New chairs are to be installed as well as lighting fixtures and a ticket booth. The interior of the theatre also will be redecorated. The program also includes a new marquette.

When the work is finished the management intends to inaugurate a new policy for operation of the theatre.

William H. Bell of Kansas City Commits Suicide

William Henry Bell, head of the Camp-Bell Projector Company in Kansas City and former principal owner of the Equitable Film Company, is reported to have committed suicide Tuesday morning at his home, 525 Knickerbocker Place, Kansas City, by shooting himself. Mr. Bell, who was 40 years old, suffered a nervous breakdown about two years ago, and has been in ill health since then. He was born in New York City and had lived in Kansas City the last five years. He organized the company, of which he was the head, about nine months ago.

Wm. Taylor Going Abroad to Study Film Situation

William D. Taylor left Los Angeles late last week bound on a mission in which the picture community, the American Legion Film Post, and Chamber of Commerce in Los Angeles are intensely interested. Mr. Taylor is scheduled to sail from New York on Thursday of this week for Europe. While abroad he will reconnoiter the European film situation, especially in Germany. Mr. Taylor's trip abroad is also in the nature of a vacation after a protracted period of hard work and a recent operation, but he plans to combine business with pleasure. Edward Knoblock has tendered his Piccadilly apartment to Mr. Taylor during his stay in London.

Theatres Help Defeat Daylight Saving in Denver

Daylight saving was defeated in Denver, Col., at the municipal elections held in that city on Tuesday, May 17th. The theatrical interests of the city as well as the railroad companies are credited principally for the defeat of the daylight saving ordinance, as both these industries waged a strong campaign against its adoption. The voting was approximately 2 to 1 against the ordinance.

Enthusiasm Marks Approach of Convention

Exhibitors' Meeting Will Keep Strictly to Business; Special Rail Rate Arranged

A LATE announcement from the headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America advises that reports from all parts of the country indicate that the national convention of the M. P. T. O. of A. at Minneapolis, June 27, 28 and 29, will be one of the largest attended meetings in the history of the industry. The sessions will be held at the West Hotel, beginning Monday morning and continue through to a late hour Wednesday night. A list of the delegates and alternates elected by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois is submitted below as well as information on how those preparing to attend the convention may secure half-fare rate on the return trip from Minneapolis.

While the theatre owners attending the convention have declared their intention to make the convention predominantly a business one, yet an elaborate entertainment program, including tours, lake rides, and theatre parties, is being prepared for the wives and families of the attending exhibitors.

Some of the features of the convention schedule as reported by the M. P. T. O. of A. headquarters are:

Reports from the officers and committee of the organization, discussion of and course of action on producer-exhibitor affairs, action on the music royalty and five per cent film rental tax, report of the Washington executive committee regarding parcel post delivery of films, and protection of the independent theatre owners from attempted seizure of their theatres. One of the big events will be the banquet at which government officials, U. S. Senators and Congressmen, and several state governors are scheduled to speak.

A large number of delegates and alternates, elected by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois, have signified their intention of being aboard the special train which will leave Chicago on the morning of June 26 at 10 a. m. over the Burlington Railroad, scheduled to reach Minneapolis, the M. P. T. O. of A. convention city, that evening.

The list of delegates and alternates include:

DELEGATES—Joseph Hopp, Chicago, delegate at large; W. D. Burford, Aurora, delegate at large; Dee Robinson, Peoria; Chas. Lamb, Rockford; Don Bestor, Kankakee; Charles Law, Pana; William Pearl, Highland Park; T. E. Yemm, Duquoin; W. W. Watts, Springfield; J. F. Dittman, Freeport; William Cadoret, Kankakee; Ralph Crocker, Elgin; B. F. Uran, Mattoon; John Miller, Woodstock; Ed. Nelson, Quincy; John Koletis, Rock Island; J. W. Edwards, Aledo; and for Chicago, Fred Hartmann, Henry Von Meeteren, John Silha, J. B. Dibelka, M. O. Wells, H. D. Koffman, George Bromley, K. S. Fitzpatrick, John Frundt, H. Goldson.

ALTERNATES—Paul Sittner, Chicago; J. J. Rubens, Aurora; O. Frederick, Pekin; Claude Rew, Harrisburg; J. J. Hoffer, Peotone; Gus Karasotas, Springfield; M. M. Rubens, Joliet; H. Tanner, Pana; Joe E. Tabor, Belvidere; Barney Grossman, Moline; Peter E. Pinkleman, Quincy; Rex Lawhead, Decatur; F. Fisher, Kewanee; and for Chicago, Louis Siegel; R. Von Meeteren, M. Miller, Joe Kallal, M. Ortenstein, W. Christy, E. J. Haley, Harry Kahn, P. Lautenschlager, Louis Frank, J. W. Landes, Louis Brumhild.

Important Notice to All Attending Convention

A reduction of one and one-half fare for the round trip on the "Certificate Plan" will apply for members (also dependent members of their families) attending the meeting of the the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to be held at Minneapolis, June 27, 28, 29.

The following directions are submitted:

"Tickets at the normal one-way tariff fare for the going journey may be bought on any of the following dates (but not on any other date) June 23rd to 29th inclusive.

"Be sure when purchasing your going ticket to ask the ticket agent for a certificate. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. If, however, it is impossible to get a certificate from the local ticket agent, a receipt will be satisfactory and should be secured when ticket is purchased. See that the ticket reads to the point where the convention is to be held and no other. See that your certificate is stamped with the same date as your ticket. Sign your name to the certificate or receipt in ink. Show this to the ticket agent.

"Call at the railroad station for ticket and certificate at least 30 minutes before departure of train.

"Immediately on your arrival at the meeting, present your certificate to the endorsing office, Mr. Sidney Samuelson as the reduced fare for the return journey will not apply unless you are properly identified as provided for by the certificate."

The special rate privilege entitles the holder to a return ticket via the same route as the going journey at one-half of the normal one-way tariff fare from the place of meeting to point at which the helder's certificate was issued up to and including July 2, 1921.

Return tickets issued at the reduced fare will not be good on any limited train on which such reduced fare transportation is not honored.

Portland Seeks to End "Child Problem"

Jensen-Von Herberg Establish Information Service to Classify Features

IF the "children problem" were removed how much of the motion picture censorship trouble would remain? Portland, Ore., thinks it is in a fair way to eliminate the oft-heard argument—"it isn't for the adult that we must have protection but for youngsters not old enough to discriminate or judiciously assimilate." For at the request of approximately 200 members of the city federation of women's clubs, C. S. Jensen, of the Liberty, Columbia, Peoples, Majestic and Star theatre interests, has established an information bureau to be known as the Picture Guide.

The Picture Guide will classify each current attraction at a Jensen and Von Herberg theatre in respect to its suitability for exhibition to children. An exceedingly brief synopsis of the photoplays will be given and as well as the rating of the management of them as regards to children.

The idea is to leave the matter to the discrimination of the mother as far as possible and to take responsibility from the exhibitor. Wherever the picture is o. k. the girl who answers the Picture Guide telephone will preface the rating by the phrase, "Thought by the management." Always an "it is said," "it is thought," or "we consider" will be made in connection with an opinion issuing from the managers.

"The Home Stretch," the Douglas MacLean photoplay, when it showed recently in Portland, was not recommended as suitable for children because it was founded on horse racing and betting, but in making this statement the Picture Guide emphasized that while this was true, the picture was fundamentally a clean, wholesome picture.

"The Love Flower," D. W. Griffith's production, was another photoplay the Picture Guide declared to be entirely clean but not entirely suitable for children. While the Picture Guide did not give this fact to the public, its decision was based on the Motion Picture News review which stated that the cinema's theme seemed to be that "crimes attempted or committed in the name of love are justifiable." An adult, the Picture Guide pointed out, might not accept this philosophy but to a child anything printed or demonstrated on the screen is so without argument.

Children patronage is not solicited by Jensen and Von Herberg theatres, and as this statement has often been made during censorship arguments, the Portland public is inclined to accept the judgment of the Picture Guide as leaning toward a rather severe criticism of children's pictures rather than telling the mothers that every and any photoplay showing in its houses is suitable for all persons regardless of age.

The new policy of co-operating with would-be reformers and in turn having their co-operation is an outgrowth of a meeting of the city federation of women's clubs called to hear George Beban address it on "A Higher Standard for Motion Pictures." Mr. Beban urged the women to utter their protest against salacious films by creating a box office demand for pictures of a higher standard. Attendance at every wholesome picture is the only way to do this, he declared.

Film Tariff Hearing

income tax. Importers can sell the bulk of their output here and pay nothing.

"A duty of thirty per cent would not, according to my estimation, reduce the importations one dollar's worth, and I will tell you why, from actual experience. Before making my arrangements to distribute American made films I was exclusively an importer of foreign films. This was French film, and I paid a duty of twenty-five per cent ad valorem over the price on the other side and was still able to undersell the American manufacturer and leave myself a half a cent foot profit, which is enormous."

Paul Cromelin, president of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, and the Cromlow Laboratories, had evidently sat through the morning hearings with an irksome feeling. On short notice he secured an opportunity to appear before the committee in the afternoon, as he declared, "In opposition to the position taken by Mr. Brulatour, of the Eastman Kodak Company."

After pointing out the fact that the Eastman Company supplied at least ninety per cent of the film used in this country, Mr. Cromelin characterized as "audacity" the attempt of such an organization to secure protection. He brought out the interesting point that the Gevaert Company, with factories at Antwerp, Belgium, and the chief foreign competitor of Eastman at present, must purchase its celluloid base in this country from the Celluloid Company of America.

"The raw material, made in the United States, going across to Belgium, treated there and returned here, represents two-thirds of the cost of the finished product. The actual labor cost is insignificant."

Mr. Cromelin's time closed with questions from Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, bringing out the point that if foreign film were completely barred the sole source of assured raw stock in quality and quantity would be the Eastman Company.

Following the hearings the "Motion Picture Film Laboratories," comprising the principal laboratories in the East under the chairmanship of Major Tom Evans, filed a memorandum with the committee. The brief goes far towards summing up the case for the advocates of a free trade in motion picture raw stock. Its principal sections are here reprinted:

The Laboratory Viewpoint

"The following reasons are respectfully submitted to the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives why the proposed tariff of thirty per cent ad valorem on raw stock, now on the free list, should not be imposed and why this raw material should be continued on the free list.

I.

"Motion picture film, sensitized but not exposed or developed, is the basic material, known in the art as raw stock, on which motion pictures are produced.

"The raw stock serves no useful or commercial purpose other than as a base for the making of the motion picture known to commerce. It can be used for no other purpose and has no other market.

II.

"Raw stock is manufactured in the United States, almost exclusively, by one concern—the Eastman Kodak Company.

"This is confirmed by the statement of the Eastman Kodak Company, signed by George Eastman, President, sworn to on the 31st day of January, 1921, and appearing in Tariff Information, 1921, hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, on Schedule N, February 10th, 1921, Print No. 31, pages 3187, et seq., in which Mr. Eastman swears to the following:

> In the year 1920 the Eastman Kodak Company's sales of motion picture film in the United States were over six times as large as they were in 1910.
>
> In the year 1920 the Eastman Kodak Company's output of motion picture film was over 800,000,000 linear feet. . . .
>
> The Eastman Kodak Company having practically created the business, has maintained its lead, solely by reason of the high quality and uniformity of its products.
>
> The field was open to competition and motion picture film has not been manufactured to any considerable extent in the United States by others simply because others have been unable to make a competing film. . . .

"The amount indicated by Mr. Eastman is practically the quantity of motion picture footage consumed in the United States during the year 1920, thus substantiating by his statements that the Eastman Kodak Company practically controls and has a monopoly upon the manufacture of this material in the United States.

"In the same report of hearings, February 10th, 1921, Mr. J. E. Brulatour, who is the exclusive distributor for use in the United States of Eastman raw stock, in also pleading for a duty of thirty per cent, complains about the increasing amount of importation from Belgium and France of this material and particularly of the importations for the year 1920. This is a plea for protection to the American manufacturer.

"The Eastman Company, now enjoying the monopoly and seeking the protection of a tariff of thirty per cent, paid over $8,000,000 in dividends in 1920 and had left over for the year a surplus of over $10,300,000. This company has, for the year 1920, again earned almost its entire capitalization.

"The report of the earnings of the Eastman Kodak Company, published in the New York Globe on May 20th, 1921, follows:

EASTMAN KODAK

The Eastman Kodak Company's annual report for the year ended Dec. 31, 1920, shows net profits after federal taxes of $18,566,211, equivalent after preferred dividends to $92.53 a share earned on the $19,664,600 common stock. This compares with net profits of $18,326,188, or $91.78 a share on the $19,503,400 outstanding stock in the previous year.

The income account for the year 1920 compares as follows:

	1920.	1919.
Net profits	$18,566,211	$18,326,188
Preferred dividends	369,942	369,942
Common dividends	7,865,840	7,819,110
Surplus	$10,330,429	$10,137,136

After federal taxes.

"The earnings for the year 1920 are said to be the largest in the history of the concern and yet were earned in a period of the largest foreign importations.

III.

"A tariff of thirty per cent upon foreign raw stock would not produce a revenue to the government of the United States. On the contrary, it would result in practically a prohibition of import.

"The best obtainable information covering the imported product indicates that the raw base, i. e., celluloid, is imported to a very large extent from the United States, treated abroad, and returned to the United States as finished product. This base, celluloid material, an American product, constitutes more than two-thirds of the cost of the finished article: the labor entering into the manufacture being the smallest item of expense.

"(See statement of Paul H. Cromelin, President of the Inter Ocean Film Corporation, and communication from Louis Destenay, Vice-President of the Gevaert Company of America, Inc., in printed report, Tariff Information, 1921, hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, on Schedule N, February 12th, 1921, Print No. 33, pages 3635, particularly 3637.)

IV.

"A thirty per cent ad valorem tariff upon imported raw stock would make absolute the monopoly of a single American manufacturer.

"While the imposition of the thirty per cent tariff, sought by the Eastman Kodak Company, would prevent importation of foreign raw film, such tariff is pregnant with a much greater menace to the motion picture industry in the United States. While all picture producers not affiliated with the Eastman Company would be adversely affected, the very existence of the motion picture film laboratories is threatened.

"These laboratories receive from the producers of motion pictures the negatives from which are printed all the positive copies required for showing in the theatres. These copies are printed on raw stock. The laboratory, in order to proceed with its manufacture, depends absolutely on a steady supply of raw stock of a uniform grade and quality. To deprive the laboratories is to forthwith cancel their operations and put them out of business. There are no substitutes. To impose a duty of thirty per cent on imported raw material is to deprive them of the only available competitive source of supply and to subject them without recourse to the whims or mercy of the one manufacturer in the United States controlling this supply.

"This is no idle academic contention. For the past activities of the Eastman Kodak Company see page 3635 of Tariff Information, hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, February 12th, 1921, Print No. 33.

"The investments in the motion picture laboratories aggregate many millions of dollars.

"The motion picture laboratories give employment to thousands from coast to coast of the United States.

Uniform Rental Contract Sent to Producers

FOLLOWING is a copy of the tentative contract drawn up by the Committee on Business Relations of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and presented to all the producers in the industry. This contract will also be submitted to the exhibitors at the convention in Minneapolis, June 27, 28 and 29.

The members of the Committee on Business Relations are: E. T. Peter, Dallas, Texas; H. H. Lustig, Cleveland, Ohio; W. D. Burford, Aurora, Illinois; John Evans, Philadelphia, Pa.; C. H. Burkey, Kansas City, Mo.; John Mannheimer, Brooklyn, N. Y.; M. Edelbertz, New York City, and S. Morass, New York City.

"THIS AGREEMENT, made the day of , 19 between hereinafter called the exhibitor and hereinafter called the distributor, WITNESSETH:

"1. The distributor agrees to let and the exhibitor agrees to hire the films hereinafter specified for the date hereinafter specified.
Name of Subject Date of Exhibition

"2. The exhibitor agrees to pay for each film as follows:

"3. The exhibitor agrees to exhibit said motion pictures only on the date or dates hereinbefore set forth.

"4. The distributor agrees that it will furnish the exhibitor with a copy of each film in time for exhibition at the theatre of the exhibitor on each of the dates above set forth.

"5. The exhibitor agrees that it will be responsible for the film. That if the film is lost, destroyed or damaged, the exhibitor will pay to the distributor therefor the sum of per lineal foot of film so destroyed or damaged in full settlement of all claims.

"6. If the distributor fails to deliver any one of the films above listed according to the terms of this contract, then and in that event, the exhibitor at his option may declare the entire contract void.

"7 During the life of this agreement, the distributor agrees that it shall not permit the exhibition of any film above specified in any other theatre until days after the final date of showing of such film as above set forth. The distributor and exhibitor, recognizing the impossibility of ascertaining the exact amount of damages that may be sustained by the distributor in the event of a breach by the distributor of any of the provisions of this paragraph, it is hereby agreed by both parties hereto that in the event of such a breach, the distributor will pay to the exhibitor as liquidated damages an amount equal to double the amount of the rental price paid or charged for such picture and in addition thereto any sum or sums charged by or paid to the distributor to or by any theatre or theatres where such picture may be shown, in breach of the provision of this paragraph.

"8. In the event that the distributor shall fail to provide the exhibitor with any of the above pictures at the time above specified, it is hereby agreed that the distributor will pay to the exhibitor as liquidated damages in accordance with the provision of the foregoing paragraph, an amount equal to double the rental value of the picture so failed to be delivered, except that if such failures occur on Saturdays, Sundays or holidays, the amount of liquidated damages to be paid by the distributor shall be treble the rental value. If, in such event, the distributor sends a substitute film for the one herein provided for, the exhibitor, if he accepts such substitute, shall not be obliged to pay any rental therefor. It is understood, however, that the payment of the liquidated damages as herein provided for, for such failure to deliver, shall not relieve the distributor from furnishing such a picture to the exhibitor for some other date, to be selected by the exhibitor, in accordance with the terms of this agreement, if the exhibitor shall elect to show such picture at some future date.

"9. Of the above named films, the following only are reissues or recreated pictures:

"10. This contract shall be binding on both parties hereto immediately upon the affixing of the signatures by the exhibitor and a representative of the distributor to duplicate copies hereof, unless notice by registered mail or telegram of the cancellation threof by the distributor shall have reached the exhibitor within days from such signature. One of the duplicate copies shall be left with the exhibitor. The maximum time, however, for the cancellation of this contract by the distributor may be shortened if mutually agreed upon at the time of the execution of this contract. And it is further agreed that neither the distributor nor the producer shall offer any of the above pictures for sale until after such exhibitor shall have received notice of the cancellation of the contract by the distributor or producer as herein provided for. Should the producer or distributor offer any of the pictures above listed for sale in prior to the receipt of the notice of cancellation by the exhibitor as herein provided for, then and in that event the exhibitor may at his option demand the performance of this agreement irrespective of any cancellation and the distributor hereby agrees, upon such demand being made, to deliver to the exhibitor all of the above named films in accordance with the terms of ths iagreement."

Pueblo's Film Theatre Invaded by Flood; the Colonial Heavily Damaged

A TELEGRAM just received from Denver, Col., describes some of the damage inflicted on the local motion picture theatres in Pueblo, Col., during the recent flood which swept that vicinity. According to the wire, the Colonial, which is situated in the neighborhood of the Grand Opera House, was heavily damaged. The Grand Opera House, the Rialto, and the Palm are also reported to have been invaded by the flood waters. While some of the picture houses are planning to reopen by June 20 and some by August and September, there are others which have been ruined beyond any possibility of resuming business. Reliable information as to the full extent and the details of the damage done to the local film theatres is still unobtainable, but the telegram from the Denver correspondent of the News gives some idea of the destruction wrought.

The stage of the Grand Opera House was buried under seven feet of water. The piano was lifted from the orchestra pit by the onrush of the water and left lying face down on the stage. There was ten feet of water in the lobby, and when the flood receded, it left a deposit of eight inches of mud throughout the house. The fact that the waters receded quickly saved the house from very severe damage. It is expected that the Grand Opera House will not reopen before July 1. This theatre had opened only one week before the flood, following renovations which cost $20,000.

The water flooded the basement of the Rialto to a depth of about three feet, gaining access through the basement windows. No severe damage was sustained, and the house will probably resume business about June 20, with a comedy program. Admission charged will be not less than fifty cents. Receipts as well as donations given for food and clothing will be turned over to the Red Cross for relief work.

The Palm Theatre, it is expected, will reopen about June 20 with "Life's Twist" as feature attraction. The Console organ recently installed at the Palm at a cost of $26,000 was submerged during the flood. No other details as to the damage done have been obtainable so far.

Magazine Story's Title Protected by Court

A decision of importance to all producers of motion pictures was rendered by Judge Learned Hand in the United States District Court, Southern District of New York, in the case of the International Film Service Company, Inc., against Associated Producers, Inc. Nathan Burkan argued the case for International Film Service Company, Inc.

The case concerned the title of a production called "The Broken Doll." The court held that there is direct competition between a motion picture and a story or novel which bear the same title, and that when an author has written a story under a title he is guaranteed protection for that title should he, in the future, wish to make a motion picture version of it.

Judge Hand decided that in this particular case in order to protect the International Film Service Company, Inc., makers of Cosmopolitan Productions, the defendant, Associated Producers, Inc., must give a bond of $25,000 to secure Cosmopolitan Productions against any damages the production of "The Broken Doll" may cause the picture by the same title made by Cosmopolitan Productions because of the use of this title by the Associated Producers. The judge furthermore ordered that Associated Producers keep an account of its profits on its pictures, and that Cosmopolitan Productions must have access to the books of Associated Producers on "The Broken Doll."

Judge Hand's decision is of special importance to Cosmopolitan Productions, states that company, because it ensures to it protection for the titles of all short stories or novels published in the Hearst magazines which it may intend to produce as photoplays in the future.

Film Tariff Hearing

"It is common knowledge in the motion picture industry that Mr. J. E. Brulatour, the sole distributor of the Eastman Kodak Company raw film in the United States, has for some time past been, though not openly, in the motion picture laboratory business and that he is largely interested in extensive laboratories capable of printing a large percentage of the films required for use in the United States.

"To impose a tariff of thirty per cent would make it entirely possible for Mr. Brulatour or the Eastman Kodak Company not only to maintain the monopoly on raw stock but to enjoy for all practical purposes a monopoly of the film laboratory business.

V.

"The Eastman Company, by the testimony of Mr. George Eastman, is practically the only company making raw stock in the United States. The other three concerns, which have attempted from time to time to produce, have a total output which is known to those in the industry to be almost negligible.

"Attention has been called to a statement filed with your Committee by Mr. P. A. Powers of the Powers Film Products Company, also of Rochester, New York, in which he pleads for protection against the possible danger of foreign importation of raw stock. In his communication Mr. Powers has referred to the fact that he is a small manufacturer and that he would probably have to discontinue manufacturing unless the duty is imposed, and he also states that the Agfa Company is selling raw stock in this market at .015 per foot where it costs him, Powers, .0211 per foot to manufacture. We have positive and definite information that the Agfa Company, which, until the latter part of March, 1921, imported no raw stock to the United States since before 1914, has not sold its product at any such price and Mr. Powers' statement in this regard can be emphatically and indisputably denied and further proof can be submitted if necessary.

"Whether there is any connection between the Eastman Company and Mr. Powers, we are not advised, but your Committee should know that Mr. Powers is not the poor little manufacturer which his letter to your Committee might lead one to suppose. He is a man of large means, one of the oldest distributors of motion pictures in the United States, formerly for many years Treasurer of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and maker of Powers Films, formerly exclusive distributor for Agfa stock in this country, and his recent venture in raw stock production is but one of his many activities in his various ramifications in the motion picture industry.

"A tariff upon raw stock would create an absolute monopoly in favor of the Eastman Kodak Company, would be against the best interests of the Motion Picture Industry, would place the monopoly in a position to drive out of business all competing motion picture laboratories and would bring no revenue to the Government.

Respectfully submitted,
MAJOR TOM EVANS,
On behalf of:

Biograph Co. of America, Craftsmen Film Laboratories, Inc., Nicholas Kessell Laboratories, Evans Film Mfg. Co., Republic Laboratories, Inc., Claremont Laboratories, Eclipse Laboratories, Film Developing Co., Cromlow Laboratories, Dobbs Laboratories, Tremont Laboratories, National Laboratories.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 220 SO. STATE ST.

District Manager Shirley, of Metro, is back in Chicago after a fishing trip to Northern Wisconsin. He reports making a splendid catch and sprung a new one when he said that one fish he caught was so big he couldn't bring it home.

Miss Beatrice Barrett, who is widely known throughout motion picture circles of the Central West, is now handling the publicity for Argus Enterprises' Chicago offices, as well as for Fitzpatrick & McElroy, with whom she has been connected for sometime past.

Mathias Hanna is being held to await the action of the grand jury on five thousand dollar bonds after a hearing in the Peoria police court on a charge of attempting to extort five hundred dollars from Dee Robinson, well known theatre man of that city. At the police court hearing Mr. Robinson and Ben Serkowich, publicity manager of the Madison theatre, were the witnesses against the man. The former told of receiving threatening letters directing him to leave a can containing five hundred dollars near Grand View Drive or suffer death. The first letter was addressed to the theatre and contained a map showing the exact spot where the can was to be thrown. Serkowich told of watching Hanna when he went to the place indicated in his letters and of the subsequent arrest. The hand writing on the letters sent to Mr. Robinson and of writing found in Hanna's room appeared to be identical. It is thought the Federal authorities will take over the case.

S. J. Rollo, of Clark-Cornelius, was in Chicago last week and while here screened six subjects which he is distributing on the independent market.

Among the out-of-town visitors to the Windy City last week was C. J. Ver Halen, who spent several days here conferring with some of his clients.

The Adams, the new motion picture theatre on Adams street, between State and Wabash, is rapidly nearing completion and is scheduled to open within a few weeks. The opening will mark the invasion of the loop district by the Vista Amusement Enterprises, headed by H. M. Ortenstein. The house will seat approximately six hundred persons and while comparatively small, will be beautifully decorated and equipped. The other theatres operated by the Vista Amusement Enterprises include the Vista, Twentieth Century, New Park and Garden.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer cut the admission prices on their string of Chicago loop theatres last week, the Randolph theatre going to thirty cents, including war tax, for daytime performances, and after six P. M., forty cents. At the Orpheum twenty-five cents will be charged except on Saturday and Sunday when the price goes up five cents and at the Bijou Dream, Alcazar, Rose, Boston and Lyric, cuts were also effected. Jones, Linick & Schaefer announced their reduction to the public by large canvas signs on the front of the theatres bearing the words, "Back to pre-war theatre prices." Several other Chicago theatres followed the lead set by Jones, Linick & Schaefer during the week, although the reductions made were not as sharp as those above noted.

Sales Manager Bond, of Associated First National, has added G. L. Seers to his sales staff. Mr. Seers, who recently was associated with Favorite Players, will cover city territory for First National.

L. A. Rozelle, of Metro, was called to Brentwood, Tennessee, his old home, this week by the death of his mother, and expects to be back in Chicago the first of next week.

Manager Ben Beadell, of Associated Producers, has appointed Ben Weisenbach salesman to cover the Southern Wisconsin territory for Associated. Mr. Weisenbach has a large acquaintance throughout the territory, having formerly been connected with Goldwyn.

Cliff Bestar, one of the veteran salesman of the Chicago district, now is connected with Educational and Manager I. Maynard Schwartz has assigned him to cover the northside Chicago territory.

Rex Lawhead, of the Lincoln Square Theatre, Decatur, Illinois, was in Chicago this week booking pictures for his house and reports that his house is continuing to do good business despite the general depression.

C. E. Bond, of First National, is vacationing at Allagan, Michigan, and expects to remain at the Summer resort there until the end of the month when he will be back at his desk at First National's Chicago office.

An interest in the Reed-Yen Circuit, which operates theatres in Southern Illinois, has been purchased by Joe Huitt, of the Strand Theatre at Robinson. It is understood that Mr. Huitt will move to Benton where he will take charge of the circuit's house in that city. Robert Cluster, who formerly ran the Benton Theatre, will devote his entire time to houses he owns in Pickneyville and Salem.

Dan Barton, of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, has completed his plans for attending the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at Minneapolis. Mr. Barton will drive from Oshkosh, Wisconsin, where the Bartola plant is located, to Minneapolis in his Stutz and, according to reports as to his ability as a speeder, should beat the railroad time schedule into the northern metropolis by hours.

Harry Rice, until recently publicity and advertising manager for Ascher Brothers Circuit, now is associated with L. Bland & Son, 1009 S. Wabash Avenue, makers of signs, show cards, and theatrical lobby displays. Harry, who is widely known as a publicity and exploitation man of real ability, plans to utilize his knowledge of these matters for the benefit of exhibitors doing business with L. Bland & Son and promises some novel exploitation features.

Lee Herz was in New York this week, stopping at the Hotel Astor, and while there he looked over a number of feature and short subject reels with a view to adding to the list of pictures he is releasing in Illinois and Indiana. He expects to be back in Chicago early next week.

C. A. Day, of Streeter, Illinois, has closed his Majestic Theatre at Streeter for the first time in fourteen years in order to thoroughly redecorate and refurnish the house. He plans to reopen it on Labor Day and before then will install new seats, draperies, screen and other fixtures, which practically will make it a new house.

Si Griever, of Griever Productions, is lining up a big list of feature releases and within the last few days has secured the rights for Illinois and Indiana on more than twenty feature pictures, including, "Headin' Home," starring Babe Ruth; "Dangerous Love," "Whispering Shadows," "The Wakefield Case" and six Clark-Cornelius Corporation features.

S. E. Schaffer & Company held the formal opening of its big show room and double projection rooms at 24 E. Eighth Street, on Monday and Sam Schaffer was kept busy greeting the large number of exchange men, exhibitors, and others who visited his new headquarters during the day. His double projection room is one of the most completely furnished and well ventilated rooms of its kind in the city and is equipped with DaLight Screens, a battery of the newest Powers Projectors and comfortable leather seats. The Schaffer Company will become distributors of Powers Projectors in this territory on July 1st and also will carry a complete line of motion picture theatre accessories.

The Grand at Lincoln, Illinois, has been purchased by F. J. Rembush, of Shelbyville, Indiana. Mr. Rembusch for some time has operated theatres in the Hoosier state but this is his first house in Illinois.

Shipman to Handle the U. C. I. Films Here

Contracts executed between Signor Giuseppe Barattolo, president of the Unione Cinematografica Italiana of Rome, Italy, controlling the productions of Pina Menichelli, Carlos Amato, President of Societa Rinascimento of Italy, makers of the Pina Menichelli productions, and Ernest Shipman of New York, specify Shipman as the distributing factor for all of the Pina Menichelli Productions for a period of five years.

"The Naked Truth" and "The Dangerous Age" are finished and enroute to New York; Emile Zola's "A Page of Love" and Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" are now in the making. Carlos Amato will take his company to London for the exteriors of the Pinero story.

"Home Talent" Has Long Run in Chicago

Mack Sennett's special five-reel comedy, "Home Talent," which is now being distributed by Associated Producers, Inc., is said to be attracting much attention among exhibitors throughout the country because of its record in Chicago. This production set a precedent when it played for three weeks recently at the Ziegfeld Theatre in the loop and then went into McVicker's for a second run where it is now in its fourth week, doing capacity business.

Plans for Laemmle-Universal Anniversary

H. M. BERMAN, general-manager of the Universal Film exchanges, announces that the period from July 4th to September 5th is to be known as the "Laemmle-Universal Anniversary" period. The reason for this is that during the period selected Universal will celebrate its ninth year in the motion-picture industry and Carl Laemmle president of Universal Film, will celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of his entrance into the film business. In the second place, declares Mr. Berman, it is aimed to help out the box-office of the theatre-owner by furnishing him with an "out of the ordinary" appeal to his patrons.

The arrangement which Universal has in view for the exhibitor is described as follows in the statement issued this week from the Universal home-office:

"To any exhibitor who desires to make use of the material with which Universal will provide him to celebrate the Laemmle-Universal Anniversary, and who for one solid week will run a 100%-Universal feature service, the exchange will supply free a big banner in full colors, reading: Gala Week, Laemmle-Universal Anniversary. An extraordinary showing of specially selected Universal pictures. This alone should serve to attract a great deal of interest on the part of those who pass the theatre. In addition to that, Universal has designed two posters, one a three-sheet and the other a one-sheet, in full color, for use of exhibitors both in the lobby and at any other advantageous place. These posters utilize two birthday cakes, as the most fitting symbol of this double anniversary. There is also a special line of advertisements, mats of which will be sent free. The publicity mats and stories will also be incorporated in an attractive press book which will be distributed by the exchanges, telling exactly how this anniversary can be utilized to the benefit of any theatre which desires an unusual occasion for a week during the summer time.

The statement from the Universal headquarters traces in detail Mr. Laemmle's career from his entrance into the film business as an exhibitor in Chicago in 1906 up to the present day which finds Mr. Laemmle at the head of one of the most powerful producing and distributing organizations in the motion-picture industry. Following his successful launching of two small picture theatres in Chicago in the early part of 1906, Mr. Laemmle opened an exchange in the Crilley Building in a little room, 15 x 30 feet, in October of 1906. This exchange was moved in June of 1907 to larger quarters on Lake and Fifth Avenue.

About the same time, Laemmle and his associates started the Imp producing company on 56th Street, New York City. By October of the same year, the first picture of the Imps, entitled "Hiawatha," was released. The success of the Imps enterprise caused Mr. Laemmle to move his headquarters from Chicago to New York. When Laemmle started in the exhibiting business in 1906, he had a capital estimated at $4,000, the savings of a previous period of employment in an Oshkosh, Wis., clothing store. His first theatre was a renovated store seating only 180. From such small beginnings, Laemmle has risen despite many difficulties to his present position of prominence in the affairs of the motion-picture industry. The Universal statement continues its story of his career as follows:

"The Patents Company was formed in 1909 and in order to protect themselves, Mr. Laemmle and a number of other independents organized what was known as the Sales Company. The stirring times from 1909 to 1912 are still fresh in the minds of many in the business, and the part played by Mr. Laemmle and the Imp Company are matters upon which the president of the Universal looks back with a great deal of pride.

"Out of this old Sales Company grew the Universal, which was incorporated in June 10th, 1912. Its first president was Charles Baumann, and its office was established in Baumann's office, No. 1 Union Square. Through an internal dissension and the refusal of the Baumann & Kessel interests to turn over their property to the Universal Company, both Baumann and Kessel withdrew, and Mr. Laemmle was elected president. The newly formed Universal company was then established in 1600 Broadway, where it has remained ever since. From half of the third floor, which it first rented and on which both the exchange and the general offices were situated, it has grown to occupy all of the third floor, all of the seventh floor, and part of the second and of the eighth floors. The companies which came into the Universal at the start were the Imp, Rex, Bison, Champion, Nestor and the Powers. Later were added Frontier, Eclair, Crystal, and the Gaumont for a short period.

"Mr. Laemmle and the company which is the embodiment of his fighting spirit have always been independent. Every movement to enslave the industry or any part of it has met with his ready and wholehearted opposition. The Universal has spent thousands of dollars, often fighting alone, for the protection of a principle, and it has won every fight it has ever entered.

"Three-quarters of the stars and leading players of today received their first start with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company either in the old Imp days or in the big studio at Fort Lee, or at Universal City, California. Universal has been the big training school of the industry.

Artistic Settings in New Ingram Special

The combined efforts of Rex Ingram, youthful director of the Ibanez picture, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and Ralph Barton, poster artist, have resulted in the achieving of some of the most artistic picture settings ever attempted for "The Conquering Power," the newest production of Mr. Ingram for Metro, reports that company. This adaptation by June Mathis of a story by Balzac will be on as ambitious a scale as "The Four Horsemen," it is said.

The casting of the picture is progressing rapidly and almost without exception the principal roles for this picture have been assigned to players who enacted parts of prominence in Mr. Ingram's masterpiece, "The Four Horsemen."

Shirley Mason to Star in "Lovetime"

William Fox announces that Shirley Mason will be next starred in a photoplay titled "Lovetime." The author of the story, which is described to be "a delicate romance of the heart," and in which the star plays the role of a French peasant girl, is Dorothy Yost. Howard M. Mitchell will direct.

Ed. Hearne Opposite Anita Stewart

Edward Hearne is Anita Stewart's leading man in her new picture, "A Question of Honor," a Louis D. Mayer offering which Edwin Carewe is directing. In the balance of the supporting cast are Arthur Stuart Hull, Ed Drady, Frank Deal, Walt Whitman and Bert Sprotte. Josephine Squirk prepared the scenario from the Ruth Cross story of the same name which ran as a serial in the People's Home Journal. The initial scenes, depicting the romance, excitement and thrills of life in the mining and lumber country of the North, are now being filmed in the Sierra Mountains. Robert B. Kurrle, A. S. C., is in charge of the photography. The picture will be released as a Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction.

Two Realart Releases on B'way This Week

Realart announces that for the week of June 12th, there will be two pictures playing on Broadway; one at the Rialto and the other at the Rivoli.

The attraction at the Rialto will be Wanda Hawley in "A Kiss In Time." It is Douglas Doty's adaptation of a story by Royal Brown, which appeared in McClure's Magazine, and was directed by Thomas Heffron. T. Roy Barnes plays opposite Miss Hawley and Walter Hiers lends "weighty" support.

The Rivoli will show Realart's Birthday Production, "A Private Scandal," with dainty May McAvoy in the stellar role. Hector Turnbull wrote this story especially for Realart's anniversary and Chester Franklin, who is now in the East making a picture with Constance Binney, directed it. A particularly strong cast includes Bruce Gordon, Kathlyn Williams, Ralph Lewis and Lloyd Whitlock. Eve Unsell prepared the scenario.

Veiller About to Start Second for Metro

Just as soon as Viola Dana completes work on "The Match Breaker," Bayard Veiller will begin the filming of his second feature for Metro, tentatively titled "Under the Sour Apple Tree." Miss Dana will be the star. The story for the new Veiller production was written by Frank R. Adams.

"Butterfly Girl" Said to Win Favor

"The Butterfly Girl," a Playgoers Picture production, distributed by Pathe, is reported to be finding favor with exhibitors in all parts of the country. The combination of Marjorie Daw, King Baggott and Fritzi Brunette in one picture is a popular one and the strength of the story puts the production over in excellent style.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Sentimental Tommy—

No picture ever had better treatment from the local press but business did not hold up apparently because local business has been generally poor for the past few weeks and because the very people who say they fight for this sort of clean film did not support it. (Middle West.)

The picture should be a different title as it carries a genuine dramatic appeal instead of dealing with comedy. A sure business getter for a week. (Middle West.)

Had a wonderful reception from the few that saw it. (West.)

Deception—

Appeals to educated classes and lovers of history with peculiar force. General public not interested. (Middle West.)

Went over very big. (Middle West.)

Very elaborate production well received in spite of German agitation. Many favorable comments. Splendid direction. (West.)

Largely entertaining. Shot the box office receipts up high. (West.)

Idols of the North—

Splendid northern picture, well acted and good settings, fair settings, fair photography, good direction. Splendid audience and box office picture. (West.)

Fans seem to like it, but no extraordinary enthusiasm. (West.)

A mediocre production which recorded fair business, because of star's popularity. (East.)

City of Silent Men—

A good picture, well acted and having a strong, well-developed plot. Good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Repeat that drew well. (East.)

Very good entertainment and has good box office value. (West.)

The Love Special—

Believe Reid could act the telephone book and get away with it here, for he sure brings in the money. Excellent business for three days, on second run. (East.)

Too Much Speed—

The picture was selected as the feature in conjunction with the second anniversary musical revue at my house and it went over big. Capacity business all week. (Middle West.)

Brewster's Millions—

Appealing picture for comedy on account of star, Fatty Arbuckle. Business fair despite warm weather and no exploitation. (Middle West.)

The Traveling Salesman—

My people liked Fatty in two-reelers, but they just won't see him in feature length stuff. Business very poor. (East.)

Sacred and Profane Love—

Woman God Changed—

Strong story with decided moral that is pretty heavy food for summer consumption. High order of photoplay and will appeal to thinking classes. (Middle West.)

A Perfect Crime—

Pleasing picture, but receipts were poor. (East.)

What Every Woman Knows—

Superb, artistic, and thoroughly delightful, but did poor business for me. Can't understand it, but it's true. (East.)

Buried Treasure—

Good picture to a good attendance. (East.)

White and Unmarried—

Well received, receipts pleasing. (East.)

Excellent business, as is usual when I play a Thomas Meighan picture. Do not consider picture up to standard set by "City of Silent Men" nor was business as good. But nothing to complain of. (East.)

King, Queen and Joker—

Picture and business both bad. (East.)

The Wild Goose—

Fairly entertaining but it brought more than usual business. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Wedding Bells—

Just an average picture over which patrons failed to enthuse and it played to poor business for week. (Middle West.)

Lessons in Love—

Good picture which drew fine business all week on account of popularity of the star. (Middle West.)

Woman in His House—

Just an average picture. Business good because of special music program, directed by famous conductor. (East.)

The Foreigner—

An entertaining picture. Business good. (East.)

Girl in the Taxi—

Good light entertainment of its kind. Business only fair. (Middle West.)

Bob Hampton of Placer—

A real big feature which appealed strongly to men and children but seemed to fail to interest the women. Business just about average for week. (Middle West.)

Originally booked for week, was pulled in middle of engagement because it did not appeal to women. Production, however, is good one. (East.)

The Devil's Garden—

Wonderful picture. Drew fair sized house. A better story for cooler weather. (Middle West.)

Box office returns good. They liked this. (Middle West.)

The Oath—

Great picture. Went over big. Packed houses at most every performance. (Middle West.)

Gypsy Blood—

Probably the best of the three versions of "Carmen" seen here. Not so much on scenery, but excellent acting. (Middle West.)

"Passion" grossed the biggest business of the season for me, but I lost money heavily on this second Pola Negri feature, which personally I think was much ahead of the first. Business very bad thruout week. (East.)

Peck's Bad Boy—

Fine picture which broke all house records for all week since the opening of the theatre. Special exploitation stunt of kid matinee with free admittance to 1,000 kiddies under 12. (Middle West.)

Great comedy. Business good, but sorry didn't hold it back to Sepetmber. Would have been a record breaker. (East.)

Two weeks to big business, picture went over great. (West.)

The Sky Pilot—

Good picture which brought good business on account of popularity of the book. Business took slight slump on account of bad weather. (Middle West.)

Great outdoor picture. Went over big. (Middle West.)

Man-Woman-Marriage—

Opinions differ as to value of picture, but more generally it is termed good. Drew nicely and receipts were slightly improved over previous few weeks' business. (East.)

A great picture and one which seemed to please the people well for it went over pretty big. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Wallop—

This is a fair offering. Usual business. (West.)

Fairly entertaining. Business fair. (West.)

Reputation—

Splendid picture with plenty of suspense and thrilling incidents. Made many new Priscilla Dean fans. Played to better than average business for week. (Middle West.)

Wolves of the North—

Fair business. Star not so well known. (Middle West.)

The Struggle—

Fair business, fair picture. (Middle West.)

Colorado—

Fair business, fair picture. (Middle West.)

The Man Tamer—

Great pictre for those who like that kind of show. Plenty of thrills. Something doing all the time. Did as well as the average picture this time of the year. (Middle West.)

REALART

Two Weeks With Pay—

Very clever picture, immensely pleasing but not a big drawing card. (Middle West.)

Bebe draws like a house afire, and Walter Hiers made a personal appearance, so it was great stuff. Business fine. (East.)

Don't Call Me Little Girl—

Namby-pamby, lacking in pep. Sweet and all that, but that's all. Business just fair. (East.)

The Magic Cup—

Picture well thought of. Receipts far below average. (Middle West.)

Land of Hope—
Alice Brady is unsually poular here and she satisfies patrons in this picturc, which was shown in conjunction with "The High Sign" featuring Buster Keaton. A good week's business. (Middle West.)

Her Beloved Villain—
Went over fine. Miss Hawley's following is growing fast, and this will help it. (East.)

Nice business despite heat. Miss Hawley gaining steadily in favor here. (East.)

House That Jazz Built—
Good story. Warm weather did not interfere materially with business. No special exploitation. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The Nut—
Not Fairbanks' best picture, but pleasing. Hot weather entertainment which drew the crowds. (Middle West.)

Carnival—
Wonder settings, strong cast, plot secondary to settings. Tense thruout. Great exploitation possibilities. Great box office attraction even with mercury high and money low. (Middle West.)

Thru the Back Door—
Went over great and drew usual Mary Pickford crowd. (West.)

EQUITY

Charge It—
Good picture, but not popular theme with the ladies on account of the inner workings of the "Charge It" game. Miss Young well selected, cast do good work. Splendid settings, good direction. (West.)

Very good entertainment and box office attraction. (West.)

Hush—
Fairly pleasing with average business. (West.)

VITAGRAPH

What's Your Reputation Worth?—
Good program picture. Cast, direction and locations good. Hot weather affected big. (West.)

This one for "The Sky Pilot" by the Strand theatre, Omaha, was thirteen inches by four columns

Here is, as a clever "Two Weeks With Pay" ad, eight inches by six columns, by the Rivoli theatre, Toledo, O.

SELZNICK

Panthea—
Popularity of star drew good business, accented by recent visit of Miss Talmadge in this state. (Middle West.)

Miracle of Manhattan—
With business bad all over town this film stood them up every night in the week. Elaine Hammerstein is a good card with us. (Middle West.)

Pleasure Seekers—
Third, and by far best, Elaine Hammerstein picture I have played. Great stuff. (East.)

Best Elaine Hammerstein picture I have played yet. Business excellent. Miss Hammerstein very well received, and becoming quite popular. (East.)

Poor Dear Margaret Kirby—
A mediocre offering that played to fair business. (Middle West.)

Nice little picture, but didn't do much business. (Middle West.)

Red Foam—
Business only fair, though had personal appearance of Zena Keefe, who made quite a hit. Think poor business partly due to heat-wave. (East.)

HODKINSON

Man of the Forest—
Seems to be well liked, particularly by men. Not a particularly big drawing card. (Middle West.)

Fair picture. Played to ordinary crowds. (Middle West.)

East Lynne—
A pretty good picture but we have poor business during run. (West.)

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

A Small Town Idol—
Played in conjunction with Buster Keaton in "Hard Luck," also a special "rube" overture, and it was a riot. Business great. (East.)

Held over for a second week and still drawing good. (Middle West.)

A scream of a picture. Drew big houses. No special exploitation. (Middle West.)

The Broken Doll—
A fair picture but it didn't get across. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Bunty Pulls the Strings—
Splendidly carried out. Has strong appeal to children and was well patronized by parties of kiddies especially gotten up for them. Receipts fine. (Middle West.)

Unusually good light comedy. Public liked it. (Middle West.)

Made in Heaven—
A very good picture and one which brought greater business than usual. (West.)

METRO

Home Stuff—
Great. Always sure of good houses when I play Viola Dana. Her following is well established and loyal. (East.)

The Saphead—
Buster Keaton continues to hit the pace in this production, which is a good drawing card, as well as entertaining. (Middle West.)

FOX

Rider of the Purple Sage—
Good picture but didn't do any business to speak of. (Middle West.)

A Ridin' Romeo—
Splendid picture. Fine business. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Road to London—
A real novelty on the screen. Acting exceptionally good, clever subtitles, fine entertainment. Drew capacity to personal appearance of Bryant Washburn. (Middle West.)

What Women Will Do—
Good picture that played to our average in business. (West.)

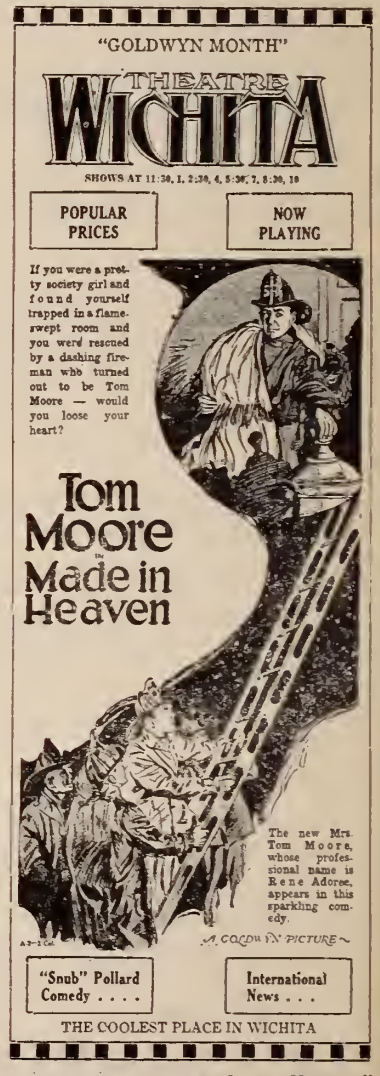
ROBERTSON-COLE

Salvage—
Strong picture which gives Pauline Frederick an opportunity to display her dramatic ability to advantage. Did excellent business during its run at this house. (Middle West.)

Good Women—
Crackerjack picture, playing to a poor house even for this time of the year. (Middle West.)

What's a Wife Worth?—
Awful. It will pleasc the children. (Middle West.)

Black Roses—
Great picture. Terrible receipts. (Middle West.)



A Handy Husband—
Good picture and one that brought good business. (West.)

STATE RIGHTS

I Am the Woman—
Very good Western drama with clever cast and good lead. Did mighty good business considering the weather. (Middle West.)

The Wakefield Case—
Fair picture, fair returns. (East.)

The County Fair—
Fair attraction. Drew big houses. (Middle West.)

This display for "Made in Heaven," twelve inches by two columns, is by the Wichita theatre, Wichita, Kansas

Has Fine Idea in Advance Advertising

Yet comes from there a new idea in advance announcements.

Departing from the slide method of announcing a picture's "coming," E. G. McGuire, of Thornton's theatre at Riverpoint, built a special setting on the stage for an "art prologue ad" to let his patrons known "Passion" was on its way.

The first part was opened on a dark stage, with an electrical arrangement of butterflies fluttering across a black velvet fan on which was the word "Passion." A staircase led up to the foot of the screen and on the posts of the stairs were two series of illuminated globes—red and white. As the butterflies winged across the fan, the red lights went on, then red lights around the frame, gradually changing to white, 30 lights being concealed in the frame and on the stairs. When all whites were on the velvet fan was hoisted, revealing a stock six-sheet on "Passion." After a brief "still," the lights then went slowly back to red and then to dark stage, the "prologue" closing with butterflies in flight across the six-sheet.

McGuire is entitled to credit for originating this method of introducing an attraction in advance, but he could have made it a bit more striking if he had used a "Passion" trailer after his fade-out.

"Lessons in Love" Prologue at Brooklyn Mark Strand

For the current showing of "Lessons of Love" at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, Managing Director Edward L. Hyman has arranged a prologue that provides ideal atmosphere for the film.

A recital of three love songs from current musical comedies and operettas preceded the showing of this Talmadge light romance. The selection was so carefully made that had the play been a spoken farce they might have fitted in any scene and retained the atmosphere.

Even the scenic vestment was of a delicate nature, a shadowed futuristic set being set with tall vases with flowers being on either side of the illuminated French arched doors at the rear. At right and left stage front were transparent columns with amber spots, lighting them from the rear. Back of the door were two 1000 watt blue lamps.

The numbers were far from heavy, all of an airy summer vein. Georges Du-Franne, French tenor, sang "You're in Love," from "Loveland," while Kathryn James, contralto, was heard in "The Message of the Violet," from "The Prince of Pilsen," and Eldora Stanford, soprano, sang "Sweethearts," from the musical hit of the same name.

Power of Art Gallery Front Proved by Johnson

Manager Julius K. Johnson, of the Rialto theatre, Omaha, Neb., had a troupe of Blackfeet Indians in town for a prologue to "Bob Hampton of Placer," and they proved to be a big drawing card, but what the town is still talking about was the art work done on the mammoth archway paintings over the entrance. Gordon Bennett, Rialto artist, did the paintings in oil, following the famous Frederick Remington type of pictures. The paintings, measuring twelve feet wide at the widest point and five feet from top to bottom at the longest, made an artistic appearance over the beautiful entrance of the theatre. The entrance itself was boxed off in a way never before attempted at the Rialto, and this attracted much attention.

The Blackfeet Indians were taken about the city, to the newspaper offices, public buildings and large industrial plants, also appearing at regular intervals on the prologue. The Rialto ushers were dressed in Indian girl costumes and the Rialto, for the occasion, bore a strikingly aboriginal appearance.

Despite strong opposition, which included a visit of Clara Kimball Young to the city, in person, and a giant indoor circus which the Elk's Lodge was putting on, "Bob Hampton of Placer" did a great business, according to Mr. Johnson.

Fashion Show Presented at Asheville, N. C.

As a prologue for "Straight From Paris," the Majestic theatre of Asheville, N. C., staged a fashion show in conjunction with a local women's apparel shop.

Five beautiful Asheville girls, attired in fashionable creations from the local shop, strolled about the stage of the Majestic for thirty minutes prior to each run of "Straight From Paris," and record houses have been recorded every day the picture has been shown. Encore after encore from the models who strolled about the stage admits this to be the best bit of exploitation the Majestic has ever conceived. The stunt gained half-column stories from Asheville dailies and the publicity tended to increase the drawing power of the stunt.

Janisch Pulls New Stunts

"Forbidden Fruit" Given Unusual Exploitation Campaign at Minneapolis

ANOTHER exploitation campaign for "Forbidden Fruit" that neglected no legitimate avenue for publicity has just been put over by A. C. Janisch, director of advertising for "F and R" theatres, Minneapolis. The picture, which was booked for the New Lyric, was started off by the use of teaser ads that were gradually increased to big size displays. Then Mr. Janisch began pulling new stuff for the feature.

A Minneapolis ice cream company which puts out a special Sunday brick of cream was induced to name their brick "Forbidden Fruit." Each brick bore a sticker reading "'Forbidden Fruit,' New Lyric, May 1." Every dealer carried strips advertising the special brick and the photoplay on his windows.

A feature of the page tie-ups and an inducement to read the ads were names scattered throughout the ads appearing therein. Persons whose names appeared in the ads were entitled to two tickets to see "Forbidden Fruit."

Mr. Janisch also put out 5,000 apple cut-outs in the residence districts and 10,000 stickers reading "'Forbidden Fruit,' New Lyric, May 1." Local merchants were induced to paste these stickers on all packages leaving their stores. The balance were pasted around in various locations, on soda fountain menus, and so on.

Tie-ups were also secured with large grocery stores and soda fountains in the downtown district. Many soda fountains mixed a special "Forbidden Fruit" cocktail.

Mr. Scofield, publicity director, arranged a Cinderella slipper tie-up with one of the leading department stores in Minneapolis. A small sized ladies' slipper was placed in the window of this store with a sign reading that the woman who could wear the slipper would be entitled to a $25 pair of shoes and also tickets to see "Forbidden Fruit" at the New Lyric.

Aeroplane Used in Small Town Exploitation

Pomeroy, Iowa, may be a small town, but B. W. Shepard, manager of the Strand theatre there, does not let the "big boys" get ahead of him.

In addition to using extensive newspaper advertising, Mr. Shepard employed an aviator to hurl heralds from the sky to announce the coming of "Back to God's Country." The aviator would drop the heralds while looping the loop above the different sections of the town and there would be a wild scramble for the papers as they fluttered to the ground.

Three weeks before the picture appeared Mr. Shepard began advertising in the newspapers, using sixteen cuts of animals with the caption: "These are the animals that play a unique part in the First National feature, 'Back to God's Country.'" He also employed reproductions of the tracks of "Wapi, the Killer," advising the readers to follow the tracks to the Strand theatre, and pasted them on the sidewalks during the last week of exploitation. Two larger advertisements, the mailing of heralds to persons living along the rural routes, two 24 sheet posters and window cards were other media used.

"It was the biggest business the Strand theatre ever did," commented Mr. Shepard.

Book Store Tie-Ups Effective in 'Frisco

In connection with exploitation of "The Man of the Forest," which played recently at the Strand theatre, San Francisco, M. W. Jackson, director of publicity at the theatre arranged for tie-ups with several large book stores featuring Zane Gray novels during the week. Two sporting goods stores also entered the tie-up advertising the showing of the picture and a young mountain lion was placed in the window of one.

Weisfeldt Builds Miniature Bungalow

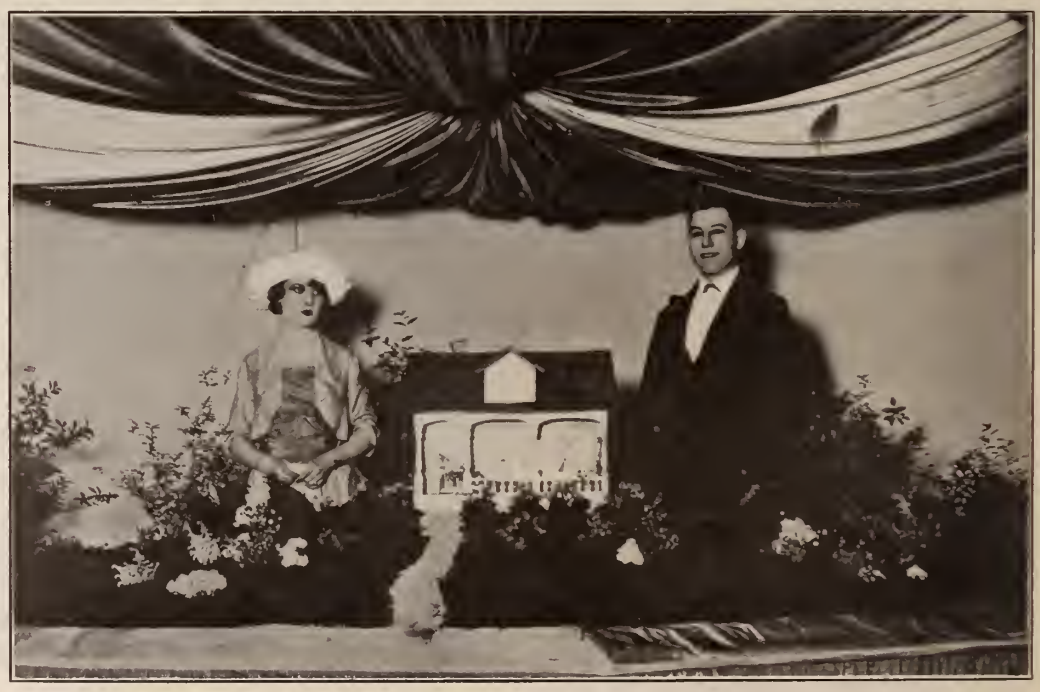
An appropriate setting, two good singers and a good song, will almost always make a pleasing prologue or presentation —and a most inexpensive one. For "The Woman in His House," E. J. Weisfeldt, manager of Saxe's Strand, Milwaukee, proved that his belief in the above contentions was not unfounded.

A miniature bungalow, surrounded with artificial shrubs, greens, etc., was a picturesque setting. Edward Lazarus and Louise James, who had proven their worth at previous showings, were the singers, and "Love Nest" the song. At the end of the song, the lights which were shining brightly in the downstairs bungalow, were snuffed out, and in their place, a dim one appeared through the window of the upstairs of the bungalow.

Serkowich Plays "The Devil" at Peoria

The "summer business slump," according to the pessimists has been playing "the devil" all over the country, but when The Madison theatre, at Peoria, Ill., played "The Devil," it was an optimistic enough showing, from a box office standpoint.

General Manager Herbert D. McNally, the chap in the white shirt in the photo, is the reason, and amplification of the reason is shown in the photo accompanying



Mr. McNally arranged one of the snappiest prologues for "The Devil" Peoria has ever seen, and with Director of Publicity Benj. Serkowich staged a spectacular, but inexpensive exploitation campaign that brought in business just as in the well known and frequently remembered days of yore.

A stage setting, portraying a spider web, made of white rope aaginst a background made by a standard drop, with a big cloth spider in the "web" gave tone to a male and female character who offered a combination of song, dance and dialogue harmonizing with the picture.

The "snappy" manner in which it went forward was one of the biggest elements in its success Mr. McNally believes.

The exploitation on the outside consisted of a couple of boys, dressed in red devil costumes, carrying flaming red-fire torches and banners, with the conventional sign "Go to the Devil" at the Madison. In front of the theatre another boy kept the front illuminated with red fire.

The red fire arrested attention, and made the passing crowds curious, and when they got inside, McNally's unusual presentation of the feature play sent them out boosting the show, which accounts in a large part for the increased business that was registered.

Soriero Pulls Big Stunt for "The Penalty"

Lowell, Mass., Exhibitor Uses Aeroplane With Trimmings to Exploit Picture

THOMAS D. SORIERO, general manager of the Strand theatre, Lowell, Mass., has recently put over a number of novelty exploitation stunts for "The Penalty."

Mr. Soriero obtained the services of an aeroplane company, selected a popular girl of the city, sent her up in an aeroplane, and distributed heralds, free tickets and fifty dollars in one-dollar bills over Lowell and adjacent communities.

To give the stunt proper atmosphere, and to increase its drawing power, this manager made arrangements with the Leader, one of the leading afternoon papers of Lowell, for the purchase of two thousand copies and was given corresponding space in the paper for photographs and a story of the event.

"Many of these papers were distributed free of charge at the big local baseball game the same afternoon, and others were circulated in the downtown district, all, of course, free of charge.

"The camera men were on hand when 'Miss Strand' was ready to take off for the stunt, as well as the usual number of reporters. After the inevitable preliminary interviews and picture taking, 'Miss Strand' and the flier, who is known as a daredevil, climbed into the machine with the heralds and free tickets and the packet of one-dollar bills.

"The course took them over the city of Lowell and directly over the Strand theatre. They were roundly cheered by the large crowd of sightseers and friends of 'Miss Strand.'

"When the machine reached directly over the Strand theatre itself, six hundred tickets of admission and scores of heralds, together with the one-dollar bills, were sent out over the machine and fluttered down to the large crowds on the street. Altogether twelve hundred free admissions for Monday afternoon only were distributed from the plane. The flyer, of course, did the usual number of air stunts for the crowd below. Then the pair flew to the nearby towns and cities and did practically the same thing, except that there were less free tickets and less money distributed there.

"In order to make these flights the Lynnway Company had to have their pilot fly from Lynn to Lowell. Before each flight there were thousands of people at the aviation field to see 'Miss Strand' take the air. Hundreds of automobiles were lined up and down the road near the field as this was practically the first time an airplane was seen flying over Lowell."

Mr. Soriero secured the exclusive use of the Lynnway Company's 'plane for a period of four weeks.

"After the preliminary arrangements had been made, and I was assured that there would be no bungling for lack of a 'plane, I went ahead with the newspaper advertising.

"I called the attention of our patrons to the prospective trip of our aeroplane girl; then through the newspapers I asked all the interested young women of the city to send in their names, with the understanding, of course, that they obtain the consent of their parents or guardians and that they release the Strand management and the owners of the aeroplane company from all responsibility while on the flight.

"Of course thousands of girls were eager to take the trip, but with an eye to advertising the stunt as widely as possible, I finally selected one of the most popular girls in Lowell, whose comeliness and wide list of friends enhanced the interest in the feature.

"She was officially named 'Miss Strand.' After these arrangements were taken care of, I then contracted with a leading afternoon local paper to buy two thousand copies of their afternoon edition, provided they gave the plane stunt corresponding publicity. They agreed to give me a four-column head story with four-column cut on page one.

"I bought two thousand copies of the first edition, had them rushed to the printer, and had some light red type spread over page one advertising the picture.

Carlisle, Pa., Theatre Breaks Into News Pages

For the first time in its ten years' existence the Carlisle Opera House, Carlisle, Pa., eased into the news columns of the town's only newspaper, "The Sentinel." This was accomplished by Eli M. Orowitz, Paramount exploiter for the Philadelphia exchange, and F. P. Hilt, manager of the theatre for exploitation of "Forbidden Fruit."

Orowitz and Hilt went to the paper with the proposition that the theatre would furnish an entire page of advertising and a news angle if the paper would print the story—where? Nothing less than a front page story from this hide-bound conservative sheet.

Orowitz talked it over with the advertising manager and found that the paper was trying to drum it into the heads of the readers to read the advertising as well as the news in the paper. Orowitz tied the merchants of the town for the co-operative ads and sprang the stunt of concealing somewhere in the text of the ads the names of some of the town's citizens. Those whose names were contained in the ads received free admission tickets.

This pleased the Sentinel and they devoted a half column to the theatre, the picture, and undertook to speak editorially on the advantages of reading the sentinel's ads.

Wagon Tie-up Costs Theatre Little

The delivery truck of a La Mars, Iowa, bottling works carried no signs, so the Royal theatre tied up with the company for the following:

"This is one kind of 'Forbidden Fruit.' Don't miss it. Royal theatre."

As the load of the wagon consisted of kegs containing, alas, soft drinks, the public got a laugh.

The stunt was pulled by R. C. Gary, the Paramount exploiter, and D. E. Arries of D. C. Haagasman's Royal theatre staff.

Clinton, Ia., Theatre Builds Fine Lobby Display

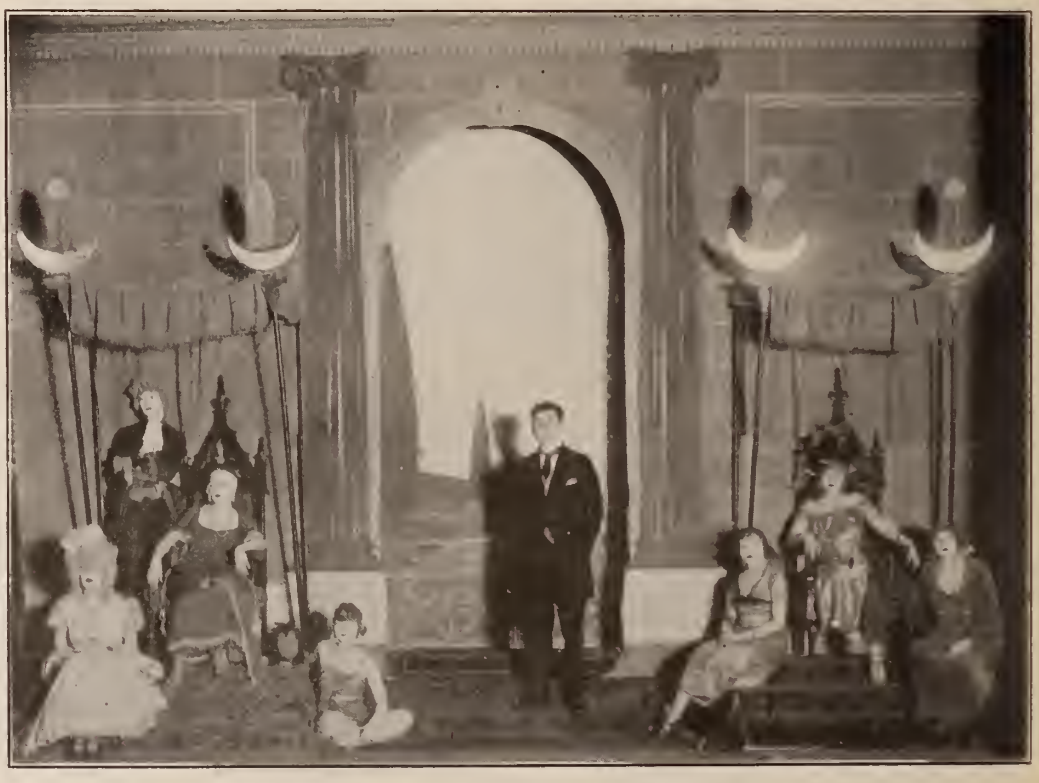
A unique lobby display and exploitation campaign was devised by the management of the Family theatre, Clinton, Ia., during the run of "Isobel."

To begin with a large 24-sheet was plastered along the large side wall of the lobby. Then a log-cabin effect was arranged about the box office bearing a sign immediately over the window reading "The Trail's End." Above the sign was the large head of an elk onto which shone a bright light during the dark hours.

On the streets of Clinton were paraded a squad of men attired to represent mounted police of the far north. Each man carried a sign on his back telling that "Isobel is back from the northland."

Paul Grasps All Exploitation Opportunities

A fine example of timely exploitation is presented in a recital of what A. J. Paul, manager of the Royal theatre, Galion, O., did while he was playing "Hush." Mr. Paul learned that Clara Kimball Young would pass through Galion on her way to Cleveland. The train was scheduled to stop in Galion for a few minutes so Mr. Paul arranged for the star to make a personal appearance at the station. Mr. Paul advertised the coming event heavily and also was able to get the newspapers interested in publicity stories.



When the train pulled in reporters, cameramen and a big crowd of fans were on hand. Miss Young made a speech, the crowd was presented with photographs of her and the newspaper men clicked the cameras and scribbled notes for front page stories.

Mr. Paul states that the stunt went over big with great business for the picture.

Hotel Guests Find "Reputation" Publicity Under Doors

Guests of the Royal, Snapps and Chadwick Hotels at Excelsior Springs, Mo., recently awakened to find morning newspapers under their doors just as is done in the Statler hotel system.

The Excelsior Springs newspaper turned out to be the "scandal sheet" put out by Universal for "Reputation." It caused quite much comment among the guests at the little watering place and crowded the doors of the Casino theatre, which showed the picture.

Orchestra Impersonates Hick Band

Novelty Prologue Number Put Over by Willard Patterson of Atlanta

ONE of the funniest prologues ever given a picture playing Atlanta was that preceding the showing of "A Small Town Idol" at the Criterion theatre, recently.

It was the first week of hot weather, and Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion, availed himself of every tiny opportunity for rural atmosphere in presenting the picture.

The ushers were crisp and cool-looking in pale blue and white checked gingham uniforms, there were spotless white covers on the seats, and, as a final touch, the orchestra provided a screamingly funny prologue, en costume.

The appearance of the orchestra was preceded by a slide which read, the number was billed: "Extra added attraction, the Hickory Head Silver Tone Band," presenting the "greatest collection of unfamous blue-note players in captivity and rendering that world renowned South Georgia classic, 'She Sleeps in the Swamp' (by request)."

As the slide making this announcement faded from the screen there was an earsplitting blast, and three corpulent musicians dressed in long white linen "dusters" and blowing for dear life on cornets, bugles, and the like, dashed madly down each aisle, from the orchestra pit, to the front door, and back. Suddenly silent, they filed solemnly into their places, and removed their dusters, to reveal blue overalls, with bandanna handkerchiefs tied about their necks, and wearing huge sun hats. The rest of the orchestra, similarly attired, filed into their places, and the "lady-pianist" in a pink gingham apron, and a sun bonnet was escorted to her seat with much impressement.

When the orchestra had worried through its labored and earsplitting process of "tunin' up," in place of the well-bred tap on the music stand, to indicate that His Highness, the Director, is coming, the first violin suddenly caught up a huge mallet and banged on the rail of the orchestra pit with all his force. As the racket died away, there was a crash, and David Love, conductor of the Criterion orchestra literally fell into the orchestra pit, attired in a long white duster, cheap automobile goggles, and carrying a "wand" about three feet long, and half a foot thick.

That overture was something to remember. There were many "rests," sudden surges of discord—and the cornet always trailed along about three notes behind the rest of the orchestra. Mr. Conductor indulged in a fit of temperament, snatched the clarinet out of the orchestra entirely and dispensed with him, tore four pages of music out of the first violin's book—the Criterion orchestra is usually most decorous and locally famous for the quality of the music rendered, so their departure from the usual made a pronounced hit, not only because of its sheer novelty, but because of the real ability it displayed, and its humor. The orchestra obviously was having the time of its life—and their fun was so infectious that, even if the "overchure" hadn't been clever the audience would have enjoyed it.

As it was the overture put the audience in a fine humor for the feature picture which followed, and the overture got more praise over town than the picture itself.

Clemmer Has Good "Big Adventure" Idea

The same human characteristics that prompts people to get up in a camp meeting and "testify" as to their personal experiences, and which prompts others to write letters to newspapers recounting amusing anecdotes and thrilling adventures, can be directed in the channels of moving picture exploitation, as recently was proved by the management of the Clemmer theatre, Seattle, Wash.

In its drive to exploit "The Big Adventure" arranged with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer to run a column each day open to the readers of the paper who had unusual adventures to relate.

For a week, the paper was swamped with letters on "my big adventure." Scores of them were printed and at the end of the week the theatre presented the writer of the best "adventure story" with $50. Although the stunt originally was arranged for youngsters, it was found that grown-ups took as much if not more interest in writing up their thrills than the school children.

In presenting "The Big Adventure," the Clemmer constructed huge "slates" on the front of the theatre building and wrote the ads for the picture in crooked lettering and with mis-spelled words, to carry out the "kid" idea of the story.

Grauman Originates Novelty Herald for "Traveling Salesman"

The expansive back of Roscoe Arbuckle was the feature of cards distributed by Graumann's Rialto theatre, Los Angeles, for the run of "The Traveling Salesman." The caption was "Meet Him Face to Face at Graumann's." This clever arrangement gave the public a good laugh.

Cloakey Puts Over Many Novelties for "The Nut"

Oral D. Cloakey, manager of the Lyceum theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, can always be depended upon to do something out of the ordinary in the exploitation of features which are presented at his theatre. Since returning to Winnipeg after opening the new Allen theatre at Cleveland, Ohio, Cloakey has sprung a number of surprises. For the presentation of "The Nut" during a recent week, Cloakey gained considerable advertising by having a man of mystery parade around the city as an "escaped nut," whose capture under certain conditions would merit a reward of $1.00 and a double pass to the show. The man was to be captured each day of the engagement.

On top of this, Cloakey published a cartoon representation of the Lyceum theatre quivering with rocking laughter of the crowd within. Patrons coming out of the theatre were depicted in a hilarious mood and there was a huge line-up trying to get in. Many exclamations of enjoyment were emanating from the interior.

This is the "Sentimental Tommy" ballyhoo which E. R. Rogers, manager of the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., used recently. The young man passed out neat advertising cards on the production

Newman Pulls the "Old Time Movie" Too

Frank L. Newman, of the Newman theatre, Kansas City, is the latest showman to pull the "old-time movie" stunt described a number of times in the past year or so in these columns.

Mr. Newman got hold of one of Griffith's old Biograph one reelers, "Two Chums," featuring Mary Pickford and Mack Sennett.

This picture was presented under the modern title of "Fifteen Years Ago in the Movies," and furnished many genuine laughs. The picture was given with all the settings and atmosphere to those who recall the days when the "nickelodeon" first made its appearance, and was considered a decidedly plebian affair. There was a flashy dressed "barker" who does double duty, explaining each scene of the picture and warbling "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," with illustrated views.

There are slides, asking the audience to be patient, the operator is in trouble, or is changing a reel. There is one urging that "All ladies who have not wooden heads and their hats pinned to them, will please remove them" (the hats).

Several weeks were spent by Milton Feld, manager of the Newman theatre, and Lee Sargent, chief operator, in searching the storerooms of the supply houses of Kansas City for the slides which were shown with the feature and which are older than the Griffith production.

Use Cut-Outs for Stills

A new style for window dressing has proved popular in the experience of Harry Royster, Paramount exploiter for the Buffalo exchange. Whenever the figures in the stills are large enough they are used as cut-outs and mounted on card-board. A number of windows were tied up in Canandaigua, N. Y., for the run of "Behold My Wife," and the merchants believed that the cut-outs were a little neater and more attractive than the whole stills. The Liberty theatre was indicated in white ink. The stunt is practically without cost.

Crandall Theatres Give Coogan Picture Extra Exploitation

The exploitation campaign for "Peck's Bad Boy" put over by Publicity Director Nelson B. Bell, of the Crandall theatres, Washington, D. C., is a fine example of legitimate advertising.

It began with a well planned newspaper campaign that described what patrons could expect in the picture and underlined the fact that the titles were by Irwin S. Cobb.

A window display of Jackie Coogan dolls was arranged with S. Kann's Sons Co., one of the largest mercantile establishments in the city of Washington. An entire window on the Pennsylvania avenue front of the store was dressed with dolls and placarded to the effect that Jackie Coogan could be seen on the screen at Crandall's Metropolitan that week. A dozen of the dolls were dotted at effective intervals around the box office and entrance lobby of the theatre. The newspaper advertising was reciprocal, the theatre ads advising the purchase of a doll at Kann's and the store ads announcing the appearance of Jackie Coogan in "Peck's Bad Boy" at the Metropolitan.

Capacity business prevailed throughout the week of the run, which was continued for a second full week at Crandall's Joy theatre to the same phenomenal patronage.

Calla Hooks Up With "No-Accident" Week

A unique tie-up that pleased everybody has just been put over for a showing of "What's Your Hurry?" at the Liberty theatre, Youngstown, O.

Joe Calla, director of publicity for the Liberty, overheard the mayor and the city council discussing a no-accident week. He instigated the manager of the theatre to book "What's Your Hurry" and called in Fred E. Walters, Paramount exploiteer from Cleveland, to sell the idea to the town. The mayor and council had been temporizing because of the expense, but as soon as they were offered a chance to use Paramount paper accessories they announced the date of the campaign to be the week of May 1.

The mayor gave Calla and Walters permission for anything short of murder. They covered the telegraph and telephone wires with banners. They hung posters on all the lamp posts. They distributed heralds, throwing them into automobiles and on doorsteps. A huge banner was strung across the main street right in front of the Liberty bearing the title of the picture and the slogan of the campaign, "What's Your Hurry." Walters arranged for a Mack Motor Truck Week such as Wallace Reid drove in the picture.

Street Car Advertising Wins at Scranton

J. P. McCarthy, manager of Poli's theatre, Scranton, Pa., confined his street exploitation for "Don't Neglect Your Wife," to one stunt.

An up-to-date street car with motorman and conductor was chartered and two large banners that almost covered the sides of the car were painted and stretched with ropes on the car. The title of the picture was painted in three-foot type, also the name of the theatre. In smaller type was a brief description of "Don't Neglect Your Wife."

The street car was sent through the business sections of the city at the hours of heaviest traffic. Mr. McCarthy made a simple but attractive lobby display from stills, posters and enlargements and did his usual billing and newspaper advertising. The street car stunt proved an admirable exploitation medium.

Ryan Makes Big Play for Children's Patronage

Charles H. Ryan, managing director of the Garfield theatre, Chicago, recently opened with the first episode of the serial, "Do or Die" which he thought would have a special appeal to children. In order that he might get every child in his vicinity interested in the serial, he printed heralds with a tear-off stub which with one cent as war tax admitted one child for a special showing of a bill made up of the serial, "Made in Heaven" and a Christie comedy. On one side of the stubs was a place for the children's names and addresses. In this way Mr. Ryan obtained a lot of new names for his mailing list. The children from eleven schools were admitted by means of the "admit one child" cards.

Small Ohio Town Draws Many Cleveland Customers

Painesville, O., is a town of about 20,000 inhabitants and is 26 miles distant from Cleveland. But neither of these facts can upset the statement that the Utopia theatre of Painesville was in direct competition with all the first-class motion picture theatres of Cleveland last week.

The Utopia theatre advertised its show in all of the Cleveland newspapers. Furthermore, in the advertisement, it stated at what hours the interurban cars left Cleveland for Painesville and return. It takes two hours to go from Cleveland to Painesville on the interurban cars. More than 500 people made the trip.

The reason for this unusual newspaper exploitation was "The Kid." This was the first time a big production had shown in Painesville before showing in Cleveland. And the Utopia theatre took advantage of the situation to make Cleveland's loss, Painesville's gain. Legal complication relating to the validity of franchises, keeping "The Kid" out of Cleveland. But that was no reason for keeping Clevelanders away from "The Kid."

The ad in the Cleveland papers had a two-edge blade. It really took about five hundred city folks down to Painesville to see the latest Chaplin film, and it gave the management of the Utopia an invaluable prestige with its patrons, by telling about the value of a production that can draw its audience from a distance of 26 miles.

Local interest in the picture was kept at fever heat by extensive bill boarding, and by the characteristic lobby display which featured any old backyard, with its picket fence, its clothes line with the kid's clothes hanging out to dry, and with the kid and his pal peeping out from behind a building.

Mayer's Exploitation Concentrates on Merchant's Tie-ups

The recent showing of "Once to Every Woman" at the Isis theatre, Indianapolis, was attended by an exploitation campaign that concentrated on merchant's tie-ups in a highly successful way.

Music stores distributed heralds for the picture in the form of copies of the popular old song, "Ben Bolt," bearing ads concerning their shops and the showing at the Isis. "Ben Bolt" window displays were used, cut-outs of Dorothy Phillips and the "mother" in the picture being the center pieces of such displays.

The Circle Talking Machine Shop gave away a $50 machine in connection with the showing, after having it on display in the "Once to Every Woman" window, during the week preceding and during the run of the picture.

The tie-up with a grocery company included the printing of 25,000 sugar bags, which were used by the 22 stores in the grocery chain, during the week preceding the show.

This tie-up campaign, which was engineered by Joe H. Mayer, Universal exploitation expert, was backed by liberal newspaper advertising, a lobby display, and the use of a singer in the presentation.

Landers Not to Be Outdone by Metropolis

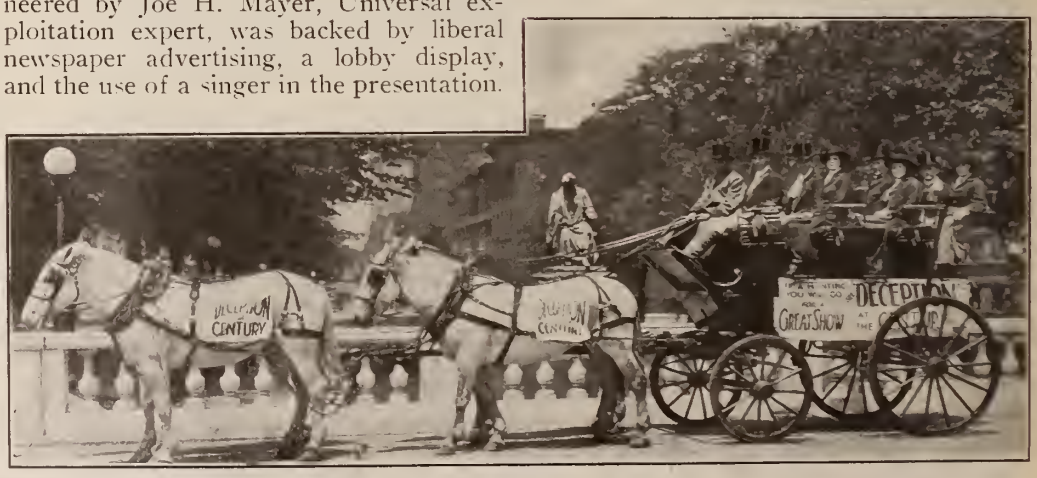
New York has its midnight shows but it has remained for Charles H. Landers, manager of the Opera House, Fredonia, N. Y., to introduce such an event to a rural community. In introducing Constance Talmadge in "In Search of a Sinner," to his town, Mr. Landers decided to put on an extra performance, running from 10:30 to midnight, in order to get some added publicity. He did. Every gossip in town discussed it. It is doubtful whether anyone had heretofore seen just how the town looked at midnight, so here was an opportunity.

Everybody decided to be naughty—just for this time—and go to see Connie in her sinful picture. In a special herald sent out by Mr. Landers we note that he told the following:

BOYS—Take your best girl "Sinner" to this show; she'll like it!

GIRLS—Ask your best "Sinner" to this show. It'll jazz him up a bit!

Mr. Landers also told the town folk that it was their bounden duty to see a picture like this once in a while because it would keep one from getting provincial.



Well when the big event came off, it looked liked everyone in the Fredonia Blue Book was in the audience.

It was the first midnight show ever given in Fredonia. But it's not the last. If Connie will make another jazzy one soon, Mr. Landers plans to put on another wee hour session.

Tallyho Wakes Up Baltimore

A two-team tallyho driven sedately through the streets of Baltimore advertised the opening of the new Century theatre playing "Deception." Three women and five men dressed in hunting costumes occupied the seats of the vehicle and attracted attention by bowing to the passers-by.

Herman Phillips, Paramount exploiter for the Washington exchange, dug the vehicle from a livery stable basement, and shined it up until it looked like new. The cost of the stunt was negligible.

"Horseshoe Show" Makes Big Hit at Greenburg, Pa.

A remodeled Grand theatre of Greensburg, Pa., opened recently with William M. Robson, the Pittsburg Paramount exploiter in charge of the exploitation campaign.

The opening attraction was Thomas Meighan in "The City of Silent Men." As Tom Meighan is known as "The Good Luck Star" and as everybody in town wished Jennings and Case, the sponsors for the theatre, "good luck" and as the horse shoe is always looked on as a bringer of good luck it was quite natural that a big advertisement should be run in the daily papers for three days prior to the opening, stating that every child who brought an old horse shoe for good luck, would be admitted free to the first matinee of the new theatre. And they came—in droves. An hour before the appointed time the street was choked with children, each armed with an old horse shoe. There were big shoes, little shoes; horse shoes, mule shoes; painted shoes, rusty shoes; thin shoes, thick shoes. Jennings said he never knew there were so many different kinds of horse shoes in the world.

And from every walk of life they came. Rich and poor, rough and gentle bred rubbed shoulder to shoulder. In the accompanying photograph is shown a little millionaire, the scion of the wealthiest family in the city shaking hands with some little unknown and less favored citizen.

Thomas Meighan wired his congratulations and sent an autographed photograph which was prominently displayed in a big store across from the court house.

Seattle Theatre Puts Over "Reputation"

THE success of well balanced exploitation and advertising campaigns is well exemplified by the recent drive given to "Reputation" by the Clemmer theatre in Seattle, Wash.

The management of that theatre depended upon forceful and liberal advertis- crowds. They did. This was supplemented by a mailing list appeal and by widespread window display tie-ups, using a novel window card with no mention of the picture, but bearing a photo of Miss ing and a striking theatre front to attract Dean and a slogan boosting the reputation of the store.

"Don't Neglect Your Wife" window display obtained by Jean Darnell, Goldwyn exploitation representative, for the showing of this picture at San Antonio, Texas

The card was regarded so well by Universal's Exploitation Department, it is being duplicated for general use wherever "Reputation" is shown.

The Clemmer theatre manager also distributed 10,000 "scandal sheets," the miniature newspaper available for use in exploiting this picture. These were inserted in regular Seattle newspapers, and given away on the streets. A full page advertising tie-up, was put over in the Seattle Star, in which each ad was built around the word REPUTATION.

Teaser ads and posters were used all during the week preceding the showing, and on the Sunday just before the opening a full page ad in color was used, accompanied in the same paper by a full page colored portrait of Miss Dean.

The lobby display was unique in color, being done in orange and black, in checkerboard design, supplemented by framed photos and cut-outs.

What Exploitation Did at Ogden, Utah

With the aid of Rick Ricketson, the new Paramount exploiter for the Salt Lake City exchange, Manager H. E. Skinner, of the Alhambra theatre, Ogden, Utah, has just put over a campaign on "The Faith Healer" that brought business back to normal after a slump that cut receipts two-thirds had been experienced.

Mr. Skinner had abandoned all advertising except newspaper displays. He had eliminated window tieups and street stunts from any consideration at all. He rated his patronage at one-third of what it used to be, in spite of the fact that he has one of the largest and best equipped houses in Utah.

Ricketson's first stunt was a children's matinee on Wednesday, the opening day of the picture, for the benefit of the Dee Hospital. Any child bringing a flower was admitted free upon payment of the war tax. More than 2,000 children saw the performance. The flowers were piled onto an automobile until it resembled a float. Banners was affixed to it advertising the picture, and the car was driven through the most circuitous route possible until the hospital was reached.

At the same time the Boy Scouts began a drive for funds about this time. Ricketson went before the Rotary Club and made a little speech to the effect: "Boys and girls are the faith healers of any community. See 'The Faith Healer' at the Alhambra." The Boy Scouts gave a parade and carried banners for the picture and the theatre.

The only figures on the Alhambra so far show that the "Faith Healer" played to more people the Wednesday it opened than its predecessor did the previous Sunday. Wednesday is considered only the third largest day as a rule. The other houses have been capacity size.

Music and the Picture

Music in the Summer

By Chas. D. Isaacson

AMERICA is not inclined to stop her music in the summer. This is something to remember very forcibly.

Theatres of the legitimate rank shut down; vaudeville houses shut down, and even some motion picture houses shut down.

But summer music is the hue and cry.

It would seem that in the summer time, people want music with a hunger and a thirst which is almost pitiful.

Those who are left behind in the cities need the stimulating and refreshing effect of good music. To be sure the open air music is the best kind, but even if it isn't in the open, it's better to have some than none at all.

In the big cities, summer music is engaging the attention of the civic authorities and the public-spirited citizens. In New York City there are the concerts in the public parks, many bands and orchestras participate and a large appropriation is made for the purpose. I myself am giving about fifty public open air concerts in the city. Then in addition there are band concerts by the Edwin Franko Goldman organization. At the great Stadium of the City College a large sum of money has been appropriated and a full symphony orchestra with distinguished soloists under the conductorship of Victor Herbert and Henry Hadley will be heard all summer.

The success of grand opera in the summer time in Ravinia Park (Chicago), Willow Grove (Philadelphia), and elsewhere brings forth additional points which the exhibitor cannot afford to overlook. Now, my feeling is that the desire for summer music can be capitalized by the motion picture theatre. Even if your winter schedule of music had not been as large as you would like to have had it, the way to build up your summer business is to make as much of your music as you possibly can. Let your citizens know that this summer music will not be lacking, due to your foresight and art sense. Plan it of the kind that will make the heat seem less oppressive. They will want as much to come to hear it, as to see the picture.

If you have a fairly large orchestra these are some ideas which might prove good publicity, and would draw attention forcibly to your summer music. For instance, you might make arrangements with the Mayor or the City Council or Board of Aldermen for you to dedicate one or more concerts in the open air to the people of the city. This could be done in the park or in a public square free to the people of the city. You could arrange to give possibly half an hour of music, the orchestra returning to the theatre in time for the rest of the performance. The purpose of this would, of course, be as I have mentioned, to call attention to your orchestra, which otherwise they might not know about and to give very valuable prestige and publicity to your house and public spiritedness.

Of course, in the open air theatres the advantages you have for genuine summer business with music in an ideal setting makes a double demand for the right intelligence to be exercised in the selection of the kind of music and musicians. An open-air theatre without a fine musical background isn't complete. That's all there is to that.

Preparation for the Fall

The wise manager and musical directors are spending their summer preparing for an ingenious program for the fall. Why not do something unusual this coming season?

An Important Thought

Plan a consecutive unified musical program for the fall and winter. For instance: Lay out a schedule of overtures, operatic medleys, etc., which you will use regularly from week to week.

Even go so far as to announce the full list at the beginning of the season. Even go so far as to send this list to the music teachers and other educators of the community. It is just as easy to write your music this way as haphazardly, and this will get you further. The cumulative effect will assure a certain regularity of patronage.

Sascha Jacobsen Re-engaged

Mr. Rothafel, through co-operation with the New York Concert League, has arranged for the re-engagement of Sascha Jacobsen, the celebrated American violinist, to appear at the Capitol for the week of June 19th, which will be Mr. Jacobsen's positive farewell appearance in this country for the following week he sails for Europe.

The New York Concert League has added two of the country's foremost exhibitors to its list of clients. S. L. Rothafel at the Capitol and S. Barrett McCormick at the New Allen in Cleveland, have joined its roster of wide-awake showmen, which includes Edward Hyman, of the Brooklyn Strand; Phil Gleichman, of Detroit; Maurice Barr, of New Orleans; Abe Fabian, of Newark; Francis Mangan, of the New Allen in Montreal, and numerous others.

Society of Organists Becomes Fact

The latest clan to report itself among the army engaged in the delectation of the movie-mad New York populace is the Society of Theatre Organists—a title self-descriptive. This association has recently been organized from the considerable number of men who contribute so largely to the successful presentation of the screen program—they may be called indispensable—and numbers among its charter members practically all of the organists who preside at the fine instruments in the principal Broadway houses.

The need for such a society has been felt for some time, for there has been no cohesion and little chance of mutual acquaintance among these scions of the fraternity. As it seems the most natural thing for organists to organize it is gratifying to the founders to feel that the new project has such an excellent start. Its objects are stated to be: the promotion of sociability, the raising of the standard of organ playing in the theatres, the obtaining ultimately of the privilege of having a voice in the planning and specifications of organs to be installed in new theatres, and the bringing the general public to realize, as most music-lovers now do, that the organist is, or should be, the most important member of the musical staff next to the conductor.

The society's membership already numbers over thirty and it is hoped to have fifty by the end of the year. Applicants for membership will be asked to pass an examination—already prepared by a committee of examiners—somewhat on the lines of that given by the American Guild of Organists and requiring a sufficiently high standard of musicianship to meet the demands of the "de luxe performances" of the larger movie palaces.

This will include the playing of a suitable solo number—the organist's chief opportunity to display his skill and "show off" his instrument. Here he can demonstrate to the public his right to be regarded as a concert artist and can present a legitimate number of the highest class, on a par with the overtures played by the orchestras in the largest film theatres, which have been brought to such a pitch of excellence and done so much to acquaint the picture-loving multitudes with the best in operatic and symphonic music.

It is clear that this improvement in taste on the part of the audiences as regards organ music has already gone far when such a classic as a fugue of Bach can draw a big band, as has happened more than once of late.

There will also be tests in improvising, sight reading, and also in playing pictures, his ability being tested by a scenic, news, feature and comedy. This examination will provide a definite standard for motion picture organists. For the church organist who lacks knowledge of screen technique it will point out the need for studying dramatic interpretation. For the organist who has never studied the organ seriously it will show the need for acquiring a solid foundation in legitimate organ playing. For the most successful type of picture playing is that done by those who are real organists. In spite of all the player organs and various imitations of orchestras which are invading the field an organ is an organ even in the theatre and cannot try to reproduce orchestral effects too closely without suffering in the process.

On May 24 the Society celebrated its inauguration with an informal get-together party at Keen's Chop House, when some twenty brother organists foregathered and partook of the Keen bounty, listening afterward to several impromptu speeches, humorous and serious, contributed by various members. Everybody expressed satisfaction at this chance of becoming gen-

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Lloyd Revivals for the Summer Program

Pathe Exchanges Inc., announces for the summer months, a revival of ten of the best Harold Lloyd one-reelers. The announcement of these comedies will prompt memories of Harold Lloyd and Harry "Snub" Pollard working together, with Bebe Daniels adding much to the comic festivities.

The first five of the series will be released in the following order: July 17th—"Bliss"; July 24th—"The Flirt"; July 31st—"All Aboard"; August 7th—"The Tip"; and August 14th—"Rainbow Island."

The first theatre to book the entire series is Shea's Hippodrome, the big Buffalo house. Pathe announces that this series will in no way conflict with the bookings of the current Lloyd productions.

Chadwick Appoints New Grievance Committee

Joseph Klein is back in the New York T. I. L. M. Club, representing Robertson-Cole.

President Chadwick named a new grievance committee as follows: Harry Buxbaum, Chas. Rosensweig, Arthur Abeles, Ben Schwartz, and Wm. Marsh.

Owing to the large number of disputes to be heard by this committee, weekly meetings will be held throughout summer months.

Mr. Geo. Uffner, chairman of entertainment committee announced that arrangements were well under way for the Annual Outing.

Report Heavy Bookings for "Snowblind"

"Snowblind," the Goldwyn picture recently made from Katherine Newlin Burt's new novel of the Canadian Rockies, a Reginald Barker Production is reported to have had heavy early bookings throughout the country. The picture is but newly released. On its showing at the Capitol Theatre, New York, it played to a big business and pleased the critics of the New York papers.

In Greater New York City, "Snowblind" has been booked in the following Loew theatres: Circle, New York, Bijou, American Burland, Spooner, Victory and Brevoort. It has also been booked in the following Fox theatres: Audubon, Academy of Music, Crotona, the Folly and the Bedford in Brooklyn; the Terminal in Newark, N. J.; and in Fox's, Jamaica.

Big Stories Await Filming

Goldwyn to Put "Syndafloden" and "The Christian" Into Production

AMONG the new productions Goldwyn has acquired for early production are several powerful dramatic stories which the corporation believes will rank among the greatest photoplays which it has made.

One of them is from the famous Swedish play, "Syndafloden," by Henning Berger, which was done in New York a few seasons ago by Arthur Hopkins under the title of of "The Deluge." Berger lived in this country for a few years, and the action of his play takes place in a town along the Mississippi River at a time of flood.

Another is a screen version of Hall Caine's most successful novel, "The Christian." A continuity was prepared by Goldwyn's editorial department from the novel and submitted to Mr. Caine who made copious notes and suggestions which have since been incorporated into the screen script. "The Christian," it will be remembered, achieved a success on the stage as great as it enjoyed in the book world, the late Edward J. Morgan having achieved great distinction as John Storm and Viola Allen as Glory Quayle.

"Hungry Hearts," a dramatic photoplay of New York's teeming East Side, made by the author, Anzia Yezierska, in collaboration with Goldwyn's editorial department, from her volume of short stories of the same title, is ready for casting. The production will be made in New York City.

Two scenarios by Alice Duer Miller are about ready for casting and producing. One of them is a screen version of her story, "The Woman Who Hated Politics." The other is an original scenario, "The Man With Two Mothers."

New Ray Film Due Aug. 22

"A Midnight Bell," Starring Chas. Ray, on First National Schedule

CHARLES RAY'S next picture, in which the young star will again be presented by Arthur S. Kane, has been set for release through First National on August 22. This is "A Midnight Bell," one of the greatest of the late Charles H. Hoyt's comedy successes.

In this picture Mr. Ray appears as a "drummer," whose route includes small country towns, demonstrating once again his versatility in character impersonation but remaining close to the life and spirit of the rural community in which he excels. It is described to be a story in which romance, pathos, thrills and humor are intermingled with pleasing variety.

Doris Pawn is the leading woman in the forthcoming piece, appearing as the winsome daughter of the village shopkeeper. As is to be expected, she is the central figure in a romance in which Charles Ray, as Martin Tripp, is the other participant. But the culmination is not approached through the customary conventional channels, it is stated. It is reached by a series of exciting and surprising situations which will keep the audiences wondering until the last minute, in the opinion of the Arthur S. Kane officials. The others in the cast with which Mr. Ray surrounded himself are Donald MacDonald, Van Dyke Brooke, Clyde McCoy, Jess Herring, S. J. Bingham and Burt Offord.

The adaptation of the story was made by Richard Andres. In the directing of the production, Mr. Ray was again assisted by Al Ray. Others in the technical staff included George Rizard, chief cameraman; Ellsworth Rumer, second camera; Harry Decker, editor; Robert Bennett, technical director, and Edward Withers, art titles.

"Road to London" to Be Shown in Cleveland

The pre-release showing of "The Road to London," in which Bryant Washburn is starred, at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, has been proclaimed by Associated Exhibitors to be a great success. Mr. Washburn appeared in person during the showing and was accorded a hearty reception. The picture is also scheduled to be shown at the new Allen theatre in Cleveland, and arrangements are in progress for Mr. Washburn's personal appearance at this house. Bookings have also been arranged for Kunsky's Madison theatre in Detroit and at the Tom Saxe theatre in Milwaukee.

"Oh, Buddy" with Neal Burns Completed

William Beaudine, Christie director, has completed "Oh, Buddy" as the second in the new series of Christie Comedies which Educational soon will begin releasing. In "Oh, Buddy" Neal Burns is supported by Vera Steadman, Helen Darling, Ogden Crane, Victor Rottman, Eugenie Forde and others. Burns plays the part of a returned soldier looking for a job. He finds that the girl who sold him doughnuts in France is in charge of the employment bureau. When she finally sends him to work in her own home, Burns "subs" for the discharged butler at a dinner given for Burns' own family and his rival, who was his commanding officer overseas.

Congratulate Kane on Signing of Star

Telegrams and letters received by Arthur S. Kane, chairman of the board of directors of Associated Exhibitors, from members and from exhibitors generally in all parts of the country indicate that the acquisition of Florence Vidor as an Associated Exhibitors' star is one of the most popular developments of the moment. Scores of letters expressing the most enthusiastic regard for the charm and ability of the star have been received, and Mr. Kane has been warmly congratulated for securing Miss Vidor at the psychological moment.

Rex Beach Takes First Big Scene in Alaska

Rex Beach has completed the filming of the first big scene for "The Iron Trail," which is scheduled for release by United Artists. The scene was taken near Cordova, Alaska, during the "big break" of the ice jam on the Copper River. "The Iron Trail," written by Rex Beach in novel form, tells the story of a great engineering feat whereby the frozen North is opened to American enterprise. Mr. Beach expects to have the picture ready for release early in the fall.

Buck Jones Vehicle is Released by Fox

William Fox announces for release this week "Straight from the Shoulder," in which Buck Jones plays the featured role. Roy Norton wrote the story, and Bernard Durning directed. Helen Ferguson plays opposite Jones, and Kid McCoy appears in the "heavy" role.

Broadside Is Issued on "Woman God Changed"

Cosmopolitan Productions has issued a broadside of four pages to be sent to every exhibitor in the country on its latest success, "The Woman God Changed," which has filled three of the largest motion picture pre-release theatres in New York. Fulfilling its promise to exhibitors, Cosmopolitan Productions advertises in this broadside the first two weeks' Broadway box-office take of this picture, when it played at the Rivoli Theatre and the Rialto Theatre. The take totalled $39,-079.25, it is stated.

The broadside tells exhibitors that powerful big space advertisements were run in the New York American and The New York Evening Journal and similar advertisements will be run in all the great Hearst newspapers throughout the country. The other pages contain facsimile advertisements and publicity matter which Cosmopolitan Productions is printing in newspapers in order to help the exhibitors advertise the picture to the public.

News of Players and Directors will be found on pages 121-22

Neilan in Actor's Role in "Bits of Life"

New Players Cast for "Find the Woman"

Norman Kerry and George MacQuarrie have been added to the cast of "Find the Woman," the Arthur Somers Roche story being filmed by Cosmopolitan Productions. "Find the Woman," which appeared serially in Cosmopolitan Magazine, is a story of mystery, adventure and love.

Tom Terriss is directing this picture at William Randolph Hearst's new Astoria studio. Eileen Huban and Ethel Duray appear in important roles.

New York Critics Like "Ten Dollar Raise"

J. L. Frothingham's comedy-drama, "The Ten Dollar Raise," distributed by Associated Producers, Inc., was acclaimed a distinct hit by the public and newspaper critics when it played a full engagement last week at the Capitol Theatre, New York, the world's largest playhouse.

New York Herald said, "'The Ten Dollar Raise' at the Capitol this week is so exceptionally good that it actually suggests a new rule to be followed in the movies. That is, that a successful system in a comedy is to take a minor character and make him so interesting and varied that the audience doesn't care what the fatuous hero does."

Gasnier to Stay with R-C Pictures Corp.

With the announcement of the formation of the new R-C Pictures Corporation, capitalized at $4,000,-000 to take over the Robertson-Cole Company's film interests, it became known that Louis J. Gasnier, the French director would continue with the organization and devote his time to the production of high grade photoplay such as "Kismet" and "Good Women" both of which he directed.

Many First-Run Bookings on "Salvage"

Charles R. Rogers, general manager of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, announces that the Loew Circuit has booked "Salvage" for its "big time," embracing in all about ninety days in Greater New York. Other leading theatres in which "Salvage" will have first run are: The Palace, Washington, D. C.; the Modern and Beacon Theatres, Boston; The Regent Theatre, Rochester; Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo; the new Loew's State Theatre, Cleveland; and the Valentine Theatre, Toledo. The California Theatre, Los Angeles, has booked "Salvage."

Feature Has Extended Run

"Woman God Changed" is Held for Second Week at Moss's Broadway

"THE WOMAN GOD CHANGED," the Cosmopolitan production, is in such demand for pre-release showings in and around New York that it promises to rival in box-office popularity the success of "Humoresque" and "The Inside of the Cup," according to word from Cosmopolitan headquarters. "The Woman God Changed," after playing a week at the Rivoli Theatre on Broadway was moved to the Rialto Theatre. Then B. S. Moss booked the picture for his Broadway Theatre, where after running all last week, it has been booked for an additional week. This is declared by Cosmopolitan to be the first time in the history of the present management of the Broadway Theatre that a feature picture has been held over for more than one week.

Another tribute to "The Woman God Changed" is the booking of the picture for the week of June 19th at the Mark Strand Theatre in Brooklyn. Reproductions of the original settings used by Cosmopolitan Production will be used in an elaborate prologue at the Strand.

"The Woman God Changed" was adapted for the screen by Doty Hobart, the well known scenario writer, from the short story by Donn Byrne, which appeared in Hearst's Magazine. Robert G. Vignola directed the picture. Seena Owen and E. K. Lincoln play the leading parts. Others in the cast are Lillian Walker, Henry Sedley, H. Cooper-Cliffe, Paul Nicholson, Brian Darley, Templer Saxe and Joseph Smiley. Dr. Frank Crane, well known for his editorials throughout the country, wrote the titles for "The Woman God Changed."

Educational in June Drive

Branch Offices "Keyed Up" Over Sales Competition; West in Lead

REPORTS received at the New York headquarters of Educational Films indicate that the branch offices have entered the June sales drive with the greatest enthusiasm. So far the Western branches seem to be leading, according to word from the Educational Films' home office.

The Denver branch has issued a challenge to the other branches for a real competition, declaring that only phenomenal work will wrest first place from the Denver contingent. "All keyed up" is the usual report being received from the various branch-offices on the June sales competition. Following is the report, in part, from Denver:

"The first week as far as Denver is concerned shows two two-reel comedies, one single, one Hudson's Bay picture, all playing first run houses, to say nothing of our other subjects. Salt Lake is equally well lined up. Unless other offices do phenomenal business, we think we are in the run, for we have an average of two two-reel subjects playing first run almost every week during June in the city of Denver."

San Francisco, however, was quick to accept the challenge. A telegram from this city bears the following encouraging information:

"Both issues of Kinograms closed with Market Street Realty Company, San Francisco, who control leading first run theatres (the Portola and Imperial Theatres) and the beautiful new Granada Theatre to be opened shortly. As a feature of the Educational June competition, these contracts become effective this month. The volume of bookings on the balance of our service is relatively large."

The New York sales office is concentrating its entire force on the competition, and early reports are of favorable progress.

The branch office at Dallas reports Educational subjects running at both the Palace and Old Mill theatres, with increasing business throughout the city and territory for the rest of the summer.

Max Brand's Story Is Screened by Fox

"Children of Night" is announced by William Fox as the next vehicle for William Russell. The story is by Max Brand and first appeared in magazine form. It is said that by a skillful handling of two diametrically opposite elements, an underworld gang and a Wall street money king, Mr. Brand has obtained enough action and thrills compactly woven into this story to make it an ideal screen offering. The picture was directed by Jack Dillon.

Realart Announces Release

Justine Johnstone in "A Heart to Let"; Directed by Edward Dillon

HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH'S book, "Agatha's Aunt" is the basis of "A Heart to Let," in which Justine Johnstone is starred. Miss Johnstone appears as a character much different than any she has before essayed, being that of an aged woman. This is an assumed character, of course, her actual part being that of Agatha Kent, a very beautiful young woman, a role which Miss Johnstone is particularly well equipped to portray.

The story concerns Burton Forbes, a young man, temporarily blind, who goes to the country for his health. Agatha, for reasons best shown in the picture, disguises herself as her aunt. This leads to many humorous complications and finally to a very serious affection of the heart to which both Agatha and Forbes succumb.

The exterior scenes of "A Heart to Let" were taken down in Atlanta and Savannah, Georgia, a great deal of the action taking place near the former city on the famous estate of Arthur Solomon, a multi-millionaire, who kindly consented to the use of his grounds for that purpose.

Edward Dillon, who directed Miss Johnstone in "Sheltered Daughters," also directed her in this picture, which is the fourth she has made for Realart. He was assisted by J. Gordon Cooper and George Folsey was at the camera.

Justine Johnstone in her newest Realart production, "A Heart to Let"

Miss Johnstone's supporting cast includes such players as Harrison Ford ("Burton Forbes"), Marcia Harris ("Zaida Kent"), Thomas Carr ("Howard Kent"), Elizabeth Garrison ("Mrs. Studley"), Claude Cooper ("Doolittle"), and James Harrison ("Warren").

The scenario was written by Frank S. Bereford.

"It's Your Move" New Vanity Comedy

"It's Your Move" is the title of the current single reel Vanity Comedy for Educational release. The featured players are Charlotte Merriam and Francis Feeney. Miss Merriam has appeared in a number of Christie Comedies, and Feeney is a regular leading man in the Vanity Comedy series.

Paramount Plans for Fall Announced

JESSE L. LASKY in announcing Paramount's fall plans states that it will be the policy of the Famous Players-Lasky organization to devote special attention to the matter of stories for screen production. A large number of well-known plays and books, as well as original stories have already been purchased for filming at early dates, he states. Mr. Lasky also emphasizes in his statement the intention of Paramount to shun the "factory made" picture and give greater attention to each individual production from the time the story is submitted until the finished prints have been approved for exhibition. The statement from the Lasky office is submitted in part as follows:

"One of the early fall releases will be 'The Affairs of Anatol,' Cecil B. DeMille's greatest production. Written by Jeanie Macpherson, this wonderful picture has been enacted by a cast including Wallace Reil, Gloria Swanson, Elliott Dexter, Bebe Daniels, Monte Blue, Wanda Hawley, Theodore Roberts, Agnes Ayres, Theodore Kosloff, Polly Moran, Raymond Hatton and Julia Faye. The settings of this production are the ultimate in scenic art, and I feel positively that this picture will be the most sensational success of next year.

"Mr. DeMille also has just finished a picture, 'Fools' Paradise,' from Leonard Merrick's book. 'The Laurels and the Lady.' In the cast are Dorothy Dalton, Mildred Harris and Conrad Nagel.

"George Fitzmaurice has finished 'Experience,' a lavish production of George V. Hobart's great stage success, in which Richard Barthelmess plays the role of Youth. Marjorie Daw, as Love, and a cast including a number of beautiful girls make this production distinctive. Mr. Fitzmaurice is now engaged in producing 'Peter Ibbetson,' in which Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid will co-star, with a supporting cast including Elliott Dexter, Montagu Love and George Fawcett.

"John S. Robertson is now in London conferring with Sir James M. Barrie on 'Peter Pan.' We plan to make this production the biggest of the year.

"William deMille is now at work on 'The Stage Door,' Rita Weiman's widely read Saturday Evening Post story, with Jack Holt, Lila Lee and Charles Ogle in the cast. On the completion of 'The Stage Door' Mr. deMille will produce 'The Cradle,' the well known play by Eugene Brieux, the French dramatist who wrote 'Damaged Goods.'

"For production by George Melford we have just purchased 'The Sheik' by E. M. Hull, adapted from a novel which already is a best seller in England and this country. Mr. Melford is now working on 'The Great Impersonation,' by E. Phillips Oppenheim, with a cast including Ann Forrest, James Kirkwood, Alan Hale and Fontaine La-Rue. Another Melford production will be 'You Can't Fool Your Wife' by Hector Turnbull, who wrote the highly successful picture, 'The Cheat.'

"Our plans for Wallace Reid embrace a series of production which will be bigger than any of Mr. Reid's starring pictures up to this time. One of the first pictures this popular star will make, upon the completion of his work with Elsie Ferguson in 'Peter Ibbetson,' will be 'The Champion,' the play by Thomas Louden and A. E. Thomas which, with Grant Mitchell in the leading role, has been New York's biggest comedy hit this season.

"Before coming East Mr. Reid completed 'The Hell Diggers,' from a story written by Byron Morgan. Another picture in which he will soon appear is 'Tall Timber,' by Dr. J. A. B. Scherer, formerly president of the California Institute of Technology. Mr. Reid also will be starred in 'Rent Free,' an unusually interesting story by Mann Page and Izola Forrester Page and in 'An Assisted Frankenstein,' a story by the late Charles E. Van Loan, whose short stories in the Saturday Evening Post were read all over the country. We also are planning for Mr. Reid a story unlike anything that has been done before in pictures. It will be called 'Across the Continent,' and it is a racing story of an entirely new idea.

"Besides 'Cappy Ricks,' which Thomas Meighan is now producing from Peter B. Kyne's well known stories, Mr. Meighan will soon be starred in 'A Prince There Was,' a romantic comedy of great heart appeal in which George M. Cohan recently scored a big success. In addition to this Mr. Meighan will be the star in an unusually spectacular production, 'The Sea Bride,' an original story by Edward Sheldon.

"Elsie Ferguson already has completed 'Footlights,' which John S. Robertson directed from Rita Weiman's Saturday Evening Post story. This will be a fall release.

"Gloria Swanson also will be seen in a number of strong dramatic productions. So successful was Elinor Glyn's story 'The Great Moment' that Mrs. Glyn has written another story for Miss Swanson, called 'Beyond the Rocks' which will be put into production shortly. Miss Swanson is now at work on 'The Shulamite,' the play written by Edward Knoblock and Claude Askew. Besides these Miss Swanson will do 'The Ordeal,' from an original story written by W. Somerset Maugham.

"Betty Compson is nearing the completion of her first Paramount starring picture, 'At the End of the World,' by Ernest Klein, under the direction of Penrhyn Stanlaws, and among her coming productions will be 'The Woman in the Case,' Clyde Fitch's greatest play. Miss Compson also will be seen in 'The Sacrifice,' a new novel published serially in the Red Book Magazine.

Miss Compson also has been selected to play the role of Babbie in Sir James M. Barrie's play, 'The Little Minister,' in which Maude Adams became the favorite of the American public. Besides all these, Miss Compson will be starred in 'The Deluge,' the powerful drama recently produced on Broadway by Arthur Hopkins, and in 'A Stampede Madonna.'

"For Ethel Clayton our plans are equally ambitious. Miss Clayton, under the direction of William D. Taylor, has just finished a production adapted from a powerful drama written by the dean of British dramatists, Henry Arthur Jones, and is now at work on 'Her Own Money,' by Mark Swan. Later she will be starred in two original stories by Clara Beranger. These stories are 'Your Home Comes First' and 'Exit the Vamp,' and will introduce Miss Clayton in a new type of picture.

"Roscoe Arbuckle is now at work on 'Should a Man Marry?' by Sarah Y. Mason, with a cast including Mary Thurman and Harriet Hammond, two former bathing beauties, and a number of other beautiful girls. Mr. Arbuckle also will be seen in 'Thirty Days,' the roaring comedy hit by A. E. Thomas and Clayton Hamilton, and 'Via Fast Freight,' by Curtis Benton. Two of the biggest farce hits in the stage's history, 'Are You a Mason?' and 'The Man from Mexico' also will be produced with Arbuckle as the star."

Among the other productions named by Mr. Lasky for future release by Paramount are: William S. Hart in "Three Word Brand," "White Oak," and "Traveling On"; George Loane Tucker's "Ladies Must Live"; the Cosmopolitan production, "Get Rich Quick Wallingford;" "Supermen," "Back Pay," and "Just Around the Corner" by Fannie Hurst; and "The Valley of Silent Men" by Peter B. Kyne.

Herbert Rawlinson to Be Universal Star

HERBERT RAWLINSON, for years one of the mainstays of the old Universal program, has again been signed by Universal as one of its Special Attraction stars. One of the objects of Irving Thalberg's visit to New York was to consult with Mr. Laemmle as to stars for next fall, and among those under discussion was Herbert Rawlinson, who was playing at Universal City in the company supporting Priscilla Dean in her next Universal-Jewel picture, "Conflict."

Rawlinson will not be finished with the Dean picture until July 1st. By that time a number of productions will be ready for his first starring picture under the new contract.

Director Sullivan Begins New Gayety

Frederic Sullivan, director, is starting work in the Christie studios, on the latest Gayety one-reel comedy for Educational, "Assault and Flattery." Teddy Sampson and Henry Murdock are the principals.

H. S. Buck in New York for Synchronized

Music Score Service Corporation, of 1600 Broadway, New York, local distributors for Synchronized Music Scores announce the arrival of H. S. Buck, who has been appointed regional supervisor of sales by Synchronized Scenario Music Co., of Chicago.

Mr. Buck comes to New York well equipped to demonstrate to local exhibitors the entertainment value of Synchronized Music Scores. During his stay in the metropolitan territory he will have his headquarters with Music Score Service Corporation. Previous to his affiliation with the above company Mr. Buck was special representative for the Exhibitors Trade Review in Chicago, Ill. His experience with the Trade Review, coming after a time when he represented the Gardner Screen, brought him in close contact with hundreds of exhibitors throughout the Middle West. Learning from them of the great need for music that would synchronize with the action on the screen, he was among the first to join the staff of Synchronized Scenario Music Co., receiving the appointment of regional supervisor of sales for the Eastern district.

Lasky Buys 3 New Stories

"The Champion" for Wally Reid; "Prince There Was" for Meighan

SINCE his return to New York Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been busy acquiring a long list of notable literary properties for production as Paramount pictures next season, and yesterday, as an indication of the magnitude of his production plans, he made two plays and a novel which he has purchased.

One of the plays is "The Champion," the successful comedy-drama which, with Grant Mitchell in the leading role, has run all this season on Broadway. "The Champion" was purchased as a vehicle for Wallace Reid, and will be put into production upon Mr. Reid's return to the coast, following the completion of "Peter Ibbetson," in which he is co-starring with Elsie Ferguson.

The other play is "A Prince There Was," George M. Cohan's successful romantic comedy of last season. This play has been bought for Thomas Meighan, and it is expected that it will prove to be the greatest vehicle this popular star has had in a long time.

The novel is "The Sheik," E. M. Hull's sensationally successful book, which Mr. Lasky has bought for production by George Melford with a cast of stellar players. This book, which has a wealth of picturesque background and a number of strong dramatic situations, already has had a tremendous sale both in this country and in England, its popularity having carried it into several editions.

"The purchase of these three properties," said Mr. Lasky, "is in line with our policy to get bigger and better stories for our stars and directors next season. Mr. Reid and Mr. Meighan undoubtedly are the most popular male stars today, and with bigger stories and plays as their starring vehicles their popularity is bound to increase. We plan to give the utmost care to the production of both 'The Champion' and 'A Prince There Was' and I fully believe these two pictures will prove to be immense box-office, as well as artistic, successes."

Censor Has Praise For "Reputation"

Mrs. Nannie Harrison Bell, the official censor of Waco, Texas, has issued a statement in which she states that "Reputation," the Universal feature is a picture "supreme among its fellows."

"There is no taint or scandal nor smirch in the picture and lovers of the artistic will find it appealing and powerful," continues the statement.

Selznick Special Is Ready

"Who Am I?" to Be Released Soon; Other Selznick Pictures Complete

IT is announced this week that "Who Am I?", a screen adaption of a Max Brand story, will be released by Selznick Enterprises in the near future. Henry Kolker is the director. "Who Am I?" is to be released as a Selznick special. Niles Welch, Clair Anderson, Gertrude Astor, Josef Swickard, and George Periolat are among the featured players.

June 30th is the date set for the release of Selznick's next Eugene O'Brien picture, entitled "Is Life Worth Living?" This picture was adapted by John Lynch from a story by George Weston. Tom J. Hopkins prepared the scenario and its direction was the work of Alan Crosland. Winifred Westover heads the supporting cast which includes Arthur Hausman, Warren Cook, George Lessy, Arthur Donaldson and Florida Kingsley.

Conway Tearle, Selznick star, has just started work at a new production under the direction of Alan Crosland at the Fort Lee, N. J., studios. "Shadow of the Sea" is the working title of the picture. Winifred Westover, who has been Mr. Tearle's leading woman in several releases, again heads his support.

Two productions lately finished by Mr. Tearle are now in preparation for release by Selznick. They are "Ye Shall Pay," directed by Ralph Ince, with Zena Keefe as the leading woman, and "Love's Masquerade," which was directed by William P. S. Earle.

Selznick also announces that the Constance Talmadge picture "Up the Road With Sallie," will be revived, having been re-edited and retitled. It will be released on June 20th.

Praises New Unit System

Metro Official Reports Progress; Lytell, Ingram, Dana, All at Work

W. E. ATKINSON, general manager of Metro Pictures Corporation has just returned to New York after a month watching the development of productions now in the making at the company's Hollywood, Cal. studios.

Mr. Atkinson expressed himself as highly pleased with the work on the forthcoming pictures, all of which are being filmed under the newly adopted unit system of production—a system that was worked out with a view to carrying out the "fewer and better" slogan.

The Metro General Manager was pleased at the progress of Bert Lytell's new starring picture, "A Trip to Paradise" which is a Maxwell Karger production from the international stage success "Liliom" by Franz Molnar. June Mathis adapted it.

Rex Ingram's filming of the Balzac story, titled "The Conquering Power" is being photographed in a series of settings designed by Ralph Barton, poster artist and magazine illustrator. Practically the entire 'Four Horsemen' cast was reengaged for this picture. Alice Terry and Rudolph Valentino, who have the leading parts in "The Four Horsemen" head the big company organized by Mr. Ingram for this film. June Mathis who wrote the scenario for the Ibanez novel, prepared this screen version.

Viola Dana is head over heels in the making of a piquant story by Meta White, "The Match Breaker." Dallas M. Fitzgerald who has directed Miss Dana's Metro successes, directs this picture. Arthur Zellner adapted it.

Alice Lake, Metro's newest star, is at work on "Over the Wire," an original story by Arthur Somers Roche. Mr. Zellner wrote the 'script.

Lloyd Series in Big Demand

Claim Record for Important First Run Bookings on Comedian's Series

ASSOCIATED Exhibitors claims for Harold Lloyd "the distinction of the greatest number of important first run bookings involving an entire series of productions ever attained by any star." It is conceded that some of the very biggest feature productions have played in all of these houses, but they were booked after the picture had been viewed, it is stated. The Lloyd bookings are for the first three Associated Exhibitors Lloyd Comedies and they were made on the showing of the first picture of the series, "Now or Never," and in some cases after the second picture, "Among Those Present," had been shown.

"The third production, 'I Do,' has been booked with the series in the most representative houses in every key center," declares the Associated Exhibitors' statement, The figures show that the Associated Lloyd comedies will probably attain wider distribution and greater returns for both producers and exhibitors than any production not of feature length ever made."

With the appearance of "Now Or Never" as the first of the series the flood of Lloyd contracts started, and in giving out this statement on the success of Lloyd Associated Exhibitors makes it clear that the actual figures to date are the basis for the statement that records for some of the biggest features have been shattered. It is stated that Lloyd will gross an amount attained by but few productions in the history of the industry.

Pearson Forecasts Industrial Revival

Agnes Ayres, now a Paramount star

Agnes Ayres Is Made a Paramount Star

Because of the popularity she has achieved as leading woman in a number of Paramount pictures, Agnes Ayres is to be starred in a series of productions by Paramount, it was announced this week by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., in charge of production.

Miss Ayres is now in New York, where she is playing the feminine lead in Thomas Meighan's picture, "Cappy Ricks," which is being made at Paramount's Long Island studio. On the completion of this production she will return to Hollywood, it is stated, and will begin work on her first star picture.

"The elevation of Miss Ayres to stardom," said Mr. Lasky, "is more than a reward for merit; it is done at the insistence of exhibitors who have seen her popularity increase steadily among their own patrons as a result of her work in 'Forbidden Fruit,' 'The Love Special' and other pictures in which she has played leading roles with distinction."

Holubar Planning New Costume Spectacles

Allen Holubar, producer of "Man-Woman-Marriage," one of Associated First National's "Big Five," believes that costume films are here to stay and that fandom wants a gigantic spectacle every year or so.

With this belief in mind Holubar will, within the next year, produce a big costume play on a scale that will permit it to compete with any of the big European films that have invaded American territory.

Four of Mr. Holubar's pictures now on schedule will star Dorothy Phillip who played the stellar roles of "Man-Woman-Marriage" and "The Heart of Humanity." The other two will be all-star productions.

ANALYSIS of present conditions in virtually all branches of industry should allay any feeling of panic that might be crawling on exhibitors with the approach of the warm months, according to a statement just issued by Elmer Pearson, Pathe Director of Exchanges.

"Particularly optimistic are the reports coming from the agricultural sections," says Mr. Pearson. "In spite of weather handicaps, there will be more wheat harvested in the United States this year than ever before, the government reports indicate. Produce is now bringing prices twenty to thirty per cent higher than in the fall of last year, which is a much needed boon to the farmer, who suffered severely from the financial depression which struck him with a fell swoop last Fall.

"The lowering of the wages of railroad men, instead of having a detrimental effect on the business of motion picture exhibitors, should have just the opposite result. Unquestionably it will bring about before many weeks, a lowering of freight rates. This will be a harbinger of more activity in industries which at the present time are badly handicapped by a life-extinguishing freight burden. It has been cheaper for many plants to suspend activities altogether than to attempt to continue in operation with strangling shopping charges.

"The foundation of American wealth is laid on the farm. When times are bad for the farmer, they are bad all over the country. It is the farmer who consumes a great share of American product. It is his money that keeps industry going.

"Prosperity is coming back to the farmer, and when it does he will find himself in a position more firmly entrenched than ever. His prosperity will be stable. It will not be a flash that will soon disappear and leave him in a worse position than before.

"The farmer has resumed buying. Of that there can be no question. When he joined in the buyers' strike, it meant the closing down of industry after industry. Now with him back in the market, these industries are resuming.

"Take a survey of the country.

"In the South, when the bottom fell out of the cotton market, naturally a terrific crimp was placed in the exchequer of the Southern people. This market is now plainly improving. The flood tide of adversity failed to carry the cotton farmer under, and now that the tide has subsided he finds himself in a strong position, with very favorable prospects for the Fall.

"In the West and Middle West, particularly through the grain belt, conditions were virtually stagnated when the price of wheat fell so far that, rather than sell, the farmer stored his grain, and used his corn for fuel. The world demand for wheat, however, has reacted, and now this stored crop is being rapidly sold. The price of cattle is improving, and altogether the Western farmer is much better off now than he was six months ago.

"In the central territory, particularly around Michigan, and Indiana, with the automobile factories shut tight, the late fall days, and early Spring days were very gloomy indeed. With price readjustments in the automobile, and tire field, the public entered the buying arena again, and now virtually all the great auto factories are running full swing. Consequently exhibitors in this section have little to worry about.

"In New England, mills and textile works are getting nearer to normal production than for six months past.

"The economic situation has cleared up very nicely in this district, and with the increasing demand for textiles for fall and winter wear, the clouds are lifting for the New England exhibitor.

"New York and Pennsylvania, and other border states, are naturally among the first hit when economic depression sets in for their vast populations are made up of all classes of workmen and wage earners. Several months ago, tens of thousands of clothing makers were out of work in New York City alone. Today, these men are all on their jobs. Building is moving at a pace calculated to set a record. In Pennsylvania, the steel districts are not in the admirable position held at the beginning of the year. Steel orders are slow in materializing, but the indications are for a general revival of the steel industry before many weeks.

"On the whole the situation so far as money is concerned is all that it should be. Readjustments in prices and wages have been practically completed in all industries. There are still some readjustments to be made, but they are not entirely essential, to an even greater revival of trade and industry.

"My advice to exhibitors, now that summer is approaching, is to avoid being panic stricken. Don't let a reduction in box office receipts cause you nerve-wrecking alarm. It is only a natural consequence of the season.

"We have been particularly fortunate in having a late summre. This is something for which the exhibitor may be thankful. Business will hold up this summer. Give your public the best, and they will buy—at your box office. The fall will be ushered in with a new era of prosperity, for all.

"Through the entire period of general depression the motion picture industry has stood as one bright spot that in comparison suffered very little. Now that general business is so definitely improving our optimism and extra energy should be brought into full play to carry on through the short summer whereupon fall will see our several businesses fully revived and in a stronger position than ever before.

"Don't get panicky! We still have much for which to be thankfull!"

All Aboard For Minneapolis

The gathering of the members of the National Association of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America at Minneapolis, June 27, 28 and 29, promises so much of vital importance to the association and the individual members that a surprisingly large attendance seems a foregone conclusion.

Grasping the opportunity thus presented to further the acquaintance of the members of the association while en route, Wm. J. Sweeney, Organizer of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Illinois, has arranged for a special train to convey members, their families and friends. This train will leave the Union Station, Chicago, at 10 A.M., Sunday, June 26th, and operate over the Burlington Railroad, reaching the convention city that evening. This route parallels the Mississippi River for almost three hundred miles and affords a most delightful daylight ride through a very picturesque country. An invitation has been extended to all members residing east or south of Chicago to join this party and enjoy the particular convenience which this special service will insure. Reservations should be made through Mr. J. R. Van Dyke, General Agent of the Burlington at 179 West Jackson St., Chicago.

Planning Big Fight Film

Quimby to Supervise Filming of the Dempsey-Carpentier Battle

FRED C. QUIMBY will supervise the taking of the Dempsey Carpentier fight pictures. Through a contract signed Monday with Tex Rickard, Quimby not only will have charge of the filming of the big bout, but also will handle the production, exploitation and sales of the finished product. The fight film will run about five reels and will show in detail in addition to the contest itself everything of interest surrounding the battle for the world's heavyweight championship that can be picturized.

While a federal law ordinarily would probably prevent the showing of the pictures throughout the United States, there is nothing to prevent the exhibition of the film anywhere in New Jersey. This means that fans from New York, Philadelphia, and other big centers will have an opportunity to witness the fight for the first or second time in pictures wherever the film may be shown within the limits of Jersey. Mr. Quimby's present plans call for an extended run in Atlantic City which will add to the many attractions of the popular resort during the heated term.

A battery of twenty cameras under the personal direction of Mr. Quimby and lieutenants will register every incident of the fight. The world's greatest camera men will be stationed at points of vantage from every angle at the ringside. In addition other experts will shoot the battle from a balloon directly above the squared circle.

The film will show Dempsey and Carpentier in training, the arrival of special trains, close-ups of fight fans from everywhere, intimate glimpses of international sporting celebrities, the arena at the high tide of battle with group studies of the tens of thousands of fight-mad fans focusing their attention on the big doings in the squared circle and the fight itself featured with a slow-motion camera revealing minutely every passing phase of the battle royal up to and including the finish, with the human tidal wave converging on the arena for a close-up greeting of the man of destiny.

Mr. Quimby hints there's a possibility that through some special dispensation the pictures may even be shown elsewhere in the U. S. A. than in New Jersey. Any such special showing would probably partake largely of the nature of benefit exhibitions for wounded and needy ex-service men.

The pictures no doubt will be shown broadcast throughout the world. Should Carpentier win there would be a tremendous demand for the film in France.

Variety of Animals in Educational Comedies

THREE chimpanzees, an elephant, tigers, leopards, an ostrich, cats, goldfish, and last but not least a porcupine, all in one screamingly funny animal comedy! This is the prospect for the first of a new series of single reel animal comedies to be produced during the year for Educational Film Exchanges by Selig and Rork.

Work has just recently been started on this series for Educational. It will consist of twelve one-reel comedies, one to be released each month during the year. Two directors are working on the first comedy. They are Rea Hunt and C. Diltz, both of whom had long experience in motion pictures in animal comedies and features.

Omaha's Most Popular Girl Makes Debut

Mayme Krasne, voted Omaha's most popular business woman, has made her debut in the movies. She will be seen in Rex Ingram's Metro production, "The Conquering Power," Miss Krasne was the winner of the popularity contest conducted by the Omaha News, the Sun Theatre and Metro Pictures.

The part played by Miss Krasne is of the importance commonly classified as a "bit" in picture parlance. But is is of more consequence than the roles usually given to the inexperienced adventurer in Pictureland.

Perrin on 10,000 Mile Trip for Warren

Dwight S. Perrin, vice president, in charge of sales for the F. B. Warren Corporation left New York last week on a trip that will take him not only to the twenty-two branch offices of the new national distributing organization but into principal key cities in every territory east of a line from Minneapolis southward to Dallas.

William H. Jenner. vice president of the Pacific Division and in charge of the Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle territories, leaves Los Angeles next week for Seattle and Western Canada, where branch leases will be signed for the Warren offices in the Western section of the Dominion.

Sidney J. Goldman, vice president of the Central division with headquarters in Chicago will attend the Minneapolis convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, where he will meet Mr. Perrin and other Warren home office officials from New York and the managers of the seven branch offices in the central portion of the United States.

Elaborate Set Is Built for "Disraeli"

What is described to be one of the largest and most beautiful interior sets ever used in a motion picture has just been finished by Charles Osborn Seessel, art director for Distinctive Productions, Inc. The set is being used in filming the famous stage success "Disraeli" in which George Arliss is starred, and which will be released in the fall by United Artists. It was necessary to tear down three of the walls of the studio to erect this stupendous structure, it is said.

The set shows the reception hall of Buckingham Palace, finished in gray and gold, and employs a number of colossal columns to support the great arches. Diplomats of all nations, celebrities, Indian rajahs, Turks in gay attire, titled persons and ladies of great beauty throng the reception room. The entry of Disraeli alone into the reception room, and the final entry of Lady Beaconsfield, his wife, constitute the "big moment" at the close of the picture.

Jack Holt, who is to be starred in Paramount pictures

Jack Holt to be Star of Paramount Series

The elevation of Jack Holt to stardom was announced this week by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., in charge of production.

Mr. Holt, it was declared by Mr. Lasky, will be starred in a series of Paramount pictures, and will begin work in the near future on his first starring production at the Lasky studio in Hollywood.

Within the last year or so Mr. Holt has played leads in "Held By the Enemy," Paramount's picturization of William Gillette's Civil War play; in "Crooked Streets" and "The Sins of Rozanne," in each of which he supported Ethel Clayton, in "Midsummer Madness" and "The Lost Romance," two of William De Mille's recent productions, and is now playing a leading role in another William De Mille picture, adapted from Rita Weiman's story, "The Stage Door."

Universal Outlines Fall Plans

OUT of the conferences which have been necessary on account of Mr. Laemmle's coming trip to Europe, all of the major details of the Fall plans have been arranged, and Mr. Laemmle announces the following as the Universal product for the year starting September 5th:

"Foolish Wives," of course, is the big Jewel picture for the new year. The picture is finished at Universal City but it will take some time to cut and title it and it is not anticipated that the picture will be ready for release before the first of September and possibly the first of October.

Two other Jewels which are nearly completed are Edna Ferber's most widely read novel, "Fanny Herself," and Clarence Buddington Kelland's Red Book serial novel, "Conflict." Tod Browning is making a special production of "Fanny Herself." Mabel Julienne Scott has been engaged to play the leading role and he has assembled a cast which includes Stuart Holmes, Eugenie Forde, E. A. Warren, Snitz Edwards, Grace Marvin, Joe Swickard and Earle Schenck. Stuart Paton is directing "Conflict," in which Priscilla Dean is starring. Her leading man in this production is Herbert Rawlinson, and L. C. Shumway, Edward Connelly, Hector Sarno, Martha Mattox will have prominent roles.

"Foolish Wives" at Head of Jewel Release List

The fourth Jewel will be Lucien Hubbard's original story, written especially for Harry Carey's debut as a Jewel star. It is called "Partners." Robert Thornby will direct. The cast is now being chosen. The fifth Jewel will be "Human Hearts," the late Hal Reid's famous melodrama. In addition to these five, Priscilla Dean will appear in three more Jewels during the year, and Harry Carey in three more.

Universal will release fifty-two Special Attraction pictures, one a week, made by six stars. These stars are Frank Mayo, Gladys Walton, Hoot Gibson, Marie Prevost, Miss duPont and Herbert Rawlinson. Each star will make eight pictures, and four pictures will be of the all star variety.

The serial program for the year comprises six serials, two each by Eddie Polo, Art Acord and Eileen Sedgwick. These will each be eighteen episodes in length. Serial directors will be J. P. MacGowan, Edward Kull, and Al Russell.

The Universal program will include, as heretofore, fifty-two two-reel western dramas, some of which will be sold in series. One of these series will be contributed by Eddie Polo, who is already engaged in making eight short length dramas under the general title, "The Return of Cyclone Smith." These are being directed by Jay Marchant. Another series is eight pictures by George Larkin and Josephine Hill, of the northwest mounted police order. Another series will be contributed by Eileen Sedgwick and still another by Art Acord.

In the comedy division Universal will release twenty two-reel Jewel comedies. Of these, Lee Moran will contribute twelve and Joe Martin four or eight, depending somewhat upon the temperament of this simian comedian.

Universal will release fifty-two two-reel Century Comedies with three stars featured. Eighteen of these will be contributed by Brownie the Century Wonder Dog, eighteen by Harry Sweet, and sixteen by Charles Dorety.

Universal will also release fifty-two single reel Star Comedies. One series will be contributed by Billy Fletcher, and several stars are under consideration for the balance of these comedies.

Music Scores Grow in Favor

WORDS of praise for the Synchronized Music scores are coming from exhibitors in every quarter of the country, according to word received from the Synchronized Scenario Music Co. This company claims that many potential patrons of the films are kept out of the smaller houses because of the inferior brand of music played. Million dollar productions are screened to the accompaniment of a crudely played, old piano.

In speaking of the development of the Synchronized Music Scores to their present state, Moe Mintz, general sales manager of the company, said: "The part Synchronized Music Scores are playing in motion picture presentations in many of the very best theatres in America is apparent from the increased revenue at the box office. The public attends a theatre for the sole purpose of amusement. Music has always enjoyed a powerful hold on humanity. No matter how humble your patron may be, there is instilled within him, an emotional quality, and when everything else has failed to make that quality respond, music will be found to have the power to move him. Therefor when a tense scene is depicted upon the screen, nothing can put it over quite as satisfactory as music, properly synchronized with that scene.

"It is fully recognized by motion picture exhibitors that Mr. Eduarde, in his Strand Theatre, Mr. Rapee in his Capitol Theatre and Mr. Riesenfeld, in his Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion Theatres, have promoted the evolution of the picture play by creating a better taste in motion pictures, but it must not be forgotten that this was achieved in conjunction with music. Colorful stage setting too played an important part and great credit is due the managers of these splendid theatres, as well as many others in every part of the country that have in their own way emulated the example set in New York. The public has found a source of pleasure in this co-presentation of the two arts, and where they have been properly presented they have liberally patronized the theatres."

Synchronized Music Scores are ready now on all standard releases. First National, Paramount, Vitagraph, Fox, Associated Producers, Realart, Associated Exhibitors, Universal, Selznick, Goldwyn, United Artists, Robertson Cole, Hodkinson and Metro pictures have especially prepared synchronized scores for each of their releases.

First Kipling Feature Wins Big Bookings

As quickly as possible after the completion of the "Without Benefit of Clergy," and its final editing, prints have been made and forwarded to the branch managers of Pathe Exchanges, Inc. The release of the first Rudyard Kipling production is scheduled by Pathe for July 3rd. From the results of exhibitor previews received at Pathe headquarters, it appears that the picture is being eagerly accepted by shrewd and experienced exhibitors.

A set of still pictures forwarded to Mr. Kipling by Randolph Lewis, his technical assistant and author's supervisor of production, have brought a personal response of congratulation to all concerned. Mr. Kipling refers to his delight at "the meticulous attention to detail."

Educational Comedian Has Narrow Escape

Jimmy Adams, in making the first of the Adams comedies for Educational release, is reported to have had a narrow escape from death in a scene where he wrestles with a trained bear. The animal is supposed to be tame enough, but in a playful mood he grabbed the comedian and held him under water until Adams was nearly drowned.

Warren Uses Price Rating

To Follow First National System Without Selling Any Franchises

EXHIBITORS of the United States have been informed that the F. B. Warren Corporation, the newest national distributing organization, has adopted a unit price rating system to establish the price of productions to go out through Warren release, this system being identical with that established so successfully last year by the First National organization in their sub-franchise method. The difference between the First National and the Warren method is that along with the rating system First National sold sub-franchises and tied its local allies everywhere into solid affiliation, whereas the Warren organization this year establishes similar ratings without the sale of franchises to exhibitors.

Since April 1 auditors and managers of the Warren organization have been zoning every individual theatre in the United States in towns from 750 population upward. Each theatre, based on local conditions, on seating capacity and on trade conditions in specific cities and sections, has been figured out into decimals in its relation to the total hundred per cent of sales return for the United States and its relation to the subsidiary fractional part of the sales territory of which it belongs. This work was completed several weeks ago and placed in the hands of Warren managers.

It is regarded as of especial significance that another organization should openly and frankly recognize the wisdom of the price rating system established by the biggest exhibitor organization connected with the distribution of pictures and the comment was made yesterday that the adoption of this rating system by four or five companies would do more to establish stable prices for film rentals than anything else that might be devised.

Big Set in Pickford Picture

Reproduction of Dorincourt Castle Built for "Little Lord Fauntleroy"

ACCORDING to word from the United Artists headquarters, Mary Pickford's new production, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," will be of the million-dollar variety. A set now in course of construction at Hollywood for this picture is described to be "the most unique and elaborate set ever undertaken" by Miss Pickford. It is a reproduction of the ground floor of Dorincourt Castle, the ancestral home of the old Earl of Dorincourt who plays a conspicuous part in Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous story from which the Pickford picture is being adapted. The statement from the United Artists home office has the following to say about the Dorincourt Castle set:

"Some idea of the size of the set may be gathered from the fact that it is two hundred and twenty-six feet long by one hundred and twenty-five feet wide. Over one hundred tons of plaster were used in making it.

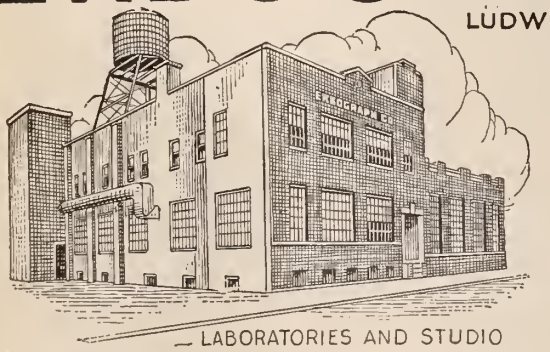
"The man who designed it, Stephen Gooson, made eighteen pages of drawings before he was satisfied with the plans. Gooson, who is art director for the Pickford Company, took a trip through England before the war when he was studying architecture abroad, and made photographs and sketches of the famous feudal castles in that country. His conception of Dorincourt includes everything he obtained on his tour of study.

"The furniture for the castle is being supplied by Thomas Little, head property man of the Brunton property department, who estimates that its value will be $75,000. Practically all of it is being made to order. All lighting fixtures and fireplace furnishings were designed by Gooson and are being made up specially. Each fireplace is equipped with a colored tile back, which will give the effect of smoked tile. All the details of the sets are being worked out with just as much care, so it will be seen that this will indeed be a most elaborate and finished specimen of construction."

Zane Grey Week Meets with Great Success

A REPORT from the W. W. Hodkinson headquarters announces that its "Zane Grey Week" campaign has proved one of the "most resultful exploitation schemes ever devised." A partial list of the houses which played Benjamin Hampton's screen production of Zane Grey's story, "The Man of the Forest," as a part of the Zane Grey Week celebration, has been submitted by the Hodkinson home office, and the thirty-eight theatres named therein include some of the leading picture palaces of the country, such as, the Strand, San Francisco, Cal.; Winter Garden theatre, Seattle, Wash.; Miller's, Los Angeles, Cal.; Circle theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., and the Superba theatre, San Diego, Cal.

One of the features of the campaign was the number of the houses which played this western despite their previous policy of tabooing subjects of the "Western" type, declares the report from the Hodkinson headquarters. Ralph Lieber, of the Circle theatre, M. L. Finkelstein, of the Finkelstein and Ruben circuit, and the general manager of the Miles circuit in Detroit, Mich., are among those who have wired reports of unusual business done with the Hampton-Grey special during the Zane Grey Week.



Another Tom Santschi Series for Pathe

Tom Santschi, the popular star of western two-reelers distributed by Pathe, has completely recovered from his illness of last winter and is again at work. Through Arthur Kane, Producer Cyrus J. Williams has arranged with Pathe Exchange, Inc., to distribute a new Santschi series of seven pictures, two being completed and the third now in production.

The new series will show Santschi supported by Ruth Stonehouse as leading woman. Titles of the pictures in the new series are not yet announced.

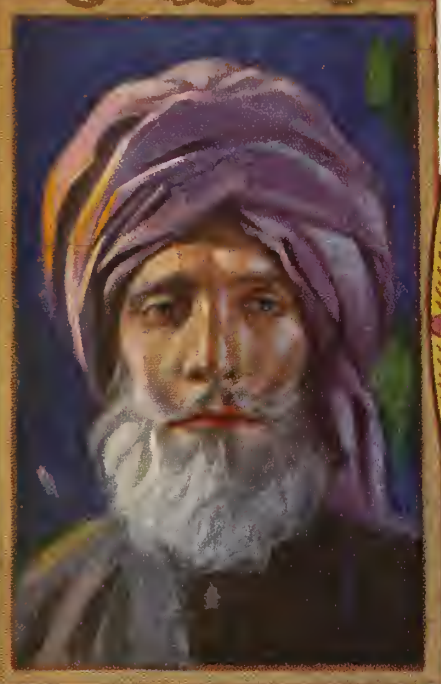
Without Bene
Two souls listen to the drum beat of destiny; two souls hear the call of the East in the night.
What did the drum beat, throbbing like their own hearts, mean?
Everything or nothing!

Kipling's fit of Clergy

IF Kipling had never written any other story than this, he would still be one of the great authors of the world.



If James Young never directed another picture, "Without Benefit of Clergy" would proclaim him a master.

If everyone of the greatest features that have ever been made were wiped out, "Without Benefit of Clergy" would, in itself, proclaim the greatness of the art to future generations.

In its revelation of a wonderful love, in its amazing power to move the human heart, in its intensity of emotion, in its superb acting, its mysticism and its colorful and perfect presentation, "Without Benefit of Clergy" stands alone.

It is the screen's greatest triumph.

To every exhibitor

PATHE presents the superlative offering of the year.

Rudyard Kipling is the world's greatest living author, a man whose works every school child knows, who is read by everyone who reads.

"Without Benefit of Clergy" is one of the most wonderfully appealing love stories the world has ever seen; it is the story of two persons who were as far apart in birth and training as the North and South poles—a white man and a beautiful young Hindu girl, yet who loved one another with a perfect love.

In every detail of story, direction, acting, production and universal appeal the picture is perfect. In itself it is a perfect answer to every critic the screen has ever had.

It will play upon the heart strings of your audiences; it will move them as no picture has ever moved them before; it will bring them back again and again to see it; it will establish your house as the very temple of motion picture art.

With the presentation and exploitation which it deserves, and for which it presents unparalleled opportunities, it will certainly surpass in receipts any picture you have ever had in your house. That is our honest belief.

Barker Finishing "The Poverty of Riches"

REGINALD BARKER will this week complete the photography on his next Goldwyn picture, "The Poverty of Riches," the original screen story by Leroy Scott. Heading the cast are Richard Dix, Leatrice Joy, John Bowers, Irene Rich, Louise Lovely, DeWitt C. Jennings, and Roy Laidlaw.

The cast has been completed for Tom Moore's next picture, production on which has now started. The story and continuity were prepared by Rupert Hughes. Helene Chadwick will again play opposite the star. Others in the cast are DeWitt C. Jennings, Grace Pike, Hardee Kirkland and Darrell Foss. E. Mason Hopper is directing.

Tom Moore's following picture will be the Alice Duer Miller original screen story, "The Man With Two Mothers," the continuity for which Mrs. Miller is now preparing with the aid of Julian Josephson.

Goldwyn sent two cameramen to Pueblo, Colo., to get atmospheric flood scenes for Henning Berger's drama, "Syndafloden," which the firm recently purchased. Paul Bern has been selected to write the continuity.

Nine New Vitagraph Releases

"Son of Wallingford" Heads Sept.-Oct. Program

NINE Vitagraph pictures are announced for September-October release, setting a new record for that company for the number and size of pictures released during a period of that length. The biggest release of all these, is "The Son of Wallingford," the feature made by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester at the West Coast studio and now being edited and titled at the Brooklyn studio. Mr. and Mrs. Chester returned from the Coast this past week after spending several months there making the picture. The story recently was published in abridged form in Collier's Weekly. It also will be brought out as a book about the same time that the film production is released.

In addition to the many months required for the filming of "The Son of Wallingford," nearly two years of preparation for it was required, thousands of persons took part in some of the scenes, and a good-sized fortune was spent on the sets, which include an artificial lake with dams and sluice-ways; oil derricks, a complete city with modern appointments and a pageant which includes about all the circus animals to be found in the West.

Among the principals in the cast are Tom Gallery in the title role of Jimmy Wallingford; Wilfrid North as the notorious J. Rufus; George Webb as the almost equally well-known "Blackie Daw; Antrim Short as "Toad" Jessup, Priscilla Bonner as Jimmy's sweetheart, Mary Curtis, Van Dyke Brooke as Henry Beegoode, Sydney D'Albrook as Bertram Beegoode, Andrew Arbuckle as Talbot Curtis and Bobbie Mack as "Onion."

Alice Joyce in a set for her new Vitagraph production, "The Inner Chamber," Director Edward Jose, Miss Joyce and Mrs. DeWolf Hopper are in the center

"Where Men Are Men," a special production starring William Duncan, with Edith Johnson as co-star, is also on the September-October release list of Vitagraph. This is an adaptation of "The Princess of the Desert Dream," by Ralph Cummins. It is a story of the Death Valley section of California when gold prospectors were sturdy men.

The Alice Joyce release for the new season is "The Inner Chamber," based on a widely read novel by Charles Caldwell Dobie, and filmed under the direction of Edward Jose. This is a society drama in which the star has the support of two well known leading men, Holmes E. Herbert and Pedro De Cordoba.

"The Bell Hop" is the title of the Larry Semon comedy for the first Fall release. Earle Williams' release is "Bring Him In," a strong play of the Canadian Northwest by H. H. Van Loan. Williams has a role somewhat like the one he portrayed in Eugene Walter's "The Wolf." The picture was directed by the star himself and Bert Ensminger.

Corinne Griffith and Catherine Calvert appear in "Moral Fibre," which was directed by Webster Campbell. Alice Calhoun's early Autumn release is "Peggy Puts It Over," a clean, brisk comedy-drama well suited to this star. The exteriors were screened mostly at Saugerties, N. Y., under the direction of G. V. Seyffertitz.

Antonio Moreno's release is "The Secret of the Hills," a visualization of the novel by William Garrett, published by Jarrold's of London. Completing the September-October list of Vitagraph is Jimmy Aubrey in a new comedy called "The Riot."

Supplementing Vitagraph's announcement of its release, that company states that arrangements have been completed for a special feature with Jean Paige as the star and Edward Jose as the director. The Eastern studio will be used for this production, which is an adaptation of a well-known literary work. At the same time the West Coast studio will be used for filming another special in charge of David Smith, who directed "Black Beauty."

R-C Salesmen Compete for Bout Tickets

The competition arranged by Charles R. Rogers, general manager of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, to spur bookings on "The Wonder Man," has stirred keen enthusiasm among the contending salesmen and the battle for the two ringside tickets to the Dempsey-Carpentier match is becoming spirited.

The two Robertson-Cole salesmen who write the greatest number of "Wonder Man" contracts up to June 24, will win the ringside tickets to the big fight. Not only will they be awarded the cherished pasteboards but they will also get free transportation to New York City and hotel accommodations while there. All this will be the gift of the company.

The score of the fight competition is being kept in the home office and the daily shifts in the standing of the men is creating widespread interest. The following salesmen are in a close race, according to the home-office: R. T. Good, Atlanta; H. R. Phillips and F. P. Ishmael, Chicago; R. Kinsler, Cincinnati; A. J. O'Keefe, Denver; H. R. Mahan, A. C. Hoganson, C. Buermele, Detroit; F. W. Young, Kansas City; N. Provencher, Oklahoma City; W. J. Quinliven, H. F. Ertel, F. A. Loftus, Philadelphia; O. R. Kurtz, Fittsburgh.

Equity Pictures to Release "Heedless Moths"

EQUITY PICTURES CORP., of New York, announces this week that it will distribute "Heedless Moths," featuring Audrey Munson, on the independent market. The picture had its premiere in New York recently.

"Heedless Moths" was directed by Hobart Z. Leonard and was produced on a lavish scale, it is said. Miss Munson has had a large amount of publicity recently in Sunday papers throughout the United States, which is expected to prove of inestimable value to exchanges. Elaborate advertising is now being prepared by Equity for "Heedless Moths," according to an announcement of that company.

According to the Equity statement business is increasing—the independent buyer being in the market and hungry for just such productions as Equity has recently marketed. This demand for better and bigger productions has not only increased but it constitutes a proof of the wonderful possibilities of the independent market. "Heedless Moths" is spectacular, and was produced with lavish settings which add to the attractiveness of the theme itself.

Equity obtained the rights to the production from the Perry Plays, Inc., through the arrangement of Allan Rock.

New Independent Producers Organize

Pyramid Pictures, Inc., was incorporated in Delaware last week, with a capitalization of $1,000,000 for the production of super-features for the independent market. Sixteen big productions will be made by Pyramid Pictures, Inc., every year.

Smallwood & Company, Inc., investment brokers, through Arthur N. Smallwood, its president, has arranged for the financing of the Pyramid Pictures, Inc. No capital stock in this producing company will be offered for sale. It is planned to give the director and the author a certain percentage of the gross as against a substantial cash advance. This method, the executives of the new company believe, will give to its product the best authors and directors in the motion picture world.

A scene from the recently completed James Oliver Curwood picture, "God's Country and the Law." This is the first of a series of four to be distributed on the independent market by Arrow Film Co.

Priest Has Booklet on Callahan Comedies

Robert W. Priest, president of the Film Market, Inc., has sent to every exhibitor in the United States and Canada, to every state rights buyer and to over 2,000 photoplay editors, an eight-page booklet in relation to the Jimmy Callahan Comedies. This publication is profusely illustrated and is printed in colors.

The scenes from three comedies shown in this pamphlet serve to give an exhibitor an idea of the novelty of the Jimmy Callahan Comedies and the clever way in which Mr. Callahan introduces attractive features of burlesque, travesty, extravaganza and farce into his stories.

Mr. Callahan will begin work in his new studio in Atlantic City this week, completing his fourth comedy in his series of twenty-six.

Marion Kohn Arrives in New York

Marion H. Kohn, president of the Consolidated Film Corporation of San Francisco and California and one of the directors of Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., has just arrived in New York from the Coast to attend to matters with regard to purchasing pictures for his territory. He will remain in New York for about a month. Mr. Kohn is staying at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Small Town Sets Price Record

Huge Price Paid for "Panther's Cub" First Run in Ohio

WHAT is said to constitute the highest figure ever paid for a first run booking in a community of but 2000 souls is credited to the enterprize of Leo J. Burkhardt, owner of the Hippodrome, in Crestline, Ohio. The top money ever known to have been paid by Mr. Burkhardt for the biggest special he ever played in his theatre, and he has played all of the biggest ones, was $55. In the payment in advance of the extraordinary sum of $200 for "The Black Panther's Cub" he has set a record figure.

When Phil Selznick of the Phil Selznick Production, Inc., of Cleveland mentioned to Mr. Burkhardt that he (Mr. Selznick) was dickering for "The Black Panther's Cub" for the State of Ohio, Mr. Burkhardt offered to pay to the Phil Selznick Productions, Inc., the sum of $200 for first run in Crestline if Mr. Selznick secured the picture. This was on May 5th. Three weeks later Mr. Selznick consummated the deal with Equity Pictures of New York for this production for Ohio and promptly notified Mr. Burkhardt of that fact.

Just as promptly did Mr. Burkhardt come through with his check for the amount agreed upon. Just what date the picture will be played in Crestline is yet unknown, but Crestline will see an advertising campaign and exploitation that will make the old timers sprout new hair according to the enthusiastic statements made by Mr. Burkhardt.

In speaking of this record transaction Mr. Burkhardt said: "It did not require very much salesmanship on the part of Mr. Selznick to book this production into my theatre for I have had inside reports on this picture from the very day it was finished. I knew that the first production at the hands of W. K. Ziegfeld would be a winner for the Ziegfelds have reputations for doing things right. With the greatest cast of Broadway stars ever assembled for any motion picture in history, and with a director like Chautard and the lead played by a box office magnet the caliber of Florence Reed I knew the resultant production would be a whale and it is. I read every report made by every critic that reviewed the picture and had a special emissary view the picture at its premiere at the Times Square theatre in New York. He reported it to be a lavish film and I expect to make a clean up with it in my town.

"A number of friend exhibitors told me that the price I paid for 'The Black Panther's Cub' was exorbitant. I expect to show them that it is cheap at the price for it is not always the price paid that makes the box office bulge, it's the picture and the way it's handled. I don't recall any independent production that ever boasted of a cast such as is seen in 'The Black Panther's Cub,' nor such a star, nor such a story and regal beauty of production, and after all these are the factors that bring money into the box office whether they are independently produced pictures or otherwise. Besides my intimate acquaintance with Selznick convinced me that you can't catch him napping. Phil knows pictures. He knows their box office value with a keeness that's uncanny. He can pick the winners with the same precision that Babson's reports call the turn on the tides of trade. We were both of the same opinion on the box office possibilities of this Ziegfeld production the minute it was first shown.

"All I can say is that I am glad I made the first grab for my town and I expect to show the natives of my town a line of entertainment with "The Black Panther's Cub" that they haven't seen in a long time."

Other territory sold by the Equity Pictures Corporation on this picture includes Greater New York and Northern New Jersey(with calls in for most of the territory throughout the country.

Curwood Sees His New Picture

Loud in Praise of Initial Production for Arrow Release

ACCORDING to an announcement from the Arrow Film Corporation, James Oliver Curwood, the author of so many popular Northwest and Alaskan motion picture stories, paid an unusual tribute to the first of the series of four Curwood pictures that are being produced for distribution by Arrow when he visited in Maine last week to watch the final work on the first release, "God's Country and the Law." Mr. Curwood made the trip all the way from his home in Michigan and was the guest of ex-Governor Carl E. Milliken and Honorable Frederick W. Hinckley, the two heads of the Pine Tree Pictures, Inc. of Portland, Me., who are producing this series for Arrow. Immediately upon his arrival in Portland, Mr. Curwood motored out with Mr. Milliken and Mr. Hinckley to the Sebago Lake region where the final scenes were being "shot" for the first picture.

Mr. Curwood was enthused and delighted with the effects and possibilities of the Maine woods as atmosphere for his pictures. They quoted him in part as follows:

"I never saw such beautiful country for the making of motion pictures. It is the living glorious synonym for the well known phrase, 'the great outdoors.' Had you gone north of 52 up into the very wildest regions of Alaska, you couldn't have added more color or realistic atmosphere as a background to these stories."

When one of the reporters asked him where he got his great love for the out of doors, Mr. Curwood's reply was of the sort that would probably be of interest to exhibitors and thousands of others who have seen or handled Curwood's stories made into pictures. "I inherited it, I imagine," laughed Mr. Curwood. "You see my great grandmother was a full blooded Indian, so I am not a great many generations away from the forest primeval. It was probably my Indian ancestry that bred in me such a love for the out of doors. And all my years in the Canadian Northwest only enhanced my taste for life in the open. For this reason I have always tried to keep the nature element uppermost in my stories. Of course, I try to write entertaining stories—stories that the public will like. Every author tries to do that. But above that ambition I cherish the other, to create in my readers a general love for nature."

The Arrow company further announces that the negative of the first Curwood release, "God's Country and the Law," is now being cut and made ready in the laboratory under the personal supervision of Sidney Olcott who directed it. It is said to be an unusual forceful Curwood drama with one of the story themes he loves best in it. Gladys Leslie will be seen in the role of Marie. The rest of an all star cast are William H. Tooker, Cesare Garvina, Fred C. Jones and Hope Sutherland.

MacCullough Completes "Washday Jingles"

"Washday Jingles" another of the Kid-Komedies on the "clean laugh" program originated by Jack MacCullough, was recently completed at his studio in Chicago. This number is a bright collection of childrens' pranks culminating in a laugh on radical prohibitionists that will cause no end of amusement.

Hermaine France and Ralph Hoos appear in this as the sister and brother. This is the first of a series for every day in the week.

Levey Exchange Opens in New York

Harry Levey, president National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc. makes another interesting announcement in the opening of the New York exchange of the "National." Mr. Levey has engaged Mr. Samuel A. Block, formerly manager of the Film Educational Department of the Fox Film Corporation, and more recently associated with the Church and School Film Service of this city, as manager of the local exchange.

Temporarily the New York exchange will be housed in the home office of the "National" at 230 West 38th Street.

Washington Exchange Features "Right of Way"

The Citizen Film Company, a Washington, D. C., exchange, is featuring the Thomas Mott Osborne production, "The Right Way," which is released through producers Security Corporation. This photoplay had a big premiere in Toledo, O., recently.

Dayton Auditorium to Run "Right of Way"

Arrangements have been made by the Producers Security Corporation for the presentation of the Thomas Mott Osborne feature, "The Right of Way" in the Auditorium Theatre, Dayton, O., the latter part of June.

Special exploitation will be given "The Right of Way," with the Producers Security likely sending a special publicity representative to Dayton prior to the opening.

"Black Panther's Cub" Sold to Friedman

Equity announces the sale of the rights to the W. K. Ziegfeld Production, "The Black Panthers' Cub," for the territory of Northern Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin to Joe Friedman of the Celebrated Players Film Co., of Chicago.

Joe Brandt and Cartoonist in Film Tie-Up

Joe Brandt says that he and Pat Sullivan, the cartoonist, have entered into an agreement to release a special novelty subject. Mr. Brandt has volunteered no further details on the arrangement effected.

High Class Animal Series Soon

Urban Preparing Elaborate Series for Kineto Release

CHARLES URBAN is now busy assembling a most noteworthy group of animal pictures for forthcoming release. These pictures will encompass all the knowledge there is of animals, birds, fish, reptiles and insects; they will be living pictures of every side of the animal kingdom; the jungle, the zoo, the field and the fable.

As described by a representative of the Kineto Company of America, Inc. which publishes all the Urban Popular Classics, this Animal Series has been many years in the collecting and only recently have the finishing touches been made to the negatives.

The series is broad in outline and will probably include forty reels in its final form. Each of these reels will be varied in its treatment; each one including some fancy—the Fables; some modernity—the Zoo; and some grim realism—the Jungle.

The fairy story side of the Fables is the most recent development and adds the finishing touch to the accomplishment. These are being contributed by Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Society and a famous animal photographer.

Dr. Ditmars has been for some time engaged in filming for the purposes of this Animal Series what he calls "Modern Truths from Old Fables," which are the Fables or Fairy stories based on the lovely old Fables of La Fontaine. Audiences have delighted in these from the printed page for nearly three hundred years and their visualization on the screen will be a noteworthy event, not only in motion picture history but in the interpretation of literature itself.

Each reel in the series will contain one of these Fables. It will be recalled that La Fontaine has been variously credited with the authorship of about 300 Fables. From this large number have been picked twenty of the most delightful; the old familiar ones like "The Hare and the Tortoise." "The Evil of Gossip" and such others. Folks who believe in the futility of warfare will find ample support in such an appealing Fable as "The Bird Wounded by an Arrow," which will appear in its film version as "The Philosophy of the Dying Bird."

Complementing the Fables in each reel of the Animal Series will be animals in their natural moods, both in their native homes and the domestic homes of the world's great Zoological Parks. In the Fables the animals are actors, carrying out the same antics, "registering" the griefs and joys and varied antics that they seem to "register" when one reads the stories instead of seeing them, and it is surprising what fine actors frogs and tortoises and hares and other animals can be when under the direction of so capable a man as Dr. Ditmars. One has to see them on the screen to realize what they are capable of doing.

The pictures of animals in the wilds were obtained in the days when Charles Urban was a traveller. He was in India when his cameramen filmed the Delhi Durbar and he improved that opportunity to acquire valuable negatives of animals as they live before man captures them. He has always had cameramen in many parts of the world and through them he has acquired a very wonderful collection of what might be called wild-animal negatives.

A scene from the first Johnny Hines feature, "Burn 'Em Up Barnes," to be released by Affiliated Distributors. Betty Carpenter has the keys and Johnny, J. Barney Sherry, and Edmund Breese are behind the bars

MacCullough Making Fairytale Series

Short subjects that will simultaneously amuse children and interest adults are the aim of Jack MacCullough in placing before the exhibitor a series of one-reel fairy tales. Two of these picturesque novelties have already been completed. "Jack and the Bean Stalk" will be the first to be released and the other, a double story in one reel is comprised of "Red Riding Hood" and "Goldylocks and the Three Bears.' The Third of the series, called "The White Snake" is now well under way at the MacCullough studios in Chicago.

Star Ranch Western Is Titled "The Stranger"

"The Stranger" is to be the next release on the Star Ranch Western series, instead of "Tangled Trails," as previously announced, is the latest word from the offices of the C. B. C. Sales Corporation, New York, which is releasing to the State Rights Market a series of twenty-six thrillers featuring C. Edward Hatton.

Personal Appearances by Jack Hoxie

Jack Hoxie, on the first leg of his tour of all the independent exchange centers of the country, arrived at Dallas, Texas, on Wednesday of this week from Los Angeles. A program arranged by the Specialty Film exchange provided for the personal appearances of Hoxie.

Third Tony Sarg Issue Enters N. Y. Criterion

"Why They Love Cavemen," the third issue of "Tony Sarg's Almanac" will be one of the features at the Criterion Theatre, N. Y., beginning Sunday, June 19th. This is said to be even a greater novelty than the two preceding ones, "The First Circus" and "The Tooth Carpenter" both of which scored such a tremendous success. There are a number of features in it that have never been done before in an animated way. First, there is a race between a hippopotamus, a dinosaurus and an elephant and slow motion is used in certain parts of the race. Furthermore, the background will show two hundred and fifty spectators waving and cheering at the same time. Both Mr. Sarg and his associate, Mr. Dawley, feel that this production will be funnier than anything which has yet been done on the screen.

Joe Brandt to Release Big Feature

Distribution plans for "Heart of the North," the feature picture on which Joe Brandt announced completion on his return from California, have been occupying Mr. Brandt's attention during the past week, and it is announced that news of great interest will be made shortly in connection with this matter. Mr. Brandt declares that while no definite plans are announced at the present time, everything is being put in readiness for the release of this feature in which George H. Davis is also interested, and everything will be set when the completed picture arrives in New York.

Mary Anderson Starting Spencer Series

"Hoofs and Horns" is the working title assigned the first of the star series with Pete Morrison by Cliff Smith, who is building a series of Westerns for Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., release.

Gale Henry Signed for Gareth Hughes Picture

Gale Henry, known throughout the film world for the successful comedies of which she was star and producer, will be seen in the strong supporting company that has been selected to appear in Gareth Hughes' first starring picture, "The Hunch," an S. L. picture for Metro release.

Dave Sohmer May Open Own Exchange

It was learned this week that Dave Sohmer, Sales Manager of the Commonwealth Film Corp. of N. Y. may open his own exchange soon. It will probably be known as the Sohmer Film Corp. and is expected to be in full operation in the beginning of the Fall.

Equity registers again with another knockout for the Independent field

AGAIN EQUITY PICTURES CORPORATION comes to bat for the Independent market right in the middle of the season with a brand new picture sensation,—the production that has literally had oceans of nation-wide publicity. A picture destined to sweep a harvest of money into thousands of exhibitors' box offices in the next few months. Robert Z. Leonard's lavish winner "HEEDLESS MOTHS" presenting Audrey Munson, the world's most celebrated artist's model.

No depression here

and no depression anywhere with winning pictures

GOOD pictures are going as big and bigger today than ever. If there is any depression, it exists only where bad pictures exist. The right pictures are cleaning up, and we are daring enough to say that Audrey Munson in "HEEDLESS MOTHS" will be a genuine clean up everywhere, because it is a great picture. A fortune was spent in making it. "Bob" Leonard directed it. It grips the heart, stirs the emotions, and offers magnificent entertainment.

Audrey Munson in "Heedless Moths"

The picture that literally has had oceans of publicity

THROUGHOUT the country in the largest Sunday papers in the United States, Audrey Munson has had publicity that is priceless. All this is of inestimable value to independent exchanges and exhibitors who do business on this picture—and there is still more publicity coming. Elaborate advertising now being prepared by Equity for "HEEDLESS MOTHS." Watch for further announcements and if you are doing business for money, instead of your health, write or wire for complete information, territory, terms, etc., now to—

Urban Edits Film for Feature Atmosphere

Instead of the searching the short-subject field for appropriate subjects with which to build up the atmosphere of a feature, the managers of New York's largest theatres now have an easier method. Charles Urban is now able to make up special reels from the vast amount of material in his film library for them.

"Britain's Palaces" for instance was especially made to play with "Deception" at the Rivoli; "Venice" was especially made for Mr. Rothafel to play at the Capitol.

These subjects all take their permanent place in the list of the Urban Popular Classics, simply awaiting their classification, because these especially made subjects are generally made ahead of their schedule call.

The latest example of such a Kineto Review edited to fill a special need is "Wandering Tribes of the Sahara," which Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld requested in connection with the American premiere of "The Golem" next week at the Criterion.

Cameraman Earl with So. African Company

That the superiority of the American cameraman is world-famed is again evidenced by the engagement of Edward Earl, pioneer cinematographer, by the African Film Corporation, Johannesburg, South Africa. Mr. Earl is in supervision of the lightings, sets and camera work for the extensive production in which the corporation with which he is allied is now engaged.

Mr. Earl advises from his far away station that he has just completed work on the first African Film Corporation production of Sir Rider Haggard's work "Swallow."

Cullison Names Cast for New Picture

Willard Louis, Ernest Shields and Peggy O'Neill have been engaged by Webster Cullison for his second "Philo Gubb" story. "The Stolen Umbrella." Louis had played more than five hundred different roles in twenty-five years on the legitimate stage and in comic opera, grand opera and motion pictures. Shields was starred in comedies by Kalem, Universal and Edison, and Miss O'Neill is a newcomer to comedies after five years' experience playing characters in stock.

Kipling in New York

Richard Kipling, head of the Richard Kipling Enterprises, is making a business trip to New York in the interest of his picture connections. Mr. Kipling visited the key cities of the exchange circuits and found business encouraging despite reports that business had slumped considerably.

Mr. Kipling in addition to directing the activities of his own exchange circuit is doing much producing and upon his return to the Coast will start work on the fifth of the series of features. He just recently completed a five-reeled subject entitled "The Battlin' Kid."

Two Jans Features Ready

"Man and Woman," July Release, Followed by "The Amazing Lover"

H. F. JANS, the president of the Jans Productions, Inc. announces that he has just concluded with A. H. Fischer, president of the Fischer Productions, Inc. a deal by which he will release the Fischer Productions as the first specials of the forthcoming season of 1921 and 1922. The first super feature will be "Man and Woman" to be offered to State Right buyers in July and the second "The Amazing Lover" which will be released in August.

Mr. Jans' policy will be to offer the trade one picture a month for the coming year and he has definitely decided to avoid plots and titles whose suggestiveness is the necessary element of their drawing power. He feels that the time is at hand when state right buyers will be more than glad to secure features with strong box office titles and pictures which combine a plot of high entertainment value but which at the same time will not run counter to the strong desire in the public mind for clean motion picture entertainment. He feels that his selection will be such as to merit the approval of censorship Boards everywhere no matter how critical various localities may be.

He announces that "Man and Woman" has a strong cast which combines such players as Diana Allen, lately the beautiful star of the Ziegfeld Follies and a noted artists' model, Joe King, A. C. Miller, Edmund C. Sturgis, John L. Shine, Tatjana Irrah, Eleanor Cozzat, G. H. Carlyle, James Alling, Gordon H. Standing, Herbert Standing, Pat Jennings and Dorothea Fisher.

W. M. Smith Film Started

"The White Masks" to Be Completed in August; Franklyn Farnum Star

"THE WHITE MASKS," by E. H. Corr, which ran in the People's Magazine, is the first of a series of eight master Western screen plays to be produced by the W. M. Smith Productions, Inc., in Tulsa, Okla.

According to advices work has already begun, and, the first completed picture is expected to be ready for release some time in August. The entire series will be released on the state right market.

In the forthcoming productions only the highest type of Western stories will be filmed. These are by America's famous authors whose works are always grippingly interesting and popular with the people.

Following "The White Masks" will be: "The Trail's End," by Arthur Somers Roche; "The Lariat Thrower," by Albert Payson Terhune, and "Crossroads," by John Fredericks, featured in the Argosy Magazine. These are the first four stories to be picturized and the producers feel that the authors represented in this list are a sufficient warranty of excellence.

Franklyn Farnum, for the past several years one of the most prominent stars to appear in Western dramas, will be the feature player in each production. In the list of featured players in Mr. Farnum's support are several names justly celebrated in the film world. Shorty Hamilton, famed for his portrayal of the Western character, humorously, will have a prominent and important part in each of the eight Smith Productions. Al Hart will essay the 'heavy' roles, while Virginia Lee will play opposite Franklyn Farnum. George Holt, who has directed many well-known Western stars in motion pictures, will have the responsibility of directing the series. Reginald Lyons, formerly associated with the Vitagraph Co., for more than ten years, will photograph each of the Smith productions. Mr. Lyons is responsible for the superb photography in "Black Beauty," it is stated.

Roy Stewart, featured in "Heart of the North," the Joe Brandt-George H. David feature picture, directed by Harry Revier, on which production has just been completed

"Friday the 13th" New Hallroom Comedy

What is described as "a double-header comedy" is "Friday the 13th" the newest Federated Hallroom Boys Comedy featuring Sid Smith which is being given final editing in New York for release by Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc.

This is the comedy which was shown as a special feature of the recent convention of Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc. in Chicago, and which was received there with acclaim and labelled one of the funniest comedies that had ever been made.

Rapid Progress Made on Johnny Hines Features

Aided by particularly favorable weather conditions and a happy variation of interior and exterior scenes, splendid progress is being made in the filming of Raymond L. Schrock's original screen story, "Burn 'em up Barnes," in which the irrepressible Johnny Hines makes his debut as the star of feature length productions.

"Burn 'em up Barnes," a high speed automobile story with an unusually strong cast which includes Edmund Breese, J. Barney Sherry, Betty Carpenter, Dorothy Leeds, Matthew Betts and other screen favorites under the direction of George A. Beranger, has been in production for a period exceeding three weeks without the loss of an hour from any cause. This is thought to be a record for Eastern production.

"Burn 'em up Barnes," which is scheduled for Autumnal release and the initial offering to the franchise holders of Affiliated Distributers, Inc., a new unit under the management of C. C. Burr, is expected to require at least three weeks more in its filming.

Callaghan Confers with Arthur S. Kane

Andrew J. Callaghan, president of Andrew J. Callaghan Productions, Inc., arrived in New York from the West Coast last week and will spend several days in the city studying the picture situation from the viewpoint of the executives. He has been in consultation with Arthur S. Kane, president, and John C. Ragland, general manager, of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, which acts as Eastern representative of his company in the handling of the Bessie Love features.

Mr. Callaghan is enthusiastic over the reception which has been accorded "Penny of Tophill Trail," "Bonnie May" and "The Midlanders." All of these are now being shown throughout the country, through release by Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc.

Split-Reel Fairytales Are Completed

Much in little is the long and short of it in describing Jack MacCullough's split-reel Fairytale, comprised of "Red Riding Hood" and "Goldylocks and the Three Bears." These famous stories beloved by youngsters and grown-ups alike, have been faithfully transferred to the screen with an idea toward making them as short as they are inclusive so that they will hold the attention of the adults as well as the children.

Cohn Leaves for Coast

Jack Cohn, producer of Screen Snapshots, which are released through Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., has left New York for California, where he will confer with Louis Lekyn, who is superintending production of this reel on the West Coast.

Mr. James, You said It

Mr. James, you said a mouthful when you said that "'CHARGE IT' will pay cash dividends to the theatres." . . . You said a heap when you said that "the effect of the picture will most certainly be good."

You sure wrote truly when you penned the lines that read,—"In precisely the sort of role best suited to her talents, Clara Kimball Young will interest the masses with her new picture, 'CHARGE IT.'" For all of which we thank you, and for all of which, also, every modern exhibitor will thank you, for it shows them clearly that here is a picture so human, so real, so true to life, as to make people think and talk; and if we can produce pictures that make people think and talk, we've got something that brings home the bacon.

"CHARGE IT" is Clara Kimball Young's best picture since "Eyes of Youth." It is going over with a wallop throughout the entire country, proof that Clara Kimball Young pictures do pay dividends to theatres.

TO EXHIBITORS:—(Mr. James is the Editor of the Moving Picture World and sees all of the worth while big pictures).

To form your own opinion of "CHARGE IT" call at the exchange of your nearest Equity Franchise Holder and ask to see it screened, or communicate with—

The Winnipeg, Manitoba, City Council is holding back the moving picture exchange bylaw, which was passed many weeks ago, because the exchange managers seem to be having difficulty in arranging for the erection of a building which would conform with the strict regulations imposed by the new law.

About five hundred guests thronged the Lester Court ballroom for the annual dance of the moving picture projectionists of Vancouver, B. C., recently. The operators carried out many novel lighting features and a variety of stunts were sprung on the dancers during the evening.

Exceptional success has been obtained in the adoption of an entirely new policy for Allen's Russell theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, for the summer months at least. When dramatic road shows failed to attract their usual patronage, the management decided to put in moving pictures with tabloid musical comedy as an added attraction. The new arrangement went into effect Monday, May 28, and the house has been packed at nearly every performance since.

George Warren, who has been identified with the Grand theatre, Calgary, Alberta, for a long time, has been appointed manager in charge of the Princess theatre, Calgary.

W. R. Marshall, manager of the Vancouver branch of the Select Pictures Corporation of Canada, has received a handsome watch fob from the Rotary Club of Calgary, Alberta, of which he was president before leaving some time ago to assume the management of the Select branch in the Coast City.

Harry Scott, former manager of the Bijou theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, now has a moving picture theatre of his own in North Vancouver, B. C.

WESTERN NEW YORK

R. H. Clark, general manager of the First National Exchange of New York, was in Buffalo last week. During the visit he went on "The Kid" situation with Manager Eddie Hayes as especially affecting the neighborhood houses and a solution was reached whereby all the outlying houses on the First National books will show this comedy. Every salesman in the Buffalo office has been presented a Ford with which to cover his territory. George Blackmon has closed a large number of contracts in the Watertown and Thousand Island district, Maurice Cohen is lining up new accounts in Utica and H. L. Levvy has returned from a two-week trip through the Southern Tier where he closed contracts in almost every town he visited. As evidence of his prosperity Branch Manager E. O. Hayes is now driving a new Studebaker coupe.

Harold B. Franklin has retained Creatore at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, for a second week. Creatore has been able to get some wonderful results out of the Hipp ensembles after a week's work and the second week should give patrons a Boston Symphony effect.

So valuable will be the prints on "The Three Musketeers," that P. H. Smith, Buffalo United Artists' representative, is making arrangements with a local bank to keep the films in the bank vault each night.

The Royal theatre, Cuylerville, N. Y., has been burned to the ground. The Pathe feature on the bill at the time of the fire, was saved.

The Pictureland theatre, Cohocton, N. Y., has been converted into a store.

The F. I. L. M., Club of Buffalo has invited salesmen and bookers to this week's meeting in the Hotel Iroquois. President M. A. Chase will explain the workings of the club and will ask the guests to carry the message to the exhibitors of the territory. The club aims to promote the interests of the exhibitor as well as the exchange man.

M. A. Chase, Universal manager, was in Cleveland over the week end conferring with Art Schmidt and Herman Stern over the details of the new Universal Relief. The company has heavily subscribed to the proposition.

The Grant theatre, Buffalo, will remain open but two nights each week, during the summer season.

Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, will depart from its policy of showing only first run material to book the entire series of Harold Lloyd's Pathe re-issues, according to an announcement by W. A. V. Mack, local Pathe chief.

Lillian Walker will make a personal appearance at the Albert theatre, Lancaster, N. Y., and the town is making great preparations to honor the star.

The Abbott theatre, Abbott Road and Bailey avenue, Buffalo, and the Star theatre, Middleport, N. Y., have been sold by a Buffalo real estate firm.

SAN FRANCISCO

The T & D Jr. circuit has taken over the Selma theatre at Selma, and the Lodi theatre at Lodi, Cal. The Marquee theatre, Oakland, has been purchased by S. Wolff who owned it three years ago. The Empire Opera House has been sold to E. Blair who sold the Marquee in Oakland to S. Wolff.

W. Stewart Webster, owner of the Strand theatre in Woodland, plans construction of an $85,000 theatre in the same town.

The Flagg Scenic Studio of Los Angeles, specializing in manufacture of the massive sets used for picture production, has purchased for $100,000 a building at Fourteenth and Mission streets, San Francisco, and will open soon.

"A Day With Jack Dempsey," opened June 5 at two first run downtown houses in San Francisco, the Portola and Pantages. With four prints, Pathe Exchange Manager W. W. Kofeldt, has no open dates left before the fight July 2.

Mel Hulling, Sales Manager of the Associated Exhibitors in San Francisco advises that he has appointed Jimmy Epperson as representative of the Northern California territory.

INDIANAPOLIS

The Gregory Kelly and Stuart Walker stock companies have been offering stiff competition to current movie attractions in the local picture houses during the past two weeks. Broadside exploitation and publicity failed to bring normal returns on several big features, including "Deception." Business of the Kelly company is so good that its season will be extended until about July 19.

The Dwight Franklin exhibit of wax figures, modeled after characters in "Treasure Island," is being shown in the lobby of the Murat. Mr. Franklin's work was brought here from New York by Stuart Walker, an old friend of the artist.

A preliminary certificate of dissolution has been filed with the Secretary of State by the Grand Theatre Company, of Bicknell.

CLEVELAND

The local Fox exchange is under new management beginning this week when Max Weisfeldt, former manager for Fox in Minneapolis, took over the reigns of the office, succeeding Sam Dembrow who has gone back to New York to take up his duties of Assistant General Sales Manager, which he set aside several months ago in order to give the Cleveland exchange his personal attention.

E. F. Tarbell succeeds Mr. Weisfeldt as manager of the Fox exchange in Minneapolis. Mr. Tarbell is well known in the industry through his previous connection with Vitagraph as central district manager.

Cleveland delegates to the National Convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, nominated at the last meeting of the local organization include H. "H" Lustig, president of the Cleveland branch; Sam Lustig, national as well as local secretary; W. J. Slimm, Al Freedman; Sam Deutch, M. S. Fine and D. Schumann.

Loew's Stillman is meeting the summer slump with a reduction in admission prices. Beginning Sunday, June 12th the Stillman will play to a sliding scale ranging from 30c. to 50c. Thirty cents for matinees; fifty cents for evenings, Saturday matinee and Sunday matinee.

Detroit's Capitol Theatre Will Seat Over Four Thousand

Kunsky Theatrical Enterprises Announce Building of New House

Announcement was made last week by John H. Kunsky, of the Kunsky Theatrical Enterprises operating the Madison, Adams and several other of the largest of Detroit's motion picture theatres, of the final completion of arrangements for the erection of the magnificent new Kunsky theatre, The Capitol, which is to occupy the greater portion of the city block bounded by Grand Circus Park, Broadway, Madison Avenue and John Street, Detroit.

The structure, ground for which will be broken shortly, will not only house the huge theatre, which by the way, will bear the distinction of being one of the largest playhouses in America, but will also embrace two handsome six-story store and office buildings which will face upon the Broadway and Madison extensive frontages. The site to be occupied is one of the most valuable in the Grand Circus Park section.

The completion of the plans represents the culmination of two years negotiations with the twelve different property holders representing the large space to be occupied by the building. Clarkson G. Wormer, of Wormer and Moore, represented the owners and George W. Trendle, attorney and general manager of the Kunsky interests, represented Mr. Kunsky. The lease obtained calls for ninety-nine years. The Union Mortgage Co., of Detroit, has arranged the bond loan of 7 per cent first mortgage securities, while the general supervision of all details relating to the huge deal and the subsequent construction and completion of the building has been placed entirely in the hands of Mr. Trendle by Mr. Kunsky.

Mr. Kunsky will operate the property as a corporation to be known as the Capitol Building Co., of which John H. Kunsky is president and treasurer, and George W. Trendle, vice-president and general manager.

A tremendous theatre seating 4,250, The Capitol will rank as one of the most beautiful edifices of its kind either in this country or abroad and, according to the statement of Messrs. Kunsky and Trendle, the structure, when completed, will represent invested capital to an amount in the neighborhood of one and three-quarter millions.

The entire plans for the huge building have been drawn by C. Howard Crane, architect of international repute, in company with Elmer George Kiehler, associate and Cyril E. Schley. During the past several years Mr. Crane has planned and supervised the construction of many of the largest theatres in this country, Canada and England and at the present time is engaged in extensive operations country-wide in scope. Mr. Crane and his associates will exercise personal supervision over the construction of the new Capitol.

The Capitol will represent the newest ideas in theatre construction. Spacious vestibules of imported marbles will mark the two entrances to the theatre, which are to be located on Broadway and Madison avenue, respectively. The Broadway lobby will be two full stories in height with solid marble floors and wainscoting and with massive marble columns supporting a vaulted ceiling of the most elaborate design and in which will be placed ornamental glass panels back of which will be installed an elaborate and highly ornamental and artistic lighting scheme. Over the main entrances to the theatre proper will be installed a massive ornamental plate glass front, back of which can easily be seen the grand promenade which leads directly off the first mezzanine floor. From this spacious outer lobby is entered a massive foyer some two hundred feet in length and running the entire width of the auditorium itself, connecting the Broadway and Madison lobbies with a promenade effect. This promenade will be decorated and furnished in the richest fashion. Magnificent grand staircases of pure marble with heavily wrought bronze balustrades rise to the most elaborate mezzanine above.

The interior of the great auditorium will be decorated in the most lavish manner, both in coloring and in furnishings, the decorations to be done by special artists brought from the East for the purpose. The theatre auditorium in the main will be lighted by an immense dome in the main ceiling some sixty-five feet in diameter, and which will be done in a wondrous effect of pure golden bronze. Lighted in elaborate manner with a concealed lighting system this great dome will flood the theatre proper with a beautiful soft golden glow of the most restful and beautiful kind.

A large stage will be constructed fully equipped with the most modern of apparatus so that at any time the theatre may, upon the instant, be capable of housing a sumptuous dramatic production in place of the de luxe entertainment along the accepted motion picture policy followed in the main by the various Kunsky theatres. A $15,000 electrical switchboard and massive dimmer system will control the general lighting effects of the entire theatre.

It is expected that The Capitol will open its doors to the public for the first time next December.—GRENNELL.

Time for Spring Cleaning and Painting

In the springtime the housewife's fancy fondly (?) turns to thoughts of housecleaning.

Just so should it be with the exhibitor. When the lady of the house ends her morning's labors and hikes down to the movies she wants to sit in a place that is clean. In the spring and early summer her thoughts dwell on cleaning, and she is quick to notice the theatre owner who also sees to it that his place is given a summer "suit" of paint.

Tasteful decorations make or unmake the inside of a house. Even though the decorations are tasteful, if they are dingy or in fact plain dirty, they are worse than none at all.

CLEAN UP! PAINT UP!

Make sure your place looks clean and fresh under a new jacket of fresh paint. Look around in the corners and see if there isn't a lot of spots that need retouching and brushing.

Bet there were several times during the winter when the steam heaters let go and marred up the woodwork with their hot water and escaping steam. Rub down such spots and apply fresh varnish. Don't be afraid the smell will drive the patrons away. A "clean smell" never drove anyone away and, even though not always pleasant, fresh paint is sure a clean smell.

ONCE AGAIN AND ALTOGETHER BOYS, CLEAN UP AND PAINT UP. LET'S GO!

"Bill" Hart's "Opera House" at Shawmut Beach, R. I.

"Bill" Hart Has an Opera House with a Barn

"Bill" Hart, of Shawmut Beach, R. I., took it into his head to give the community a show shop. There was no building in town so he bought a barn and fixed it up like a regular theatre-lobby, retiring rooms n'everything.

A "close-up" of Harts billboard

There was no newspaper to advertise in and the population was too scattered to bill it with heralds. So Hart erected a 24-sheet stand just opposite the railroad station. He sat back and waited. He had planned to let them in by a small side door, but before he finished he had to use the big-side-sliding doors. His house accommodates but 150 and it has been jammed for every performance.

Hart told John P. McConville, the Paramount exploiteer from Boston, that the 24-sheet stand was all he needed to put his theatre over.

Start New Capitol

Work has been started on the new Capitol theatre, Detroit. The contractors have taken offices in the Madeson Theatre Building, across the street from the new house. This is a John H. Kunsky enterprise.

Radio Slide Moves

The Radio Mat Slide Co. has moved to large commodious quarters in the Bush Terminal Building in Forty-second street. They will be in a better position than ever to supply the needs of their patrons.

Another House for Detroit

W. Tetti is having plans prepared for the Carmela theatre, Shoemaker and Hurlbutt Avenues, Detroit. Peter R. Bosello, architect, proposes a theatre building seating 1,000 with five stores in front and thirteen offices above. The estimated cost is $200,000.—GRENNELL.

Twenty Years Behind the Camera

William C. Foster, better known as "Billy," is a veteran of the motion picture business, having been connected with it in various capacities for twenty years.

He has been behind the camera for eleven years, and has photographed many well remembered pictures, among them being "The Floor Walker," "Fireman," "1 A. M.," "Count," "Vagabond," with Charlie Chaplin; "The Tale of Two Cities," and "Les Miserables." For the past year he was associated with Lois Weber Productions.

Activities in Oklahoma

The big Orpheum theatre closed its doors last week and will remain dark for an indefinite length of time. The management is trying to induce some stock company to re-open the theatre for the summer season—Vaudeville and pictures has been played at the Orpheum since opening, several months ago.

The Orpheum is one of the largest and most beautiful theatres in the country, costing about $500,000, and next to the Criterion, is the finest theatre in the southwest.

Push the Button and On with the Dance in This Folding Theatre

Detroit Man Presents Idea for Convertible House

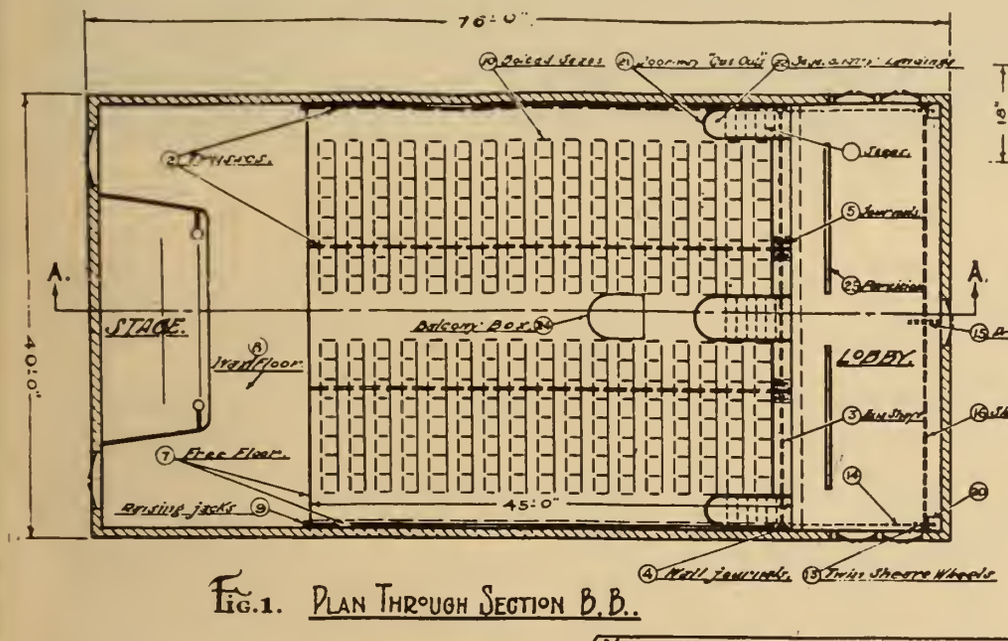
This is the era of electricity.

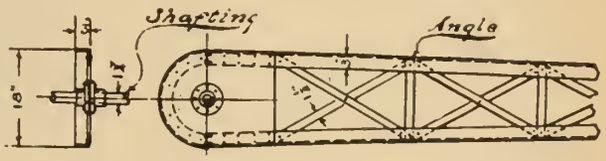
Means have been found to make possible a home with everything done by electricity. Electricity has solved the servant problem and a man recently erected a house in Long Island in which everything was eliminated but bedmaking and mother-in-laws. He said he didn't mind the bed-making job his wife had to do, but he was scratching his head as to how to substitute electricity for mother-in-laws. More power to him! We'll all be interested in the results of his experiments.

The Long Island genius is not the only one, for now comes a Detroit man who presents plans for a theatre that can be converted into a dance or assembly hall in a few minutes. The entire slanting theatre floor with chairs, aisle, carpets, etc., simply disappear and a level waxed dance floor remains with a decorative balcony in the rear.

The country theatre owner will be interested in hearing what Dennis O'Meara, of Detroit, Mich., has to offer. A house that is an up-to-date moving picture theatre one minute and is a model dance or assembly hall the next, would be the ideal thing for the small town showman.

Mr. O'Meara suggests a folding floor





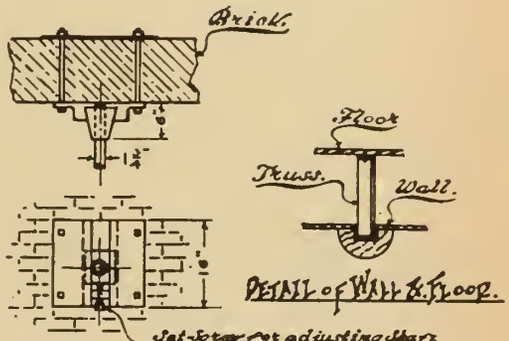


Fig. 1. Plan Through Section B.B.

Notice: The Possession of this Print does not give the Right to Carry-out its Plans.

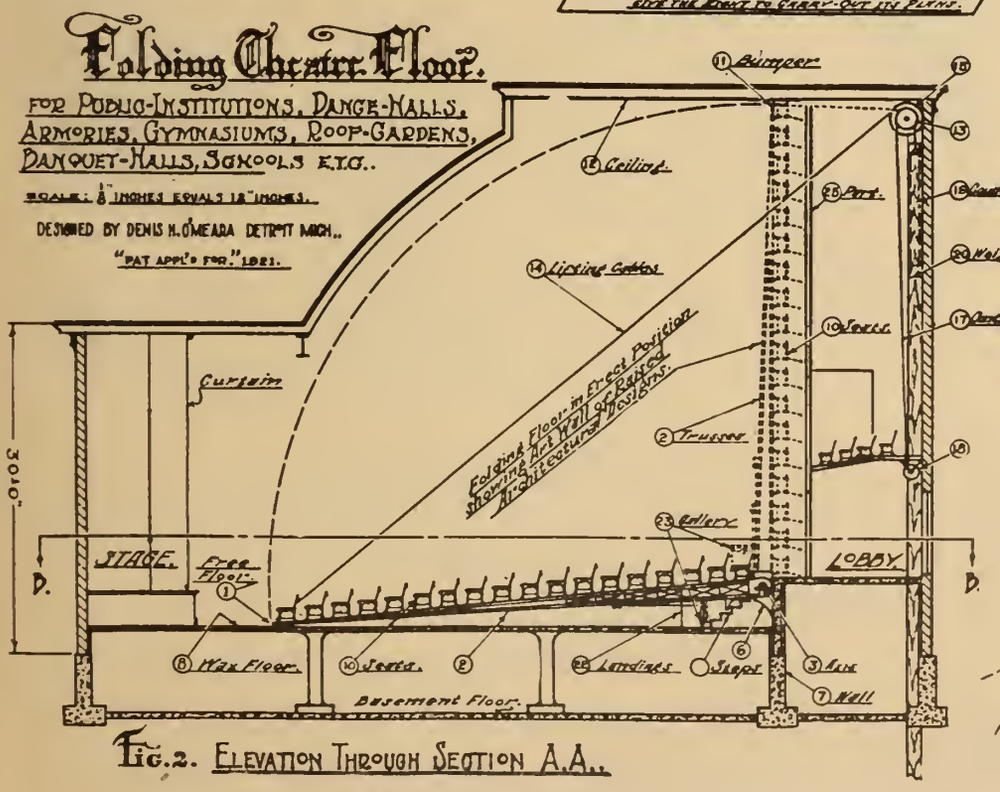

Fig. 2. Elevation Through Section A.A.

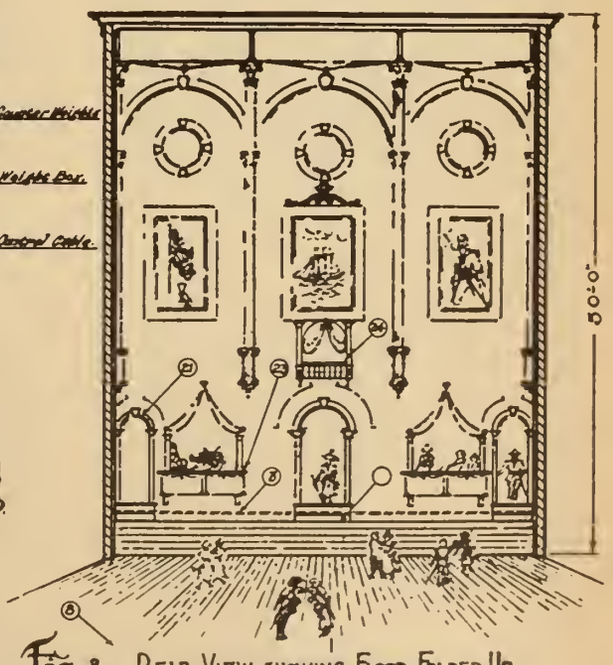

Fig. 3. Rear View showing Floor Folded-Up.

Here is a plan of Dennis H. O'Meara's folding theatre floor that makes possible a transformation from a theatre to a dance hall in fifty seconds that will be on giant hinges and fold up out of the way. It can fold up against the side or rear of the house. His idea is to offer the manager and owner of the small town house a chance to get more revenue.

"My proposed scheme," states Mr. O'Meara, who is an "efficiency draftsman," "permits a nifty, up-to-date theatre to be turned into a dance hall in 50 seconds. Besides the advantage of getting a mixed entertainment—a moving picture until 9 P. M. and a dance till 11 o'clock. During the day it might be used as a refreshment parlor or rest room. Though I have not as yet completed my patents I will not claim royalties if any hospitals or institutions of charity or mercy desire to make use of the scheme.

"The accompanying sketch shows my 'Free Folding Platform,' supported by a bearing shaft at one end and resting on the level floor of a room, at the other end, and constituting an 'Unattached Inclined Floor' for medium sized halls, theatres and schools, especially in small cities. It affords a rest for seats in the case of a theatre, hall, or auditorium when in a lowered position, and in the case of a hospital, infirmary or home for disabled soldiers or crippled children it affords a rest for wheel chairs, cots, stretchers, and easy chairs; and in the case of a gymnasium or armory it may serve as just an inclined plane for drilling or physical culture exercises where the instructor may want to view the full figure of those going through the exercises. The incline of the floor which gives the figure the same pitch as that of a girl standing in a fashionable shoe, adds to the efficiency of the drill against the same exercise on a level floor.

"In a raised position it serves as an artificial wall with architectural designs, paintings, wall accessories, and, narrow galleries for musicians and speakers or for observation where there would be no stage in the rooms. Thus it affords the same floor space the double advantage of being used as a theatre, auditorium, or school room when the folding plane is down, and, as a banquet hall, dance hall, or gymnasium when raised and as it is provided with long narrow trap-door openings matching the point of view of balcony spectators, in cases where it might fold against a permanent gallery, screen operators and spectators may look through it when the folding floor is erect.

"When the super floor is folded against the entrance to a room and it covers the whole width from wall to wall cut-outs on either side can be made which form doorways with architectural ornamentation when the combination floor and wall is raised, and fit over the step landings when down.

"My proposed scheme cuts out the hardship, time, expense, and damage in making the transformation in the old way from an auditorium to a dance hall, besides giving you an inclined floor that may be tilted to any angle with fixed theatre seats in the one case, and a perfectly preserved wax floor in the other, and the added saving of storage space for seats, canvas, etc., and again the advantage for little cities not able to build a theatre and also a hall for social affairs of combining the two institutions into one large and more substantial structure, which then would be available also for an armory and become for a modest town a kind of civic center affording cheaper entertainment which is just what they want in country towns to keep the young people at home.

"I've shown standard seats permanently secured to the folding platform in the sketch as the most serviceable use, but the purpose of my suggestion to architects and theatre people is that it be used also as a folding plane for hospitals and homes of the friendless who can't afford an auditorium for a moving picture once a week but might use a waiting room corridor or sitting room. Institutions of pleasure that outnumber those of charity and mercy 50 to 1 should be penalized for the realization of some share in the amusements of the outside world.

"The wood floor of the plane is directly supported by elongated V-shaped steel trusses connected by an axial shaft at its tilted end supporting it as a wall and a floor.

"Rugs must be made fast and with brass rails, seats and aisles the whole floor space from the front seats back is raised bodily to a vertical position by lifting cables and sheave wheels. The raising and the lowering of the floor is balanced and controlled by plunger counterweights and it can't fall from a vertical position of itself but must be operated up and down like a hand power elevator.

"For a large civic hall section after section of seats might be lowered independently for a convention, or bank concert, and raised for a fair, a circus, or a great federal or state ball, or an auto show, and divided the rest of the time between a variety of enterprises."

Electric Fan Becomes a Theatre Necessity

The electric fan has become one of the necessities of the modern theatre. In summer it is necessary to the comfort of patrons and in winter it is even more necessary for health reasons.

In locating the fans the common practice is to use 16-inch oscillating fans mounted on the side walls and columns so that their air currents will reach all parts of the theatre. To insure a constant change of air throughout the theatre, ventilating fans are installed, usually at the stage end, so that the air entering the theatre from the lobby is drawn through the auditorium and discharged at the stage.

At the theatre entrance a ceiling fan is very effective and gives patrons a suggestion of the breezy comfort which obtains inside. A small, 8 or 9-inch fan in the ticket booth has also become a necessity for the comfort of the attendant.

The new Liberty theatre, seating 750 was opened at Hartshorne, Okla., last week to pleased capacity business. Outside the Law was the feature picture shown for the occasion.

Messrs. M. E. Shelton and Charles Matthews have taken over the Felly theatre at Drumright, Okla., and appointed W. A. Salroy as manager. Several very beneficiary and attractive improvements are being made.

New Camera Will Produce Pictures of 60 Degrees Visual Angle

Can Have Pictures of Twice View Area of Present Pictures

With the announcement that John D. Elms, president of the Widescope Camera and Film Corp., of Newark, N. J., that they are now ready to talk business, comes the opportunity for the motion picture producer to give the public pictures of just double the view area as heretofore. The Widescope company will market the camera invented by George W. Bingham, mechanical engineer and who was connected with the Vitagraph Company, years ago.

This new camera carries two reels of film and has two lens. It will take simultaneously two views that can be projected as one giving a picture of 60 degrees visual angle. This is greater than any camera used today. The addition of a double width screen and a short connecting arm between two projectors is the only additional equipment needed by the exhibitor.

At a demonstration given for the benefit of a member of the News staff, a picture showing over two hundred children marching was shown on a screen in the laboratories of the Widescope Company. This picture was taken with the Widescope camera, two films being used. The picture was projected by connecting two Simplex machines with the patented "connecting rod," which the Widescope people plan to supply to the exhibitor. The picture shown on the screen matched up perfectly and appeared truly as one single picture.

Mr. Elms plans to take a number of pictures of ball games and other athletic events where he can obtain a complete view of the entire play. It is expected that the World's Series this year will be filmed with a Widescope.

Fred Rosseter, president of the Beaver Manufacturing Co., of Newark, is treasurer of the company. A. F. Mader, superintendent of Station A Post Office, Kansas City, Mo., is vice-president.

"Practical experience has shown that the present employed cameras, successful pictures can be taken only with one lens of 30 degrees visual angle. This seriously limits the field of vision," stated Mr. Elms to a News representative.

"The Widescope camera is unlimited in its field of vision and may be so constructed as to produce a complete circular panaramic moving picture. For practical reasons, however, evident to everyone conversant with moving pictures, our commercial camera is constructed to produce horizontal pictures of a visual angle of 60 degrees.

"The value of this wonderful accomplishment needs no emphasis. It allows of reproduction upon the screen of pictures having twice the view area of any pictures now produced, and this increased area is not obtained at a sacrifice of detail or size of objects.

"Our camera takes a moving picture capable of projection upon a 30 foot screen, whereas the present exhibited pictures are upon a 15 foot screen. Every picture taken is in effect a close-up view. It, therefore, has particular advantages in the photographing of moving street scenes, military and naval maneuvers, extended landscapes, sports, entire stage scenes and the many widescope objects of special interest to moving picture audiences which are so extensive in area as to

G. K. Spoor's Positive Developing Machine Now on Market

Universal Installs Complete Outfit In Their Studio

"Necessity is the mother of invention," applies most emphatically to the motion picture business.

Of all the pioneers in the business George K. Spoor seems to have been the one who has converted these necessities into practical work. The list of motion picture appliances that he has sponsored is too long to enumerate, but his latest is a wonderful positive developing machine.

Nearly ten years ago G. K. Spoor began working on this machine, and for the last five years has used it successfully and continuously in his Chicago laboratory. It is now being placed on the market.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., a pioneer producer in the business, and a man always alert to take advantage of improvements is the first to adopt the Spoor-Thompson developing machines for his Fort Lee plant. The entire developing and drying rooms are being converted to the Spoor-Thompson machines. Mr. Laemmle realizes that in the present system of producing motion pictures there is a great deal of waste of film ends, not to say anything of the spoilage of entire reels by carelessness on the part of the hand operators. With a machine this film end waste is entirely done away with, and the entire waste is infinitesimal by comparison.

A number of years ago Mr. Spoor employed a mechanical engineer, F. B. Thompson and in association with him produced the machine that stands to revolutionize the processing end of the motion picture business. Through this machine, which is both a developer and dryer, there is a guarantee of 5,000 positive feet per hour, and gives a very high quality of work. These machines advance the motion picture business from a makeshift state, as was the printing business before the great Mergenthaler type machine was invented.

A number of superintendents of the biggest laboratories in the East have spent days in Chicago, watching the work of these machines and not one of them has come away without the most enthusiastic reports, and an earnest desire to have them installed.

Equipment Operating Projection Questions Answered

Prominent Australian Film Executives on Tour of Inspection

State There Is Big Demand in Australia for Machines

As an important part of a very extensive itinerary, after a six weeks' voyage from Australia, a very interesting trip through the Simplex plant in New York was included by the Messrs. Gibson and Doyle, two of the most prominent film executives from the Antipodes.

W. A. Gibson, O. B. E., General Manager of the Australasian Films, Ltd., and Stuart F. Doyle, director of the same organization, who is also, by the way, General Manager of the Union Theatres, Ltd., are two of the most active members of the Australian branch of the Simplex distributing organization.

The Messrs. Gibson and Doyle have made a most careful study of the conditions in this country and are leaving for Australia on June 15.

Accompanied by Millard Johnson, New York manager of the Australasian Films, Ltd., they arranged for the visit to the Simplex plant on June 8 and spent the best part of the day there.

While in a lengthy conference with E. M. Porter, General Manager of the Precision Machine Co., Inc., Mr. Gibson stated that conditions were on the uphill climb in Australia and that the outlook on the island was decidedly encouraging.

"The Simplex Projector," said Mr. Gibson, "is making exceptional progress in Australia. Many of the leading Australian theatres are Simplex equipped and the demand for your American projector is immense. We want you to send us all the machines you possibly can and you can feel safe in leaving the rest of the matter with us.

"The quality of projection in Australia is of a decidedly high type and we require a truly first-class projector to measure up to this standard."

An extended trip through the factory under the direction of Mr. Caldwell of the Simplex organization, proved to be a decidedly interesting and instructive trip and conveyed many new ideas and furnished much valuable information to the two distinguished Australian visitors.

In the course of the trip, there was witnessed the successive operations of cutting the intermittent sprockets out from solid bars of machine steel, down to their prescribed dimension.

Similar operations on the star wheel, which is cut from solid steel and the cam wheel, which is cut from a solid bar of machine steel, were also watched with intense interest.

Messrs. Gibson and Doyle were deeply impressed at the facilities with which the Precision plant is equipped for the manufacturing of projectors, and visited every department from the executive offices down to the complete printing plant, which is a part of the Simplex organization.

William Rabell, Well Known Movie Supply Man, to Handle New York and New Jersey

Will Distribute Power's Projectors After July 1—Is an Old Timer in Game

Along with the announcements of many changes in the Power's distributing organization, comes one that will interest every exhibitor and supply man in the New York and New Jersey district. On and after July 1, 1921, The Independent Movie Supply Co., of which William H. Rabell is president, will handle the Powers line as one of their distributors for all of New York State and the northern part of New Jersey as far south as Trenton.

William Rabell is among the best known movie supply men of the country. He has been identified with this business for over ten years and each year has seen him occupy a bigger position and a greater responsibility in the industry. As the motion picture industry grew so did Mr. Rabell, always keeping at least one step ahead of his business. Every improvement that has been brought forth received his strictest investigation.

For the two or three years previous to March, 1917 Mr. Rabell was associated with J. H. Hallberg, another well known and successful supply dealer. In March, 1917 he opened up for himself under the name of the Independent Movie Supply Co., renting a single office room in the building at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Evidence of his continual growth and great success, are the commodious quarters now housing this firm at the same address.

For the past four years Mr. Rabell has been distributing the General Electric generators. He has met with wonderful success in the handling of the Ken-O-Lite lens. Now the Power's Co. have intrusted the handling of their projector to him in one of the most important territories in the country. That he will do for them as he has with all the other lines he represents, goes without saying. The Power's company are to be congratulated for making so excellent a connection.

Mr. Rabell is a member of the American Projection Society, the Society of Projection Engineers, the International Projection Society and is also affiliated as an honorary member of Local 306 I. A. T. S. E.

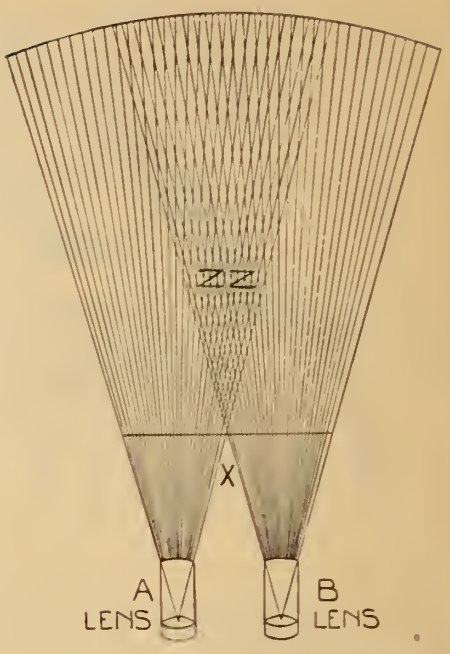

FIG. 3

Figure 1 represents the limited vision (30 degrees) of the cameras with which all moving pictures are now taken. Until now it has been impossible to produce a picture that could not be crowded into the very limited scope of one lens. Figure 2 represents the extended vision (60 degrees) obtained by a two lens Widescope Camera. The illustration shows the lenses "A" and "B" in vertical alignment (as covered by patent) so the lines of vision abut from the camera out, lens "B" picking up the picture where the scope of lens "A" ends. Figure 3 illustrates two lenses in horizontal position and plainly shows why all former attempts to obtain wider pictures have failed. You will notice (1) that the lines of vision do not abut, but cross between "X" and "ZZ" (2) that the foreground "X" could not show on either film (3) that any object in section "ZZ" would show on both films and would therefore be shown on the screen twice be photographable by the present cameras only from a distance, thus reducing the size of the objects and diminishing the details.

"The Widescope camera employs the standard film, requires no special manipulation or treatment and can be used with one or two films (either of which may be used singly in any standard projector), thus embodying the features of the ordinary camera with the additional extraordinary features possessed by no other camera.

"With this camera it is possible to reproduce on a screen a complete base ball game, showing each player and each play just as plain, clear and distinct as if the audience was in the base ball grand stand, the whole field being shown at all times and each player being in plain view and recognizable.

"It is generally understood that one of the greatest drawbacks to the motion picture industry is the confined vision. The single lens camera takes a picture of about 30 degrees visual angle, while the eyes have a visual angle of about 65 degrees. Thus it will be seen that a man seated in a theatre as close to a screen showing a full size picture as the camera was to the object photographed when the picture was taken, has his vision restricted at least 50 percent.

"The Widescope just doubles the angle of vision and thereby eliminates all danger of eye strain or cramped eye muscles.

"To equip the present motion picture theatres to show Widescope Pictures (as standard film is used), the only expense necessary is to provide a screen large enough to accommodate a picture twice as wide as the ones they now show, and a simple inexpensive attachment connecting two of their projectors so they will work in unison.

George W. Bingham, inventor, and one of his Widescope cameras

Will Manage Own House

J. P. Rogers, who now owns the Majestic motion picture theatre building in Middletown, Pa., announces that he will assume management of the house on September 1, when the lease held by Manfredi Bros., the present operators, expires. Rogers also owns an interest in the Realty Theatre Building, in Middletown, which he operates and which he will remodel this summer. Plans are now being prepared by Hoffman & Hearn, the Philadelphia architects who designed the Stanley theatre in that city. The improvements will include a new front and a new Marquise awning, twice the size of the present one, which will extend from the building to the curb line. The gallery will be changed and the gallery stairway moved close to the main entrance. The interior will be redecorated.

New Theatre for Summer Colony

Development of Gardner Lake, near Norwich and New London, Conn., as a summer resort, with dance pavilion, cottages, and, probably, one of the most modern open-air movie theatres in that section, is under way by Arthur C. Brown, agent of the Falls Co., of Norwich and one of the best known textile executives in that section. For a number of years he has had a summer home at Gardner Lake, and has gradually been buying up property along its shores. During the past week he bought five acres of land and three cottages, the only part of the realty on the market. At Latimer grove, he is having a large dance pavilion built, is making provisions for additional cottages and, it is expected, will start work on the movie theatre this summer.—AGARD.

Exhibitors and Projectionists

The Construction and Equipment Section of the NEWS will have a fully illustrated article by a well-known electrical engineer covering the use of isolated electric plants for motion picture theatres next week. It will explain their use for both Mazda and carbon arc projection.

Changes and Openings Here and There

Ralph Sykes has purchased controlling interest in the Riddell theatre at Clarksville, Ark., and has taken charge.

J. L. Hagan has purchased the Lyric theatre at Mena, Ark., from Louis Roberts, and will add many improvements in the near future. It is understood that Mr. Roberts will build a new theatre in Mena.

The Garden theatre at Stuttgart, Ark., was opened last week with pleased capacity business. Both vaudeville and pictures will be played.

I. M. Hammack has purchased the Pathe theatre at Jonesboro, Ark., and will make several improvements, both exterior and interior.

H. T. Andrews, of Fort Smith, Ark., has purchased the Pastime theatre at Paris, Ark. He opened it with "Go and Get It," accompanied by a five-piece orchestra. The name of the playhouse has been changed to the "Joie."

The new Sanger Amusement Company theatre was opened at Monroe, La., last week to pleased capacity business. The new theatre ranks among the finest in the South, and is one of a chain of theatres owned by the company in Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana.

The opening of Moore's theatre at Vernon, Texas, last week was attended by a large audience to see Fatty Arbuckle in "Brewster's Millions."

J. C. Wooten, an exhibitor from Canadian, Texas, has bought the Lyric theatre at Clinton, Okla., the consideration being $20,000. Mr. and Mrs. Ray, the former owners, will move to Cordell, Okla.

The Nusho theatre was opened at Bristow, Okla., last week to pleased capacity business, the initial attraction being Mae Murray in "The Gilded Lily."

A new motion picture theatre will be built at Brownwood, Texas, in the near future by Davis Smith, J. F. Renfrom and E. B. Henlty.

Will Build Largest House in County

What is to be the largest theatre in Contra Costa County, California, is to be built by J. J. McNamara at Martinez.

Johnson Buys Control of Theatres

Long Beach, Cal., June 17.—W. J. Johnson will assume entire control of the Liberty and Palace theatres tomorrow, following a deal closed today in which he purchased the entire interest of his partner, J. E. Wrightsman, with whom he has been associated in the ownership and management of the playhouse. Mr. Wrightsman was paid $50,000 cash for his quarter interest in the business.

The purchase gives Mr. Johnson a half interest in the two theatres, the other half being held by West Coast Theatres, Inc., which has large interests in a chain of high-class theatres on the Pacific Coast. The corporation will not be active in the management, however, and the policy will be directed entirely by Manager Johnson.

Mr. Wrightsman today announced his intention of retiring from the theatrical business and will devote his future efforts entirely to oil promotions. Private enterprises which have grown to such proportions as to demand his constant personal attention was given by Wrightsman as his reason for disposing of his theatrical interest.

He has been actively associated with the amusement interests of Long Beach for the past three years and originally was a member of the firm Beier and Wrightsman in the management of the Liberty theatre.

Mr. Johnson came to Long Beach about a year ago and bought out the firm, later selling a half interest back to Mr. Wrightsman. Several months ago they took over the Palace theatre and have successfully conducted the two popular places of amusement since that time.

Before coming to this city Mr. Johnson was identified with large theatrical interests in Wichita Falls, Texas, and is an experienced capable theatrical manager.

He announced today that he will continue to operate the theatres under the present policy and will bring to Long Beach only high-class first-run pictures. Numerous improvements at both theatres are contemplated for the early future, although definite plans have not yet been worked out.

Feature Subjects of Short Length

" Just in Time "

(Chester Comedy-Educational—Two Reels)

THE Chester people should begin putting the talented monk, Snooky, in different stories than the familiar rescue-the-baby pattern. While this idea is certain in its scoring possibilities—what with the thrills attendant upon the saving of the infant—nevertheless constant repetition of it shows up the authors as lacking in originality. It seems to us as if Snooky is talented enough to appear occasionally in something more novel. The comedies featuring the monk, are all alike—the only difference being found in the titles. And the incident is always identical. The monk must save the baby in the nick of time. It may be a railroad train or the danger of falling from some dizzy height. A couple of tough "eggs" are always mixed up in the pattern and they act as the kidnappers of the child. The monk is clever; so is the tiny tot. Constant repetition, however, has destroyed the novelty. In "Just in Time" there is no reason whatsoever for the crooks placing the child on the railroad track except to add a thrill with the timely rescue.—LAURENCE REID.

" Bre'r Rabbit and His Pals "

(Pathe Animal Study—One Reel)

An instructive and, at the same time, entertaining short subject is the Pathe animal study, "Bre'r Rabbit and His Pals." This reveals the rodent family consisting of rats, mice, squirrels, wood-chucks, prairie dogs and what not. The manner in which they live, build their homes, protect themselves and hibernate is certainly appealing to nature lovers. One sort of wonders how the cameraman was able to approach these little animals without scaring them with the whirr of the machine. Close-ups furnish evidence that they were either registering indifference or that the man who did the "grinding" was versed in woodcraft like an Indian—that he was able to step around in a noiseless manner. The photography is excellent.—LAURENCE REID.

" Movie Chats "

(Kineto Review—No. 49 and 56—One Reel Each)

THESE Movie Chats cover a variety of subjects—from the scenic to the scientific, and other scenes pertaining strictly to news features. There is an instructive shot showing the cultivation of cranberries at Cape Cod—a shot followed by Armistice Day in the Place de L'Opera, Paris, where a surging throng is registering excitement and much enthusiasm. A scene displays the breeding of terrapins. The continuity goes to pieces when maple syrup and the "boiling down" process is shown in Vermont, as it was done a century ago. Port Said bids for an inning at this point—the scene showing the entrance to the Suez Canal. This is followed by a huge bridge near Cairo for traffic across the Nile. We are then introduced to Mokattan Hill, the burial ground of the ancient caliphs. The reel closes with the Venus Fly Trap, a natural plant which catches the summer-time pest.

Movie Chat, No. 56, starts off in Strassbourg, Alsace-Lorraine, showing the gabled roofs and quaint streets, the ex-emperor's palace, the famous cathedral, and the Guttenberg monument erected in honor of the inventor of movable types. Mack Sennett can find some personable pickers in the California fruit picking scene which follows. The raisin industry shows the newly-popular fermenting agent drying in the sun. The subsequent shot shows various species of birds. The harmful sparrow, the hawk, the horrible scavenger, the snake-eating falcon, the rodent-eating owl and the eagle. Pomp and ceremony close the number which features the royal family of Spain watching the crown prince getting a commission in the army. An interested onlooker is the Empress Eugenie.—LAURENCE REID.

" A Handy Husband "

(Gayety Comedy-Educational—One Reel)

THIS one-reel comedy is based upon the flirtation idea, with an irrepressible girl defying her father and marrying the man of her choice and keeping his identity a secret until the final fade-out. The offering depends upon facial disguise for its effectiveness. The hero is a dancing master, who wins the girl at the beach, and marries her before her father can take her away. He follows her home and becomes the butler to be near her.

The false mustache is applied at this point — mustache which develops into "side-boards," and eyebrows. The hero adopts this plan to get even with his spouse, whom he has caught in an affectionate attitude with her brother—a total stranger to him. So the erstwhile dancing master proceeds to flirt with the maid. A little "give and take," and the picture ends with explanations. Teddy Sampson, Henry Murdock and Thornton Edwards compose the trio of wife, husband and irate papa, respectively.—LAURENCE REID.

" Training Woodpeckers "

(Mutt and Jeff Cartoon-Fox—One Reel)

THERE is no disputing the fact that Mutt and Jeff are an ingenious pair of hard-boiled eggs. In their newest stellar vehicle, they are shown as manufacturers of perforated chair seats. They don't believe in machinery—theirs is a natural and novel method. First they find a hollow tree and intrigue the woodpecker to come and tap it with his w. k. beak. Mutt steps out of the hiding-place and captures the bird. The two freaks then train the forest trap-drummer to punch holes in wood seats. This the bird does in a systematic manner. But Mutt "gums the works." He gives the woodpecker a seat which cannot be perforated, and the bird comes up with a twisted beak. So Mutt takes him to the ironing room and makes him over into a corkscrew. The little pal takes the count when Jeff is provoked over the bird's plight.—LAURENCE REID.

" Sneakers "

(Christie Comedy-Educational—Two Reels)

AL CHRISTIE has put over a melodramatic comedy in "Sneakers," which carries for its big scene the raiding of a fashionable gambling den by the police. There is enough interesting incident during this raid to keep one in a state of suspense, though the comedy moments are conspicuous by their absence. The featured players are Neal Burns and Dorothy Devore, who appear as husband and wife. Each craves adventure without letting the other know it. And both turn up at the gambling club.

The director has employed a big set and a large group of extras for the raiding scene. When the cops break through the action develops into a mad scramble, with Burns eluding the officers by dexterous arm and foot work. He finally arives home, and tumbles into bed fully clothed. Wifey appears. Ditto the cops. Everything is explained, and baby is found sleeping on the rug beside the dog. The picture has plenty of snap and ginger about it. And it is entirely within rhyme and reason. A first-rate filler for any program.—LAURENCE REID.

" Stratford-on-Avon "

(Hepworth Scenic—One Reel)

THIS little number presents an intimate close-up of Shakespeare's home and environment and is charged with most effective atmosphere and charm. The gentle Avon with its banks of ever-hanging trees and shrubbery, winding its way through picturesque English country scenes, the quaint town of Stratford where the great poet was born and reared—these are sufficient to fascinate the spectator. Intimate views are offered of the grammar school, the church which holds the tomb of Shakespeare and the memorial given to the village by an American. It is a charming number and lends dignity to a program. An orchestra rendering old English tunes can make it doubly effective.—LAURENCE REID.

" Venice "

(Kineto Review—One Reel)

HERE is a delightful little Old World number which will take the spectator on an enchanting journey to the land of poets and lovers. Venice is shown in all its eloquent appeal. The Palace of the Doges, the Square in front of St. Marks, the Bridge of Sighs, the canals, the Rialto—the beautiful sunsets—the gliding gondolas—these are all caught by an appreciative cameraman. The Square in particular brings a world of contentment of for no other reason than because of the thousands of pigeons who use it as a market place, being fed by natives and transients as they were fed centuries ago. The custom prevails and lends a wonderful atmosphere. The picture is excellently tinted and marked for its clear and persuasive photography.—LAURENCE REID.

" Fish and Totem "

(Single Reel Scenic—Produced by Grantland Rice and Jack Eaton—Presented by Merit Film Corporation)

THIS isn't anything out of the ordinary as scenics go nowadays, although there are some good single sequences scattered through it. The material has been gathered in Alaska showing a lot of water, sky and bits of "the great outdoors," including the totem poles of the Alaskan Indian tribes. The titling might have been better, especially in a historical way in the scenes devoted to the totem poles.—J. S. DICKERSON.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last sixteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of Motion Picture News which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to February 12, 1921.

PICTURE — BRAND — STAR — RELEASED — PLAN BOOK

ALL DOLLED UP (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....MAR. 12
"Pleasing offering with the star in an ideal role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture, though we had only average business with it and it did not come up to my expectations as a box office attraction." "A nice little picture, with no special attraction. Gladys Walton scores again, as a pert little 'flapper,' and is gaining quite a following." "Dandy little picture. Had more than the usual business with it." "Good business attended this feature. Picture pleasingly done."

ALL SOULS EVE (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER.....MAR. 5
"Incredible plot, but has appealing moments."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good picture. Receipts poor." "Played this on a double bill with "Plaything of Broadway." The two make a pleasing program well liked by our patrons." "Rather weak as a drawing card. A good picture, but attractive only to a selective few. Just a fair house for the week."

AMATEUR DEVIL, AN (PARAMOUNT) BRYANT WASHBURN...MAR. 12
"A decidedly mediocre comedy with Washburn."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Two days to average business."

BARBARIAN, THE (PIONEER) MONROE SALISBURY.....FEB. 26
"Fine backgrounds but very little action."—M. P. News.

BARE KNUCKLES (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL.....MAR. 19

BARS OF IRON (STOLL FILM CORP.) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 19
"Just an ordinary production."—M. P. News.

BEACH OF DREAMS, THE (HAWORTH-ROBERTSON-COLE) EDITH STORY .....JUNE 11

"Fairly interesting, though would be more convincing if developed humorously."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A wonderful picture which sure did go 'over the top.' Brought large box office receipts and much satisfaction from the audiences." "Fairly good picture with average business." "A splendid picture, well made, well acted, beautifully staged, but for some reason or other it didn't pull them in and business was only average." "Clever story with many new angles which makes a very high class and interesting photoplay. Drew splendidly and we played to big business for the week." "Great story. Story good; closely knit—but Lewis Stone and Florence Vidor gripped the attention from start to finish. Stone's work immense." "Good picture, but not much drawing power."

BEAUTIFUL GAMBLER, THE (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST....JUNE 11

BELOW THE DEADLINE (ASCHER PRODUCTIONS-STATE RIGHTS) WARNER-BIRON .....APR. 30
"A well made melodrama, full of action."—M. P. News.

BEYOND PRICE (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....MAY 21
"An inconsequential story not suited to Pearl White."—M. P. News.

BIG ADVENTURE, THE (UNIVERSAL) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 23
"Simple heart interest picture carries some appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Poor picture which did not have much pulling power. Played to poor business." "Did more than well for us and pleased."

BIG PUNCH, THE (FOX) BUCK JONES.....FEB. 19
"Buck Jones as a minister; a dull picture."—M. P. News.

BIG TOWN IDEAS (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....MAY 28
"Rural comedy-drama is fairly amusing."—M. P. News.

BLACK PANTHER'S CUB, THE (W. K. ZIEGFELD) FLORENCE REED .....JUNE 11
"Cost much and achieves little worthy of praise."—M. P. News.

BLACK ROSES (ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA.....APR. 30
"Hayakawa has entertaining mystery picture here."—M. P. News.

BLAZING TRAIL, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....MAY 7
"Some moments of interest in Mayo's latest."—M. P. News.

BLUSHING BRIDE, THE (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....MAR. 19
"Exceedingly weak; might have made a good Sunshine."—M. P. News.

BOB HAMPTON OF PLACER (NEILAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST .....MAY 14
"Wesley Barry saves the show."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played to a capacity house all week, aided by some unique exploitation. Eight Blackfeet Indians, first time off the reservation, a cowboy." "Disappointing. Not as clever as quartet, and the name Wesley Barry all served to attract much interest." "This picture is in no wise out of the ordinary. Business was only fair, though the fact that it was circus week was partly responsible." "One of the best pictures of the year in our estimation. Plenty of action and sustained interest. Custer's last stand brings a real thrill. Excellent box office attraction." "Best western picture we have shown this year. A treat for those who like this sort of entertainment. High class all through. No rough stuff. Business better than average for summer." "Pleasing picture, fair receipts."

BOYS WILL BE BOYS (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....MAY 28
"Quaintly humorous, simple story with Will Rogers."—M. P. News.
Exhibitors Comment.—"Will Rogers in one of his best. Plenty of room for effective exploitation with this picture. The best week that I have had in two months."

BRANDED SOUL, THE (STOLL-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 19
"Redemption story carries little appeal and is badly overacted."—M. P. News.

BREAKING POINT, THE (FROTHINGHAM-HODKINSON) BESSIE BARRISCALE .....FEB. 5
"More than a vehicle—a well-sustained marital drama."—M. P. News.

BREWSTER'S MILLIONS (PARAMOUNT) ROSCOE ARBUCKLE...FEB. 5
Exhibitor Comment—"Sure-fire winner. Pleased the audiences immensely. Box office returns much larger than usual." "Good comedy bringing the usual business." "This is a splendid picture and went over big with our audience. Played to large business for one week." "Capacity houses on opening Sunday in spite of heavy rain all afternoon and evening. A big winner with the public." "A great picture. It pleased my audiences, consequently the box office receipts were larger than usual." "'Fatty' went over in this picture in a surprising manner. Picture played to capacity for seven-day run." "Don't miss this one, a really big box office play." "Best box office returns in three months. Thoroughly pleased and people talked about it which brought increasing throngs." "Tickles 'em stiff—doing big." "This picture got plenty of laughs. An old favorite which is done over well in film form."

BURGLAR PROOF (PARAMOUNT) BRYANT WASHBURN.....FEB. 12
"Washburn's best one in a dog's age—a real comedy."—M. P. News.

"Spectacular production, but story is unimpressive,"—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Big production. Story not convincing. However, it is the best thing the star has done so far. Fair box office value." "Interest holding picture lavishly produced, but failed to pull during its run at this house and we played to poor business." "This picture flopped and was pulled off in middle of week run and another film substituted." "Marion Davies doesn't usually draw well, but with the extra advertising given by the Hearst papers, this drew well." "Good business on second week of run. Box office receipts still going fine."

BUTTERFLY GIRL, THE (PLAYGOERS-PATHE) MARJORIE DAW .....JUNE 4
"Little entertainment in this weak and sugary story."—M. P. News.

CABINET OF DR. CALIGARI, THE (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST..APR. 16
"A radical departure; highly artistic and imaginative."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This powerful picture is very unusual and a distinct novelty to our patrons. Went over big during the week."

CHARMING DECEIVER, THE (VITAGRAPH) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Mild interest because of its conventional treatment."—M. P. News.

CHARGE IT (GARSON-EQUITY-STATE RIGHTS) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG .....JUNE 11
"Interesting picture of the eternal triangle."—M. P. News.

CHEATED LOVE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS.....MAY 28
"Carmel Myers has a gem in lifelike picture."—M. P. News.

CHICKENS (INCE-PARAMOUNT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN.....MAR. 26
"Forced comedy and hokum never ring the bell."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Brought average business. Fair picture." "Played this on the program with the Universal feature 'If Only Jim,' starring Harry Carey to two days of extra big business." "Not as good as previous McLean-May productions and the 'feminine half' of this combination was sadly missed. Still this picture was good and drew well." "Too weak even for the chickens. Wouldn't even stand on a double program as a comedy." "About the usual Douglas MacLean feature; good farce, but not up to '23½ Hours' Leave.'"

"Interesting crook story with rich details and heart interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Splendid picture, but rather heavy for this time of year. People left theatre feeling oppressed. Big opening, however." "An out of the ordinary picture: had to keep it over a second week." "Splendid picture which gave Thomas Meighan, who is a favorite of our patrons, excellent opportunities to show his ability as an emotional actor. Played to big business." "They seemed to like this one and it brought good patronage." "Record-breaking crowds. Equaled our biggest specials in drawing power." "One of Thomas Meighan's best pictures; entertaining, attractive and is a good subject for exploitation. A good house all week." "Went big with us, both from audience standpoint and the way it drew."

CLOSED DOORS (VITAGRAPH) ALICE CALHOUN.....MAY 28
"Easily obvious picture carries mild interest."—M. P. News.

COINCIDENCE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....MAY 21
"Light, but breezy enough to get over."—M. P. News.

"A PRIVATE SCANDAL"
(Realart)

May McAvoy Saves This Very Ordinary Photoplay

REALART'S new star, May McAvoy, has not been given a very auspicious start in her first stellar vehicle. Those who remember her illuminating work in "Sentimental Tommy"—(how can anyone forget it?) are certain to sympathize with her in that "A Private Scandal" is not in keeping with her ability as an exceptionally talented emotional actress. The star is the redeeming feature of this antiquated and overdone formula which has been ground through the movie mill so often that it has lost its force and appeal. One again she demonstrates that she is entitled to the top-notch position occupied by a few screen players, recognized for their histrionic gifts.

The story revolves around the idea of a self-sacrificing heroine who steps into the breach in the nick of time and saves a trespassing wife from committing the supreme error of abandoning husband and child for the embraces of a treacherous family friend. The situations are mostly impossible and strain credulity, although the director has used his imagination in certain scenes and kept them from orthodox channels. This is apparent when the chief characters are found reading their letters at the breakfast table—the contents skipping over and dismissing the framework of the triangle. Less imagination here by certain directors would have made the plot utterly hopeless. The hero and the husband are represented as unduly stupid—the first in his condemnation of the girl at every occasion, because she refuses to straighten out the complications. There seems to be no reason why she remains silent with him since he is a rank outsider in the triangle.

The girl is an adopted French orphan, taken in by the American family, the breadwinner being more attentive to his race-horses than to his wife. Which of course paves the way for the latter's fall from grace. The philanderer courts the neglected spouse for three years, seemingly, without getting very far in his advances. And this shows up the husband's stupidity. One can see the climax coming from the second reel. The horseman, getting a clue, returns home to catch his wife, but the orphan saves the situation by substituting herself. She paints vivid "scareheads" in the dailies to the wife—thus the latter is made to appreciate her folly.

The introduction of the villain is wholly arbitrary. The picture is certain to win patronage. Miss McAvoy will see to that. The director has dressed it handsomely. the interiors being in good taste. Hector Turnbull's titles are much better than his story. In our opinion he leads the field in title-writing. The play may be banal and theatrical, but the titles are deserving of a better medium.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Jeanne Millette ..... May McAvoy
Jerry Hayes ..... Bruce Gordon
Philip Lawton ..... Ralph Lewis
Carol Lawton ..... Kathlyn Williams
Alec Crosby ..... Lloyd Whitlock
Betty Lawton ..... Gladys Fox

By Hector Turnbull.
Directed by Chester Franklin.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

May McAvoy, the actress, who gave such a memorable performance in "Sentimental Tommy," is coming to the ———— theatre as a star in "A Private Scandal." Miss McAvoy is deserving of stellar position on the screen because of her abundant talent, charm and wholesome personality. It is said by those who have witnessed her work here that it even eclipses her portrayal of Grizel in "Sentimental Tommy." The picture permits her to flash her distinctive charm and talent in a role which is richly sympathetic.

She plays Jeanne Millette, a French orphan, who is adopted into the family of Philip Lawton, a wealthy racing man. Through love of his thoroughbreds he neglects his wife, which permits a family friend to usurp the husband's place in her affections. Jeanne develops a romance with Jerry Hayes, the stable manager. But clouds shatter the sunshine because it is her duty to protect the wife and take the responsibility. The picture develops several novel twists and carries considerable dramatic force. In the supporting cast are Bruce Gordon, Kathlyn Williams and Ralph Lewis.

PROGRAM READER

She took upon herself the responsibility of keeping a house in order. Being an orphan she felt it her duty to show some gratitude toward her benefactor. How better to do it than shelter his wife who, provoked at her husband's neglect, had invited the attentions of a philanderer. The pretty orphan found a romance, too—a romance which was tinctured with sadness because her lover completely misunderstood her fine motives. Then one day she acted with the greatest self-sacrifice. Come to the ———— theatre next ———— and see the talented and charming May McAvoy in her first starring feature, "A Private Scandal." Rest assured it is wonderfully well acted.

SUGGESTIONS

If you played "Sentimental Tommy" you doubtless realize that May McAvoy flashed some of the finest acting the screen has ever seen. Her work in that feature made her a star. So play up the fact that this charming and talented figure is coming to the ———— soon in her first starring vehicle. Make much copy over the fact. Concentrate all your attention over her rise to stellar heights. Use stills of her. Get the public acquainted with her wistful and charming personality. Play up the picture as a dramatic and appealing photoplay which is rich in romance and sentiment. The director should come in for some mention, since he has contributed a deal of worth-while pictures to the screen. Feature Kathlyn Williams, too. Vocal numbers would furnish a fitting prologue.

CATCH LINES

"A KISS IN TIME"
(Realart)

Is Diverting Enough for Hot Weather Business

WHILE Wanda Hawley's newest picture, "A Kiss in Time," is light and marshmallowy in substance, it, nevertheless, should prove to be a first rate hot weather attraction. It does not tax the imagination. There is no complicated plot development to puzzle the spectator and it breezes through with sufficient high lights to pass muster with any audience that does not demand dramatic fare during the dog days. The picture will not stand comparison with a previous release, "The House That Jazz Built." It lacks the human qualities to begin with and it is not fortified with dramatic moments. The offering is more like some of Miss Hawley's early subjects in that it presents her in a sort of flapper role with a plot which will not stand analysis.

Indeed it is like a summer flirtation—elusive and an affair of the moment. No one should take it seriously and in all likelihood it will be accepted as a palatable summer dish. Miss Hawley is supposed to be the star of the piece but T. Roy Barnes steals the honors away from her through his comedy antics. In fact the frail plot revolves more around the male of the species, relying principally upon the cave-man formula.

An author is desirous of having his story illustrated by the heroine. But she dismisses it as improbable declaring that no girl would kiss a man on a four hour acquaintance. Just to prove that her argument is wrong he gives expression to his own plot and succeeds with one minute to spare. Meanwhile there is considerable hokum dished up with a boobish publisher carrying on a counter romance, and Walter Hiers appearing as an amateur Hawkshaw. The portly comedian gets his comedy over fairly well but one cannot say that it is punctuated with much laughter. In fact his scenes become tiresome because they are so obviously introduced to give footage to the story. Barnes is under suspicion and the comedy develops into a mild chase. Before the pursuit gets well under way, he has occasion to flash some amusing incident in an attempt to score a hit with the girl. She wants a man who is strong—who can dance, sing and recite poetry. And the hero fails to qualify. There is some good-natured fooling before the final fade-out.

The picture is mostly composed of exterior shots and furnishes good color and atmosphere. It may be some time before the personable Miss Hawley finds such a richly entertaining subject as "The House That Jazz Built." It will please the young romancers more than it will their elders. —Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Sheila Athlone ..... Wanda Hawley
Brian Moore ..... T. Roy Barnes
Robert Codman Ames ..... Bertram Johns
Bertie Ballast ..... Walter Hiers
Nymph ..... Margaret Loomis

By Royal Brown.
Scenario by Douglas Doty.
Directed by Thomas Heffron.
Photographed by William Collins.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A story within a story which concerns love at first sight is "A Kiss in Time," which appears at the ———— theatre next ————, starring pretty Wanda Hawley. Written by Royal Brown, a well known author of short stories, and directed by Thomas Heffron, it gives to Miss Hawley an opportunity to show why she is called one of the best ingenues on the screen. The piquant and charming star appears as an illustrator who is requested to illustrate a story which has to do with a young lady who kisses a man after a four-hour acquaintance.

Believing such a story is all bosh—that it couldn't be real—she refuses to have anything to do with it. Thereupon the author is determined to prove that his idea is reasonably true He succeeds and wins her in the bargain. The picture is filled with many bright and amusing scenes which score through the fine comedy of T. Roy Barnes and the admirable playing of Miss Hawley. Walter Hiers also appears in many amusing situations.

PROGRAM READER

She fully believed that no girl lived who would kiss a man upon a four-hour acquaintance. So she refused to illustrate the story which concerned this kind of a girl. The author, to prove that her argument was wrong, became his own hero and before the afternoon was over had not only won a kiss but the pretty artist in the bargain. This is the substance of Wanda Hawley's newest Realart picture, "A Kiss in Time." It furnishes the pretty and charming star a most entertaining vehicle—one which affords plenty of romance and humor. Prominent in the cast are T. Roy Barnes and Walter Hiers, two of the best comedians on the screen. At this theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

This is a good hot weather attraction. So play it up as tempting as an ice cream soda. You can link up with ice cream parlors through posters. Play it up as an amusing comedy-romance which stars Wanda Hawley and features T. Roy Barnes and Walter Hiers. Since the star does not have any more to do than these players —it would be a good plan to bill all three prominently. Feature it as a pretty romance—a romance of love, youth and summer-time. The title is catchy and should come in for some snappy exploitation. Ask pointed questions of your fans—especially of the younger set. Ask them if they believe in love at first sight and if it is proper to kiss a man on short acquaintance. A prologue can feature a singer or dancer.

CATCH LINES

Do you believe in love at first sight? Do you believe in kissing on short acquaintance? See Wanda Hawley, supported by T. Roy Barnes and Walter Hiers in "A Kiss in Time."

Exhibitor Comment—"A sure-fire attraction, which brought extra large box office receipts." "Fatty Arbuckle always a sure bet and this picture proves to be no exception. Capacity house all week." "Unfortunately, Fatty Arbuckle does not live up to his fan's expectations of him. This is no worse than previous feature-Arbuckles I've played—but it was no better, and business was poor." "Went over great. Fine audience picture." "Arbuckle good drawing card, but vehicle is very poor. Public greatly disappointed." "Good picture to good business for week run." "Roscoe Arbuckle in 'The Dollar a Year Man' and Larry Semon in 'The Rent Collector.' Good combination and one that pleased, although attendance dropped. Arbuckle picture not as well liked as previous releases."

DUCKS AND DRAKES (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....APR. 9
"Bebe Daniels has a lively offering here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Best Bebe Daniels has to her credit up to date. Business was better than it has been for several weeks." "Bebe Daniels goes her former productions one better in this picture. A snappy production that brings results at the box office." "A good picture. They liked this one and went away and told their friends about it. Business was good."

DYNAMITE ALLEN (FOX) GEORGE WALSH.....MAR. 5
"Disconnected and wildly improbable melodrama."—M. P. News.

EAST LYNNE (BALLIN-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 26
"Modernized version of play and book should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Stormy weather held down attendance on this picture, but those who saw it were pleased and we are holding this excellent picturization of the famous stage play over for a second week." "We were disappointed. Less than usual matinee and night crowds."

"Rather mild for Thomas Meighan."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Our patrons seemed to like this one which played to excellent business for one week." "Thomas Meighan draws no matter what sort of picture, or role he has. This production an excellent one, and played to excellent business." "Showed in conjunction with Lloyd Hamilton in 'Moonshine.' A week's capacity business. The picture offers a good field for exploitation. Thomas Meighan at his best." "Nothing extraordinary in this picture, but business was fair." "Not as good as some of the other Meighan pictures. Meighan well liked, however, and matinee business was particularly good." "An ordinary story put over by the star's personality. Business was good." "We label this as a good picture. The box office statement was better than average." "Thomas Meighan always a big favorite at this house. Business good, despite first warm spring weather." "Thomas Meighan. Despite poor picture, attendance was on an average." "A good picture, carefully worked out, which drew well." "Good attraction. Meighan in excellent role. Big opening on Memorial Day, and held up better than average."

EDUCATION OF ELIZABETH, THE (PARAMOUNT) BILLIE BURKE.....FEB. 26
"Billie Burke has real opportunities in polite comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Women came to see Billie and the gowns. Did better than expected, as she has not done well at all of late." "A fair picture. Nothing extraordinary. Average business." "One of the star's best, but it only drew fair business." "Played it on the bill with 'Sunset Sprague' (Buck Jones) to extra big business two days." "Two days to average business." "The picture drags in several spots and needs improving, but the name, 'Billie Burke,' filled my house for a week."

GILDED LILY, THE (PARAMOUNT) MAE MURRAY.....MAR. 19
"Mae Murray's latest is a winner."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Only Mae Murray's tricky costumes, and dancing held this up. Business just fair, despite heavy advertising." "Superb production. Well directed, extravagantly conceived and a good audience picture." "Held up well for a two-week run. As a whole big picture from every angle." "Star is popular and in consequence picture went over all right." "Went over big. Everybody liked it and said so." "This one was mediocre. Business was only fair." "Big every day and they all liked it." "Exceptional fine settings and surprise features of story appealed strongly to our audiences, and we did good business with this picture." "Went over big for full week." "Going fine in its third week."

GOD'S GOOD MAN (STOLL FILM CORP.) SPECIAL CAST.....FEB. 26

"THUNDER ISLAND"
(Universal)

Dull, Artificial Story, Very Badly Titled

FILLED with artificial melodrama with hardly a convincing or human note to redeem it, is this new Edith Roberts' picture. Its good qualities lie solely in some pretty exteriors; fair action on board a ship, and a few underwater shots. For the rest it is a mass of uninteresting incidents, rising from a story which is developed with sudden, illogical, unexplained twists and turns. It swings around to a mutiny climax, and there is a free-for-all fight which, while not the best sea-action ever made by any means, is of audience value. Not even this, however, shows anything original. It's just a movie fight, brought about by movie means, solely for a final punch.

The titles are really the worst thing in the picture. Most of them read like extracts from the children's Third Reader, and many of them simply reiterate the preceding action. Those which are not short-sentenced and dully-worded, fly off into flowery metaphors. And, incidently, one of these metaphors is so badly mixed that it cannot escape notice. They sound like nothing more than the narration in some child's story, talking, as they do, of the villain as "wicked."

The story is of the South Sea variety, only the action takes place in Lower California. An orphaned girl married, two years previously, an old man who believed he was dying and wished to settle his fortune upon her. But he fooled everybody by keeping alive, and when the picture opens he sends for his bride to return to him. So the star tears herself away from the American sea captain and returns with the messenger. This messenger is the wicked villain. He claims to be her husband, but the girl thwarts him by donning a disguise and swimming out to the American's ship. The ship goes out pearl hunting, with the "heavy" in pursuit. Immediately after the long-sunken chest is recovered, the pursuer stages his mutiny, and it takes the hero and the first mate the rest of the picture to beat up the entire crew. There are some attractive under water scenes worked in at this point. It develops that the star's husband has meanwhile died and she is free to marry the American.

In the beginning the star plays a dual role, but the mistaken identity idea never develops. This sequence shows some very clever double exposure work. Miss Roberts has few opportunities to make any impression, except to register fear in some half dozen close-ups. The picture is only 4,279 feet in length.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Edith Roberts, dainty Universal star, has the featured role in "Thunder Island," the gripping screen drama which will be offered at the ———— theatre on ————. Lower California is the scene of this story, which is a strictly modern one, filled with adventure and romance. It deals with a little Latin-American girl, who, with the death of her parents, is left alone on her ranch. Two years before she had married a man who believed he was dying and who wished to settle his fortune upon her. But another man, enchanted by her beauty, posed as her husband, and tried to steal her away.

How she at last found her way back into the arms of her American lover forms the main part of this interesting photodrama. There are many beautiful exterior scenes, and a large part of the action takes place aboard ship, where there is a thrilling mutiny scene as well as a realistic scene showing a storm at sea.

"Thunder Island" was directed by Norman Dawn, and includes in its cast such players as Fred De Silva, Jack O'Brien, Arthur Jasmine and Fred Kohler. Miss Roberts has excellent opportunities with which to impress by her delightful personality. Those who have seen "The Fire Cat," and "Lasca" will not fail to see this latest starring vehicle of the dainty actress. It will run at the ———— theatre for ———— days beginning ————.

PROGRAM READER

She was a peppery little Latin-American left all alone on her sheep ranch. A man came, posing as he whom she had married two years before and never seen since. She escaped him with the aid of an American sea captain, who risked his life repeatedly for her. Edith Roberts, petit Universal star, plays the girl and the picture is "Thunder Island," a gripping drama which will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. This is expected to prove one of the most entertaining pictures of the year, for Miss Roberts is an actress who occupies a unique place in filmdom. She typifies the fiery, self-willed and determined spirit of the Latin people. Those who have seen her in "The Fire Cat" and "Lasca" need not be urged to attend the ———— to see this new production featuring their favorite.

The story itself is a rollicking tale of adventure and romance of Lower California. In the cast are Jack O'Brien, Fred De Silva, Arthur Jasmine and Fred Kohler. The picture was directed by Norman Dawn, who has a number of screen successes to his credit. It will be shown for ———— days only, beginning ————.

CATCH LINES

The story of a fiery-spirited Latin-American girl, and how she fought her way through all obstacles to find true love.

A rollicking tale of adventure and romance in the sunny waters of the lower Pacific. A tale of action and suspense, with Edith Roberts in a role which suits her to perfection.

Another sea story bound to grip you and to please you. Edith Robert's newest picture in which she proves once more that she is entitled to a unique place in filmdom's' hall of fame.

"FINE FEATHERS"
(Metro)

Fairly Interesting Melodrama on an Old Theme

IF it was not for the fact that the idea behind this picture has been used so often as to lose its effectiveness, it would have a greater appeal. Eugene Walter's "Fine Feathers" is modeled after his "Paid in Full" in theme and characterization. Which is to say that it is based upon a husband stooping to shady dealings in order to give his wife fine clothes. The idea has been used dozens of times and the forcefulness of the lesson taught has lost much of its grip. The picture has even been made before under its original title. Which, of course, is nothing against it, seeing as how it has a market value because of the author's name and the fact that it was reckoned as a Broadway success.

The chief fault in the present version is the slow action and the almost total absence of suspense. There are many scenes in which the characters stand around and indulge in conversation. This dialogue becomes involved and has to do with big business and much technical detail concerning engineering problems. Which takes away the humanities.

The picture opens with an interior of a theatre, the audience witnessing an act of "Paid in Full." This is good advertising for Mr. Walter and his famous play. The hero and his wife have deeply absorbed the logic expounded—that a man should get everything he wants regardless of consequences. The former meets an old college chum who involves him in a scheme to get rich quick at the expense of the government by passing on an inferior quality of cement which is to be used for a dam. The hero is caught in a trap but squares accounts with his treacherous friend by killing him. His own suicide follows, leaving the wife to find solace with a sympathetic reporter.

The original picture carried exteriors of the bursting dam. The scope of the camera might have been appreciated here thus giving a little variety to the interiors. The cast is fairly competent in putting over the plot and incident—with no member outshining another. Eugene Pallette as the hero is inclined to be somewhat stilted in his tense moments. The director allows him to draw the revolver from the desk drawer. The picture is well put together but is easily obvious. The lighting is not of the best in the medium shots. It seems to us that the sponsors have followed the original closely for there is no recourse to the happy ending as far as the hero is concerned. The offering should get over fairly well.—Length, 6 reels. —Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Bob Reynolds ..... Eugene Pallette
Jane Reynolds ..... Claire Whitney
Dick Mead, a reporter ..... Thomas W. Ross
James Brand ..... Warburton Gamble
Mrs. Brand ..... June Elvidge

By Eugene Walter.
Scenario by Lois Zellner.
Directed by Fred Sittenham.
Photographed by Arthur Caldwell.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An adaptation of Eugene Walters' forceful melodrama "Fine Feathers," which had a long and prosperous run on Broadway some seasons ago, will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. This is a play of frenzied finance and carries a moral—that it is better to travel the straight and narrow path and be deprived of richly pleasures than to stoop to the folly of getting money under false pretenses. It is also valuable in teaching married couples to live within their incomes—that wives should not play upon their vanities to cause their husbands to commit crime.

The Reynolds' are content with their existence until they see a certain play which reveals that pleasures and riches can be gained by going after them. The husband sees a chance to better himself as well as giving his wife fine feathers. So he becomes dishonest with the government. Caught in a trap he commits murder and follows it with his own suicide. The play is tense in its action and builds with good suspense. It is also competently acted.

PROGRAM READER

Every woman loves fine feathers—every woman loves beautiful clothes. It costs money to buy them. Some men can afford to dress their wives in the latest modes. Others stoop to folly—or to crime to keep their wives up in appearance. For wives are jealous of one another's finery. If a woman is desirous of dressing well and her husband cannot afford to lavish her with expensive gowns she will probably upbraid him if she is of the dominant type. If he is inclined to be meek he will probably live beyond his income to dress her well. And to do this he will commit some crime. This is the substance of "Fine Feathers," adapted from Eugene Walter's interesting play which will appear at the ———— theatre next————.

SUGGESTIONS

The angle to exploit here is the adaptation of a successful Broadway play by Eugene Walter. Play up his name. Make it dominant in all your copy. Tell that he is the author of "The Easiest Way," and "Paid in Full," and a score of other successes. Bill the picture as an interesting drama of everyday life—of a couple who live beyond their income, because the husband must keep his wife well dressed for the purposes of society. Play up that it teaches a great lesson—a lesson that never becomes a preachment. You might put on a fashion show for a prologue. Also link up with modiste shops, millinery shops, and specialty shops catering to feminine trade.

"BE MY WIFE"
(Max Linder Production)

Good Incident and Gags Provide an Amusing Comedy

MAX LINDER has come forward again with a comedy which may be called a fitting companion piece to "Seven Years Bad Luck." While it lacks the substance of the latter and presents a broken continuity it serves to provide an amusing hour, chiefly because of a good display of gags and incident. The noteworthy feature in the French comedian's work of late is his adoption of American methods in putting over his stunts. The foreign style seems to have been eliminated entirely —a style which often invited criticism. Being a pantomimist first, last and always, he has succeeded in repressing the exaggerated gesture, so that his expressions have developed an eloquence heretofore lost.

"Be My Wife" is a series of gags which are strung together to make richly humorous climaxes. What matters it if certain scenes are anti-climatic and that the story from start to finish is broken up on three separate occasions? The point is, it succeeds in scoring a hit with sure-fire gags and incident. Max is responsible for the hokum in his comedies. In fact he is the jack-of-all-trades on the lot. So he must accept censure as well as praise. In this case we cannot find fault with his idea or the execution of it, though it must be said he has progressed more rapidly as a gag artist than as an author.

"Be My Wife" is a matrimonial farce based upon outwitting a watchful aunt so that he may succeed in winning her niece. The picture develops rather slowly and relies for its introductory footage on a wealth of sub-titles. These are snappy enough to get over and once the incident starts it keeps going with plenty of spontaneity to the finish. The offering reaches a climax three different times and then begins all over again on another tack. There are traces of some of the star's old-time French farces visible in many of the situations. But for the most part the gags are new.

It is a funny scene which discloses Max about to be married with the best man putting over the old practical joke of starting a mouse on its creeping journey. The rodent climbs and the comedian shimmies and shakes in an effort to relieve the tickling. The gag is worked to the limit with the aunt coming in for some shimmying antics when the mouse develops a family. Another rich scene presents Max in a fight with himself—overpowering an imaginary burglar. There is some good interior trick stuff which has to do with trap doors and sliding panels. And a dog is in the picture and furnishes first class support. The titles are clever. Linder receives capable assistance from Alta Allen and others. No announcement has been made concerning the distribution.—Length, 5 reels. —Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The French star and comedian, Max Linder, is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in "Be My Wife," written and directed by the star himself. The comedy is a fast moving, high spirited, scintillating effort which is certain to provoke constant laughter. Indeed, it is vastly amusing in every one of its richly humorous scenes. The comedy is based upon a matrimonial tangle or rather an engagement. Max is a determined fiance who is not welcomed by his sweetheart's guardian. In fact she scoffs at him as a prospective husband for her pretty niece.

To circumvent her efforts Max is forced to execute several amusing high jinks—points which constantly place the irate woman in mirth-provoking predicaments. If he is balked in one attempt to lead the girl to the altar, he immediately thinks of some other novel plan. In the end he is entirely successful. The picture is marked for its incident and novel stunts.

PROGRAM READER

The irrepressible, irresistible, inimitable Max Linder is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in his latest and greatest comedy entitled "Be My Wife." The famous French star wrote and directed the offering, which is a richly amusing satire upon the problem that confronts a would-be benedict to marry the girl of his choice, but who is prevented by her irascible guardian and aunt. Max's efforts to outwit her are laugh provoking. The comedy soars with original incident and is certain to prove entertaining. Certainly Max Linder is in a class by himself as an exponent of light comedy. "Be My Wife" presents him at his best. Come and be richly entertained next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

You can exploit this feature as Max Linder's latest and greatest. Play up that it outshines "Seven Years' Bad Luck," which was considered by exhibitors one of the best bets of the season. Make copy of the title and treat your copy in a light, snappy fashion. Exploit the star and use his name in every possible medium for advertising. Play up the comedy as a matrimonial mix-up. You can put on an all-jazz comedy week for your program. Your prologue can feature some jazz dancer accompanied by a jazz band. This would be in keeping with a scene in the comedy. Send out teasers with nothing but the title printed on them. These can be made up heart shape, preferably of a red color.

"THE MASK"
(Geo. H. Hamilton—Export & Import—State Rights)

Tedious Melodrama Filled with All the Old Stock Tricks

THERE does not seem to be a trick missing in this old-fashioned melodrama, which is so ridiculous that it cannot be taken seriously. Every time-worn ingredient has a place in the hectic action with much emphasis concentrated upon the machinations of three villains. Even the dual role is added to the burden of the plot. There are so many twists and turns—so many characters planted—that the director appears to be up a tree most of the time. An elimination of irrevelant scenes would have quickened the action and made it less tedious. After witnessing the serial-like episodes for many reels, the spectators sighed for relief. At least they did so in Loew's New York theatre. It was a case of too much of a good thing, for many of them took to kidding the villains and cheering the sorely tried hero.

The framework of the plot concerns a triangle. The hero is happily married, but his partner is always on the scene during his absence endeavoring to win the virtuous wife. The former goes on a journey to South Africa and in an arbitrary fashion the dual role is introduced when he encounters his twin brother, a ne'er-do-well. Back home the vicious partner is overacting and making himself ridiculous in his attentions to the wife. The husband has been accompanied to the Transvaal by his valet, a treacherous employee of the impossible partner.

The plot is shown up in all its theatrical, movie character when the hero encounters two or three hired thugs on the returning steamer who are paid to put him out of the way and steal the huge diamond suspended around his neck. The derelict brother is also on the boat and they get the wrong man. A title says that the ship is wrecked and the papers back home tell of the catastrophe, announcing the loss of lives—one of whom is the hero. It will need some explanation to discover how the valet turns up safe to continue his vicious tactics, and also how the supposed dead man turns up alive and reaches Frisco in a derelict state and with a lapse of memory. Meanwhile the wicked brother has put on the mask, stepped into his twin's shoes and palmed himself off to the wife as her husband.

With all three villains working in harmony there does not appear much chance for the virtuous characters in the story. But the ne'er-do-well has a re-awakened conscience and frustrates the other crooks, and the sorely tried husband comes home, regains his memory and all is well. The brother is killed in a revolver fight. Jack Holt is the star and almost succeeds in making his work convincing. The picture certainly resembles a product of the nickleodion days.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— of ———— week is "The Mask," adapted from Arthur Hornblow's novel, and which stars Jack Holt, one of the most popular players of the screen. It is a vivid melodrama which carries a wealth of ingredients. Pathos, romance, sentiment, love, hate, intrigue, jealousy, thrills—these are all found in this picture which moves with splendid action from inception to conclusion.

The story is based upon the eternal triangle and shows the trials and tribulations of a husband and wife when they are separated. His partner in business is a moral leper whose object is to ruin him financially and socially and destroy his happiness. How he is frustrated is told in six reels of startling situations. Jack Holt, always a competent player, succeeds in giving a convincing portrayal of the husband. His company includes Hedda Nova.

PROGRAM READER

A vivid melodrama of intrigue—a compelling picture of the eternal triangle—a moving drama of thrills and startling action is "The Mask," an adaptation of Arthur Hornblow's story, which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— starring Jack Holt. This player has won recognition for his convincing portrayals upon the screen and he is admirably fitted for the demands of the role which takes him on a melodramatic journey, but which does not tax his histrionic capabilities. It is a dual role which Mr. Holt has here—a role which calls upon him to express in terms of adventure and romance. Hedda Nova is in the opposite role.

SUGGESTIONS

Doubtless your patrons are familiar with the work of Jack Holt, who has appeared as a leading man in a score or more of photoplays. He has won recognition through his talent and richly deserves stellar position on the screen. So play up his name. He is a great favorite with the feminine patrons. Play up Hedda Nova as his dealing lady. Bill the picture as tense melodrama of intrigue, adventure, and romance which is filled with crisp and startling action and suspense. Play up the author as a prominent literary figure in the world of letters. An effective prologue would be to have some dancer appear using Benda masks.

CATCH LINES

"HOME TALENT"
(Sennett-Associated Producers)

Good Slapstick on Both Ends; Sags in the Middle

THE first few hundred feet of this and the last couple of reels is very good slapstick, but sandwiched in the middle is a sequence showing the Sennett comedians rehearsing a vaudeville act, with fadeouts illustrating what the act should be, that contains no comedy of any sort and kills any chance the production has of going over as a feature. With this sequence, burlesque "Roman stuff" eliminated, what is left would make an average two reeler, good in any house where low comedy is appreciated.

Most of the Sennett players have parts. Ben Turpin, Charlie Murray, Phyllis Haver and Kalla Pasha do their best to provide entertainment and succeed whenever the material presents any opportunity. The Sennett bathing girls, with nothing much left to the imagination, are used in the Roman episode. This sequence has cost quite some money, but it fails to impress because of the burlesque.

The picture was directed by James E. Abbe, who also "doubled" at the camera. What little story there is concerns various people in a theatrical boarding house run by Charlie Murray. They sidestep their landlord, rehearse their acts, play poker and give a performance at a cabaret. All this is outside the Roman episode.

The laughs are earned in sequences showing Ben Turpin and a partner rehearsing a knife throwing act, a poker game with some good gags, a jealous husband episode and the burlesque vaudeville acts put on at the cabaret.

About equal opportunity is presented for the formidable array of comedians who have parts. Turpin furnishes some of the laughs, Murray about an equal number, and Phyllis Haver is undeniably funny at times. However, as a whole it will not set the world on fire. On a bill of strong short subjects or with a dramatic feature it should prove acceptable. In length the production is five reels. In entertainment qualifications it is about half that number.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Mack Sennett's five reels of comedy, fantasy and beauty, bearing the suggestive title of "Home Talent" will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. The offering is said to be utterly unlike anything that Sennett has yet produced in its ingenious plot and in the vast range of scenic and picturesque possibilities developed by the action of the story. The plot opens in a rural hotel, the proprietor of which is the genial comedian, Charles Murray. Five of his boarders command attention—they being Ben Turpin, James Finlayson, Kalla Pasha, Eddie Gribbon and "Dot" Farley.

The latter is a romantic milliner; Turpin and Finlayson are a stranded vaudeville team, and so are Gribbon and Pasha. Murray backs the quartette in a theatrical venture and even lends them his daughter, Phyllis Haver, to play a leading role. The picture is marked by some hilarious comedy. It has been given a sumptuous production and the players acquit themselves in a creditable fashion. Practically all the Sennett favorites—bathing beauties and comedians—are featured in the production.

PROGRAM READER

Mack Sennett's latest and greatest multiple reel comedy, "Home Talent," is coming to the ———— theatre next ————. Those who have viewed this much-talked-of comedy-spectacle agree that it is one of the best productions that has emanated from the Sennett studios in many months. All the Sennett favorites are found in the cast—including Ben Turpin, the comedian with the funny eyes; Eddie Gribbon, James Finlayson, Kalla Pasha, Charlie Murray, Phyllis Haver, Harriet Hammond, and "Dot" Farley. The picture is spectacular in its picturesque settings and the action is snappy and full of bright points—points which are richly humorous as scored by the clever cast. The Sennett beauties are very much in evidence.

SUGGESTIONS

Feature Sennett's name in all your copy and make a special announcement that the picture is coming to your theatre with all the Sennett favorites. Be sure to play up Ben Turpin and bill him as the chap with the funny eyes, or handsome Ben. Also give attention to the names of Eddie Gribbon, Charlie Murray and Phyllis Haver. Play up the Sennett beauties and present stills of them for lobby display. Make mention that the picture is considered Sennett's greatest achievement—his greatest five reel comedy. You can promote a "buy-at-home" celebration by linking up with stores that feature home-made articles. Bill it as a most spectacular comedy. Treat your copy in a light, humorous fashion. Have an all-comedy program at your theatre. The best angle is to feature the players—all of whom are favorites.

CATCH LINES

"A BROKEN DOLL"
(Dwan-Associated Producers)

As It Stands, Very Doubtful Entertainment

THIS is made up of about equal parts of interesting melodramatic incident, fair rural hokum and rather commonplace "kid" stuff, with an obvious, improbable and convenient story, made worse by the injection of a maudlin romance.

The picture is not without its audience appeal, but the interest is gained and held from time to time by individual sequences rather than by the story as a whole. The thing which makes the production especially disappointing is a disagreement between the sentiments expressed by the titles and the characterization of Monte Blue in the principal acting role. The titles identify Mr. Blue as playing a typical "blue shirt" lead, while his performance, the incident provided him and the actual basic idea would indicate that his role was that of a "not all there" young farm hand who in his simple minded way is trying to replace a doll he has broken by accident. To accept Mr. Blue as normal and intelligent is to make the plot so trivial and unreal that it has no value and shows Mr. Blue overacting in nearly every scene.

Also the picture should have no romance in spite of the fact that it is alleged the love interest is the one absolutely essential of the successful feature. With Mr. Blue playing a half wit and minus the romance that is dragged in by the ears, it would have a chance of pleasing some people. As it is we doubt if it will get by with any one as whole.

Aside from the star's performance, which can be called good or bad, according to interpretation as explained, the cast is consistently good. Mary Jane Irving does very nicely in the child role. She and Mr. Blue have most of the scenes. Allan Dwan directed and wrote the continuity. His direction is good in the individual scenes, making much of little detail.—Length, 5 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An excellent rural comedy drama, with a real old time homespun hero is offered at the ———— theatre for a ———— days engagement beginning ———— in "A Broken Doll" an Allan Dwan picture released through Associated Producers.

In the principal role is Monte Blue, a recognized artist in portraying parts of the sort he has in "A Broken Doll," that of a plain country boy, an orphan who woos and wins the sheriff's pretty daughter.

Others in the all star cast who have prominent roles are Mary Thurman, Les Bates, Jack Riley and little Miss Mary Jane Irving who does very clever work as a little lame girl. The picture was personally directed by Allan Dwan from a story by Wilbur Hall. It is a story of ranch life in California with a lot of fine melodramatic incident, good rural "hokum" and pleasing "kid" stuff. A picture that all the family will like, clean and wholesome with a pleasing romance.

PROGRAM READER

"A Broken Doll" is the title of the rural comedy drama produced by Allan Dwan for Associated Producers release which is scheduled for a ———— days showing at the ———— theatre beginning ————.

The cast enacting the picture is all star and includes such favorite players as Monte Blue, Mary Thurman, Mary Jane Irving and others. The story told concerns the incidents that befell a country boy, an orphan, when he obtained work on a California ranch. Monte Blue, as the homespun hero, has a role eminently suited to his particular talents and is given excellent support. Little Miss Irving shows remarkable talent in portraying a cripple child and will be a great hit with the kiddies and lovers of children.

The big acting role goes to Monte Blue who is always at home in characterizations of the "blue shirt" lead type. He does some remarkable acting as Tommy Dawes," the boy who has found a job on the ranch and finally woos and wins the pretty daughter of the sheriff. Some fine scenic back grounds of Southern California add to the beauty of the production.

There is fast action and considerable of a thrill in some of the scenes.

The heart interest is good and the rural "hokum" amusing. The picture is in five reels and was personally directed by Mr. Dwan.

SUGGESTIONS

In billing this we would resort to the "hokum" stunts paying small attention to the story and not promising a big picture. It is a good picture in which to interest the children and if we were going to bill a star we would select Mary Jane Irving and play her up as a child prodigy. Dolls of various sorts in the lobby with the "broken" idea played up some way would be a good prologue suggestion.

CATCH LINES

The story of a little cripple girl, an orphaned boy who found a home in the hearts of the big rancher's family, an escaped convict, the sheriff and his pretty daughter. Full of humor and incident and with a heart interest story that all will enjoy.

"Tommy Dawes" wasn't much to look at but he had a heart as big as all out doors and when he broke his little girl friend's doll, he just had to make the matter right. And that was what started all the things that happened before the escaped convict met his just dues, little Harriett got her new doll and "Tommy" won the heart of the Sheriff's pretty daughter. A story of California today. Just a plain tale of incident and action with a pleasant love story thrown in.

"Fine production, but subject matter is talky."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"High class picture that appeals to the discriminating. Well liked by those who saw it, but didn't have a universal pull with the population at large." "Enjoyed fair business for week run. Opened to big business. Audiences commented favorably on production." "A splendid production with a title that is a business getter. A capacity house at my theatre for a week's run." "Went over fair to fair attendance." "A fair picture. It disappointed many, however, who came, attracted by the combined names of Barrie and DeMille and went away disappointed at the lack of action and general slowness. On the other hand it charmed an equal number. Business was brisk." "Nice picture, but quiet to interest many. Hardly a normal business." "As entertainment a good picture, but failed to draw for me." "Public opinion divided. Well directed and fairly good picture, but there is no special punch to create more than a passing comment." "One of the best pictures of the season. William DeMille has adhered carefully to the main points of the original story and has maintanied all of Barrie's charm. Lois Wilson and Conrad Nagel are excellent in the star roles." "Picture appealed strongly to our audiences and business was good during its run."

WHAT HAPPENED TO ROSA (GOLDWYN) MABEL NORMAND..APR. 25

"Sob-sister story is stressed with false sentiment."—M. P. News.

WHAT'S WORTH WHILE (PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....APR. 16
"Single track and rather slow."—M. P. News.
"Good picture that does justice to a snappy title. Played in conjunction with 'You'll Be Surprised,' a Chester comedy, and did a week's capacity business at my house." "Too long drawn out and tiresome. Did nothing that had not been done before, and was considered far below usual standard for Lois Weber picture. Took it off after three days to very poor business."

WHAT'S YOUR REPUTATION WORTH (VITAGRAPH) CORINNE GRIFFITH .....APR. 16
"Interesting feature gives star emotional opportunities."—M. P. News.

WHILE THE DEVIL LAUGHS (FOX) LOUISE LOVELY.....MAR. 12

"Weak adaptation of rich melodrama."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Draggy, disconnected—somebody always going somewhere after something. Shame to waste the talents of a star of Elliot Dexter's calibre in such stuff as this. Cast only fair—Mary Alden superb—as usual!" "Elliott Dexter's best yet. The title is slightly lacking as a creator of public interest, but the picture itself is a business getter. A good house throughout the week." "A combination of hot weather and a well known play, but one not particularly well produced. Result—our crowds dwindled." "This was only a fair picture and fair puller." "A very fine version of a very fine play. Splendid acting throughout. Good business in a week of general poor business."

WITHOUT LIMIT (BAKER-METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....MAR. 5
Exhibitor Comment—"Considered one of the strongest plays of the year by critics and patrons alike. Opened to fair business but picked up steadily during the week." "Good picture that drew satisfactory business." "A good photoplay that brought good business. Well acted throughout." "Fine picture and brought good business."

WOLVES OF THE NORTH (UNIVERSAL) EVA NOVAK.....MAY 21
"Conventional Alaskan story carries wonderful backgrounds."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Mediocre picture, but it drew the crowds."

FOR NEWSPAPER USE—FOR THEATER PROGRAMS

Live Notes from the Studios

CONDUCTED BY LILLIAN R. GALE

ABOUT PLAYERS

LUCIA BACKUS SEGER will soon be seen in a "mother role" when the special production under the direction of Charles Bradin, "Footfalls," for William Fox, is shown. Mrs. Seger is one actress who believes in cashing in on the screen what she learned in a long career upon the speaking stage.

There are old time theatre goers who look back with fond recollection on the Charles Hoyt comedies, and recall Mrs. Seger as "Bossy" in "A Texas Steer."

Stepping from the stage after a long experience on the road and in stock, Mrs. Seger turned her attention to pictures, and has appeared the last few years in some of the best productions that have been thrown on the screen. Directors found in her both a comedienne of exceptional ability and an actress able to portray mother roles, or the stern and exacting suffragette, in a manner lending conviction to the character.

Most recently Mrs. Seger was assigned the important role in "Footfalls" following completion of her work in "The Wild Goose," for Cosmopolitan. Previous to this she played with the Legend Film Comedies, with both Norma and Constance Talmadge, with Marguerite Clark, John Cumberland, Eugene O'Brien, and in a Robert Gordon picture made by J. Stuart Blackton.

For years Mary Pickford has been besieged with requests from all parts of the country for photographs of herself. The requests for photos of a star of Miss Pickford's magnitude reach into the thousands.

Various philanthropic organizations have seen the great possibilities for charity work in this demand, and as Miss Pickford has always been actively interested in welfare endeavor, these suggestions for turning the demand for her photos into benevolent channels, were considered favorably.

One day a happy thought came to her—that of establishing a charity herself for needy children. And so she established "The Good Cheer Fund" for the orphans, cripples and bed-ridden kiddies of this country.

Now the "Good Cheer Fund" has exclusive rights to her photographs. With the exception of a small margin profit to the photographer, all money goes to those who have, in a large measure, been responsible for this star's success—the children of America.

Since the inauguration of her fund Miss Pickford turns over all

"Dear Friend; Your request for a photograph has been turned over to the "The Good Cheer Fund," which is now selling my pictures for the benefit of needy children. There are thousands of children in this country for whom the sun never shines. Some are orphans, some are cripples, some are bed-ridden invalids. 'The Good Cheer Fund' has been established to bring a little more happiness and gladness into their lives. All money above the actual cost of the photograph goes to the support of this fund, so every picture purchased is a sunbeam for a needy child. Photographs are obtainable in three sizes—6 and a half by 8 and a half, $.25; 8 x 10, $.50 and 11 x 14, $1.50. Send coin, postal order or stamps to Nelson Evans Studio, 6039 Hollywood Boulevard, Hollywood, California, and a picture will be forwarded to you promptly."

Corinne Barker has been gaining in prominence since her debut into the picture world, and has added to her laurels, besides playing a prominent role in "Why Girls Leave Home," and a part in "Enchantment," the pre-release Cosmopolitan picture for Paramount. This photoplay, directed by Robert G. Vignola, was the first Mr. Vignola had made starring Marion Davies. He was extraordinarily particular about selecting the cast throughout. Miss Barker's fortune in being included in the stupendous production is a tribute to her previous work.

Hayward Mack, Laura LaPlant and Jack Brammall, all well-known screen players, will be seen in support of Edna Murphy and Johnnie Walker in their first starring venture for Fox.

Claire Whitney and Robert Emmett Keane have forsaken a successful entrance into vaudeville to star in motion pictures. "Featurettes," or two-reel offerings, are what they expect to do, for which there seems to be a likely market. Already the 'script for the first production is prepared, actual "shooting" to begin at once. These new short subjects will be made under the direction of Hal Benedict at the Benedict Studios, College Point, Long Island, and will be handled by the Forward Film Distributors.

Miss Whitney, most attractive and an actress of acknowledged ability, will, of course, play the leading feminine roles, sharing honors with Mr. Keane, who, while new to followers of motion pictures, is a well and favorably identified actor of the legitimate stage. Great success is prophesied as a result of the completed negotiations, upon which all are receiving due congratulations.

Many inquiries have been made to producing units, asking for a solution of the temporary disappearance of Mabel Bardine, a picture actress who had won a substantial following before she was confined to her home on account of a long illness. However, Miss Bardine, it is understood, will soon be re-instated, having completely recoverd her health. Negotiations are pending for her services in an independent production, soon to be announced.

Ethel Dwyer will be seen in the leading feminine quantity, of the screen version of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," which is said will be the cause of the lady being recipient of many flattering offers. Some have already put in a bid.

A short time ago, Virginia Lee traveled to Tulsa, Oklahoma, where she immediately commenced working in "The White Mask," a photo-play in which she will share honors with Franklyn Farnum. In the midst of activities, along came the race riot interrupting their peaceful "shooting" with the kind that makes considerable racket, and which was responsible for a number of casualties. Miss Lee was frightened sufficiently not to disobey orders from the studio that all players connected with the Farnum company remain in their living quarters until the race riot subsided.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

"IT is unfair to criticize the American photoplay for its idealization of youth," is the statement of Elmer Clifton, long connected with D. W. Griffith, who is now launching his own producing organization. And explains: "One frequently hears adverse comment about the ever present featuring of the sixteen-year-old ingenue, the film flapper. 'Life does not wholly revolve around children' they point out."

Mr. Clifton declares this is unjust to the screen director. He is, after all, but enmeshing the spirit of America in celluloid. America places youth upon a pedestal. It is evidenced everywhere, in our love of sports, in our worship of "young blood in business," in the very way our younger men and women imitate the affectations of the 'teens.

"The photoplay writer cannot be completely realistic any more than can the stage dramatist, the novelist or the short-story writer," said Mr. Clifton. "He must idealize life, at least to an extent. How many heroines of novels are drawn old and unattractive?

"The photoplay owes its success to its ability to incorporate every observer into its action. The person out in front must throw himself into the play or it fails in its purpose.

"Foreign film authorities criticize our photoplay for its immaturity, declaring that our youthful star obviously cannot reflect life, since they have not lived it; which is 'rot.' A woman, be she sixteen or sixty, knows by instinct and intuition. To say the flapper, not knowing life, obviously cannot depict it on the screen is manifestly wrong. One need not be a murderess to play Lady Macbeth or a convalescent maniac to enact Ophelia.

"On the other hand, the stage requires years to perfect the voice, diction and technique. Clearly, the screen is the epitome of youth."

Mr. Clifton is predicted as a coming leading director, following his years of training and natural ability for the kind of work he will do.

Reginald Barker's contract with Goldwyn has expired. That is, unless he has affixed his signature to another, as is rumored, Goldwyn officials are urging the director to do. At least, it is said, Mr. Barker's services are coveted until the filming of Hall Caine's "The Christian" can be executed.

Reginald Barker is now engaged in final touches upon "The Poverty of Riches." During his contract with Goldwyn he has produced a half dozen pictures starring such celebrities as Geraldine Farrar, Pauline Frederick; but his latest works include "Godless Men," "Bunty Pulls the Strings," "Snowblind" and "The Old Nest."

To Mary Miles Minter, Mr. Harry Millarde owes a vote of thanks, of which he is probably not advised. Just before Mary left for a vacation in Europe, she attended a luncheon at which she was guest of honor. Somebody asked her what picture she considered the best of the year. "Over the Hill," said Mary. "I just love it!"

Among those directors present in New York, after having been on the west coast several months, is Dell Henderson.

Among recently initiated members of the Motion Picture Directors' Association are William De Mille, T. Hayes Hunter, Lawrence Trimble, Jack Ford, Albert Russell and Lee Moran, all west coast men.

Charles Giblyn, upon completion of the picture starring William Russell, started right in on another Fox production, "The Lady From Longacre."

Sidney Olcott has completed the first picture for the Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., entrusted to his able direction. Mr. Olcott is one of the most favorably and best known directors in the motion picture industry.

J. Searle Dawley is arranging preliminaries for another Fox picture, which will be made under his direction, the theme of which is motherhood.

A two-reel comedy, called "Don't Marry," is one of the Sun-lite series of the Shiller productions, released by Reelcraft, directed by Arthur Hotaling, with a cast including Billy Quirk, Bobby Burns and Jobyna Ralston. The story relates of two young lovers who have quarreled and who are individually named as heirs to a certain sum of money. In the case of the girl, she is not to receive the money if she marries. On the other hand, the boy must marry at a certain date in order to lawfully acquire the inheritance—which provides for many thrilling incidents, at the end of which both lovers find themselves under arrest for passing counterfeit bills, and it is found that the lawyer who engineered the offer was an escaped lunatic. The story was written by Frank Mattison, who directed a previous Reelcraft two-reeler, and the scenario by Robert Snody.

"Salvage" Is Booked by the Loew Circuit

"Salvage," the Robertson-Cole production with Pauline Frederick enacting a dual role of tremendous power, is off to a flying start in the metropolitan district. The Loew Circuit, lost no time in booking "Salvage" in all its theatres in the New York district, embracing in all about 100 days.

"Salvage" was directed by Henry King. Miss Frederick in "Salvage" portrays the part of Bernice Ridgsway, a young woman of fine breeding, and the role of Kate Martin, an exactly opposite type. The two parts require high artistry in their interpretation and Miss Frederik does some notable work in the many big scenes, states Robertson-Cole.

Doug Fairbanks as he will look when "The Three Musketeers" is released by United Artists

"Food for Thought" is New Capitol Comedy

George Bunny will again be seen in the leading role of a Capitol Comedy, when "Food for Thought," the latest two reel release of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, is shown. The story is a rapid fire burlesque in which the serious situations are treated in the comic vein.

Like its predecessors in which Mr. Bunny played the leading male role, "Food for Thought" was written by Kingsley Benedict and directed by Mark Goldaine. The photography, which includes many stunts with the camera, was in the hands of O. G. Hill.

In the cast, Estelle Harrison plays opposite Mr. Bunny and the little dark-skinned urchin in the brass buttons of a bell boy adds a delightful bit of comedy.

Trolley Strike Can't Keep 'Em from Lloyd

Making money with Harold Lloyd comedies in spite of a trolley strike which crippled the business in the great majority of houses, is the achievement of Mr. Elliott, of the Clinton Square Theatre, of Albany, N. Y.

When Mr. Elliott was to run the Lloyd picture, the police ordered all the jitneys off the street and the people had no means of transportation. In spite of this, the week's business was immense, and Mr. Elliott states that he not only did not lose money, but he actually made it when others ran their pictures before almost empty houses.

Unusual Photography in "A Kiss in Time"

One of the outstanding features of "A Kiss In Time," Realart's latest Wanda Hawley picture, is the clear and beautiful photography, which is the work of William Collins. In the same cast with Miss Hawley are T. Roy Barnes, Bertram Johns, Walter Hiers and Margaret Loomis.

Two Oppenheim Stories Under Production

Paramount announces the launching of two more productions—one, "The Great Impersonation," directed by George Melford, at the Lasky studio on the West Coast; the other, "The Mystery Road," directed by Paul Powell, at the London studio of Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd. Both productions are being made from stories by E. Phillips Oppenheim.

Monte Katterjohn adapted "The Great Impersonation." James Kirkwood, the featured player, appears in a dual role. Ann Forrest plays opposite Mr. Kirkwood. Alan Hale, Lawrence Grant, Fontaine La Rue, Bertram Johns, Winter Hall and Truly Shattuck are also in the cast.

The adaptation of "The Mystery Road," is by Mary O'Connor, and the cast, as announced, includes among others David Powell, Mary Glynne, Warburton Gamble, Minna Gray and Harry Ham.

"Scrap Iron" Opens in N. Y. and Brooklyn

"Scrap Iron," Charles Ray's latest production, in which he makes his bow as a director, created a furore in both New York and Brooklyn, where it had its first eastern showings last week. This is the spontaneous testimony of Joseph L. Plunkett and Edward L. Hyman, managing directors of the Strands in the respective boroughs.

The outstanding feature of "Scrap Iron," in Mr. Plunkett's opinion, is the fact that it carries a separate, distinct appeal to every class of picture lover, and Mr. Hyman wrote the picture was being enjoyed immensely.

Realart Birthday Production Titled

"A Private Scandal" has been selected by Realart as the title of their Birthday Production, which stars May McAvoy. It will be available some time in June. The first print was recently received in the New York offices, and won such favorable comment that congratulatory messages were sent to Hector Turnbull, who wrote the story, Chester Franklin, who directed the picture, Miss McAvoy, Kathlyn Williams, and the supporting cast and the technical staff for the work in the picture.

Interest is Revived in "The Wonder Man"

"The Wonder Man," in which Georges Carpentier is seen in the leading role, is enjoying revived popularity throughout the country as a result of the tremendous publicity the French champion is obtaining in connection with his forthcoming glove contest with Jack Dempsey, announces Robertson-Cole.

Bookings are being reported at the Robertson-Cole branch offices in gratifying volume and in many instances, according to Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution, the production has brought, and is continuing to bring, rentals considerably in excess of the average top figure paid by the various theatres.

Rothafel Appeals For Sincere Pictures

Wells Hawks announced to the A. M. P. A. the special showing of the government film, "Our Navy in Action," which was given at the Harris Theatre, June 5, under the auspices of the A. M. P. A. with Mr. Rothafel in charge of the presentation. The picture is not intended as recruiting propaganda but was taken as part of the navy records; and is said to be the most pretentious subject of naval activities on record.

Rothacker Planning For New York Laboratory

A. P. Miller, technical secretary of the Rothacker Film Company, and other members of the Rothacker technical staff were in New York recently going over with Watterson R. Rothacker plans for a laboratory in New York City.

Mr. Rothacker expects to start construction on the New York plant early in the fall, shortly after returning from Europe where he goes in June to start a London laboratory.

Sam Rork, en route back to the Coast, had Mr. Rothacker as a traveling companion as far as Chicago. Mr. Rork left for printing at the Rothacker Chicago laboratory the three Selig-Rork Corporation Snow Baker features.

Attempted Robbery at Studio Frustrated

Thieves attempted early in the morning of June 3 to break into a concrete vault on the property of the International Film Service Company, 127th Street and Second Avenue, New York City, where negatives and positives of Cosmopolitan Productions valued at $100,000 are stored. They were scared off by a watchman after having done damage estimated at $50.

Police of the East 126th Street Station investigated. The guards on the building have been doubled, and an electric burglar alarm is being installed.

Jessen's Studio News by Wire

GOLDWYN

Reginald Barker has completed scenes for "The Poverty of Riches," by LeRoy Scott. Richard Dix and Leatrice Joy are the principals.

Mr. Barker's contract with Goldwyn expires in a few days. It has not as yet been renewed, but it is said that he has been asked to remain and direct "The Christian," from Hall Caine's story. The continuity is now being written by Charles Kenyon.

Frank Lloyd and his company of thirty are still at Huntington Lake, making "The Man From Lost River."

BRUNTON

The Pickford company has added James Marcus to the "Little Lord Fauntleroy" cast. He will play the part of Hobbs, the grocer, a role he created in the stage play in 1888. Mary Pickford Rupp, Lottie Pickford's daughter, makes her screen debut in this subject. Others members of the cast are Claude Gillingwater and Joseph Dowling.

Fairbanks is about half through filming "The Three Musketeers."

T. Hayes Hunter is editing "The Light in the Clearing."

UNIVERSAL

The last scenes for "Foolish Wives" have been photographed. The editing will take a month's time.

Harry Carey, under the direction of Robert Thornby, is beginning the production of his original story, "Partners." The continuity is by Lucien Hubbard. Betty Ross Clark will play the lead. This will be Carey's first Universal Jewel production.

Herbert Rawlinson has signed a contract with Universal.

ROACH STUDIOS

Gaylord Lloyd company has finished a new comedy.

Hal Roach is building big sets at Balboa Beach for a Roland serial.

METRO

Flood Scenes Shown by Pathe in Record Time

TAKEN under extraordinary difficulties at repeated risks to the cameramen's lives, and the films rushed by airplane to Chicago and thence by fast train, Pathe News views of the Colorado flood disaster were first to reach the New York picture screens and theatres throughout the country. The cloudburst which caused the sudden overflow of the Arkansas and Fountain rivers and overwhelmed the city of Pueblo is the greatest disaster of that kind since the Johnstown flood of thirty years ago. The loss of human life estimated at many hundreds, and in property at least $10,000,000. A special on the event was issued by the Pathe News and was shown at the Strand and Rialto theatres at the first show on Friday, June 10.

"Edgar" Finishes Tour of the Country

Johnny Jones, 12-year-old star of the Booth Tarkington "Edgar Comedies," produced by Goldwyn, completed on June 15 a tour of the country which took him to New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Baltimore, Buffalo and other large cities. He made personal appearances in all of the cities and was received with great enthusiasm.

Rogers Tells of Conditions

As He Found Them on Trip Across Country; in Very Optimistic Mood

CHARLES R. ROGERS, general manager of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, recently returned to the New York headquarters of that organization after completing a cross-country tour of inspection. In a statement issued during the week from Robertson-Cole's home office, Mr. Rogers gives his observations made during the course of his trip. Exhibitors in all parts of the country, while complaining somewhat about business, were not losing money, but were merely making a smaller margin of profit than they had made during the abnormal times just passed, says Mr. Rogers. Unfavorable conditions have been painted "blacker than they really are," he states, "and the motion-picture industry is, on the whole, in a truly enviable condition."

Censorship seems to be the all-important topic of conversation. Exhibitors have taken the matter in their own hands—"that is, they are presenting but the cleanest kind of pictures." Mr. Rogers reports a growing demand for the high-class comedy-drama in response to the public's call for "mirthful entertainment."

"From my observation I have come to the conclusion that the independent producer has nothing to fear from the acquisition of theatres by producer-distributor organizations, if the independent producer will be careful to make the right kind of product," says Mr. Rogers.

"There is no combination, no matter how powerful, that could ever be formed that would not find room for a number of productions that will get for them the box office results. To sum the whole thing up, it is merely the survival of the fittest in the independent field—and it depends upon the kind of productions they release.

"Opinions regarding foreign productions are very widely divided. None of the exhibitors seem to regard the invasion of foreign films very seriously, as they have played so few of them. Talking about the success they have had with these pictures, I found that their opinions are divided about 50-50. As one big exhibitor in the Middle West expressed himself to me—using his verbiage—"I should be worried dreadfully, after completing this big theatre, to think that we would have to depend on foreign countries to present us with big pictures, when we have all the facilities in the world to make them in this country."

Lascelle Reports Progress

"Rip Van Winkle" Nearly Finished; Director Lauds Work of the Cast

WARD LASCELLE, who is directing a screen adaptation of the famous stage production of "Rip Van Winkle," with Thomas Jefferson in the title role, reports to the New York headquarters of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, that satisfactory progress has been made on the film version of the dramatic piece on the West Coast. The production is rapidly approaching the finishing stages, according to a report from the Hodkinson home office.

In describing the work of the cast, Mr. Lascelle lays particular stress on the acting of little Francis Carpenter in this production. Mary Anderson, who plays the "Dreamland Queen," also comes in for special mention. The balance of the cast includes Max Ascher, Petro Sosso, Miller Davenport, Ted Billings, and Daisy Robinson.

The screen version, according to Mr. Lascelle, follows exactly the dramatic production made famous by Thomas Jefferson and his father before him. No expense has been spared in the making of the picture, it is stated. Davis Abel, who served as cameraman with Norma Talmadge for many years and before that with D. W. Griffith, did the camera work for "Rip Van Winkle." George Larson assisted as second comeraman. The Hodkinson headquarters reports that a great many inquiries are being received concerning the production from every section of the country.
